BRYAN DRY FIGHT ON.

Makes Address on Prohibition.

Declares Democratic Party Must be Saved From the Liquor Interests.

Predicts Utter Rout of Wet Forces in the Coming Convention.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26. William J. Bryan formally opened his fight for a prohibition platform plank tonight. After his election by the Nebraska delegation to the resolutions committee he made a long and vigorous address at a luncheon of the Commonwealth Club on prohibition and other platform questions. He declared the Democratic party must be saved from the liquor interests and predicted utter rout for the wets.

Democratic leaders favoring modification of the Volstead law confirmed their efforts to quiet work among State delegations. Several claimed large accessions to a wet or at least damp declaration. Other leaders, however, declared the platform would be silent on the prohibition question and were working toward that end.

Bryan asserts that there would be no compromise on the prohibition question. He said that while an open fight might be avoided he would force a record vote, both of States and individual delegates, if the liquor question were brought up in the convention. It is the paramount issue before the Democrats, Bryan said, declaring his special purpose here was to have a dry plank incorporated in the platform—as essential to party victory in November, he declared.

SOUTH IS MOIST.

The wets were encouraged by reports from southern delegations that hopes of the prohibitionists for a solid South for a prohibition declaration were unfounded. They declared that the unit rule could not be invoked on all southern delegations, and that many of the southerners were ready to vote against the prohibitionists.

Bryan told his audience today that he sought his place on the resolutions committee especially to fight for a dry plank.

"I'm not sure that we're going to have any fight," Bryan continued, "but on the wet question which probably will come before the convention, every man will have the chance to go on record. We're going to have a roll call and I want every delegation polled, so if any Democrat wants to turn the party over to the liquor interests his folks at home will know it."

Bryan said he would welcome a minority report from the resolutions committee if necessary to bring the issue squarely before the convention.

Assailing the Republican convention for its silence on prohibition Bryan said that if the Democrats wished to secure support from 26,-000,000 women voters, they must declare for continued prohibition. Any break in the prohibition wall, he said, would result eventually in re-establishment of saloons, gambling halls and dives.

RECORD FOR CANDIDATES.

Individual candidates were not discussed by Bryan in his address except to say that more men were being discussed for the Presidential nomination than in any previous Democratic gathering.

"There will be more tickets put up and put down in the next few days than ever before," said the Nebraskan.

Other platform planks, Bryan told his audience, he would urge, relate to labor and profiteering. He advocated a declaration for compulsory investigation of all industrial disputes; to avert strikes and protect the public.

Bryan said a waiting period during investigation of industrial disputes, before strikes or lockouts occur, would protect the public, comprising the large majority of those interested.

A plank denouncing profiteers and profiteering also was urged by Mr. Bryan, who criticised the platform, which, he said, failed to deal with the subject. Jail terms for

REED, BITTER-ENDER, IN COMBINE WITH COMMONER

Excluded from Convention, Missourian Joins With Bryan to Fight the President's League Plank.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Plans for opposing the administration treaty and League of Nations plank were formulated at an hour's conference tonight between Bryan and Senators Walsh of Massachusetts and Reed of Missouri. Their first effort, Senator Walsh said, is to be made in the resolutions committee by offering substitutes for the administration plank.

If defeated in the resolutions committee, Senator Walsh said, it was planned to present a minority report to the convention. The major concern of those in the movement, the Massachusetts Senator added, is to prevent commitment of the party to unreserved ratification of the present League covenant.

KANSAS CITY, June 26.—James T. Bradshaw, alternate to Senator James A. Reed as delegate from the Fifth Missouri District to the Democratic National Convention, announced here tonight that he had voluntarily turned over his proxy to Senator Reed and that the latter was empowered to act for him in all matters pertaining to the business of the convention.

Bradshaw said he gave the proxy to Senator Reed just before the Senator left for San Francisco and said that he did so because he thought the highest interests of party harmony demanded it.

Business matters prevented him from attending the convention in person, Bradshaw declared.

AUDITORIUM, SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Following the vote in the Georgia contest there was a prolonged discussion on the Reed case. E. H. Moore, Ohio, spoke in favor of seating Reed, while Senator Carter Glass, Virginia, warmly opposed such action.

The committee rejected the claim of Senator Reed of Missouri to a seat in the convention.

BOURBONS IN THE DARK.

As Opening of Convention Approaches No Moses Appears to Guide.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—As the rival forces at the Democratic National Convention move into position for the opening Monday there is apparent no more definite alignment of strength for various candidates than there has been since the delegates began to assemble. William Jennings Bryan epitomized the situation today in language with which most observers seemed to agree.

"There will be a lot of tickets put up and put down before this convention nominates one," said he.

The closing hours of the pre-convention period are much the same as characterised the last minute proceedings of the Republican convention at Chicago. There is a marked similarity in many respects.

Seven hundred and fifty-six of the 1092 delegates are uninstructed. There are ten candidates, avowed, unwilling or receptive.

No Democratic candidate came to San Francisco with any such showing of pledged strength as was brought to Chicago by Wood, Lowden or Johnson.

How much influence William J. Bryan will have on the making of the party's platform and its choice of a candidate will be shown soon after the opening session of the convention Monday.

The first evidence of how much of a force Mr. Bryan will be will come in the make-up of the resolutions committee which will draft the platform.

These issues bring about a direct contest between the administration forces and Mr. Bryan's forces.

Of course, if the wets attempt to put in a plank which runs counter to Mr. Bryan's declared views on prohibition, Mr. Bryan certainly will

WOODROW WILSON NOW RULES WITH IRON HAND.

Democracy Gives Way to Wilsonian Dictation; President's Program is Being Followed Out to Letter.

BY S. [illegible] UE,
Los Angeles "T[illegible] aff Writer.

SAN FRANCISC[illegible] isn't going to be any Democratic convention [illegible] conference that will be held here next wee[illegible] eak ill of the Democratic party. Bryan is [illegible] all over town about a return to Democratic id[illegible] voice doesn't reach the delegates. The Democratic p[illegible] ead and the Woodrow Wilson party, claiming to be its s[illegible] atee, will open its second quadrennial session on Monday.

From his sick room in Washington the President is directing every important movement. His program is now being followed to the letter. It developed today that the reason there was no night session of the national committee yesterday was that the President was not feeling well and retired early.

The President directed that no wet plank shall be put in the Democratic platform and the wets have obediently announced through the recognized leader, Congressman Sabath of Illinois, that no wet plank will be offered.

The President asked that the soft pedal be put on industrial agitation, and the labor plank will be about as acceptable to the labor unions as a glass of near beer to a Tammany delegate.

The President directed that the profiteers should be condemned very severely and there is going to be a whole afternoon of the convention devoted to lambasting the profiteer. But it is to be confined to generalities. The delegates have been warned to avoid offending big business. Liberal contributions are necessary to conduct liberal campaigns.

THROW REED OUT.

The President directed that the convention should not be disgraced by the presence of Senator Reed of Missouri as a delegate and Reed has been unceremoniously thrown out. He received but twelve votes in the contest before the national committee, although his certificate of election was one that has always been held heretofore to be uncontestable. Reed was thrust into outer darkness, not because his credentials were not regular but because he is personally objectionable to the President. The President had an equal grievance against Tom Watson of Georgia; and the Watson delegates were crushed by the steam roller until they were too flat to squeak. Watson publishes a paper which is not in sympathy with the Wilson policies.

Notice has been served on the delegates by Carter Glass that "if you want to know who is in control of this convention, just start something." Glass is Wilson's Simon Legree.

"It has been a great day for the Republican party," said Congressman Kahn, when he heard the report of how the steam roller has been working. "Two-thirds of the Democrats who voted in Georgia voted for the delegation that was thrown out. I consider that action has put Georgia in the list of doubtful States."

"Speaking seriously," Congressman Kahn continued, "the Democrats have more serious differences to compose than we had at Chicago. The wets may beat in the convention, or it is possible that the drys will be beaten. But the issue has been raised, whether it is fought out on the floor or not. Whichever faction loses will be lost for service to the party during the campaign.

"I understand that the President expects to pledge the convention to ratification of the peace treaty without any reservation relating to Article X. But I know from personal conversation with leading Democrats of the country that they are not in favor of such action.

ANOTHER BREACH.

"That means another breach through which possibly a million votes will pass."

Senator Harding is as certain, as anything can be politically, to be the next President. His election is made doubly sure by the outside domination, which promises to control every movement of the Democratic convention.

Congressman Kahn was here interrupted by two New York higher-ups, who are with the Tammany delegation, who bowed to him humbly and said: "We, who are about to die, salute you." That incident tells the whole story of how the New York delegation feels about Democratic chances for success this year. I would give their rank; but it might be checked up on them and they would suffer the fate of Reed and Watson.

Some one started the rumor two days ago that the wets are going to bolt. It must have been carried on the wires to Washington. For a small army of carpenters is busy today building a high fence completely around the convention hall, which is assuming the appearance of a stockade. Bolting delegates will need airplanes to effect their escape.

MINISTER AS A POLITICIAN.

I wrote yesterday that the convention was rapidly assuming the appearance of a Methodist camp meeting. So the readers of The Times should be prepared for what I am about to report. Dr. Burris Jenkins of Kansas City, pastor of a church with 2500 members, will deliver the nominating speech for McAdoo. It will be the first time that a minister of the gospel ever made a nominating speech in—no I will not say a Democratic convention, lest it be construed as libelous—any other than a prohibition convention.

There are eleven ordained ministers of the Gospel who will sit as delegates in the convention and they are all of Protestant persuasion. The delegates refer to the others as everlisten.

NEW JERSEYITES NAUGHTY.

An attempt was made by some of the delegates classed as extra dry today to start a contest before the national committee against seating some of the Edwards delegates from New Jersey. The Oklahoma delegates made the allegation that the

CAUGHT BY FINGERPRINTS.

Mexican Murderer of Phoenix Couple Confesses to Police.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 26.—The murderer of Jacob Erhardt and wife who were slain at their home in the northwestern part of Phoenix on the night of June 4, has been apprehended, he was identified by his finger prints.

A Mexican ranch hand, Jesus Maria Barboa, picked up near the Mexican border, has confessed and was taken secretly to the Erhardt home, where he showed just how the crime was committed. He was held to answer by a rural justice of the peace and now is safely behind the bars of the penitentiary at Florence.

Not till the penitentiary doors had closed upon him were the arrest and confession made public by Sheriff Montgomery, for there was fear of an attempt at lynching. Superintendent Powell sent word from Florence through the Attorney-General's office that any attempt at summary retribution would be met by him with effective resistance and added that it would be useless, for the case is one in which there need be no fear of justice failing.

About 150 suspects have been picked up by the police of Phoenix and this and other Arizona counties. In each case a number of finger prints have been taken to compare with those found on many articles in the Erhardt house. Rewards aggregating $3000 had been offered and every clue was run down.

Barboa was found at Patagonia and was jailed only on suspicion, for there was belief that the crime hardly was one of Mexican commission. Brought here, Barboa told how he had lingered around the house till the Erhardts had retired, had cut through a porch screen, had felled Mrs. Erhardt when she came into the kitchen on hearing noise and then how he had gone into the sleeping porch and had struck Erhardt down as he arose from bed. The weapon was a heavy hammer secured on the premises.

Stretching himself on the kitchen floor, Barboa showed just how he had struck the woman four more times on the head as she lay face upward, he also struck Erhardt while the victim was prostrate. The Mexican then took each victim in turn back to the bed on the sleeping porch, wrapping each in a quilt, to avoid the streaming blood. Neither was dead, but neither regained consciousness before passing away in a hospital the day after. They were found by a son, a member of the Phoenix fire department, when he came home for breakfast.

Barboa stated he came to Phoenix from Litchfield, twenty miles to the westward, on the afternoon of the murder. He remained at the house several hours, looking for loot, finding only $45 in cash. Afterward he walked back to Litchfield, taking eight hours for the trip, carefully washed his bloody clothing and waited five days before starting for the border in an attempt to escape.

He left Phoenix June 13, left the train at Tucson and had walked across the mountains to Patagonia when apprehended. He is a Sonoran, about 40 years of age, and came to this valley from Naco, where he had come across the line a year ago. It is believed he has a prior criminal record and his finger prints and description have been sent to Federal and other prisons for possible identification. The confession was formally repeated to Justice Irvine in Gilbert precinct, where the officers stopped with their prisoner on their auto trip with him from Phoenix to the penitentiary, which is in another county.

BRITISH BOMBARD TURKS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, June 26.—British warships at anchor before the town of Ismid, Asia Minor, have violently bombarded the Turkish lines stretched around that place and it is estimated that 1000 Turks have been killed, according to an Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Athens.

Reports from Ismid, the message stated, indicate that violent fighting continues there.

SMYRNA (Asia Minor) June 26.—Greek forces engaged in the offensive against the Turkish Nationalists in Asia Minor are advancing in four directions and have taken a number of towns, according to an official communique from Greek headquarters under Thursday's date.

Confirmation of the recently reported annihilation of the Thirteenth Turkish Army Corps has been received here.

ONE KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OAKLAND, June 26.—R. S. Belt of Stockton was killed and nine persons were injured, three seriously, when an automobile stage ran into a ditch tonight and overturned on the Dublin Canyon road between Santa Rita and Pleasanton, after striking Belt, who was trying to put out a fire in his machine.

Those most seriously injured were: J. E. Gore, Van Nuys; Mrs. Webber, address unknown; H. R. Carlisle, stage driver; Mrs. J. A. Beauruts, Madera, and an unidentified boy 2 years old.

According to the Livermore police, who went to the scene of the accident, Carlisle, the stage driver, lost control of his machine when he struck Belt and the stage went over the embankment. All of the passengers were pinned under the wreck. Passers-by, attracted by the screams of passengers, rushed to their rescue.

The stage is owned by the Western Auto Stage Company, which operates between Fresno and Oakland.

MILK ASSOCIATION SPLITS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, June 26.—At a meeting of the Milk Producers' Association of Central California at Modesto today, after the president had announced the withdrawal of this unit from the State association, the dairymen reconsidered the action of the unit to the extent of adopting a resolution calling for a special meeting of the directors to consider the advisability of the Central California association retaining its membership. The meeting of the members to act on this retention of membership, according to the resolution, will be held within thirty days.

DEMONSTRATION BY SUFFRAGISTS PLANNED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Suffragists plan to make demonstrations at both Marion, O., and Northampton, Mass., when Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge are formally notified of their selection as the Republican party's standard bearers, Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's Party, announced here tonight.

Miss Paul said the form which the demonstrations would take had not yet been determined upon.

TURKS HOLD AMERICAN WOMAN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The reported capture of Mrs. Paul Nilson, an American missionary, by the Turkish Nationalists near Tarsus, in Cilicia, resulted today in the State Department cabling instructions to the American representative there to secure her release, if she is being held, and to otherwise insure protection to Americans in that region.

H. A. Fischer of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., informed the department that Mrs. Nilson, who is his daughter, had been taken captive. The following message also was received from President Blanchard of Wheaton College:

"Mrs. Paul Nilson, nee Harriet Fischer, alumni of this institution, has been captured by Turks somewhere near Tarsus. She is daughter of Prof. Fischer and we earnestly request State Department to secure her release."

FRESNO CARMEN RENEW STRIKE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, June 26.—The Fresno street-car strike, which was declared off by agreement between the traction company and the carmen, was renewed today after the cars had made only one run from the barns. The returning union men objected to the retention of some of the men employed by the company during the strike, and the company officials refused to discharge them, with the result that the strikers again quit work.

Vice-President Marshall is an Actual Aspirant for the Nomination.

McADOO MOST FORMIDABLE OF LEADING CANDIDATES.

Looks Like the President's Son-in-Law Against Field; Marshall Looms Strong as Dark Horse.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Re-entered in the race as an open contestant under the resourceful leadership of Postmaster-General Burleson and other members of the Wilson administration, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, son-in-law of the President, looms up tonight as the most formidable of the three major candidates for the Democratic nomination for President.

It looks like a fight to a finish between McAdoo and the field and, if McAdoo fails to win, a dark horse will be selected.

With every conservative view of the situation, including the strong possibility that neither Gov. Cox of Ohio nor McAdoo can be nominated, Vice-President Marshall forged to the front today as the dark-horse favorite. Under the direction of Tom Taggart of Indiana, and with the assistance of Charles F. Murphy and other eastern leaders, powerful influences are being exerted to make Marshall the logical compromise.

Marshall himself has given his assent to the arrangements being made in his behalf between the eastern and western leaders who are fighting McAdoo and who see little prospect of nominating Cox.

The Vice-President, therefore, is now regarded an actual aspirant for the honor.

There was a conference this morning between Marshall and Taggart and former Gov. Ralston of Indiana, at which the plans for the Marshall campaign were formulated. The program is to withhold the name of the Vice-President from presentation to the convention when the nominating speeches are made, but to vote Indiana for Marshall from the start with a view to swinging Illinois, Michigan, New York and New Jersey to the Vice-President when the time to launch a compromise candidate shall be deemed propitious.

HAS LEAGUE PLANK.

One of the big cards to be played for Marshall is the presentation of a League of Nations plank framed by the Vice-President, which rejects the President's uncompromising attitude against reservations to the League of Nations covenant, and conforms essentially to the position adopted on the League issue by Bryan.

In this connection it was noted as significant that Marshall and Bryan were in conference for more than an hour today. Altogether an alliance between the Bryan and anti-administration forces to nominate Marshall is viewed as more than likely to materialize at the crucial stage of the battling.

It was not long before it was known generally that plans to put Marshall over were afoot and favorable comment on the Vice-President as a possible nominee was heard in more than a score of delegations.

"Keep your eye on Marshall," said former Gov. Dunne of Illinois. "I do not believe that either Cox or McAdoo can win and you will find this view of the situation rather prevalent. You also will find that there is a strong trend toward Marshall as a compromise. One of the most significant facts is that you hear much praise and absolutely no criticism of Marshall, wherever the delegates gather. He seems acceptable to almost everybody."

Secondly only in importance to the Marshall move was the development of maneuvering in favor of John W. Davis of West Virginia, Ambassador to Great Britain. Davis appeared to be a favorite dark horse in and about the precincts of the national committee whenever a deadlock between Cox and McAdoo was mentioned.

Although Davis has been regarded as a candidate the McAdoo and other supporters might fall back on in the hour of defeat in the first line trenches, the talk today was confined by no means to administration quarters.

The chief objection to Davis is that he is virtually unknown not only to the country, but to his own party. It also was urged against him that he opposed woman suffrage while a member of the House.

Secretary of Agriculture Meredith for whom the Iowa delegation will vote at the beginning of the balloting took himself out of the field of candidates today in a formal statement in which he said in part:

"I am attending the convention merely as a delegate-at-large from Iowa. I appreciate more than I can say the friendship and confidence reposed by my Iowa friends, but I am not in any sense a candidate for the nomination. I am perfectly happy as Secretary of Agriculture and if I may continue until March 4 next to serve the entire people of the nation by encouraging and again by urging proper support of it through adequate appropriations to the Department of Agriculture, I will feel that I am working in a field in which I can be most effective."

Atty.-Gen. Palmer apparently is slated for early elimination. Palmer's principal handicap is his unpopularity with organized labor, arising from the injunction of the striking coal miners for which he is blamed, although the move was authorized by the President.

Gov. Cox is destined to roll up a big vote for the first prize and make by far the strongest bid for the nomination in the early balloting.

It will take a prodigious effort, however, on the part of his adherents to put him over and privately they are admitting they are up against a formidable undertaking.

Bryan and his dry forces together with the McAdoo and other administration elements appear to have safe control of more than one-third of the convention in opposition to Cox, representing, as he does, the wets and the antiadministration folks. With more than one-third of the delegates, the anti-Cox contingent can veto the selection of the Ohio Governor under the rule requiring a two-thirds majority for the nomination.

There is a noticable outcropping of hesitation of delegates here to be tagged as favorable to him. Delegates who are principally wet, but officially dry because of dry constituencies, are beginning to fear they cannot, with political safety, line up for Cox.

In this connection it is ap[illegible] that Cox will be greatly [illegible] if the platform should b[illegible] before the nominations [illegible] should be a convention [illegible] on the prohibition plan[illegible] personally wet delegates [illegible] compelled to vote dry [illegible] them would have the [illegible] vote thereafter for the Co[illegible] dacy with its light wine an[illegible] flavor.

So bitter has the fight on C[illegible] become that the Cox divorce case is beginning to be a factor. Although the divorce of the Ohio Governor which he allowed his wife to obtain without contest involved nothing discreditable to the Ohio Governor, delegates are being warned by his enemies in the convention that it will be unsafe to put up a candidate who had been in the divorce courts in view of the prejudices which might be aroused [illegible]gainst him in the campaign.

[illegible]cAdoo is up against a combina[illegible] the Bryan strength and anti[illegible]tration forces, the leaders [illegible] confident they possess [illegible]er o[illegible] more than one-[illegible] convention.

[illegible]r-General Burleson and [illegible]lass of Virginia, un[illegible] today in a big effort to [illegible] combination. Burleson [illegible]at it was time to come [illegible] and make an aggressive [illegible] McAdoo.

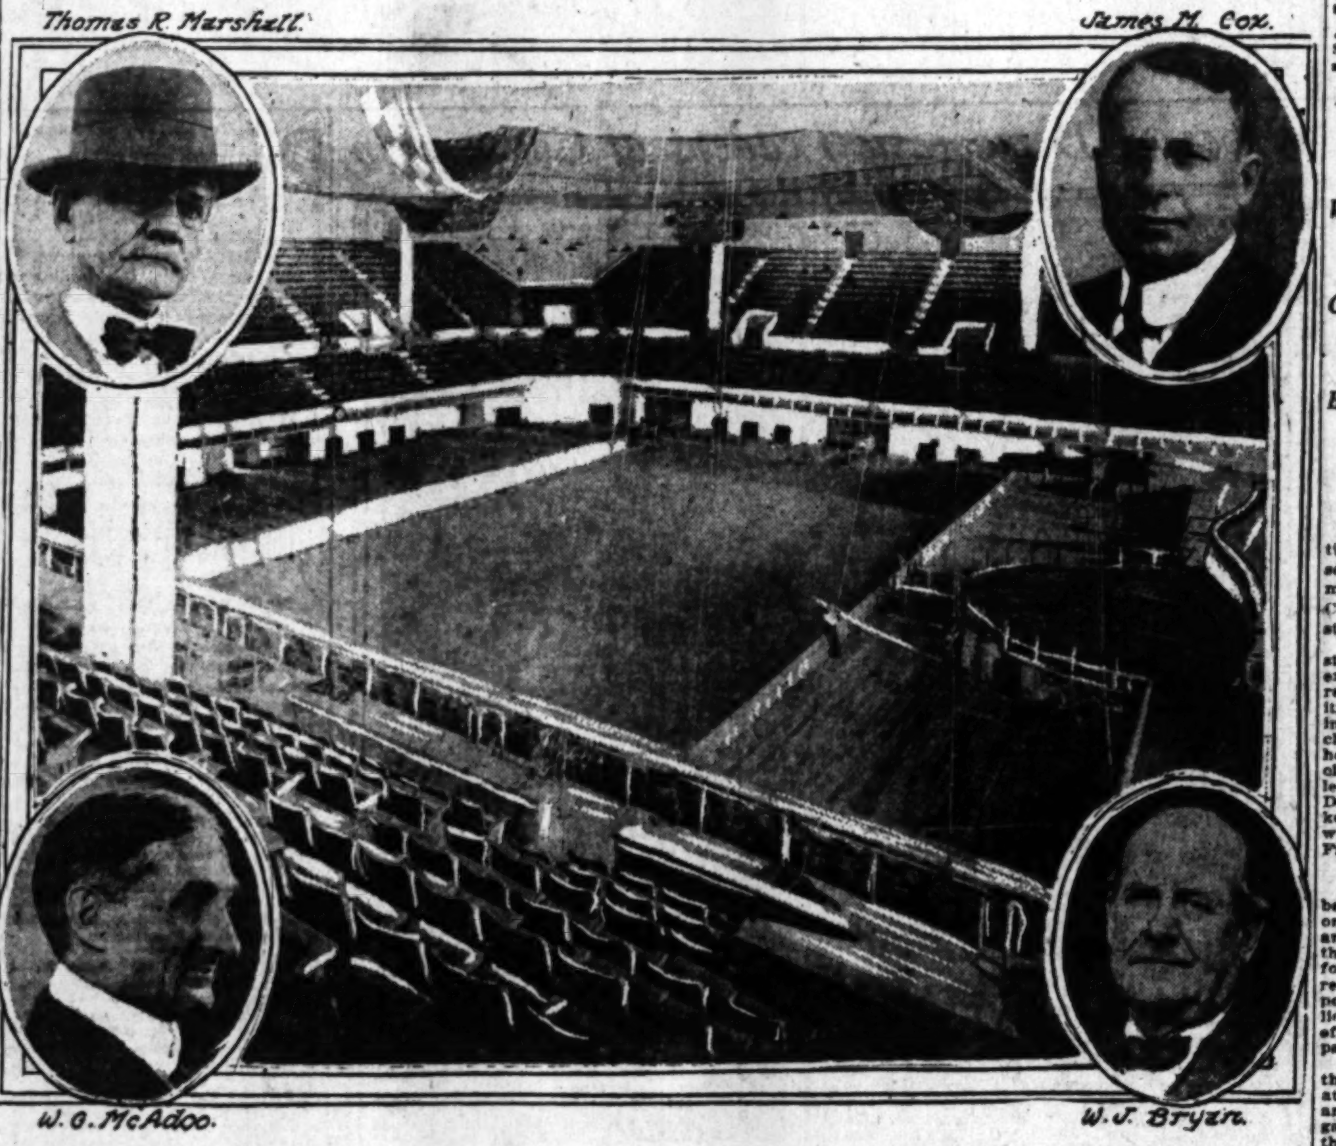
[illegible] in the newspaper corre[illegible] he dictated his views on [illegible]form and when asked about [illegible]ates, he promptly said:

"[illegible]lossal issues must be solved in the next four years. The American people will need a leader who is not only a man of vision, but a man of heart and of great constructive ability."

"Do you know any one who fits that measure?" he was asked.

"I do," replied Burleson emphatically, "William G. McAdoo fills the bill. Of course, there are others, but I believe that notwithstanding what has transpired, Mr. McAdoo will be nominated. His administration of the Treasury Department is recognized as ranking with that of Hamilton, Gallatin and Chase, and I believe that history will place McAdoo second in that list."

Arena Where Mighty Bourbon Struggle Begins Tomorrow.



In Some Respects to be One of the Most Remarkable Conventions in History.

William G. McAdoo, son-in-law of the President of the United States, is an undoubted favorite for the nomination among the delegates pouring into San Francisco. But a mysterious ukase has come from the White House, it is believed, which has caused him to emphatically withdraw his name. Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States, is whispered as a dark horse in the corridors of the Bay City hotels. Gov. Cox, popular Governor of Ohio, young and filled with a vital energy that may carry him far, is a serious contender for the nomination, but said to be the choice of the wets. And Bryan, always a potential, generally a quadrennial, candidate, is in this convention a greater force than ever—the leader of the dry forces, with every indication that he will dominate the great assemblage as he did on that famous occasion in Baltimore when he forced the nomination of Woodrow Wilson.

TENNESSEE GOVERNOR FAVORS RATIFICATION.

WIRES PRESIDENT THAT HE WILL CALL SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Gov. Roberts of Tennessee, in a telegram today to Persident Wilson, said he heartily favored ratification of the suffrage amendment and would include this subject in a call for a special session of the Legislature if his legal department advised him that ratification could be made.

Dispatches from Nashville have stated that the Attorney-General of State agreed with the view of Asst. Atty.-Gen. Frierson that the Legislature could vote on ratification.

VETERAN SKIPPER ON LAST OCEAN VOYAGE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—Capt. William Finch, senior captain of the White Star Line fleet, and for forty-six years a seaman, took the steamer Baltic out for Liverpool today on his last voyage as "skipper." He will be retired on pension at Liverpool.

Capt. Finch received the order of the British Empire from King George for his services during the war. His ship took Gen. Pershing and his staff to France in 1917.

At the morning session today Dr. P. A. Boncquet, Tulare county, plant pathologist, addressed the orchardists on the proper methods of treating adobe soil with sulphuric acid.

FOCH ACCUSES "TIGER."

French Press Asserts Marshal Demands Clemenceau be Tried for Treason.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, June 26.—The name of Marshal Foch has been hurled into the fight between Clemenceau and his political enemies in the first public demand made for trial of the "Tiger." Le Rappel, in an editorial by the owner, Eduard du Mesnil, headed, "Roll Call Accused," calls for the appearance of the former Premier before the high court of justice having jurisdiction over treason cases and names Marshal Foch as the man making the demand.

Attacks on the "Tiger" continue from many angles in the French press.

Yesterday Le Matin demanded the publication by the Foreign Office of documents proving whether the agreement between France and England calls for France to receive 55 per cent of the total indemnities from Germany and England 25 per cent or whether this agreement is one based on proportion.

This morning L'Echo de Paris publishes a statement attributed to the Foreign Office stating that the original agreement is based on proportion and not percentage the original figures being five to eleven. It states that translations of these figures last December in London by Loucher to 55 and 25 merely was a statement of the first agreement and did not mean necessarily that France would receive 55 per cent of the total. They add that the agreement on a percentage basis has not been made as any attempt to restate the London figures as percentage would receive opposition from all Allies except England and France, with England's attitude passive.

Clemenceau's opponents declare that whether or not Millerand succeeds in obtaining an agreement on that basis of 55 per cent for France at the Spa conference, Clemenceau is guilty of treason for entering into a proportional agreement without informing or consulting his people.

Clemenceau's friends declare the reopening of the question through the public press merely strengthens the hands of Belgium, Italy and Serbia.

FIX MINIMUM WAGE FOR MINOR AND WOMEN STORE EMPLOYEES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Orders effective July 31, establishing a minimum wage ranging from $10 to $16 a week for the women and minors employed in California stores of all characters, were made public by the State Industrial Welfare Commission here today. More than 20,000 workers are affected.

Apprentices under 18 years of age must be paid $10 and 18 or over $12 a week. The $10 wage must be raised to $12 at the end of the first six months and $14 at the end of a year. The workers under the $12 initial wage must be raised to $14 at the end of the first three months and to $16 at the end of the next three months.

No employer may employ as apprentices more than one-third of the total number of his women and female minor workers. The apprentices must be registered with the commission within two weeks after employment.

Apprentices may be employed in store offices provided that their number does not exceed one-third of the total number of female workers. Adult apprentices in store offices must be paid $12 a week for the first three months, $14 for the next three months, and thereafter the regular $16 minimum. Apprentice minors in offices must be paid $10, $11, $12 and $14, respectively, for the first four periods of employment each of three months. Adult part-time workers must be paid 40 cents and minor part-time workers 30 cents an hour. Adult special workers who are employed for a period of less than a week are entitled to not less than $2.66⅔ a day and minor special workers $2 a day.

Millinery apprentices in mercantile establishments must be paid not less than $8 a week for the first four weeks, $9 for the second four weeks and $10 for the third four weeks. The number of such apprentices is limited to one-third of the total force of the millinery workers.

Would Enforce All Laws, Including Dry Law.

Claims His Ohio Record Will Back His Assertion.

Believes Excess Profits Tax Paid by People.

BY NELSON B. REDDEN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

COLUMBUS, June 26.—Prohibition, as a political issue, now is solely a question of law enforcement, according to Gov. James M. Cox. On this issue he is willing to stand by his record in Ohio.

"Any provision, constitutional or statutory, must be accepted as the expressed mandate of the people, and representing the wish of the majority. Unless we hold to that principle in government, then we will be chargeable with the very things we hold against the Bolsheviki," he declared in an interview just before leaving Columbus for Trails End, his Dayton home, from where he will keep in touch by long distance with his campaign managers at San Francisco during the convention.

SHOULD ENFORCE LAW.

"Whatever the law is, it should be enforced. That process will demonstrate its wisdom or its weakness and, if change is necessary, we have the governmental facility to transform. That is why evolution makes revolution both unnecessary and impossible in America." Asked if the liquor question had not been one of the vital issues in his Ohio campaigns, he said:

"Yes, I have had my troubles with the Antisaloon League. In Ohio at least, the leaders of the league are owned by the Republican organization. They fought me from the time I gave to the State the first Sunday observance in its history. That convinced me that they were conspiring politicans, acting in bad faith with their followers. The issue now is law enforcement, and our record in Ohio stands."

Our Summer Drive on Made-to-Order Suits Is On Full Blast.

Get a $50 Suit AT $35

Now, Men, just a heart-to-heart talk about where to get your next suit of clothes. Why not come here? Old customers know about our big money-saving offers and prospective customers should know. We'll explain! For about 16 years Stewart The Square Tailor has led the field in business tailoring methods which have held down prices for made-to-order clothing on a par with the ready-made kind, and even lower than that. Mill connections—big direct shipments—generous discounts—upstairs quarters—low rental and extra skilled work, knocked the props clean from under high prices in tailoring. Stewart The Tailor proved to be Mr. Well Dressed Man's best friend, saving each customer a big sum of money and giving him a suit equal to the fit and workmanship of those made by a Fifth Avenue tailor. Remember the slogan, "A Stewart Suit is a Stylish Suit." Mighty swell for the youngish chaps and dressy but quiet for the older men. Attend our first annual big Summer drive! It's going to be a big sale of all the new patterns.

RE-CREATING JEWELRY

Styles of today are vastly different from those of a very few years ago. Your jewelry, fashionable when you bought it, may now be very much out of date. Naturally you hesitate to wear it and just as naturally you dislike to lose the investment.

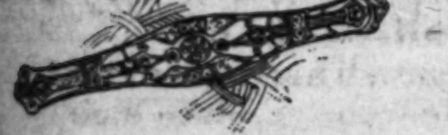
Why, then, do you not have it RE-CREATED—made into the beautiful barpins and rings and lavallieres you see on so many ladies of fashion? The work need not be expensive, and you shall say about the styles, for our artists will make you designs and quote you prices while you wait.

Permit us to suggest that when you call you bring your out-of-date jewelry with you so our estimates may be exact. This service is without charge.

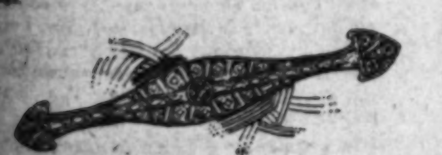
A few months ago the jewelry shown in the drawing above was hidden away in dusty jewel cases—useless and representing a distinct loss. Today the stones are beautifully mounted in platinum or white gold, such as you see in our show windows.

Examples

An antique diamond horseshoe brooch, made of red gold, furnished the material for this charming white gold and platinum barpin. The large center stone was from our stock of unmounted gems.



This charming barpin was fashioned from the material found in two old platinum top cluster rings and a man's stickpin. The cut does scant justic to the beauty of the design.



The diamonds from one of the initial fobs worn some years ago furnished all but two of the stones required for this barpin. Made of platinum for an out-of-town customer who ordered by mail.

WHO'S WHO AMONG WOMEN.

Dorothy Dix Says Flower of Sex is at Democratic Convention.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Just as the Republican women sent the flower of their sex to Chicago to represent them at the first political convention in which women ever had a voice in nominating a President, so the Democratic women have sent the brainiest, the sanest, the most distinguished among them to be their spokeswomen at San Francisco.

Many of the women delegates to the Democratic convention are national figures. All of them are somebody at home. They are women educators, welfare workers, philanthropists, society women, club women, women officeholders, women who are the wives of judges, and bankers, and merchants, and ranchmen. And there are far more "Mrs." than "Misses" among them.

The women have sent no Jane or Mayme as a delegate, because she had nothing to do and wanted a free junket as men so often send a Hank and Bill to represent them. No woman delegate is here simply because she is here. She is here because she stands for the best that women stand for.

To stroll around the women's headquarters is like reading a chapter of who's who in the fair and political sex. To begin with there is Mrs. George Bass, official boss of the wigwam, hostess to the Democratic party, so to speak, society woman, politician, one of the leaders in every line of woman's endeavor, and Admiral Crichton in petticoats. And ably seconding her is Mrs. Mary Kincaid, author, lecturer, philanthropist and heaven knows what beside, a beautiful, gracious woman, who handles the information bureau with such tact and finesse that the men politicians are complaining that the women are getting all of the space in the newspapers.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Then comes the executive committee in point of interest. Seventeen of them, and they differ from each other as one star differeth from another star in glory. Among the headliners are:

Miss Elizabeth Marbury, play producer, who introduced the French dramatists to America; sponsored Clyde Fitch; is behind every forward-looking movement for women; has made a fortune for herself, and was selected by Franklin Lane to go to France and presented the land colonization scheme to our soldiers. Miss Marbury and Miss Anne Morgan and Elsie De Wolfe own a chateau at Versailles, which they gave over as a home for sick soldiers during the war.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbanks, wife of a Chicago millionaire, a woman of great force, a power in Chicago among the women, and one of the twelve representative women selected by Secretary McAdoo for the Women's Liberty Loan Committee.

Mrs. Helen Grenfell of Colorado, an orator-educator and thinker; for several terms Superintendent of Education of her State. Wife of a prominent railroad man.

Mrs. John D. Castleton of Kentucky will be 80 in October and looks not more than 60 years old. Not to know who Mrs. Castleton in Kentucky is, is to argue yourself unknown, indeed.

Mrs. Stiles W. Burr of Minnesota, rich society woman, leader in the Red Cross and Liberty Loan campaign during the war, notable figure in women's clubs. Miss Caroline Ruutzrees of Greenwich, Ct., head of the famous Rosemary Hall School, a distinguished educator and the author of many books.

GREAT HUMANITARIAN.

Mrs. Otto Wittpen of New Jersey, a member of the famous Stephens family, a generous philanthropist, an ardent suffrage worker and a great humanitarian. Mrs. Solon Jacobs of Birmingham, Ala., one of the most prominent women in the south, a member of the National Women's Liberty Loan Committee, secretary of the National League of Women Voters, which is the legatee of the National Woman's Suffrage party and famous as a woman orator.

Miss Harriet May Mills, who is one of the grand old women of the party—one of the suffragists, who fought for equal rights with Miss Anthony and the other pioneers in the cause when the most blighting aspersion you could bring against a woman's character was to say that she "was strong-minded," and when audiences threw ancient eggs instead of roses at suffragists.

Another interesting woman is Mrs. Mary Lily of New York, the first woman Assemblyman to be elected from New York City. Mrs. Lily is a successful lawyer, editor of a law journal, and the mother of a grown son. She won her seat in the Legislature during the war by asking her opponent: "Why aren't you in the trenches fighting like my son and these other mothers' and fathers' sons?"

Oklahoma sends two women delegates from literally our first families, for they are descended from Indian chiefs, who ruled over the tribes in the Indian Territory.

But the list of distinguished women is endless. For the women are offering their best to their country in time of peace as they gave their best in times of war. And it's a happy augury for the future and answers the old conundrum which used to keep so many people awake at night: "What will women do with the franchise when they get it?"

Look at the two conventions for the answer.

TOO MUCH ADO OVER McADOO.

already being made with Southern and Southwestern States which will result to the advantage of Cox.

"Big Bill" Decker, formerly of the Ohio Senate but of late years a power in Oklahoma politics is handling much of the wire-pulling and the smile on his face tonight indicates that his labors have not been in vain. Frank McGuire, who heads the Ohio banking department, is putting all he has learned in twenty years of vote fishing to win for his Chief Executive and even with the handicap of top position of both Wilson and Bryan there is no note of discouragement as yet from the Ohio camp.

Quick to see the direction of the political wind, which is blowing naught but the dryest currents old ex-Gov. James E. Campbell, dean of Ohio politicians, who is now official spokesman for the Governor, came forward today with the statement that there seemed to be a great mistake about the real issue before the convention. The gray-haired veteran did not attempt to say just what the issue was, but he assured the world through the medium of an army of listening newspaper men that there was no place in the platform for a declaration of the wet-and-dry issue at all. "Gov. Cox does not deem it proper to insert a liquor plank," said Campbell. "In fact it is not an issue at all. It is a well-known fact that regardless of Cox's personal opinions he stands for law enforcement and as an executive stands ready to do the bidding of the people."

This sounded good to many of the delegates, who, under the new order of things had come to the opinion that old vox populi is being entirely too much neglected and whether it means a thing or not insists in being classed among the high and mighty by having handed to them by come one the slogan that has been used to catch votes for Democrats since the birth of the party, "vox populi, vox Dei."

SHADOW OF GLOOM.

Closely following the statement of the Ohio leaders that prohibition was a dead issue came a loud and long cry as Bryan was officially placed on the resolution committee, and immediately took command. The headquarters of the platform makers was soon transferred to the Commoner's room at the St. Francis and the news that he had control of the committee by a vote of eleven out of sixteen members threw another shadow of gloom into the camps of those who have been insisting that the peerless leader was no more. And then again and even worse it is now evident that Bryan's only hope of floor oratory is no longer vested solely in his fight against the demon rum.

He is to be champion of the cause of Senator "Jim" Reed of Missouri, who, because of his opposition of the Wilson draft of the League of Nations was refused a seat in the convention this afternoon, and will in all probability make the rafters of the auditorium ring with oratory of the Platt variety when the Missouri statesman takes his fight for a vote to the floor of the convention.

This contest will clear the atmosphere a little as it will be a test of Wilson's strength here, both as to his domination and the feeling of the delegates as to making the League the great, sole and only real issue as is the present demand from Washington. The contest also will make more clear the chances of several of their candidates and will be the real start of the convention. It is understood that Senator Carter Glass, a strong supporter of McAdoo, will tell the convention what he thinks of Bryan and any other man who opposes the President, being careful the while not to put in danger the chances of his former chief in the Treasury Department.

Although more delegates arrived today than at any time since the convention headquarters opened, there has been little change in what is considered as the best bet on the opening ballot.

McAdoo still looks like the leader with Palmer second and Cox third.

FEAR OF DEADLOCK.

Already the fear of a deadlock looms as it always does in a Democratic convention where two-thirds majority is required to nominate, and many a dark horse is being groomed in the hope that the tired delegates will vote for an unknown rather than stay here over the week-end and ruin the Fourth of July holiday that most of them are planning in various western cities. And then, too, the item of living expense will have a little to do with a dark horse's chances if the thing gets too drawn out.

Hundreds of middle westerners are here with the wife and babies, and even if they are carrying their own food in the cafeterias, many a bushel of $2 wheat is consumed in a day and these thrifty souls can not forget the saving habits of a lifetime. Hotel rates are up to the sky limit, making a week of convention seem like a rank extravagance to a great majority of the delegates.

Sunday will be a rather quiet day, and aside from welcoming delegations from New Jersey, Massachusetts, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio there is nothing of note on the program. Of course, the wise ones will continue to gather in small groups and discuss issues, construct planks and make trades, but it is conceded that Sunday will witness the lull which comes before the storm, due to break when Chairman Cummings raps his gavel at the Auditorium Monday.

Platform builders will be the busiest one tomorrow and every member of the resolutions committee will have his day's rest broken by exponents of the League of Nations, labor leaders, lower living cost advocates, soldiers bonus, lobbyists, delegates of the Irish republic and even the downtrodden school teachers and a hundred others. Being a member of this committee is no small job and is a thankless one at best. All are hoping for a little rest from the man with an ax to grind and depending upon sightseeing tours and excursions on the bay to keep part of the hungry crowds away from the doors of the committee rooms, during a portion of the day.

FOREIGN BRIEFS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, June 26.—Germany has filed with the reparations commission a claim that 215,000,000 marks should be deducted from the 7,000,000,000 gold marks due France as her share of the indemnity fixed by the Versailles Treaty, says the Petit Parisien. This sum, it is asserted, is the value of improvements made on French roads by German prisoners of war.

ALLIES MASTER SITUATION.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, June 26.—Allied nations are masters of the situation in the Near East, as elsewhere, and if in complete harmony, can employ all the forces at their disposal to carry out their policies which are "soberly proportioned to their interests," said Marshal Foch in an interview today.

Discussing German disarmament, he asserted this matter was not the destruction of 1500 cannon, but the overcoming of the "hostile and militarist spirit of the German people."

Turkey's peace delegation was ready this morning to submit that country's reply to the terms of the treaty presented by the Allied nations. This reply was to have been transmitted on June 11, but an extension of time amounting to fifteen days was granted on June 7.

Dispatches from India indicate considerable unrest among the Moslems of that country regarding the Turkish situation. The Viceroy of India has, it is said, received notice from a leader of the Indian Nationalists that unless the Turkish peace terms are revised the Hindus will withdraw their support from the British government.

Who Says the Duo-Art Reproducing Piano Is the Best?

Steinway and Sons do. They have chosen the Duo-Art as the one and only reproducing action which they were willing to combine with their great piano and offer to the public, bearing the Steinway name.

The world's greatest artists do. The following great pianists make records of their playing exclusively for the Duo-Art. Any rolls bearing their names and used by other makers are mere makeshifts and have not been played by these artists for these particular instruments. They play only for the Duo-Art.

HARDING BANS BIG DONATIONS.

Contributions of More Than Thousand Not Wanted.

Party Not to be Obligated to Moneyed Interests.

Lieut.-Col. Roosevelt Pleased With Outlook.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Senator Harding, Republican Presidential nominee, put the ban today on big campaign contributions. Funds for the campaign are to be raised by appeals for small sums of money from the rank and file of the party all over the country and $1000 will be the limit per person. No opposing party is going to be given a chance to raise the quadrennial "boodle" cry.

Announcement to this effect was made today by Col. William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Republican party organization, after a conference with Senator Harding.

"Senator Harding has said to me, as head of the National Ways and Means Committee, that he wants the financial side of the campaign cast in harmony with the policy of his preconvention campaign," said Col. Thompson.

"The Senator spent the least of any of the candidates in the preconvention period and takes especial pride in having it known that the major portion of his limited fund came through small contributions from neighbors and friends in his home town. He feels, and we all agree with him, that the necessary funds for the national campaign should be made up of small contributions.

LIMIT NOW SET

"Our policy is to adhere strictly to the proposal of receiving contributions in limited amounts. No one can escape the realization of certain necessary expenditures in carrying on a great nation-wide campaign. The Republican party means to carry on an intensive campaign in order to get back to government under the Constitution, but it is not going to be a campaign that will commit the party to an obligation to the moneyed interests or any other single or selfish element in American life.

"Through my department there has been no contribution to the Republican national organization in excess of $1000, and we mean to go on with that limitation. There is to be no reliance on financial interests to restore the Republican party to power. We hold a strong conviction that the sentiment of the country will bring the party back as an agency of popular government."

Further emphasizing the restoration of unity in the Republican party, Senator Harding had an hour's conference today with Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt. After the conference Col. Roosevelt said:

"I had a most satisfactory talk with Senator Harding. His ideas as to the policies of this country when he is elected President; and as to the campaign for the Presidency, are such as every young, forward-looking man will indorse in toto.

"In Senator Harding we have a man who will represent and unite the entire party. Under the leadership of the Senator we are going to put on our fighting clothes, meet the issue squarely and roll it big."

NOMINEES TO MEET.

Interest was expressed in political circles here in the announcement from Boston today of the conference next Wednesday between Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts, the Republican Vice-Presidential nominee. The two met several months ago, when Mr. Harding was campaigning in Massachusetts.

Arrangements for the meeting of the nominees were made by National Chairman Hays at Senator Harding's suggestion that an exchange of views on the campaign would be profitable. The speeches to be made by each of the candidates in accepting their respective nominations probably will be discussed also. While plans for the conference have not been completed it is understood that it will be held at the Senator's office at the capitol.

In addition to his conferences today, Mr. Harding played a round of golf with Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, who is a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Senator Hale of Maine and Senator Elkins of West Virginia. Tomorrow promises to be a quiet day for the Senator.

TO FIGHT COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CLEVELAND, June 26.—Steps to combat all proposed compulsory health insurance and to wage a campaign to secure recruits in the medical field were taken at the closing session of the seventy-sixth annual convention of the American Institute of Homeopathy yesterday.

"The United States has just about one-third enough physicians," Dr. Gilbert Fitzpatrick of Chicago declared.

LUTHERAN SYNOD TO CONVENE IN ST. LOUIS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

DETROIT, June 26.—The diamond jubilee convention of the Evangelical Lutheran synod will be held at St. Louis in 1923, the synod decided last night at the close of the triennial meeting here.

The synod yesterday approved a proposal that a secretary of finances be appointed, whose duty would be to supervise expenditures and prepare a synodical budget annually. He will be named by the president.

Appropriations by the synod for educational purposes totalled $1,381,000.

CHICAGO COAL SUPPLY DOWN TO THREE DAYS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 26.—Chicago has only enough coal to last its pumping stations about three days, P. S. Combs, City Engineer, said today. The supply, to last this long, must be evenly distributed.

No hard coal has been received from the East for a week, W. H. Leland, president of the Consumers' Company, said.

To the People of the San Joaquin Valley:-

You have had your pioneer days and your struggles and the world is now benefiting by your efforts and faith. One day the San Joaquin will stand almost self-sufficient, needing little from the rest of the world, yet the world is already paying tribute and pouring a stream of wealth into the San Joaquin in return for its products.

Between the timber of the mountains at its edges and the rice of its lowlands it produces almost everything needed for food, clothing and shelter. Live-stock, dairy products, alfalfa, raisins and deciduous and citrus fruits predominate, but cotton and rice have yet to be heard from in large figures, and they will be.

Fresno, the natural capital of the empire of San Joaquin, will always be a progressive and prosperous city because of its association with widely advertised products.

The relations between the San Joaquin and Los Angeles will become closer as both develop. The metropolis and industrial center of the Southwest, with its nearness to the ocean lanes and fast growing shipping facilities, will consume and handle increasing amounts of the valley's products; and its cotton mills will encourage a development of cotton that will increase the riches of the San Joaquin.

Los Angeles, with its great stretch of beaches near by, is an attractive place for people of the valley to spend their vacations. Business and pleasure are easily combined. One may use part of his time in attending to business matters and be surrounded by ocean and mountain resorts to which he can retreat in very brief time by auto or fast electric lines.

The Stillwell is ideally located for headquarters. It is close to business and the center of transportation yet it is just enough to one side to be pleasant, receive the ocean breeze and permit the parking of cars. It is most convenient for automobilists, there being several good garages within a block.

The Stillwell Auto Livery places 150 good cars at your service by the hour, day, week or month, without driver so that you can have an automobile whenever you want it.

HARDING REVIEWS NATION'S NEEDS

Republican Nominee in Remarkable Interview Given Some Time Before He Was Nominated Tells of Duties and Aspirations of Republicans.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—Some months ago the World obtained the following interview with Senator Harding. As Harding's prospects at the Chicago convention looked at that time far from bright, the now very timely interview was put in cold storage with ultimate appearance in print, or relegation to oblivion resting upon the knees of the gods—or, more especially upon the vote of the Republican delegates.

Fate ordained that Harding should be the Republican standard bearer this fall. That his opinions, as expressed below upon various crucial questions of the hour, have not changed since they were given to Mr. Van Zile goes without saying. They are most enlightening at this moment and will be read with interest by both the Republican candidate's supporters and opponents.

BY EDWARD S. VAN ZILE.

"We've been living under an autocracy. For drifting away from our constituted paths we are now paying severe penalties. I want to talk to you about the imperative necessity this country is under of getting back at once to popular government through the medium of political parties."

So said Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio to me recently in his committee room at the nation's Capitol, whose spacious dome was hardly enough to cover all the Presidential aspirants who gathered daily beneath its splendid curves. I had just been lunching with one of the few Middle West Senators not an aspirant for the Presidency, and he had pointed out to me in the restaurant eight of his colleagues and a peripetetic president of a great university, all of whom have their eyes turned meaningly upon the White House.

"It surely isn't reactionary," went on the Ohioan, presently, smiling grimly, "to call attention to the fact that we Americans by reforming our political methods, largely through the adoption of the primary, have wandered, perhaps unconsciously, from the paths of government through political parties to the untried, dangerous ways of personal government. We have replaced party responsibility by personal responsibility."

ACCENTUATED BY WAR.

"Of course," remarked the Senatro after a thoughtful pause, "this drift from party government toward autocracy was accentuated by the war. I believe, as fully as does President Wilson, in the necessity for concentrating power in the offices of the Executive for the successful prosecution of a war. In a great emergency there must be no conflict of authority and, as there is little time for deliberation at great national crises, centralization of authority is imperative.

"Congress recognized this fact when we entered the World War, submerged itself and patriotically conferred upon the President more power than was exercised by any other governing head in the world. And now we find it is not easy to return at once to our old system of co-ordinated government.

"And we can accomplish this only by an immediate and complete adherence to the provisions of the Federal Constitution and the reestablishment of government through political parties. No representative popular government has ever been maintained by any other method. The political party is the only preventive yet devised by man to withstand the encroachments on the liberties of the people by an autocrat or a dictator."

The Senator leaned back in his chair and lighted a cigar. In interviewing Presidential possibilities I have always found myself wondering whether the aspirant before me "looks the part." In outward seeming Harding is worthy of the White House. Tall, vigorous, with a strong, clean shaven face, lined by thought and experience of life, he is impressive in bearing, but his Senatorial dignity is not carried to an extreme, and his frankness and geniality account for his popularity in the Senate and with his constituents.

NEEDS CO-ORDINATION.

"What this country needs," he remarked presently, "is co-orination and understanding between the Executive and Congress. We must have a spirit of co-operation between the leaders of party thought, whether their leadership be administrative or legislative. For six years, instead of Congressional consideration of legislative and departmental recommendations we've had Executive domination, and, essentially the surrender of a legislative form of government.

"It was the reassertion of Congressional obligations under the Constitution that led to the conflict between the Senate and the President over the peace treaty. The Senators were conscious of an official obligation resting upon them. And we had a very reassuring exhibition of a return to constitutional methods when the Senate asserted itself in spite of the insistent purpose of the President to make his will the supreme authority of this country."

"I rode from here to Harper's Ferry with Mr. Bryan the afternoon following his Jackson Day speeches. Do you think, Senator, that Bryan has split the Democratic party wide open?"

"Did he say he had?" queried Harding, smiling.

"No—far from it. But many commentators the next day seemed to imply that he had tampered with the running gear of the Democratic machine."

"You can never be sure of a split in the Democratic party," remarked the Senator, after a few contemplative puffs at his cigar.

"The Democrats are opportunists. Like all opportunists they are ludicrously inconsistent. A good illustration of what I mean is the Democratic attitude in 1900. Do you remember how hot the Democrats were at that time against imperialism and expansion. If you whispered 'hands across the sea' to a Democrat, in those days he'd yell 'Police.'

WORLD DOMINATION.

"Today the same Democrats are shouting for world domination. Of course, there are prominent Democratic leaders devoted to the fundamental doctrines that gave strength to their party, a few generations ago, but they are too few in number to keep the democracy within the bounds of consistency. The wear and tear on a Democrat's nervous system must be great. To change from an anti-expansionist to an internationalist is an awful strain on any man's constitution.

"But I don't look for a real split in the Democratic party this year. The Democrats, if they run true to form will try to find some expedient issue, try to make some popular appeal to the American public that will serve to hold them together as a party.

"There's a great peril from the Reds in this country—greater than our people realize," said Senator Harding a little later in answer to a query I had put to him. "This radical upheaval is due either to a feverish condition among men owing to the war or to a fuller understanding upon one-half of the people as to how the other half lives. At all events there's a feeling of discontent in the world at present the like of which the race has never known.

"In theory there is much in today's extreme social doctrines that appeals strongly to a very large part of our people and there seems to be nothing to controvert the arguments of the radical Socialists so effectively as the tragic disappointment that always results from a political application of their doctrines.

"The one great appeal to the uninformed worker," the Senator said, "was, during the recent steel strike the promises that the mills would be taken over and owned and operated by the workmen. The agitators who made this promise to the laboring men refrained, of course, from describing the pitiful results that have followed Russia's experiment in operating mills by committees of workingmen.

LEAD IGNORANT ASTRAY.

"These agitators who are highly intelligent men, trained linguists and experts in the psychology of the laborers, cannot be ignorant of the disastrous effects upon Russian industries of the seizure of factories and mills by the proletariat. But they went on leading the ignorant astray, in spite of the fact, of which they must be cognizant, that no experiment of the kind they advocate ever has been, or ever can be successfully carried out.

"Especially is this true of this country, because, in turning over our manufacturing plants to the workers civil liberty, the very foundation stone of our institution, must first be overthrown."

"What is the best method, Senator?" I queried presently, "of overcoming this revolutionary unrest that seems to be sweeping over the world at present?"

The Senator sat silent for a time, considering my comprehensive question carefully. Finally he said:

"One cure for socialistic radicalism is a widespread realization of the fact which all human history demonstrates that there can be no real liberty without restraint and that there can be no civilization that is not governed by law. To make chaos and call it progress is to give way to madness in a world that more than at any time in human history needs perfect sanity in this period of rehabilitation.

"The vital problem of the present day is this: How is the established order going to resist the pressure of iconoclastic forces? When our Congress was intimidated into enacting the Adamson law the apprehension was justified that all existing governments might be influenced by the political strength of organized minorities.

SURRENDER OF CONGRESS.

"The surrender of Congress to the behests of an outside body wielding political power, affecting national legislation through its influence at the polls has had a most disastrous effect upon our institutions, an effect that it will require time and a firm allegiance on the part of our legislators to the best American traditions and practices to overcome."

"The iconoclastic forces of which you spoke are quite active at present," it was suggested.

"They are," agreed the Senator grimly. "We have been threatened recently with a universal strike if Congress dared to enact an anti-strike provision in the law returning the railroads to their owners. The opposition to this law has been emphatic and aggressive, notwithstanding the fact that the measure safeguards the right of every man to leave his employment at his own pleasure and also guarantees the right of collective bargaining. The law even goes one step further than this and establishes a tribunal to prevent conflicts between employer and employed in case collective bargaining proves to be ineffectual."

"The issue is a crucial one," I remarked.

"It is. A government, you see, falls short of its obligations to the people if it cannot maintain the primacy of public service above everything else, while at the same time it provides competent governmental authority for the righteous adjustment of all conflicts between a public service and those who are enrolled to perform that service."

"Are you convinced, Senator Harding, that the Republican party will elect the next President?"

"I certainly am," he answered emphatically. "The people of this country have come to the conclusion, it appears, that the Republican party has some conception, to put it conservativeliy, of the fact that successful business is indissolubly linked with the common good fortune of the American nation.

GIGANTIC BUSINESS.

"The war demonstrated what was only vaguely comprehended before, that our government is the most gigantic business concern in the world and that in order to function effectively, it has to be run on sound business principles. An astounding fact is that it should have required the imminent perils that a World War brought to us to open our eyes to what is really a self-evident proposition."

"And you argue, Senator, that our war experiences showed that on the whole, the Republicans possessed greater business ability than the Democrats?"

"It was proved conclusively, was it not?" queried Harding quietly.

"When the war forced us to employ all our resources from brain to brawn, in preparing to give the coup de grace to Prussian militarism there was no real efficiency displayed here by the administrative departments until after large numbers of Republicans had been put into influential executive positions.

"Of course, I'm not saying that one political party won the war. Our triumph in Europe was achieved by the American people as a whole. But I do say that, man for man, the Republicans wielding executive power in Washington during the conflict were more efficient, displayed more business acumen and horse sense than the Democrats. It was not until Republicans were called upon by the administration to become dollar-a-year men here in Washington and help to get order out of chaos that the American people began to have confidence in the final successful outcome of our belligerent activities."

"All this, you think, will have an influence upon the outcome at the polls next fall?"

BUSINESS METHODS.

"Why shouldn't it?" queried the Senator dryly. "You can't fool all the people all the time. The public may have a short memory, but the events I've just referred to are of too recent occurrence for their effect to have been lost. The American people will remember next November that when business methods in our national departments were essential to the preservation of modern civilization they were vouchsafed to us by the patriotic Americans of executive ability who have always voted the Republican ticket.

"That is not a mere partisan campaign statement. It can be proved by facts and figures and a glance at the list of big men who did big things for the country here in Washington after Democratic bungling and inefficiency had made necessary what became for the time being a coalition government."

"'Efficiency' then is the watchword of your party, Senator?"

"Why shouldn't it be? As a party we have proved historically our right to it. Our party is a party of achievement, by and for Americans. I'm convinced that the people of this country cherish the belief that the Republican party at present is devoted to policies essential to the restoration of our normal life, under strictly constitutional restraint.

"I believe that this nation is growing more impatient for the coming of that happy day when it can call into public service men who have the capacity to perform that service—when the departments here at Washington will not be dependent, as it was during the war, upon the volunteered service of patriotic Republicans.

"As a people we're devoted to business. It's absurd to believe that such a people would retain in power a party that, whatever else it may or may not have been, has shown itself perniciously and persistently unbusinesslike."

ARIZONA NEWS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX, June 24.—Gov. Campbell, though a Republican, has written a plank for submission to the platform committee of the National Democratic Convention. But he submits it in his capacity as president of the League of the Southwest and it is similar to one he succeeded in getting into the Republican platform at Chicago. It favors land reclamation by the national government as a matter of development and conservation, serving to upbuild the nation. It is understood that a number of Arizona Democrats have been laboring on planks of the same sort, intended to be even stronger than the Campbell suggestion and have especial reference to the reclamation of the arid lands of the Southwest.

LINE-UP COMPLETE.

The Democratic line-up for State offices, for submission to the party electors at the fall primary, now appears to be about complete, with few changes likely to occur. The list, possibly with a few omissions, is presented below:

Senator—Marcus A. Smith, incumbent; Rawghlie W. Stanford, Superior judge of Maricopa county; W. R. Ramsdell, Tucson mining operator.

Representative in Congress—Carl Hayden, incumbent; Mrs. Rosa McKay, member House of Representatives from Gila county.

Governor—Mulford Winsor, Senator from Yuma county; Charles H. Roberts, former Senator from Cochise county Board of Supervisors; Mitt Sims, Secretary of State; Jesse D. Boyce, State Auditor; L. J. Harmon, former chairman State Live-stock Sanitary Commission.

Secretary of State—Harry S. Ross, State Treasurer; Charles de Sales Wheeler, justice of the peace, East Phoenix precinct; Mrs. Nellie Hayward, member House of Representatives from Cochise county; E. A. Carrol, Winslow railroad man.

State Auditor—P. J. Munch, deputy in Auditor's office; Ed. Erhardt, deputy in Treasurer's office.

State Treasurer—Sam F. Webb, Treasurer Maricopa county; Guy C. Welch, Treasurer Cochise county; Raymond D. Earhardt, Sheriff Santa Cruz county.

TWO CANDIDATES.

Attorney-General—Wiley E. Jones, incumbent; Leslie C. Hardy, County Attorney, Santa Cruz county.

Justice Supreme Court—A. H. McAllister, Superior judge Graham county; Samuel L. Pattee, Superior judge Pima county; T. W. Nealon, referee in bankruptcy at Phoenix.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—C. O. Case, incumbent; A. C. Peterson, speaker of Arizona House or Representatives and president of Latter Day Saints Academy at Thatcher.

Tax Commissioner (two vacancies)—C. M. Zander, incumbent; M. A. Murphy, justice of the peace at Flagstaff; E. A. Hughes, Assessor of Cochise county; David H. Claridge, Senator from Graham county; Frank Luke, former Assessor Maricopa county.

Corporation Commissioner—T. D. Cashell, corporation commission rate expert; I. C. E. Adams, chairman Cochise county Board of Supervisors.

Mine Inspector—G. H. Bolin, incumbent; Tom Foster, member House of Representatives, deputy sheriff at Lowell, Cochise county; Ed O'Hagan, legislative attache, miner at Jerome; Edward Massey, deputy mine inspector at Bisbee; Harry Jennings, member House of Representatives from Cochise county, mine operator at Bisbee.

PECULIAR DISPUTES.

The courts lately have been called upon to adjust disputes rather out of the ordinary. For instance, Clifford G. Davis has sued Roger W. Stadlman for $800 damages, for the loss of an auto and tools in the destruction of the latter's garage at Mesa, in April. The fire is alleged to have been due to the action of Mrs. Stadlman in ordering the flooding of the dirty garage floor with twenty-five gallons of gasoline and then directing scrubbing with wire brooms. This unheard-of effort at garage cleaning naturally resulted in friction, in which the gasoline caught fire and exploded.

At Douglas there was haughty denial by Aurelio Miranda of the right of a woman to fire him from his job in a suburban restaurant, after he had returned to work from a visit to a spirituous resort across the line. So he knocked the proprietress down, to prove man's superiority. He is in jail.

At Jerome L. G. Lightfoot hired one Charles G. Haynes to run his restaurant while he took a trip to Los Angeles. On his return, in a dispute with the manager relieved, there was a row in which much of the restaurant furniture was damaged. A justice of the peace gave Lightfoot judgment for $25 damages, but subtracted $11 wages due Haynes.

Jose Martinez is in the City Jail for a month, simply on the testimony of his wife. She told: "He makes me do all the work. He takes all the money. He won't work, but he keeps strong by beating me."

WOMAN HONORED.

Mrs. H. A. Guild, elected to be auditor of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, is the first Arizona woman ever honored by office in the organization. For years she has been prominent in Arizona club work. She was organizer and the first president of the Madison Improvement Club, a rural organization near Phoenix, now with its own handsome clubhouse. She was head of the Central Arifiona Federation of Women's Clubs and later, till the last State meeting, head of the State federation. She had been honored also, by being chosen an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago, whence she went to the federation meeting at Des Moines.

Kills Wife with Ax; Drinks Poison.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Peter Dergance, a waiter employed here, probably fatally wounded his wife with an ax today and then killed himself by drinking poison.

Mrs. Dergance was in bed when her husband attacked her, according to the police.

34—Head of High-Class Dairy Cows—34

2—Well-Bred Holstein Bulls—2

At the Rhoades and Rhoades Stockyards at

CLEARWATER

Tuesday, June 29th, at 10 a.m.

Many buyers of high-class dairy cows will remember the last sale we conducted for Messrs. Bost and Johnstone, where we broke the world's record in obtaining $700 for a grade dairy cow. Also in the same sale several head sold from $300 to $500 per head. In every case these cows turned out good and have made money for the buyer.

In this sale there will be 36 head more of strictly first-class dairy cows, the tops of the Bost & Johnstone herd. They are all fresh and are producing from 40 to 65 pounds of weighted milk per day. The County Farm Bureau Records show the highest record cow in the sale at 78 lbs. of fat per month. We want to impress upon buyers that it is seldom they have an opportunity to secure such cows as these at any price, but on this date if they only bring $30 per head, someone is going to own them.

In addition to the cows, Bost & Johnstone are consigning two bulls of rare breeding. Rosmaines De Kol 225152 is by a son of a cow who produced 30.5 lbs. of butter in 7 days and 1100 lbs. in a year. Her dam had a record of 1142 lbs. in a year. The sire's dam is now owned by the Carnation Stock Farm and is on yearly test. Hartog Pontiac 2nd is by Hartog Pontiac, a son of the King of Pontiacs, and out of the best cow owned by the Whittier State School. In addition to the above cattle, J. L. Taylor is disposing of his entire herd on account of lack of water, including 9 high-class dairy cows and 2 calves, all milk tools, and a small lot of feed and implements. TERMS: $100 and under, cash, over $100, one-third cash, balance in 12 monthly payments with approved note. Liberal discount for cash. Bost & Johnstone, owners.

455—Head of Livestock—455

at the Maier Rancho (Las Delicias) three-quarters mile south of

SANTA SUSANA

Wednesday, June 30th, at 10 a.m.

Including 24 head of high-class dairy cows, 8 head now fresh, several choice springers, 9 head of long yearling heifers. This is an extra good herd and should appeal to the particular buyer. 17 head of bred sows. 95 barrows, weights, 100 lbs. each. 200 head of shoats, weights 35 to 45 pounds each. 110 head of unbred gilts, weights, 115 pounds each. One pure-bred Berkshire boar. This is an extra good lot of hogs. 2 good saddle horses. TERMS: CASH. Remember this sale is located entirely out of the sale district and is a cash sale. It will pay you to attend. Ed R. Maier, owner.

WETS AT THE CONVENTION NOW TALK COMPROMISE.

All They Ask for, Says Writer, is a Clause Calling for Liberalization of Volstead Act.

BY S. FRED HOGUE,
Editorial Staff Writer of the Los Angeles "Times."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Already the wets have been reduced to the point of talking compromise. Their leaders say that if they can get a clause in the Democratic platform for liberalization of the Volstead Act they will be content.

I never saw moisture evaporating so rapidly. The Edwards boom and the Edwards plank have been discarded as water-logged. The Cox supporters are talking very gingerly about any tinkering with the Volstead Act. They have found that the dry sentiment preponderates and they are afraid that too much wet talk will hurt their candidate's chances for the nomination.

Tammany Hall already has begun to sulk. The tiger cubs returned to their lair at the Bellevue Hotel early tonight and reported that they failed to find any good hunting. The Tammany plan of getting 365 delegates bound by an iron-clad agreement to vote only for a wet candidate is not panning out. I am told by one on the inside that when the lists were tabulated there were less than two hundred delegates so pledged.

It begins to look as though the dry forces will be able to make a nomination without compromising with the wets.

Boss Murphy is taciturn. He has lost the smile he wore when he first landed and his lieutenants are plainly worried; no one seems to care particularly what Tammany does. Murphy is a white-haired Irishman with a face as hard as though it were molded in bronze. He is viciously opposed to the Volstead Act for he sees the glory of Tammany departing.

One of his lieutenants said tonight in deep disgust: "This isn't going to be a convention. It's a blooming Methodist camp meeting. I knew that politics would go to hell as soon as the women got a vote. Half the delegates have brought their wives and children with them. The Democratic party is falling under petticoat rule.

"What do I think the convention will do? It will probably write the Decalogue into the platform, nominate some psalm singer for President, denounce the men and organizations, who have made Democratic success in New York and the nation posible, call upon the sick man in the White House to pronounce the benediction over the long distance wire, adjourn to a cafeteria for eats, clamber into a tourist upper berth and go home."

Bryan rode across the bay yesterday afternoon, motored up Market street and strode into the St. Francis Hotel with the air of a conquering hero. He announced from a megaphone that he expected every dry delegate to do his duty. It is evident that Bryan thinks he is going to be the big noise. A crowd collected about him wherever he went; but I did not observe any delegates among them.

From what I have seen and heard, however, I figure most of the Bryan supporters will be in the gallery.

Palmer is going to be the leader of the dry forces in the convention. It is to the Palmer headquarters that the delegates gravitate. Palmer will join with the other administration men to give Bryan the haspberry.

STEAMROLLER BALKS.

The steamroller was brought out for a few minutes at the session of the national committee yesterday afternoon, but was sent back to the garage with a report of engine trouble. It balked and refused to approach within ten feet of the militant Georgia antiadministration delegation.

Georgia has a contest that involves twenty-eight votes. There is a Palmer delegation that bases its claim to a seat on the contention that Palmer received the plurality vote of Georgia in the Presidential primary. The other delegation is composed of Tom Watson and Senator Smith's supporters. They combined against the Palmer crowd and beat them in the State convention.

It is an open bet that the Palmer delegation expects the Wilson men on the national committee to seat them because they are opposing the enemies of the President. But the Smith-Watson delegation has the better case. Palmer's men tried to get the indorsement of the convention and failed. Now they say the convention has no legal standing but they weakened their case by going before it.

For more than an hour the opposing forces argued and wrangled before the committee. It looked like a test on the strength of the administration to dictate to the convenion. All the leading Wilson men were for the Palmer crowd.

The test came on a vote to decide whether the case should be submitted to a special committee or argued before the general committee. All the Wilson lieutenants voted to refer it to the special committee; but when the result was tallied the Watson-Smith forces had won by a vote of 27 to 19. That may mean much or little.

There was no mistaking the disappointment of the administration men. They secured an adjournment without taking up the contest of Senator Reed. The Missouri bitter-ender is marked as a victim of the steamroller.

REED IS SHUNNED.

Reed is shunned by the delegates. When I went to the convention hall this afternoon, I saw a solitary man walking about the corridor. His face was pinched as though his corns were hurting and he was looking for a place to remove his shoes. He spoke to several persons, but they turned quickly away. He was finally joined by a second individual looking more desolate than the first. I learned to my surprise that the one with the sore corns was Senator Reed.

He is the first man who has ever been denied a seat in a Democratic convention after being elected by his district. Reed was rejected by the Missouri State delegation because of his bitter opposition to the League of Nations. A certificate of election was given to Reed's alternate. Reed will carry his contest before the national committee; and the steamroller is being patched up to do its duty.

Gov. Stephens was in evidence in the Palace corridor. He looked very well contented with himself and with the world. Standing by one of the big pillars, his arm was kept wigwagging almost constantly.

"I feel very much at home among the Democrats," said the Governor. "I found out two years ago that I had lots of friends among them."

There is a sure enough boom here for E. L. Doheny as a running mate for either Palmer or McAdoo. Doheny is known to be a teetotaler and this gives him good standing with the drys; and George Vice, one of the California delegates, says that Gavin McNab has given his word that Doheny will support a plank for a liberalization of the Volstead act.

Doheny is making no active campaign; but he informed some of the California delegates this afternoon that he is here for the purpose of serving America, that he will not shrink from his duty, whenever that duty is made clear.

The Missouri delegation, part of the Oklahoma delegation and most of the New York delegation have called upon California delegates to find out if Doheny will make the race. They say that the West should have the Vice-Presidency and that Doheny is the only available man.

Cox and McAdoo are going to divide the California delegation on the first ballot, Cox getting at least sixteen votes.

Palmer lieutenants are working on the delegates from Southern California figuring that they ought to be dry. A combination of Palmer and Doheny could be quickly effected, if Doheny would consent.

"Your Home Druggist" Reports Progress

The widespread interest in The Sun Drug Co.'s steady progress encourages us to the belief that our many patrons and friends will appreciate a resume of our plans for expansion and improvement in the near future.

During the next few months many things will be accomplished to increase "Sun" service and efficiency and to widen the scope of this large local enterprise. We enumerate some of the more important of these events:

(1) Reopening of "Sun" Store No. 4 at Sixth and Broadway where we are now erecting a building to house "the handsomest drug store in America."
(2) Remodeling and enlarging "Sun" Store No. 10 at Fifth and Broadway to accommodate our rapidly growing business at this point.
(3) Opening of "Sun" Store No. 18 at First St. and Pine Ave., Long Beach (our second store in this progressive city.)
(4) Opening of "Sun" Store No. 19 at Sixth and Olive Sts. in the building now being erected by the Central Properties, Inc.
(5) Opening of "Sun" Store No. 20 at Sixth St. and Grand Ave. in the building now being erected by the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co.
(6) Opening of our new Supply House and Laboratory at Eleventh and Los Angeles Sts., now being erected by us, on a scale commensurate with our present and anticipated growth throughout Southern California.

This progress would have been impossible but for our customers' loyalty and their appreciation of the sincere, helpful and friendly drug store service we render. We therefore, take this opportunity to thank the many thousands of patrons who have responded so generously to our efforts to serve them well.

WILSON IN THE SADDLE.

President is Guiding Destiny of Convention With a Firm Control.

New Jersey delegation was guilty of boisterous conduct on the way from the Grand Canyon here. The Oklahoma and New Jersey specials were hitched together on the same train. According to the Oaklahoma crowd, the New Jersey delegates were carrying liquor with them, became boisterous one evening and invaded the Oklahoma special cars. Their conduct was resented, especially when the New Jersey delegates secured possession of a slipper of Mrs. J. S. Suqua and used it as a champagne glass. The Oklahomans took the incident so seriously that a movement was started to have the offending wets refused seats in the convention. The contest was stopped at the door of the national committee room: didn't get inside, but some of the delegates threaten to bring it up on the floor of the convention. In an assemblage where the drys are in complete control such an incident might start something.

But even the suggestion of such a contest proves that this isn't going to be a Democratic convention. McAdoo and Cox supporters are using any handle for the weapons with which to fight each other. The McAdoo boosters started the report that if McAdoo is nominated he will have the moving picture houses all over the country running his pictures free, and that it will be a great campaign card. One of the Cox supporters countered with "our candidate has the first call on the movies. For he has a divorce. The movie princes and queens will recognize him as one of their own."

PALMER, COX, McADOO.

While there have been a number of flops in State delegations today, I still hold to the belief that the three leaders on the first ballot will be, Palmer, Cox and McAdoo. I give Palmer 300 odd delegates and Cox a little better than 250 delegates. But I am not so certain about McAdoo. There is a vast undercurrent of sentiment here for the sallow Tennessean, for one very substantial reason that he is the first bona fide southerner who seems to have a chance of election. Wilson was born in the South, but it was his political career in New Jersey that elected him.

I find that the southern delegates feel that McAdoo is really one of them, and I am of the opinion that sentiment will prove the controlling influence in their choice of candidates, always providing that the lash from the White House is not cracked over the shoulders of those campaigning for McAdoo. President Wilson can give the nomination to McAdoo by saying the word, possibly by just keeping still. But the majority of the delegates are as docile as trained seals.

If the king is willing to abdicate in favor of the Crown Prince, there will be no change of dynasty, as far as the nomination is concerned. One has but to listen in the corridors of the big hotels for a few minutes to find that the delegates vastly prefer McAdoo to Wilson. But, like the monarchs of old, the king is in a doubtful mood about abdicating. A rebellion is threatened, but the rebels are greatly in the minority.

OH, YES—BRYAN.

I almost forgot about Bryan. No preconvention story is complete without him. But I have heard little of him because I have been circulating chiefly among the delegates. Bryan addressed a commonwealth luncheon today and received an ovation. He showed some of his own fire and a few wets who had slipped in to heckle discreetly, held their speech. His address might be reduced to the formula: "Impress me and I will serve. I know the heart of the real Democrat. I know the ideals of Democracy. Nominate me, and if elected, deserving Democrats can go unwashed if they like, but they will not go unfed." Bryan has weakened in his opposition to Article X.

He is not likely to make a fight on the floor of the convention against the ratification of the peace treaty, with or without reservations. He said in his address that the reservations do not really matter, that both parties are in agreement on the peace treaty, that only the politicians differ. The one issue should be a strict enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Bryan scored one on the wets by calling attention to the fact that every Democratic State in the Union voted to ratify the Eighteenth Amendment.

ISIDORE SHOWS MODESTY.

Isidore Dockweiler is wearing his new national committeeman badge with becoming modesty. There was an attempt made from the Federal Building in Los Angeles to give the national committeeship to a northern man in order to take it away from Dockweiler. But it seems that while Dockweiler was in Washington recently he came into high favor with the king. He is a kind of courtier to royalty and until there is a change in administration he will have more to say about Federal appointments for Southern California than the whole brigade on Federal Hill. F. Ray Groves is advancing rapidly in popularity as Dockweiler's stock ascends. He is Dockweiler's man Friday; and where Crusoe went Friday went with him. I would not be surprised to see F. Ray get much further in Democratic politics than his father was ever able to go.

Some one has tipped off that when a certain Los Angeles contingent of Republicans and Democrats arrive from Los Angeles Monday they will bring their own with them, and their appearance is eagerly awaited. They are said to be motoring up the Coast, with a truck following them. But this may be a slander.

GRADUATION WEEK AT BERKELEY HALL.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AND OPERETTA END YEAR AT JUNIOR SCHOOL.

A week of festivities, concluding with the graduation of the eighth grade class on Friday, marked the end of the school year at Berkeley Hall Junior School. The recital of poems and singing by members of the graduating class, songs by Constance Balfour, and a short address by the principal of the school, Miss Leila Cooper, were the main features of the Friday morning exercises, which were followed by a luncheon attended by the graduates, alumni, and teachers. The members of the graduating class were Carol Booth, Geraldine Cheney, Josephine Eckhart, Mary Ellen Eckhart, Helen Louise Greaves, Kathryn Gude, Kathleen Nolan and Janet Strobridge.

A pleasing feature of the closing days of the school year was the presentation of Moother Goose rhymes and characters in an operetta on the school lawn. More than one hundred pupils took part, and the entertainment proved so popular that it was repeated on the following day. To swell their fund for the support of three fatherless children in France, the pupils sold refreshments.

An open class lesson of the Fletcher music method was given by a different class each afternoon of the last week of school, ending with an evening piano recital in which thirty children took part. Diplomas were awarded to Elinor Stone, Dorothy Nolan, Josephine Echhart, Kathleen Nolan, and Mary Ellen Eckhart.

Destroyer Hopkins Launched.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 26.—The destroyer Hopkins, named for Esek Hopkins, first commodore of the first continental navy, organized during the American revolution, was launched here today.

NEWS AT THE STATE CAPITAL.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SACRAMENTO, June 25.—Occult or so-called "witchstick" methods of locating oil or minerals are neither indorsed nor approved by State Commissioner of Corporations E. C. Bellows. He recently declared any representations made by stock salesmen or others to the effect that he believes in such methods are false.

"I have no time or patience with these age-old superstitions and, while the men who advocate them many be entirely honest in their belief, yet the fact remains that these methods are questionable and I believe entirely unreliable. Permits to sell the stock of corporations are not issued upon any such investigation or representation."

State Treasurer Friend W. Richardson has received an anonymous letter directing his attention to an estate in Livermore which the writer says is attempting "to euchre and defraud the State out of inheritance taxes properly due."

The letter was signed "Justice" and declared it was from "an heir and taxpayer whose relatives were not overlooked and who had to come through." It was written in a disguised manner.

Maj. Warren Bovard, executive secretary to Gov. Stephens, whose resignation to renew his work with the University of Southern California becomes effective June 28, has broken the traditions of the position he now holds.

In other words, the major is the only man who ever accepted the job as a bachelor and succeeded in leaving it without being listed among Cupid's casualties.

John C. Macfarland of Los Angeles, and Martin C. Madsen, the Governor's private secretary, preceded Bovard in the position of executive secretary and both today are staid married men.

However, the major says his heart still is intact, and no one dares dispute it.

Preliminary preparations are being made by the State Board of Control for the next biennial budget to be submitted to the 1921 Legislature.

Marshall De Motte, chairman of the board, says the State department heads are being asked by the board to estimate their needs during the month of July. In August the board auditors will tabulate these estimates, and during the last three months of the year the budget board will conduct hearings.

In preparing the next budget De Motte declares every effort will be made to reduce State expenditures in all departments.

State Treasurer Friend W. Richardson has forwarded to the State's fiscal agents in New York $1,400,060 to meet interest payments on California bonds for the last half of the year. The money was sent to New York through the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco.

As the result of the action of the State Board of Control, upon the approval of Gov. Stephens, in granting deficiency appropriations totaling $400,000, the teachers of the University of California and the normal schools will be given a salary increase the coming school year.

Of the amount appropriated $300,000 goes to the university while the remaining $100,000 goes to the normal schools. The appropriations will be made up by the 1921 Legislature.

Last fall the Board of Control allowed the university a $70,000 deficiency appropriation to increase salaries for the year ending June 30.

There are now listed in California 10,000 lakes, ranging in size from Lake Tahoe, covering more than 300 square miles, to the mountain gem of thirty acres, which is the smallest listed.

Many of these lakes are inaccessible to the average tourist and access to them is possible only after the most strenuous exertion on foot or with pack mule.

The vast majority of the lakes are in the Sierras flanking the Sacramento Valley, although a large number may be found in other parts of the State. Thousands of them have no names and many of them have not been visited by white men, but have only been seen from a distance.

WORLD'S RECORD BROKEN.

Johnny Norton Sets a New Mark and Other Stars Shine Brightly.

BY PAUL LOWRY.

The greatest track and field meet ever held on the Pacific Coast went into history yesterday with the breaking of one world's record and the smashing of an American mark. For splendor of performances and genuine class in the way of competition it outshone any previous meeting in which American athletes have come together in the West. Seven thousand persons watched the marvelous individual efforts of ninety-four athletes in the Tournament Park stadium—efforts that opened up for many the vista at Antwerp, Belgium.

Johnny Norton of the Olympic Club, a man who before he passed out of Stanford's halls of learning a few years back, wore the Cardinal in many a hard-contested meet, was responsible for the smashing of the 440-yard world hurdle mark. He clipped 2-5s. off Meanix's 54 3-5s. made at Cambridge, Mass., in 1915, running the race in 54 1-5s. Charles Daggs of Pomona College, who was second a couple of yards to the rear, equaled the former world's record.

CREDIT HUNTER.

To Charley Hunter of San Francisco, competing unattached, goes the credit for splattering the American record in the 5000-meter run all over the place. Hunter lopped 20s. off the old record, finishing in 14m. 45s. This is 8 2-5s. shy of the world's record.

The athletes had a perfect day for the western Olympic tryouts, a slight breeze that sprang up hindering the runners only in the 220-yard dash, which was run in the face of the wind.

The real race thrillers of the day, as had been expected, were the 100 and 220-yard dashes. With four of the greatest, if not the greatest sprinters in the country assembled for the two short dashes the spectators were on edge with anticipation. The heats developed no surprises, Paddock winning his hundred in 9 4-5s., with Williams second, and Kirksey his in 10s. flat with Haymond second.

PULLS TENDON.

The only misfortune of the day occurred in the second heat of the hundred when Haymond, the former U. of P. man, pulled a tendon in the last ten yards of the race. It kept him out of the finals of the century and the 220-yard race. Haymond, always known as a strong finisher, was pulling up on Kirksey when the accident occurred.

The finals of the 100 caused tremendous excitement. Every person in the place stood up and howled as Kirksey, Paddock, Williams and the two high school youths, Sudden and Hawkins, lunged from their marks with the bark of the gun. At the fifty-yard mark it appeared to be a race between Williams and Paddock. Ten yards from the tape a figure wearing the winged O seemed to fairly leap from space, shooting past Williams, and in those last ten yards to cut down Paddock's lead to nothing.

SOME RACE.

The figure was the beautiful running Kirksey. When they busted the string there wasn't a man in the place, with the exception of the judges, who could have sworn who won the race. After a caucus of the judges it was announced that Paddock was the victor by six inches, Kirksey being a yard ahead of Williams. The time was 9 4-5s., exactly the same as Dean Cromwell's flyer made in the first heat.

The 220 was a repetition of the hundred as far as places were concerned, but the manner of winning was a bit different. There were only three starters, Haymond being out on account of his bad tendon, and the rest of the gang having concluded that they were hopelessly distanced. Sudden of the Olympic Club, however, was noted galloping madly in the direction of the start just as the gun was fired. Away to a dandy start Kirksey had the race in hand to the half-way mark when Paddock obtained a slight lead. It was an eyelash, but the U.S.C. man held it to within forty yards of the finish. Here he stepped on the pedal and lengthened it out to the two feet he had at the finish. Williams was three yards behind the Cardinal symphony in action.

READS TO CROWD.

As returns trickled in over the telegraph wires from the other tryout centers—Philadelphia, Chicago and New Orleans—they were read to the crowd by the announcers. It soon became evident that the West was more than holding its own with the East, and the populace went wild.

In the first event on the program, the hammer throw, Johnny Merchant of the University of California sent the iron ball swirling out 168ft. 6in., a mark that was beaten only by Pat Ryan in the East.

The 440-yard dash established the class of one George Schiller in the minds of those who didn't already know it. The amiable U.S.C. boy legged the distance in 48⅘s., better time than was made anywhere in the country. Kilby of Redlands was second, seven feet behind him, and Gwynn Wilson of U.S.C. fought his way into third place. Four went to their marks. Clarke of Los Angeles High School elected to set the pace. He ran a beautiful 220, but shot his wad right there.

LOPES INTO LEAD.

At this point Kilby, who hadn't been expected to enter the quarter, loped easily into the lead, which he held to the 300-yard mark. Here Schiller let out along with Wilson in an effort to pass Kilby. Schiller was successful as they shot into the straightaway, but Wilson couldn't make it. Fifty yards from the tape Wilson made another desperate effort to pass Kilby, and the latter tried to cut down Schiller's lead. Both were unsuccessful, and the three runners broke the worsted in the same positions they had held for the last 100 yards with all under 49⅘s.

About the most surprising event on the program as far as results were concerned was the high jump. Here two veterans of the leaping game—Alma Richards, Olympic champion, and Dink Templeton, the Stanford wizard—bowed to two youths of the nation in the persons of Brick Muller, University of California freshman, and Corey of Chaffee High School. Muller was first with 6ft. 3 5-8in., and Corey took second an inch lower. Richards's best jump was 6ft. 1 5-8in. Templeton tied Corey, but on the leap-off Corey won.

Wild Bill Yount, the all-around star of Redlands University, won the 120-yard high hurdles in the rather unexpected fast time of 15s. flat. This was another instance of the West hanging it on the East in point of time. Norton of the Olympic Club was second, but a Russian whisker would have covered the difference between them. Murray of the L.A.A.C. and Otto Anderson of Pomona High School were right on their tails. It was announced that Anderson had been caught in 15 1-5s., which would be a new interscholastic world figure.

WINS EASILY.

There were six starters in the 880-yard run. Pesky Sprott won easily in 1m. 57 4-5s. Farmer of the Olympic Club was second in 1m. 59s., and Wilson of U.S.C. third in 2m. 1s.

The 10,000-meter run was all Churchill's in 33m. 55s. He had almost lapped Smith of Washington State College when he finished. Johnson of the L.A.A.C. was the only other man of the eight starters who had stamina to finish the long grind.

Swan of the Oregon Aggies walked away from the field in the mile. He led Sprott of California by ten yards at the end of the second lap, had increased this to forty yards in the third lap, and was 100 yards to the good when he broke the string. He ran the last lap in 61 1-5s., according to the watch of Coach Maloney of Stanford. Had he hurried a bit in the first two laps he could have easily bettered his time of 4m. 23 4-5s.

A SLICK TOSS.

Bihlman of the Olympic Club won the shot put with a slick toss of 46ft., with Caughel second at 44ft. ½in. The 56-pound weight went to McEacheren of the Olympic Club at 31ft. 10in. He made one toss of 34ft. 6in., but fouled.

Bartlett of Oregon made a wonderful mark in the discus with a flick of 143ft. 3in. Pope of the University of Washington was second with 142ft. ½in., Boyle of U.S.C. third, 139ft. 6⅝in., and Evans of U.S.C. fourth, 135ft. 11in.

The broad jump went to Merchant of California at 22ft. 10in., a foot behind what both he and Foster of Oregon have done this year. Hanner of the Olympic Club grabbed the javelin at 178ft., 11in., with Tuck second, 177ft. 3in. By snaring a fourth in this event Merchant became high individual point winner of the day. He scored eleven points. Paddock of U.S.C., and Muller of California scored ten apiece.

Team honors went to the Olympic Club with 55 points, followed by the University of California, 29; U.S.C., 24; Redlands University, 12; L.A.A.C., 9; University of Oregon, 9; Multnomah A.C., 7; Unattached, 5; Ogden A.C., 5; Spokane A.C., 4; Idaho University, 4; Chaffee High School, 3; Pomona College, 3; Washington University, 3; Pomona High School, 1; Army and Navy H.S., 1. The 220-yard dash — First, Allen Woodring, Meadowbrook; second, A. B. Kelly, N.Y.A.C.; third, D. H. Dewitt, N.Y.A.C. Time, 21 4-5 seconds.

COAST MEN LOOK GOOD.

A perusal of the figures set up by the athletes all over the country in their Olympic tryouts shows that the Pacific Coast demons more than held their own with their rivals in the East and the Middle West. Out of the eighteen events, the best performances in seven were set up at Pasadena. The Coast athletes made the best marks for the country in the 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash, 440-yard hurdles, 5000-meter run, 120-yard hurdles and discus throw. In addition, the marks made in the high jump and shot put were but a fraction of an inch below those made in the Middle West and the East, respectively, while those who saw Jenne barely miss the 13ft.-4in. mark in the pole will testify to that young man's ability to clear the bar at 13ft., the mark made in the Middle West. There is not an event on the program in which the Coast athletes will not have a strong representative in the final Olympic tryouts next month.

Following are the winning performances, the results of the tryouts in the southern meet at New Orleans being too poor to be worthy of mention:

TILDEN BEATS KINGSCOTE.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WIMBLEDON (Eng.) June 26.—William T. Tilden of Philadelphia won his match in the fourth round of the British lawn tennis singles championship here today, defeating A. R. F. Kingscote in five sets, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3. The result puts Tilden in the play among the last eight for the championship.

In the first match in the fourth round T. M. Mavrogordato of the British Davis cup team, defeated B. I. O. Borton, champion of South Africa, 6-1, 7-5, 8-6. Mavrogordato will meet R. Norris Williams II of Boston in the play among the last eight competitors for the singles title.

Arthur J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council of the British Cabinet, who witnessed the men's doubles event yesterday, declared when one match was finished that it was one of the finest displays he had ever seen. He said international visits of this character from the United States must have a great and lasting effect in cementing firmer than ever Anglo-American relations. He was especially keen over such visits from America, because, in his opinion, they could do nothing but good.

In the third round of the ladies' singles today, Mrs. Mallory (Molla Bjurstedt) beat Miss Dransfield, 5-7, 6-0, 6-0. Mrs. Mallory showed improved form and played steadily.

Tilden won the first set in his match with Kingcote, 6-3. The second set was captured by Kingscote, 7-5.

In the fourth round singles Zenzo Shimidzu, the Japanese crack, defeated A. G. Zertendi, a diminutive Greek, reputed to be the best player in Egypt, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." June 26.—"Ludy" of the Hawaiian Association, "dark horse" of the swimming trials in the Neptune Beach plunge today by defeating W. W. Harris and Duke Kahanamoku in the 400-meter-free-style-for-men event. Langer's time was 5m. 22s.

SEALS TRIMMED IN GREAT GAME.

his "How-to-pitch-'em" book and ran his index finger down the C's to Chadbourne, who was at the plate. Opposite Chad's name it read, "Walk him, you sucker; walk him." Couch was about to put the sage advice into practice when Corhan rushed over to him and whispered, "Be careful; the next man up is Bobby Fisher." The Seal heaver pulled a contemplative brow and again consulted the master book, running his finger down the F's to Fisher.

The little volume tipped Priv off as follows: "Toughest bird in the league in a pinch; sure death to ambitious heavers." At this juncture Caveney rushed in and insinuated to the puzzled chucker, "Walk Chad and Bobby and take a chance on Borton." Once more the little portfolio came into requisition and here it appraised Borton something like this, "Best eye in the league; you got to put 'em over. In a case of life and death, play foxy and walk this bird."

UP IN THE AIR.

Couch in a welter of confusion was ready to give up the ghost. Here was Chadbuorne, Fisher and Borton all ready to swing the snickersnee on him. The trio was sort of a happy mixture of cyanide of potassium, corrosive sublimate and helbane with the accent on "hell." Couch then drew courage from despair and decided to trust to the fates, with the result that Chet, old boy, just bundled the apple to the lemonade sign in deep right-center for a natural home run.

It would require a library of books to chronicle the salient features of this great contest, but, with a sudden rush of terseness to the head and a prompting knowledge of limited space, we reluctantly swing down on a period. The score:

ALDRIDGE BLOWS UP IN THE EIGHTH INNING

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—After maintaining a lead for seven innings, Aldridge, pitching for Los Angeles, blew up and Oakland took the game, 8 to 4. In the seventh Oakland scored five runs on a double, a walk and four singles. The Angels made all their scores off Weaver in the first and second innings and Weaver was taken out and replaced by Krause. The score:

DUCKS AND SEATTLE DIVIDE DOUBLE-HEADER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 26.—Portland and Seattle divided a double-header, the Beavers taking the first contest, 2 to 0, while Seattle scored a 4-to-2 victory in the second game.

Biff Schaller's home run over the right-field fence with one on in the first frame gave Portland its victory. "Lefty" Schorr pitched stellar ball for the Rainiers in the second game, letting Portland down with five hits. The scores:

NEW YORK MEANS SOMETHING

Mr. Sid Grauman,
Manager Grauman's Theatre
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Mr. Grauman:

The show business is booming at this time and we are glad for that means good plays and an evening at the play
—a good play
is our favorite indoor sport.

A good play has a heart and a soul and means something it's not only entertainment it teaches a lesson in a way that counts

And coming to the show and after the show and every day in every year people use automobiles and these automobiles have tires many of them are Lee Tires we think all ought to be Lee Tires.

Because the Lee like a good show has a way that counts with discriminating people

In the first place
Lee Tires are made of the best rubber we can buy and Egyptian long staple cotton from this cotton is produced fabrics of great textile strength.

In the second place the carcass is partly cured the tread is partly cured then tread and carcass are united in the finished product a different idea which eliminates overcuring and consequent weakness.

In the third place
there's an extra cushion a matter of considerable importance between the cords.

These are technical features but in plain words the result of this process in manufacturing Lee Tires means more mileage diminished expense less trouble
—dividends.

And we're all looking for dividends on the investment in other words
—results
Lee Tires give results.

Another thing
Lee Inner Tubes are the only tubes made in accordance with government specifications of pure gum.

These are some reasons why Lee Tires
like good shows grow in popularity and enjoy long runs
—they satisfy
they "mean something."

FOREST CADY BATS IN YIPPER VICTORY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, June 26.—Forest Cady, batting for Grover in the tenth inning, today scored Schang and Compton with a single through third and enabled Sacramento to defeat Salt Lake, 8 to 7. The Senator outfielders made this victory possible, scoring all runs and driving out six of the nine hits gained off the Bee pitchers.

Leverenz of Salt Lake was replaced on the mound by Reiger after a pinch hitter had been used in the seventh inning. The Bees threatened to rally in the ninth and Penner supplanted Fittery in the box for Sacramento. The score:

NO ONE REMEDY IS APPLICABLE TO EVERY HAIR AND SCALP TROUBLE

I base this statement on science and over 40 years' study and research work on conditions of the hair and scalp, says Prof. John H. Austin of Chicago, the country's most widely known bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist. Science has proved that different ailments of the hair and scalp require different treatments.

The particular trouble with which your hair or scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated. For example, one person may require an astringent, another a healing ointment, another an antiseptic for an itching scalp (which is caused by vegetable parasites), and still another a treatment to relieve an excessively oily condition.

Prof. Austin says that using dandruff cures, tonics, mange cures, etc., without the proper advice, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

With the aid of a powerful microscope Prof. Austin is able to quickly determine the exact cause of the trouble, and will tell each one what is best to do in his or her particular case.

During the past five years Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp of Hamburger patrons, and has on file hundreds of unsolicited testimonials.

Both men and women are invited to take advantage of a free microscopic examination of the hair and scalp by Prof. Austin. Women need not take down their hair. Office hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Private office, Second Floor, Hamburger's.

ASSERTS WILSON TO BACK PALMER

Member of Inner Cabinet Makes Statement.

Gives Gratitude as the President's Reason.

Declares Executive Remembers 1912 Battle.

BY HAL LAYTON.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—"A. Mitchell Palmer is President Wilson's choice and will have his indorsement on the floor of the convention not later than the third ballot."

This statement was made to me today by one close to the President, a member of that famous inner Cabinet, which had Col. House as its high priest, and one of the chief "listening posts" of the administration. Some bombshell, if true. Third-term clouds, McAdoo fog, even "Silver Bill" Bryan's fly in the amber, are cleared away and all is harmony and peace.

My informant advanced this argument in the form of an analysis.

"Why is the President for Palmer? Gratitude, my boy. That word is something more than a figure of speech found only in the late Mr. Webster's dictionary, and Woodrow Wilson is grateful."

"Yes, yes, but why?"

"Well, we will go back to the 1912 convention. Palmer, an original Wilson man, controlled the Pennsylvania delegation. For eight days he stood pat for his candidate in the most turbulent convention in democracy's history. It was anything to beat Wilson, and the Champ Clark-Underwood-Harmon combination finally offered to support Palmer for President if he would bolt the Wilson forces. Palmer turned them down and was one of the primary factors in the nomination of Wilson."

In the Pennsylvania Senatorial fight against Boies Penrose, Palmer accepted the nomination, and though doomed to defeat, sacrificed himself to comply with this wish. As a reward he was offered a seat in the Court of Claims and refused, later to accept at another sacrifice the post of Alien Property Custodian and later the portfolio of Attorney-General. In the latter position he stood the gaff for the administration during the coal strike by carrying out the President's orders to the letter, though it made him a most unpopular figure in national labor circles.

He went into the Georgia fight for control of that State's delegation and emerged with a plurality victory. Wilson's letter of thanks for this achievement is practically an indorsement of Palmer. That is why, maybe, but this gratitude thing in politics is paralleled by white blackbirds and the great auk. I have heard of both, but that is all, maybe, but probably maybe not.

PHELAN'S EFFORTS FOR FRUIT MEN EFFECTIVE.

COMMERCE COMMISSION ANNOUNCES PURCHASE OF REFRIGERATOR CARS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—One of the results of Senator Phelan's work for the fruit and vegetable growers of California is seen in the announcement today of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the railroads have quickly taken advantage of the recent order of the commission that 20,000 new refrigerator cars can be purchased from the $76,000,000 the commission set aside for buying new rolling stock for the roads.

Senator Phelan has continually urged Interstate Commerce Commission officials to provide enough refrigerator cars to adequately transport the California fruit and vegetable crops. It was largely due to his efforts that the commission appropriated the $75,000,000 out of the government $300,000,000 revolving fund to buy new freight cars, priority to be given to the purchase of refrigerator cars.

The commission announced today that a total of 13,720 new refrigerator cars will soon be ready for distribution to the roads.

Most of the cars will be routed to western carriers. Officials said that some of the new cars would be available for moving this year's crop. Of the 13,720 new cars, 800 are rebuilt cars and will soon be on the rails. The refrigerator car shortage is not likely to occur again in California.

AMAZON NABS NEGRO IN ANGELENO'S CAR.

LOCAL WOMAN'S AUTOMOBILE STOLEN IN EAST; FOUND BY FREAK ARREST.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 26.—The automobile of Mrs. Alice Henry, who came here from Los Angeles alone in the car on a health tour, was stolen early this morning outside the home of Mrs. Lillian Gundry, West Philadelphia.

It was later recovered and a negro was arrested for the theft. He gave the name of William Peel.

Clad in corduroy and wearing heavy boots, the dusty traveler from the Coast testified against the negro at a hearing before Magistrate Rooney in Central Station. The negro was held in $500 bail. Early in the morning Mrs. Henry left the automobile for a few minutes to make a call. When she returned, the machine was gone.

Four squares from the house the car's progress was stopped by a woman described as weighing close to 300 pounds, who stepped in the way of the machine.

"Where are you going with that automobile?" she asked the negro.

"I'm driving it to Wildwood, ma'am," he answered.

"I think you are an automobile thief," the stout woman returned.

Then she grabbed the negro by the collar and hauled him to the police station.

American Legion Warns of Fraud.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 26.—Former service men are warned against giving money to a man reported to be collecting funds under a pretext of conducting an individual membership campaign for the American Legion, in a statement issued from national headquarters here.

DEMOCRATS ARE IN A QUANDARY.

carry the fight to the floor of the convention.

Monday's session will be a mere preliminary in which Chairman Cummings will deliver his keynote speech, the caucus designations for various committees including resolutions and credentials will be ratified and the convention will then adjourn so that the committees may work.

If a fight within the committees delays the completion of their work beyond Tuesday noon the session that day may be another routine affair. It is undecided whether the nominating speeches for the nine or ten men who will be presented to the convention will be delivered before the platform is brought in.

ALL IN THE DARK.

Nobody professes to know what candidate Mr. Bryan or President Wilson and the administration forces may favor.

But at every turn of the road, as a seeker after information searches through the delegations in an attempt to assess their preferences and leanings, the elusive McAdoo movement bobs up.

The play of politics is expected to show many shifting alignments as the convention proceeds in its discussions of party issues. There are many wets who, opposing Mr. Bryan on the prohibition question, will be found to be with him in battling the administration's desires on the League of Natons, and vice versa.

The Palmer people are working hard to get for the Attorney-General the heaviest possible showing on the first ballot. The Cox people profess to be satisfied with their prospects. There are out and out McAdoo delegates who claim that the convention will only need to take a few ballots to topple its majority into their column. The claims of adherents of other candidates are full of confidence and hope.

TALK OF DEADLOCK.

There is the same talk of deadlock and compromise candidate that was heard at the Repubican convention.

In the compromise talk among the gathering delegates McAdoo generally is brought out in the end. His supporters, seeing a majority for neither Palmer nor Cox, feel that in such an emergency the former secretary would be "drafted" and could not decline to make the race.

The twenty-four hours preceding the assembling of the convention, however, will produce something more definite. Delegations will be caucusing and making their first and second choices, and there will be indications of which way sentiment is turning.

At the moment, however, attention is centering largely on Mr. Bryan and the delegates are wondering how much of an old-time rumpus he may kick up. Mr. Bryan himself is not oblivious to this speculation and is saying nothing.

BRYAN BEGINS FIGHT ON WETS.

profiteers were advocated by the Nebraskan.

LUKEWARM ON LEAGUE.

On the League of Nations and the Treaty of Versailles, Mr. Bryan deplored their injection into partisan politics.

There are many other domestic problems which could not be dealt with properly, Bryan declared, if the treaty question should lead the campaign, and in closing he urged a declaration for world-wide disarmament with an agreement for world peace made by mutual consent between the nations.

Military force to maintain world peace he declared a futile anomaly.

THE OTHER SIDE.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—William J. Bryan was urged to let well enough alone on the prohibition question in a telegram sent him tonight by Representative Upshaw, Democrat of Georgia, a former vice-president of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

"I find leading lifelong drys on every side," said Representative Upshaw's message, "who feel in view of the Supreme Court decision that it is best for the cause and the party to accept and assume the prohibition question closed by Congress and the court. I believe your supreme triumph will be not to put in a dry plank, but to keep a wet plank out."

ORIENT TOURIST LIST DWINDLES.

Many Congressmen Decide Not to Take Trip.

Constituents' Advice Said to Have Had Influence.

Personnel of Party is Being Kept a Dark Secret.

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Members of Congress have been getting about as much advice from their constituents regarding the contemplated "junket" to the Orient as they did about bonus for service men—with the result that many of the members who hurried to sign up for the two-month trip, when the invitation was first spread broadcast by Congressman Randall of California, have since found that duties at home will demand their attention.

At one time there were more than 200 listed for the trip. Edmund T. Erk, secretary of the Committee on Foreign Affairs who succeeded Congressman Randall as manager of the trip, now says that there will be 110 Congressmen and their immediate families, and about twenty special guests invited by the War Department.

PERSONNEL A SECRET.

The utmost secrecy is being maintained as to who will constitute the Congressional party. Quite a few members who wanted to make the trip and take along several friends at Uncle Sam's expense were scared off by the cry of "junket," others were plainly told in letters and resolutions from their constituents that they had better stay at home.

It was at first stated to those who contemplated going on the transport voyage to the Orient that it would not cost them over $1.75 a day. Such a furore against a big Congressional junket at the government's expense was raised that plans were changed and "Trip Secretary" Erk has notified all those who propose going that they will have to bear their own expenses. He says that it will cost every one who goes more than a thousand dollars. This high cost of junketing, he admits, has scared away many would-be students of commercial and economic conditions in the Orient.

While Mr. Erk, who was selected to manage the junket because of his prestige as secretary to the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, is positive that there will be a full quota of 110 in the Congressional party, and that the trip is entirely within the law and that the transport will not go one mile out of its scheduled course to accommodate the junketers, yet he refused to divulge the names of any who are going.

He says that this is under orders from the committee of ten members, who are in charge, and he refuses to say who the ten members are. Officials of the War Department are equally as reticent.

MANY PROBLEMS.

There are many executive problems affecting the future of trade development in the Far East as a great potential market for the United States and field of investment for American capital that will come before the next Congress. There are many legislative questions, such as insular fortifications, Pacific Coast defenses, Japanese immigration, etc., on which it might be very proper and beneficial for members of Congress to get first-hand information before legislating to spend millions and billions of Federal funds. The visit of a Congressional party properly made up and properly conducted, it is contended, even at government expense, might be justified.

Those who are going must get to San Francisco by their own devices. They are to meet in the Bay City on July 2. The transport Great Northern is to take them from San Francisco on July 5. The trip will include a visit to Hawaii, the Philippines, Hongkong, China, Japan and Korea.

The party will leave the transport Great Northern July 31 at Hongkong and catch an army transport for the return trip, probably either the Thomas or the Logan.

Wilson Pardons Woman Convict.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN QUENTIN, June 26.—The sentence of Mrs. J. Emma Martin, San Bernardino, for selling the Unfinished Mystery, a book opposing war, has been commuted by President Wilson to expire immediately, it was announced today by officials of San Quentin prison.

She began a three-year term in May.

FIVE PARAMOUNT PLANKS.

Democratic Party to Stand or Fall on These Issues, is Assertion.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Bone-dry prohibition, profiteering, industrial relations, the League of Nations and the Irish question promise to be the headliners in the fight over planks in the Democratic platform.

In this category the prohibition question was easily foremost in the minds of leaders and delegates as the bone drys and the antis began the actual counting of noses to see where they stood. A convention floor fight seemed almost certain.

Coming rapidly into the limelight and also threatening a fight in the open convention was the Irish question on which a whole scale of recommendations, running from Irish recognition to an expression of sympathy, will be laid before the resolutions committee.

The League of Nations row was more or less in the background, but opponents of President Wilson were making an effort to get together to block his ratification plank.

PROFITEERING BATTLE.

As to the labor problem and profiteering, only the beginnings of a disagreement were in evidence. On the profiteering issue, however, both William Jenings Bryan and Atty.-Gen. Palmer will have ideas of their own which may bring out a stiff alignment more or less along administration and anti-administration lines.

Mr. Bryan, as usual, seemed likely tonight to be the stormy petrel of the platform fight. He took charge during the day of the prohibition forces, lined up support for his League of Nations fight and made himself quite generally the chief subject of speculation among the friends of President Wilson and the Virginia platform indorsed by him.

On prohibition three courses are open. Mr. Bryan and his supporters want an affirmative declaration for the enforcement and preservation unchanged of the present half of one per cent Volstead Act. A group in which the New York and New Jersey delegations for the present are taking the lead is in favor of a liberalization of the law for which they say a way has been opened by the Supreme Court's opinions. Still a third large class of delegates and leaders are for no prohibition plank at all.

DRYS ENCOURAGED.

Heartened by the action of the Pennsylvania caucus in refusing to instruct its representative on the resolutions committee to urge a modification in the Volstead Act, the drys late today were claiming they would be able to include a plank commending the law.

Mr. Bryan announced he would fight the wets from the committee to the floor of the convention. That the committee has a majority for the drys is conceded, but the wets are planning a minority report and Norman Mack national committeeman from New York, said his State would make a determined fight for the modification of the Volstead Act even if New York State stood alone.

Baked you're enough of an old- what old ham means will give an idea of the style of victuals served. In fact, the picnic might be called a renaissance of the gastronomical golden age.

But it wasn't an eyelash ahead of the Wilmington picnic in that respect. Delicacies were served at the Wilmington picnic which made the few young people present long for an old-fashioned, delicatessenless world, with no modern improvements. When they saw Mrs. Don David Alexander, 90 years old, get up and dance a jig they thought about that food and understood the reason. Mrs. Alexander also talked brightly of the days when Wilmington was the terminus of the Southern Pacific and she had stood on the hill where the Los Angeles County Courthouse now stands and counted the houses in this city. There was no servant problem here then, she said, for the Indians worked for the white settlers. Aliso street was all taken up with the rancherias of the Indians, she said, and Los Angeles street and Main street were the elite residence streets. Mrs. E. D. Seaman, president of the society, M. Jargstorff and Miss Monta Tuller spoke and M. T. Collins sang.

About 1000 were present at the pioneers' picnic in Sycamore Grove and 200 in Eagle Rock Park. The Latter Day Saints Sunday-school, and the Highland Park Christian Church Sunday-school also picnicked in Sycamore Grove yesterday. Two hundred attended the former outing, enjoying sports and games in the afternoon and dancing and entertainment in the evening. The latter was a treat to the juniors, winners in a recent contest with the seniors and intermediates.

HABEAS CORPUS WINS D'ALERIA'S RELEASE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, June 26.—Count Armand d'Aleria, who has occupied a cell in the City Jail since last Tuesday charged with a violation of the City Morals Act, was released this afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus granted by Superior Judge Lewis, on representation of Attorneys George Shreve of Los Angeles and Archie Shreve of San Diego that the Count's commitment papers had not been made out in due legal form. The Count was released on $200 bail furnished by his attorneys and his hearing was set for Friday, July 2, at 1:30 o'clock, on the question of the legality of the proceedings in Police Court.

The Count, who has been a defendant in a divorce action brought against him by his wife, Mrs. Kate Nixon d'Aleria, former wife of the late Senator George Nixon of Nevada, left for Los Angeles shortly after his release from jail.

"Count D'Aleria is going to Los Angeles to proceed to protect his interests and fight the slanderous attacks made against him and the conspiracies which have been hatched up against him," George Shreve, the Count's attorney, said.

D'Aleria said that he had received a letter today from his cook and his butler asking him to accept $150 from them, all the money they had Cornell Student Succumbs to Self-Inflicted Bullet Wound.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ITHACA (N. Y.) June 26.—Scott Thornburg, 23 years old, a junior in the Cornell Law School, who attempted to commit suicide Wednesday night by shooting himself in the head with a .32-caliber revolver, died today in a local hospital. Despondency caused by overwork was declared by the Coroner to have been the cause of the suicide.

Thornburg was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thornburg of the Hampden Court Apartments, San Francisco.

TRAINER MAULED BY LION.

While trying to make a lion run across the "desert" in a scene being filmed at the Selig studio yesterday, Steve Batty, animal trainer for the company, was bitten in the neck, left arm and leg by the recalcitrant beast. He was hurried to the County Hospital for emergency treatment and was later treated at his home, 663 El Sereno avenue, by Dr. W. L. Huggins. The extent of his injuries will not be known until tomorrow, the doctor said.

When Mr. Batty tried to make the lion "work," the animal slunk into a corner, growling. The trainer sought to rout the beast out into the open. The lion sprang upon him, knocked him down and savagely bit and clawed him.

The presence of mind of an unknown stage hand, who remembered that the king of beasts fears a kitchen chair, perhaps saved Mr. Batty's life. Armed with the chair, the rescuer drove the lion away from the trainer and into a cage.

PASADENA AUTO VICTIM DYING.

Police Seek Driver Who Ran Away After Accident.

Southern Pacific Official is Proud of Crown City.

Chamber of Commerce Wants Aid of City's Youths.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, June 26.—Run over by an automobile and left for dead on the street at Los Robles avenue and Walnut street was the experience of C. W. Passmore, 744 Elmira street, who was found by a passer-by. The police were notified and removed the apparently dead man to the Emergency Hospital, where Police Surgeon T. A. Williams found and fanned a spark of life. Still unconscious, Passmore was removed to the Roosevelt Hospital, where he lies in a critical condition, with a concussion of the skull and other injuries. He may die.

Hours after he was picked up Passmore regained consciousness for a few minutes and said that while riding his bicycle he was struck by an automobile. He does not know who was driving the machine nor can he describe it. The police are looking for the motorist who ran him down and then ran away.

PRAISE FROM OFFICIAL.

Felix S. McGinnis of Los Angeles, general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, was a visitor in Pasadena today. Years ago he was the traffic agent of the Southern Pacific here. "I have seen the city grow from a hamlet to one of the world's most famous resorts," he said. "I compliment the progressive spirit of Pasadena in making the city a summer resort as well as a winter resort."

YOUTHS AS AIDES.

Youths and young men are to be organized as an auxiliary of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and Civic Association, according to the plans of William Dunkerley, the new secretary. Mr. Dunkerley has issued an invitation to the youth to make the association rooms their headquarters and enlist as aides in the chamber's work of boosting Pasadena.

WOULD PROTECT ARROYO.

Resolutions asking the County Supervisors to empower the county health authorities to regulate and improve the sanitary conditions in the Upper Arroyo Seco were adopted unanimously today by the Pasadena City Commission. The commission is desirous of a clean-up of the Upper Arroyo by the health authorities as a protection to the water supply of Pasadena.

MARVEL AT NATIVE BANANAS.

Visitors from the East, en route to the Democratic convention, marveled at a bunch of ripe bananas grown right in the hotel yard, which were hanging today in the office of the Hotel Pasadena. The visitors were much impressed by the prolific Southern California climate when they saw the ripened bananas on the stalk and then viewed the banana plant in the yard, bearing more fruit.

OPEN CONVENTION OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Church Workers from All Parts of State Gather at Fresno Meeting.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, June 26.—The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Union of the State opened here this morning. About 4000 delegates will be in attendance, and the city has been taxed for sleeping quarters, but all will be well cared for.

Among the features of the convention will be a chorus of 200 voices especially trained for the meetings, banquets to the visitors, and rides to the various points of interest near the city.

State President Benjamin Small, Judge Curtis D. Wilber of Los Angeles, president of the State Sunday-school Association, and other prominent church workers will be present.

VENICE WILL HAVE NOISY CELEBRATION.

OLD-FASHIONED ENTERTAINMENT PLANNED FOR FOURTH OF JULY AT BEACH.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, June 26.—Venice will have the day noisiest day in the year on the Fourth of July. City officials have issued an invitation to all the lovers and makers of racket to be present and lend a voice of a whistle, or a horn, or a cannon, or a firecracker in the geenral babel of joy. Jazz bands will be at their jazziest, and will make the noise tuneful as well as loud.

Police, detective, and life-saving protection will be doubled on that day, as it is expected that the crowds will outnumber even those of the bathing suit parade.

Big time at "Coronado" July 4th.—[Advertisement.

SANTA ANA LICENSES.

SANTA ANA, June 26.—Marriage licenses issued today to Joe Horwitz, 21, and Lona Strum, 20, both of Los Angeles; Louis Claud Peevey, 26, and Frances Selma Thurback, 20, both of Orange; Joseph L. Durante, 22, and Evelyn B. Peckham, 18, both of Los Angeles; Joseph Clarence Elliott, 22, Los Angeles, and Edna Mae Schlotter, 20, Anaheim; James H. Harvey, 21, Bakersfield, and Margaret M. TWO SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN AUTOS COLLIDE.

TRUCK DRIVER AND MAN IN TOURING CAR INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE WRECK.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, June 26. — Two men were injured, one seriously, when a light car driven by Thomas H. Bateman of Gardena crashed into a bread truck driven by John A. Biely of Los Angeles, at the corner of William street and the Foothill Boulevard this morning. According to statements said to have been made by an eyewitness, Mr. Bateman was coming south on William street and was turning east onto the boulevard, just when the heavy truck, going west, reached the point.

The touring car hit the front wheel of the truck, completely turned around and ran into a ditch where it overturned. The front axle of the truck was bent by the impact, became unmanageable and ran into an orange grove before coming to a stop.

Mr. Biely was thrown from the truck and fell under the truck so that the right rear wheel passed over his legs. He is suffering a crushed leg, serious bruises and severe nervous shock. Mr. Bateman was badly cut about the face and head by flying glass. Both men were taken to their homes.

K. C. COUNCILS START OUTING AT CATALINA.

WEEK-LONG EVENT TO BE ANNUAL AFFAIR HEREAFTER; TENT CITY FILLED.

The first annual outing of the Southern California councils of the Knights of Columbus opened yesterday at Catalina Island. The festivities will continue until July 3. During the week 2000 knights and their families will cross the channel to participate in the outing.

After the arrival of the first boat yesterday at the island practically all tents in the tent city were occupied and the rooms of the hotels were filled. Every day of the week will be crowded with gala events, which have been arranged for the enjoyment of the visitors by the entertainment committees of the Southern California councils and the Catalina Island Chamber of Commerce.

While many of the knights were enjoying the sights of the islands, the boat trips and the beach bathing, others attended the open-air concerts, a golf and tennis tournament and a fish and goat barbecue. These and additional events will be repeated every day throughout the week.

Came Home to Die

"Three years ago I came home thinking 2 or 3 weeks would be my limit to live. I had suffered for 15 years from colic attacks and severe liver and stomach trouble. I happened to see an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and purchased a bottle at the drug store and after taking the first dose I felt better than I had for 15 years. I am now in the best of health—thanks to Mayr's Wonderful Remedy." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at all druggists.—[Advertisement.

TWO SCISSORED BETWEEN CARS.

Passing Coaches Trap Woman and Man; Both May Die.

Sawtelle Matron and Guest Hurt in Auto Smash-up.

Thrown Through Windshield by Force of Collision.

Scissored between two Los Angeles Railway cars going in opposite directions at Twenty-eighth and Main streets last night, Mrs. Helen Davis, aged 25, of 215 West Twenty-eighth street, and an unidentified man were possibly fatally injured.

A passing automobile bore away the injured man and he could not be located at any hospital. The young woman was taken to the Receiving Hospital where it was learned that she had a depressed fracture of the skull. Police Surgeon Goodrich performed a major operation on her in the hope of saving her life. Her condition is critical.

According to railway officials, car No. 494 of the Hoover and East Fourth-street line, northbound, passed southbound car No 535 of the same line when the man and woman were standing between them. The pedestrians were caught and crushed by the coaches.

Another street car accident was recorded when a Laurel Canyon shuttle car of the Pacific Electric Railway collided with an automobile driven by Mrs. Irma D. Wolfskill of Sawtelle, who was accompanied by a guest, Mrs Jean Wagner, 52 years of age, of San Francisco. The accident occurred as the automobile was turning into Sunset Boulevard from Stanley avenue. Both women were thrown through the windshield.

Mrs. Wagner was treated at the Receiving Hospital for a five-inch laceration on her left cheek and a three-inch cut on her right cheek. Mrs. Wolfskill received first aid treatment from Dr. R. W. Buckman at Gardner Junction. The extent of her injuries could not be learned.

Motorman Max Stolpe was in charge of the red car, No. 364.

POLICE HOLD AUCTION SALE.

The police relief fund was increased by several hundred dollars and scores of children were made happy through the purchase of bicycles with penny bank accounts, when Police Lieutenant Matuskiwiz sold confiscated and unclaimed articles at the semiannual police auction at Hill and First streets yesterday morning. The auction was one of the largest ever held by the Police Department. More than 500 persons were there.

this is published Jewell ex- to be himself an exile. In the bungalow on the Jewell surrounded by scores of rose and hundreds of fruit trees, little table in the sleeping by a new suit case. It was filled when I called there a days ago. It was being packed a long journey. Inside the were stacks of legal papers, policies and bills, separated piles, carefully sorted. Out- house a big gas engine was water for the orchard. Re- it was readjusted to a new and George Jewell saw that little details were right. He had attended to the pump, to the laying of the pipe. He had taken the new man on the ranch around with him and instructed him how to do things around the place. The fifteen-acre ranch he had helped develop is to pass out of his life. It appeared hard for him to tear himself away from the scene of his labors for years past. But the suit case was half filled. There is nothing for him to remain for. Some weeks ago when discussing the case, he said: "I had a partner in that sin. I did not induce this woman to do wrong." But, nevertheless, he is going away. He had been served with Mrs. Jewell's complaint for divorce, and he is not going to make any answer. He had written to some of his school friends, had packed his suit case, and is going, as yet he knows not where.

Jewell is going to take with him a small sum of money. It will be enough to take care of him for a few months. Later he may get more from Mrs. Jewell—that much was promised him. The property is all in the wife's name. Jewell is 56 years old. He is a small man, never strong, and he will have to take up something that is not hard to do. He may go on the road as a salesman, for he is an educated man. Thirty-two years ago he was admitted to the bar in Wyoming, having obtained a degree from the University of Wyoming, at Laramie. He never practiced law, however, and now he will probably try something else for a living.

MRS. JEWELL'S PLANS.

"I am going to stay right here and make my home on this ranch," is Mrs. Jewell's answer regarding her plans. "It has been hard, very hard. But I see no reason why I should leave. Let the guilty be punished. Justice demands that both of them suffer the consequences of their acts."

Mrs. Jewell is a tall, thin woman. She has clear blue eyes, eyes that suggest complete self-possession, and self-control. "I see Mrs. Hargrave called me 'a hard woman.' Well, perhaps I've been driven to hardness. I had to suffer this thing for three years. I knew what was going on. I know of other things, but there is no need of speaking of them now. Let this thing become forgotten.

June 18, last, Mrs. Jewell filed her suit for divorce from Jewell, alleging misconduct with Mrs. Hargrave. The Jewells were married in Michigan, in 1889. For years they lived in San Diego, and there Mrs. Jewell was well known in club and social life. She was president of the Women's Good Government Club there for three years, was a member of the Special Events Committee of the Exposition, is the Past Noble Grand of the Rebeccas. The Jewell Court of the Ben Hur Lodge was named after her. She is the past vice-president of the Federation of State Societies in San Diego, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and well known in many circles of the southern city. She is a mother and a grandmother.

"Do I feel sorry this thing had happened? Most assuredly not," she said. "I knew what was going on. I told Hargrave about it. I made him act. I thought, and still think he went too far when he mutilated Jewell. I hoped he'd catch them

AIR TRIP ACME OF TOURING JOYS.

Soaring Above the Mountains and Valleys of California, Travelers See Black Rivers, Flat Hills, Queerly Limned Towns and Colors Never Painted.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

Seeing California by airplane is the real tourist's delight. Only he who has drifted with the clouds through the Cahuenga Pass, across the San Fernando and Antelope valleys, over the high peaks of the Tehachepis and through the heart of the sunny, deep-soiled San Joaquin to the fog-banked buttresses of the Golden Gate has really seen California.

Coast route, inland route, midland and coast highways are all very well for the faint-hearted, but as for him who has once risen with the winged feet of a Mercury to the forbidden heights where the eagles soar and the laughter of the gods of the air echoes in your ears as you pass, only the ball and chain of necessity will rivet him again to the earth.

Adequate words are not available to describe the sensations and emotions of one who rides with the whirlwind over the top of the world; for the English language was invented by groundlings. It is earthy and smells of the sewers; and it is not in that tongue that one can converse with the spirits of the upper air.

But even air travel is verging toward the commonplace. Passenger planes have been invented in which the element of safety is so great that the pungent tang of peril no longer adds zest to the adventure. Tickets are sold to all who come to buy; and the poet finds himself seated by the man from Kokomo who, just as the plane is passing over a mountain lake, which Corot would have immortalized, where the Greeks would have builded a temple and the Moslems a shrine, insists on telling about the quantitive production of the Kokomo factories last year.

Yet it is to one of these commercialized planes that I owe my first real view of California, and there is an old Irish maxim which warns one to "Never speak ill of the ship that carried you over."

EARS ARE EASED.

There is one advantage about airplane travel that is not to be disregarded lightly. The motors make so much noise that conversation is difficult and you can escape the importunities of the inverterate Cook's tourist by pointing to your ears and shaking your head. Conversation is the vice of travel by train and, very often, by automobile.

It was in the passenger plane Avion that I left Chaplin Field one Saturday morning when the sky was clear and the wind was fair, en route for Concord, a suburb of Oakland. The Avion is a big biplane of the eagle type, built by the Curtiss people. It has a wing spread of fifty-two feet, carries six passengers and two pilots and has made seventeen trips to Concord and return without being behind a single schedule. There are three motors, with a combined force of 450 horsepower.

I now appreciate that, at the beginning, I was a bit plane-shy. My imagination had collected memories of all the air mishaps I had ever heard and read about and delivered them to me bound in a sheaf to keep me company. During the first hour's ride I spent so much time watching the pilot and speculating on whether we were going to tear the roof off Tehachepi as we passed over that I gained only a hazy idea of some of the choicest bits of scenery on the route.

From what I can gather, everybody is plane-shy when going on the first trip; and those whose knowledge of air navigation is confined to a half-hour's ride know nothing about it at all. That is like taking a boat ride out over the breakers and back and then trying to tell what ocean sailing is like.

PULLMAN COMFORT.

The Avion has a body shaped like a mackerel. A door opens in the side and one ascends a step ladder, very much like climbing into the upper berth on a Pullman car. Once inside, things begin to improve a little. There are two rows of cushioned chairs, six on a side, with a window for observation by each chair. One sits as comfortably as in a Pullman parlor car.

Charles Pond and Bernard Fransen, the pilots, occupied the two front seats. The machine is operated by a steering wheel similar to that in a motor car, except that the wheel is twins. There are two of them united by a running chain.

Getting off the ground was simple enough. The machine ran for about a quarter of a mile on its four wheels, then pointed its nose in the air and we steered straight for a high-power wire at the foot of the field. I grasped the seat in front of me, certain that we would hit that wire. We didn't. I afterwards learned that we were then 250 feet from the ground.

Judging the position of a plane in the air is like trying to locate the depth of a fish in clear water. I concluded the pilot perhaps knew as much about running the plane as I did.

The machine acted as though it were getting ready to buck us out. About every half-minute it would give a lurch upward, like a horse rearing. I was afraid of a back flop.

But the pilots did not seem at all concerned. I found that slight lurching movement, which gives one the sensation of an auto passing over a bridge, was occasioned by the pilot's keeping her nose in the air in order to attain the 5000 feet elevation he wanted to pass over into the San Fernando Valley.

DECEIVING ROOFS.

We circled easily to the north and the east, passing over a part of the city I could not then identify. I looked down upon a broad expanse of roofs, thousands of them, colors varying according to the condition of the paint. But they were all bungalows. I did not discover a single two-story house, and wondered

The Truth About Earth Temblors

NO PROBABILITY OF ANY DANGEROUS QUAKE HERE.

Mulholland Tells Why Earth Trembles; Lays Recent Shock to Rock Fault; Growing Pain, Says Another.

Why is an earthquake?

Is this part of California likely to suffer other earthquake shocks? If so, are they likely to be severe?

William Mulholland, chief engineer of the water department, who has spent forty years studying the geological problems of Southern California and probably is as well qualified to speak authoritatively on this subject as anyone, said yesterday that earth tremors are certain to occur at intervals along the San Andreas Fault, extending 400 miles from San Francisco to the Imperial Valley, and that other slight tremors may be expected along the Cienega Fault, extending from Cienega Hill, north of Inglewood, to Signal Hill, near Long Beach, but probably it will be many years before there is another tremor in that district as severe as the one last week. He said there is nothing to indicate there will ever be a dangerous quake here.

"There have been eight or ten tremors along that fault in the forty years I have been here," he said, "but the one the 21st inst. was much more severe than any of the others. It may be as long as forty years or much longer before another of equal severity is felt. Adjustments far under the surface of the earth may gradually eradicate the fault, as part of it already appears to be quiescent. Then, the tremors will permanently cease."

WHAT CAUSES 'EM.

Then, in untechnical language, Mr. Mulholland explained the cause of earthquakes, using a big relief map of the Los Angeles aqueduct district to illustrate his words.

"If you will observe this mountain range closely," he said, "you will see that it is split by an unnaturally straight line. That is not a natural drainage line, but the line of a split—the mountains are parted as with a great cleaver. You will observe that it crosses many natural drainage lines obliquely and is not at all affected by them. That cleft is what we call a 'fault.' It indicates that far under the surface of the earth something is not properly adjusted; some fault occurred in the making of the mountains centuries ago. The surface of the earth has made its adjustments, but far underneath the fault still exists. Naturally, there is a strain on the improperly adjusted foundations of those mountains. After centuries of such strain, something adjusts itself down there and a shaking of the earth's surface, which we call an earthquake, results.

"That fault I am pointing to is the San Andreas fault, the most clearly defined in California. It extends 400 miles, from southwest of San Francisco to the Imperial Valley. It misses Los Angeles by sixty-five miles and does not endanger us, though we feel tremors from it sometimes.

"It was not an adjustment in that big fault, but in the little one, which might be called the Cienega fault, which caused the earthquake shock last Monday. That fault can be traced from Signal Hill, near Long Beach, out through the hills in the general direction of the Soldiers' Home. It is lost in the Santa Monica Mountains. It is most apparent at Cienega Hill, which is split by the fault.

EARTH CUTS TEETH.

"That is a slight fault in what is called an anticlinal fold. It is the result of processes by which the mountains were made. The raising of any range of hills or mountains is a slow process. The earth wasn't born with mountains—it has had to cut its teeth, as it were. Most mountains are caused by the gradual contraction of the earth's crust. Its shrinking causes it to buckle or bulge out in places. Then the rains scour those bulging ridges so that in time what remains is mostly rock.

"That bulging out often splits great rock formations, which explains the great slabs of rock apparently standing on end which one sees in the mountains. It also explains why old sea beds and marine stones may be found on the tops of the Rocky Mountains. Tightening of the earth's crust caused a bulging out in what had been the bed of an ocean.

"Then there is another way in which mountains are formed. The intrusion or upthrust of igneous rock, expanding far under the earth, also causes ridges on the earth's surface.

"In either case the unevenly imposed weights far under the earth's surface cause fractures which may give rise to active faults. Perhaps after centuries those unevenly imposed weights adjust themselves. The adjustment occurs so far under the surface that often no break is made in the earth's shell, except where it is very soft. After any severe jar of that kind diminishing shocks are likely to be felt for a few days, as minor adjustments follow the principal one.

NO NEED FOR FEAR.

The residents of Inglewood need not be alarmed by the fact that those tremors continued a day or two. I do not anticipate that that fault will ever be dangerous, though it may shake them up a bit once in twenty years.

"Those faults are the causes of all the earthquakes except near volcanoes, and wherever faults may be traced there are likely to be shocks unless the adjustments under the surface have been completed.

The Lone Pine quake in 1872, which killed twenty-two people, was caused by the fault which extends from Mazurka Canyon southwest across the Owens Valley, along the base of the Alabama Hills and past Owens Lake. The San Francisco earthquake and the tremors in the Imperial Valley were caused by the San Andreas fault.

"The most clearly marked fault close to Los Angeles obliquely crosses Tejunga Canyon and several other canyons in that vicinity and can easily be traced."

"Is there any protective measure one could take against earthquakes?" Mr. Mulholland was asked.

"None except saying your prayers," he answered. "But there is nothing to indicate that there will ever be a dangerous earthquake in this immediate vicinity."

DIFFERING THEORY.

A different opinion as to the Inglewood shake-up is contained in a letter received by The Times yesterday from F. C. Finkle, a local engineer. He writes:

"My conclusion is that the Inglewood earthquake, unlike all others preceding it in this State, had no connection with any fault line. The fact is that the low range of hills known as the Tijera-Inglewood-Dominguez-Los Cerritos Hills, extending from Ballona Creek to Alamitos Bay, is a land swell of comparatively recent origin, which is still in process of formation. It is being formed by a folding or buckling of the earth's surface through the application of lateral pressure. When the pressure along this terrain becomes excessive, there is a buckling upward until the strain is relieved. It was such a readjustment which caused the recent earthquake.

"The terrain comprising the hills above referred to is slowly rising and will at times produce such earthquakes. If the present earth movements in that vicinity persist in future, which is very probable, these hills will in future geological time become a physiographic feature of considerably more elevation than at present."

OUR EARTHQUAKE RECORD MILD.

Los Angeles Never Visited by a Destructive Shock Though San Francisco Has Had Three; Other Regions Bristle with Memories of Repeated Seismic Disasters.

Since 1769, the date of the earliest recorded seismic disturbance in Southern California, the Pacific Coast has been visited at intervals by earthquakes. These temblors have ranged from the slightest oscillation, detected only by seismographs, to shakes that have left in their wakes wreckage and casualties. But the number of the destructive shocks may be told off on the fingers of one hand.

A survey of the records of all earthquakes that have occurred in Southern California in the last 150 years shows that Los Angeles has never suffered damage from the few shakes that have visited this city. San Francisco, on the contrary, has suffered from three destructive and four exceptionally severe earthquakes, and, besides, has felt many light tremors. The destructive shocks in the northern city occurred in 1865, when numerous buildings were destroyed; in 1868, when thirty lives were lost and many buildings were ruined, and in 1906, when some 500 persons were killed and property damage estimated at $500,000,000 was done by the shake and by the resulting fire.

HOW OTHERS SHAKE.

From this record it should not be concluded, however, that California is in any sense the particular home of seismic shocks. Japan, perhaps, holds the palm as an earthquake country and other lands, notably Italy and India, have formidable records in this regard.

Japan, by official record, has had in recent times an average of 1000 earthquakes a year. The national architecture, in fact, has been largely moulded by the consideration that a person's house may be shaken down at any time. The most destructive earthquake of record occurred in that country in 1894. It wiped out 100,000 lives.

Italy's black record in this regard is marked principally by the great Calabrian earthquake of 1783, which wrought wide destruction; the Neapolitan temblor of 1857, which killed 12,300 people and was the third in severity ever recorded in Europe, and the Calabrian and Sicilian catastrophe of 1908, when 77,283 persons were killed, according to the official records. Within the last 100 years, seven other destructive shocks in Italy have cost 80,000 lives.

India has been visited in recent times by the shock known as the Great Indian Earthquake of 1897, which had terrific force, but centered most of it in comparatively barren regions in the Province of Assam, and by the Kangra shake of 1905, which though, less severe than the Assam upheaval, killed some 20,000 persons.

Lisbon, Portugal, was largely shaken to pieces by a shock in 1755, one of the earliest of the great earthquakes studied according to the methods of modern science.

CHARLESTON SHIVERS.

Nine in every ten houses in Charleston, S. C., were damaged by a severe temblor in 1886, in which twenty-seven persons were killed outright and many others, some of whom died as a result, were injured.

Virginia has had many earthquakes.

A large part of Valparaiso, Chile, including the principal public utility works, was wiped out and 1500 persons were killed, by a shock in August, 1906, which has been preceded by severe earthquakes in 1720, 1822, 1839 and 1873.

Manila has had two destructive temblors, in 1863, when 1000 persons were killed, and in 1880, when 3000 died.

Other notable earthquakes of modern times, proving that the shocks rove pretty much all around the world, are:

Quito, Ecuador, 1859, fatalities 5000.

Mendoza, Spain, 1861, fatalities, 12,000.

Peru and Ecuador, 1869, fatalities 25,000.

Colombia, 1875, fatalities, 14,000.

Andalusia, Spain, 1884, fatalities, 1170.

Persia, 1893, fatalities, 12,000.

St. Pierre, 1902, fatalities, 30,000.

Kingston, Jamaica, 1907, fatalities 1100.

Turkey, 1912, fatalities 3000.

OUR MILD ANNALS.

Compared with such records, the seismological annals of Los Angeles are of the mildest. The "Catalogue of Earthquakes on the Pacific Coast," compiled by Edward S. Holden, LL.D., a member of the National Academy of Sciences, relates that on July 28, 1769, four violent shocks were felt in the Los Angeles region. Since that time Los Angeles has felt few other disturbing shocks, the most violent of these being the temblor at Inglewood a few days ago.

Of the few destructive earthquakes that have been recorded in Southern California, only three were accompanied by any casualties.

Following are the Southern California quakes recorded by Dr. Holden, from 1769 to the present:

July 28, 1769, four violent shocks in the Los Angeles region.

May 25, 1803, mission church at San Diego wrecked by temblor.

TIDAL WAVES FORMED.

September, 1812, thirty to forty-five persons killed when San Juan Capistrano Mission was destroyed; mission church at Santa Barbara destroyed and several persons said to have been killed; San Fernando church damaged; several asphaltum springs formed in the mountains; gaps appeared in the Sierras and tidal waves occurred.

In 1830 the church at San Luis Obispo was injured.

Nov. 26, 1852, shock felt in Los Angeles and San Gabriel.

July 10, 1855, severe shock in Los Angeles; bells at San Gabriel Mission fell down.

Jan. 9, 1857, heavy earthquake throughout Southern California; all houses in Santa Barbara damaged; two persons killed at Fort Tejon; stream beds changed; current of Kern River turned upstream; Los Angeles River flung from its bed; several houses destroyed in San Diego and San Fernando; several new springs formed near Santa Barbara.

March 26, 1872, disastrous Inyo county earthquake; felt throughout the world; loss of $237,000; sixty persons killed and injured at Lone Pine; every building leveled to the ground; 1000 shocks in two days; a lake four miles from Lone Pine disappeared; Owens River dried up for six hours.

WIDELY FELT SHOCK.

Aug. 27, 1889, sharp shock felt at Los Angeles, Pomona, Santa Ana, Santa Monica, Pasadena and San Bernardino; no persons injured, though many were thrown from their feet; a few buildings in smaller towns shaken and cracked.

Feb. 15, 1890, residents of Los Angeles rudely awakened, houses shook, windows rattled as result of earthquake.

Feb. 24.—1892, severe shocks at San Diego; number of buildings cracked; in Paradise Valley a schoolhouse and church were thrown down.

April 4, 1893, at Saugus, chimneys knocked down and dishes and household furnishings broken by distinct shocks.

April 8, 1894, seismic disturbances at Newhall, accompanied by subterranean explosions and landslides; a few houses demolished, but no one injured.

July 29, 1894, earthquake shock at San Bernardino; no property loss; in Los Angeles few windows broken and City Hall tower swayed.

Oct. 23, 1894, at San Diego, series of shocks shook rocks from the hillsides.

Feb. 15, 1896, a distinct shock was felt in Los Angeles.

Dec. 25, 1899, six Indians killed in severe earthquake at San Jacinto.

June 17, 1913, two shocks in Los Angeles; no damage.

June 13, 1915, Severe earthquake in Imperial Valley; loss of $1,500,000 at El Centro, Calexico, Heber and Mexicali; 103 buildings destroyed; eight persons killed on Mexican side and fifty-three injured.

Jan. 3, 1916, slight shock at Pomona.

Oct. 23, 1916, slight shocks at Fresno, Ventura and Venice.

April 28, 1918, severe earthquake at San Jacinto and Hemet; total damage, $300,000; twenty-five persons injured, none fatally.

June 21, 1920, severe shake at Inglewood, felt in Los Angeles and vicinity; no casualties; loss estimated at $100,000.

FRUIT CASE QUIZ FINISHED.

It is understood that the examination of witnesses in regard to the affairs of the Sutherland Fruit Company, and its president, W. F. McShane, has been concluded by the Federal grand jury, and that a report on the case will be made next Friday. Action has been taken, it is understood, but its nature is not known.

PRANKS BY COAST QUAKES

Pacific Coast earthquakes, though but few of them have been destructive, have played many strange pranks.

The earliest recorded freak occurred at Refugio, near Santa Barbara, in December, 1812, when a ship was carried up a canyon by an earthquake's tidal wave and later returned to sea. Following this quake, many new asphaltum springs were found near Santa Barbara, where none had existed before.

In January, 1857, the current of the Kern River was turned upstream and the water ran four feet over the banks. Near San Fernando a large stream of water ran from the mountains where there was no water below. In the San Gabriel Valley the river left its bed and followed a new course.

At Santa Cruz, on March 5, 1864, a doorbell was rung, according to official record.

Steam and water shot up through cracks in the earth when an earthquake occurred at Mountain Charley's, near Santa Cruz, on Oct. 8, 1865.

Goose Lake, Siskiyou county, was sprinkled with huge waterspouts during a temblor on Oct. 8, 1865.

When an earthquake visited the Klamath River region on Feb. 17, 1866, the river suddenly raised, exposing its bed, while a hill on its bank sunk to a level plain. On one side of the hill an abrupt bluff was left, causing the river channel to immediately change. by the builders is the dissatisfaction with of the engineering methods. Contractors, have failed thus far to directly on the subject for a complaint in writing to the City Council or the Board of Public Works would make the writers marked men and that inspectors from the City Engineer's office would thereafter "ride" them in retaliation.

WANTS IT AIRED.

"While I believe that the city inspection system is fair and a just protection to the public," said Chairman Wheeler of the Public Works Committee of the City Council, yesterday, "nevertheless contractors need have no fear of trouble if they come to the Council. Let us air the whole matter, hear the complaints, and the engineer's answer, and if there is anything wrong, we can soon make it right. We are playing no favorites and we have nobody to protect in this matter."

President Workman of the City Council said yesterday: "I had a complaint several days ago from a contractor who said that red-tape inspection methods in the engineering department are driving contractors out of taking Los Angeles jobs. If these charges are true, then I am in favor of changing such methods. We must protect the city and the taxpayers from incompetent and illegal work, but on the other hand the city inspectors must co-operate in every way with those business men and their engineers and contractors who are trying to encourage the city's growth by laying out new additions and building new homes and industries, and must not discourage them with arbitrary and unnecessary rulings."

EXCESSIVE EXPENSE.

Specifically, the contractors assert that the costs of inspections which are charged against and paid for by the owners of property which is being improved—streets laid out, sewers built, etc.—are excessive, often being higher than the owners' cost of improving the property—surveying, laying out, etc. In one recent instance, it is declared, the fees to the City Engineer's department in connection with a development enterprise were 230 per cent of the amount the owners paid for all the private work of surveying, laying out and planning.

During the fiscal year ended July 1, 1919, builders and contractors paid into the city treasury for inspection and engineering fees $73,000.

A case is cited in which the City Engineer's office stopped work at a plant because the cement did not meet with its approval. The ban was lifted at 5 o'clock that afternoon, too late to bring the gang of men back to work until the second day following.

INCONSISTENCY.

Inspectors are charged by contractors with turning back at a job rock which had been passed by inspectors at the quarry and which was later passed by the inspector who turned it down. Use of rock from the Arroyo Seco is not allowed for sidewalks, etc., contractors say, as not being up to the specifications under the ordinances, and yet this rock, it is asserted, is of the same quality as that from the city quarries, which material is used in municipal work.

As a result of such fault-finding by inspectors and hair-splitting regulations by the City Engineer's office, contractors are refusing to take Los Angeles city supervised jobs, or when they do, they increase their bids 150 per cent to 200 per cent to cover inspection troubles, it is asserted.

The Council Budget Committee, which finished its work last week, set aside for the engineering department's expenses during the fiscal year beginning July 1, the sum of $1,544,395 to pay for personal services of the department employees. This amount includes the salaries of fifty-six inspectors, who will receive during the year a total of $94,920, one inspector at a salary of $3000 and another at $2040. There are about 1200 men and women employed in the engineer's department, including forty clerks and nine stenographers.

WHAT ENGINEER SAYS.

City Engineer Griffin, in reply to the charges relative to the high cost of city inspection, said yesterday:

"This office is always glad to co-operate with builders, contractors, subdividers and all others who desire to put through improvements. We appreciate that these additions are important to the city, and we shall do everything in our power to assist in this work.

"We are guided strictly by the ordinances, and have no discretion. If we permit work to go through which is not properly or legally done, then the taxpayers must pay excessive maintenance costs in years to come. Our inspection and engineer charges, which are paid by the contractor, are at maximum 10 per cent of the cost of the improvement. Before we can work on a new street, the law requires that a map be filed. We have no discretion.

"Contractors are often put to much unnecessary expense by not consulting this office to learn the law before they start to work."

OFF THE BOARD.
Offhand we might say that the chances of Bryan, Edwards, Hitchcock or Hoke Smith receiving the Democratic nomination are about even. They are what they call 100-to-1 shots—or maybe 200.

MAKE WOOD OF STONE.
A Missourian has built him what is apparently a log cabin out of hollow concrete. A six-room home cost him $2700 and is fire and burglarproof. It may be fashionable for our future Presidents to be born in houses built of concrete logs.

THE THIRD CITY.
Philadelphia, which was the second city of America for a hundred years, but was easily nosed into third position by Chicago, increased by 17 per cent in population during the last decade. It sleeps comfortably at 1,823,158. That's the burg we're after. Rip Van Winkles who wake up twenty years hence will know that something has happened.

PERSON OR POLICY?
Atty.-Gen. Palmer, who is at San Francisco as a national committeeman as well as a candidate, tells the papers that questions of platform and policy are far more important than the identity of the nominee. He may say so, but it is doubtful if he thinks it. Nor is it certain that he is right. Mostly the nominee becomes the issue in the election and the people have been brought to realize that what the Democrats promise in their platform does not count very deeply in the record of performance. The party may have a platform and a policy, but it is a patchwork platform and an accident policy. Mr. Palmer would rather be sure of the nominee than of the platform.

SKINNING SHARKS.
A ship equipped with a special seine 600 feet in length has taken as high as 200 sharks in a single day off the Gulf of Mexico. Each shark will furnish from twenty-five to forty square feet of a leather that is suitable for fine shoes as well as a number of special purposes. One southern tannery is taking care of 500 shark skins a week. The sharks of the deep could ease the leather market quite a bit if they were all rounded up. It might be that all would be glad to engage in the business of skinning our surplus sharks. The loan shark, the mining shark and several other species have mighty tough hides, but after they have been through the tannery they become sufficiently pliable for use as sole leather, at least.

COOLING OFF.
The Armours have just completed a single refrigerating plant with a capacity equivalent to a thousand tons of ice a day and where it is said to be possible to maintain a zero temperature all the year 'round. That wouldn't be a bad place to send some of these feverish Reds for storage while awaiting deportation. Louis Post doesn't seem able to get them out of the country very fast and a lot of them have spoiled on his hands while awaiting transportation. If these fiery Reds could be kept on ice in a massive plant like this until their ship was ready some of them might be cooled down below the explosive point and made permanently safe. A cold-storage plant would be even better than a jail for some offenders. Our judges might assume more latitude for the general good.

THE LOST CAUSE.
The Housewives' League of California is calling for a showdown. At San Francisco they are asking Mitchell Palmer what he meant when he announced that he had his heel on the neck of the profiteer and was squeezing prices downward. The Attorney-General would never have made any headway with his Presidential aspirations but for the brave showing he made in his words of promise to attack high prices. The Palmer boom is entirely the result of the battle against the high cost of living. If he had won his nomination would have been assured. But as nothing really happened except a general stiffening up of the high-price line it would seem that he was entitled to no more than the usual rewards of the unsuccessful warrior. Which might mean the ax or the hook. Tough, but just. Mitchell doubtless meant well, but it was a bigger task than he could complete. Like many another, he bit off more than he could chew and is not entitled to high reward.

HOME SEEKING.
They seem to be house-hunting all over the world—even in Russia and China. The killing off of millions of heads of families in a World War did not suspend the demand for homes. Directly and indirectly it appears to have quickened it. Nevertheless there is an aroused appeal for new homes in lands where the war was but a remote incident. Even the Fiji Islander wants a new palm leaf hut and the Eskimo a fresh igloo. The housing congress held recently in London brought together representatives of many lands and races, all concerned in a greater program of home-building. There is a scarcity of materials for the homes for an advanced civilization and a stiffening of prices that has rather parlayzed the individual purse; but the desire of man to have a home that is really and truly his own is spreading over the world like a passion and a fever. It may be difficult of accomplishment, but love and the woman will find a way.

THE PLATFORM BUILDERS.

THE Republican platform builders had their troubles at Chicago. More than 200 planks were submitted for a platform with floor space for not more than twenty-five. Big issues trampled little ones and walked over them in their haste to get in. For the few that were accepted many had to be rejected. So the builders had recourse to some generalizations, which covered much, but specified little. Many who wanted a whole board had to be content with a splinter.

One disappointed group said to a veteran Republican leader: "We are going to take our plank to San Francisco. We can't get anything in a Republican platform." The political sage replied: "You will probably fare better out there, for you can get ANYTHING into a Democratic platform." That complaint and response typify the difference between the two parties. The Republican leaders are called conservative, because it has been a point of honor with them for a generation not to place any promise in the platform that Republican candidates, if elected, would be unable or unwilling to fulfill. Democratic leaders never look farther than the coming November. They want their candidates to win, and they give them all the help they can. They would rather sacrifice a principle than any election. They care little whether a plank is sound, provided it be popular.

II.

WHEN the Republican platform committee met, one member presented three industrial planks which had been drafted by the Plumb Plan League and indorsed by the American Federation of Labor. They were told that those planks contained the wishes of 5,000,000 voters; that to reject them would mean the loss of that many votes to the Republican ticket. But to put those planks into the platform would have been a surrender to class dictation. It meant the injury of the many for the benefit of the few. An organized minority of 5,000,000 would have been dictating to an unorganized majority of 50,000,000. The plank finally accepted concedes as much as it was possible to give to the minority without sacrificing the rights of the majority.

But the Plumb Plan Leaguers and the A. F. of L. are not satisfied with the result. Their grievance is not against what was put in, but against what was left out. So the Plumb Plan Leaguers and the A. F. of L. dictators loaded up their planks and shipped them to San Francisco. They made no fight for them on the floor of the Chicago convention; because their arguments are all in the nature of threats, and those threats would not help the radical cause if they were to appear in the public print.

Another group presented a plank demanding the immediate recognition of the nonexistent Irish republic, a remonstrance to the British government for retaining Ireland as a part of Great Britain and a declaration that Ireland is and ought to be an independent state. This group would accept no compromise; the plank must be accepted or rejected as written. If it was not accepted the Republican party would lose the Irish-American vote, see? It was rejected; but no appeal was taken to the convention. The Sinn Feiners had checked up the delegates and found they were in no temper to pledge the candidates to interference with the internal affairs of any other country.

There was a radical Socialist group at Chicago that demanded a plank pledging the candidates to immediate recognition of the Communist government of Russia, the nationalization of all basic industries and the negotiation of a separate peace with Germany. To reject that plank would mean the loss of not less than 10,000,000 votes. But when it was rejected they made no attempt to appeal to the convention. The reason privately assigned was that such an appeal would injure Johnson's chances for the nomination. Those three groups were for Johnson. Perhaps the hope that he might ultimately win the nomination had something to do with their not pressing the issues before the convention. So the radical Socialists, like the others, packed their grips and purchased tickets for San Francisco.

These are not the only groups that did not get what they wanted. Several business and commercial organizations backed a plank penalizing strikes against the public welfare and indorsing compulsory arbitration of labor disputes. Some of the members of the platform committee feared that this plank, too, savored of class dictation. So it fared the fate of the others.

There was one group with a wet plank and another with one kiln-dried. But the wet plank was waterlogged and the kiln-dried one was split. Both were rejected and a new plank was written in committee. These two groups are now descending upon San Francisco, increasing in volume as they travel, like a snowball rolling down hill.

III.

SO THE platform builders in San Francisco will find piled up before the committee room door all the planks that were rejected in Chicago and a pile of new timber. The Sinn Feiners will be there in force; but De Valera will not be at their head. He will try to direct his campaign for recognition of his mythical republic from Chicago. The Plumb Plan Leaguers will be there, backed by the A. F. of L., with their demand that the railroads be taken from their owners and turned over to the employees. Gompers himself will lead the fight for an anti-injunction plank; and the committee will be told that the union labor vote elected Wilson four years ago and the unions can either elect or defeat a Democratic candidate for President this year. Of course this argument does not square with the facts in relation to the 1916 campaign; for the States with the great industrial populations mostly went Republican; but that talk about 5,000,000 votes is likely to have its influence on the committee. Gompers will also lead the fight to have an anti-injunction plank written into the platform, and another plank declaring for collective bargaining through the official representatives of the labor unions. The committeemen will be caught between the contending wet and dry factions, and will doubtless try to compromise by dressing a plank which will be faced on both sides.

But it is wasting space to comment at this time on the kind of platform the Democrats will adopt. Many things can, and do, happen between the committee room and the floor of the convention. The platform builders have already begun to dodge and evade. They will try to ride every big issue with a leg on each side. Present indications are that they will indorse a vicious industrial platform in order to placate the radical elements.

IV.

ON THE League of Nations issue, the Democratic platform will, unfortunately, be sounder than the Republican. We say unfortunately because we do not wish any good fortune to the Democratic party. It is to be regretted that the Republican National Convention adopted a weak and obscure plank as to the League of Nations. It was not only its duty, but to its interest, to adopt a plank pledging the party to support a measure to join the League of Nations now functioning, with such reservations as would protect American interests. The Republican utterance on the League is one that each voter can interpret according to his own opinions. It should have been so plain, so explicit, so direct, that there could be but a single interpretation. Had this been the case it would have been impossible for the Democratic party to make an issue of the peace treaty. In compromising too much, the Republican chiefs and platform builders made a blunder that will cost the party many votes. But it is possible that the Democratic party will prove too weak and too vacillating on industrial, social and other important issues to take advantage of the Republican mistake.

A FOOLISH BOYCOTT.
The boycott, first used by the Irish Land League against Capt. Boycott, has been found a strong weapon by China to direct against Japan, but it will hardly fail to be an effective instrument for the German laborites who are seeking to punish Hungary. The boycott is not a method of warfare of which America approves, although there has been a tendency to condone China's recent use of it because people feel strongly that an injustice has been done that country in the case of Shantung. No such sympathy exists with the German Federation of Labor's attempt to starve Hungary as a punishment for what it calls Admiral Horthy's "white terror." The admiral is the "lord protector and regent" of the land of the Magyars which was brought to such sore straits first by its association with Germany and next by the reign of anarchy for which Bela Kun, the Bolshevist, was responsible. The admiral proved his worth during the war and later when he was called upon to restore order after the Communist looters and murderers had been forced out of power. It was charged that horrible atrocities were perpetrated by the admiral's order on the working classes of Hungary and this is given as the cause for the German labor federation's boycott. There is every reason to believe that the reports of "white terrorism" were largely manufactured out of whole cloth. The British government, which has no reason to hide the facts, caused an inquiry to be made which indicated that the reports of atrocities were much exaggerated. Premier Lloyd George told the House of Commons, in fact, that the Hungarian government was maintaining order well, on the whole, "and was in no way indulging in political persecutions."

In June, 1901, when the late Senator J. B. Foraker was renominated for a second term before the Ohio Legislature, Senator Harding made the nominating speech before the joint session of the Senate and House. His opening sentence was: "I am aware, Mr. President, that it violates accepted usage to name one's candidate in the very first sentence uttered, but, sirs, I could no more withhold his name than a glad courier, coursing homeward with the tidings of victory, could muffle his triumphant note."

If all the stories told about Villa are true he ought to have his telephone taken out.

A HOMELAND FOR JEWS.
Acceptance by Great Britain of the mandate for Palestine is considered so important and significant that some of the Jews of Los Angeles arranged a great celebration to commemorate it. There is reason for this enthusiasm because the British action means that the land once spoken of as flowing with milk and honey will become the homeland for the future Jewish nation. The Jews realize that the time is not ripe for the government of Palestine to be handed over to them. They did not ask for it at the Peace Conference, but they did suggest that Great Britain be given the mandate and that the fundamental principle of its government shall be the re-establishment of Palestine as the Jewish national home. This will be done, and it is a matter of such extreme gratification to the Zionists that the celebration example set by Los Angeles is sure to be followed all over the country. The British will have no soft snap in Palestine. The Turks, whose army they drove from the Holy Land, and the Arabs, who claim Palestine as part of their new state, look with no pleasure upon the new order of things. Emir Feisal, son of the King of the Hedjaz and ruler of Syria, has not stamped out his ambition to include Jerusalem in his country. Mustapha Kemal, leader of the Turkish Nationalists, has already tried to get Feisal to dispute England's position, but the Arab leader is a man of much sagacity, and, disappointed though he is at the turn events have taken, he shows no desire to get into trouble with the lion of the north. In addition to these matters France recently made territorial claims which, if acceded to, would affect the boundaries of Palestine. These and other problems will have to be settled by the British.

RAISING OUR STANDARDS.
The High Cost of Living and the High Tastes of the Liver still hover dangerously above their base. But one observes that, while there is plenty of indignation at the greed of the seller and the cost of things, there is still no strong disposition to conform the consumer's standards to his pre-war level. The average consumer has raised his standard of living with every leap of prices. Thousands of people whose tastes were formerly modest, whose tables were plain and wholesome, whose clothes were simple and neat, whose shoes were purchased more for service than style, who regarded silk hose as a special-occasion luxury, have of late cultivated expensive tastes and come to regard what were once the occasional luxuries as imperative necessities.

Strikes for higher wages are more often brought to meet the higher cost of luxuries than to meet the higher necessary cost of living. The consumer himself has become an expensive person, for whom nothing but the best will do. He must have more pay, not to provide food or more clothing, but to provide more expensive food and more elaborate clothing.

In the women's departments of industry that is particularly noticeable. No matter what her walk in life the average woman [always exceptions, of course] regards silk stockings at a minimum of $2.50 a pair, fashionable and expensive shoes, fanciful silk gowns, modish hats, silk underwear et al. as positively essential to her well-being. A few years ago these women were wearing modest apparel—and incidentally looking just as attractive in it. A strikers' meeting nowadays is usually made up of people, male or female, who are dressing and living to a much higher standard today than they would have dreamed of a few years ago. The higher the cost of things the more elaborate are their cravings. So they must have higher pay to meet their more expensive tastes, the higher pay automatically making the tastes more expensive every time.

We cannot repeat too often that the cost of living ultimately rests with the consumer. Without the consumers' recklessness and extravagance there can be precious little profiteering. So long as the consumer regards himself individually as a privileged person whose covetousness must be assuaged, no matter what the price, that price is going to remain as high as the traffic will bear. The old law of supply and demand is still working overtime. Where is the man among us who won't charge as much as he can get for his product, whether that product be his labor or a commodity? When there is a surplus of labor, down go wages. When there is a surplus of production and a shortage of demand, down go prices.

Increased production is necessary, but increased economy is demanded. If our tastes persist in keeping pace with production, if our wants and cravings increase with every extra nickel we can cull, we have no one but ourselves to blame if the seller makes hay while the sun shines and reaps the advantage of our own greed. We can never get ahead of the game that way. Yet that is exactly what almost everyone is trying to do. We hear loud wails from various human sections of the community as each offers its particular claim to increased remuneration—yet investigation will show that these people have nearly all raised their standard of tastes and living with the rise in prices, that nearly all of them are better fed, better dressed, better housed than they were when prices were at the pre-war level. [There always are exceptions.]

Tastes as well as prices must get back to the pre-war level and the former must lead the way. No fundamental and permanent relief can be gained by forever raising wages so long as we continue forever raising our tastes and standards. The dog cannot consume his own tail, no matter how dizzily he may twirl. That new joke about the newly poor has precious little real significance. The newly poor are chiefly poor because they have adopted the standards of the pre-war rich. If every family would honestly and conscientiously reduce its demands to the level of five years ago and cut out all the newly acquired extravagances and frills prices would soon respond, bank accounts accrue—and the newly poor would become independent in a short space of time.

HOME BREW.

I made a keg of home-brewed ale, with raisins, yeast and water, and now I'm in the County Jail, where reason's prone to totter. I made five gallons of the truck to show that I could do it; I drank three quarts and ran amuck and here I am, beshrew it! My head is out of shape on top, my brow is swelled and hilly, for there the outraged village cop assailed me with his billy. When I get out, some five years hence (this fact I put some stress on,) I'll try to brew no Old Stone Fence—I will have learned my lesson. It does not pay to fool the law, in measure small or greater, for punishment is all you draw—it gets you soon or later. A lot of laws give me a pain, I'm tempted to defy them; but in the hours when I am sane I guide my footsteps by them. We cannot pick and choose the laws that we'll observe and cherish; we can't approve one with our jaws and say the next must perish. We have to take them as they come and not behave like quitters, and if we find that some are bum we bravely take our bitters. The law's against all forms of booze, and when my stretch is ended, I will compound no home-made brews of yeast and raisins blended.

WALT MASON.

WHICH WAS HE?

A Louisiana lady writes George Weston, author of "Mary Minds Her Business," inquiring whether he was a man or a woman. In reply the author wrote: "I sing bass, smoke a pipe, swear when excited, wear homespun trousers, shave every morning and find it hard to keep my neck from turning when Beauty passes by. I vote for Presidents, like to gossip, buy No. 9 shoes, walk with long strides, wear a mustache, whistle, whittle, sit in the sun, talk politics and once even tried to chew tobacco, although (I hasten to add) without the least success. I can also walk on my hands for as long as seven steps." This should have been conclusive.—[Book Notes.

THE LANCER.

Senator Reed of Missouri has served notice on the Democratic convention that he will be there to contest for a seat. That was to be expected of Reed of Missouri. Being a stanch Democrat, except when it suits his personal ambitions or grudges to be otherwise, and a loyal American, except when some of his disloyalist allies crack the whip, he has many times declared himself an upholder of the divine principle of majority rule. The voice of the people, as expressed by their votes, is the voice of God, the will of the people is the supreme law. Therefore, to those who know Senator Reed, it was only to be expected that when the people of Missouri grew wrathy at his conduct in Washington and throughout the State indignation meetings were held by members of his party calling on him, as their representative, to respect their wishes, he should give no notice to their expressed wishes except a scornful sneer.

When the State Democratic Convention, representing all the voters of his party, refused to name him a delegate-at-large or any other sort of delegate to San Francisco, he again showed his Democratic submission to the will of the voters by sneering that they could go hang. And so he made the Kansas City machine that he dominates name him as a district delegate, not in an election in which the will of the people could be expressed, but in a back room. And so he will be in San Francisco next week in spite of the often-expressed wishes of the people of Missouri.

Do you recall that when Wanamaker announced a 20 per cent reduction on all merchandise and the Department of Justice began fair-price inquiries throughout the country many merchants in this part of the country assured us that prices couldn't be made any lower? They submitted cogent reasons and quite convinced us prices couldn't fall—but prices have fallen. You can't read the advertisements in this issue of The Times or stroll through a few stores without realizing that staple necessities are selling for less than they were a few weeks ago. Maybe that is just the result of philanthropy.

Many crimes are committed in the name of liberty, most of which, just now, are called home brew. People who didn't know the taste of beer before total abstinence went into effect have determined to drink it as a protest against the abrogation of their personal rights and have filled their cellars with bottled fluids ranging in color from dish water to overdraft ink and in taste from that of stump water to that of vinegar and cayenne diluted with gasoline. At least it is to be assumed that they never knew the taste of beer before, for each of those home brewers, as he hands you a glass of his creative work, pridefully remarks:

"Tastes like the real thing, doesn't it? Only it's better."

All that can be said for most of the home brew I have seen is that it has a kick in it. It has several and grounds for many more. It can now be said that some inherit beer, some achieve beer, but home brew is always thrust upon one. If the government cannot be reasonable in regard to light wines and beer let our schools instruct our youngsters how to make home brew right. Then will the ancient problem of getting father to spend his evenings at home be solved, and harmony and happiness will be restored in many neighborhoods where now old friendships are being disrupted by pronounced—often orally pronounced—differences in taste.

The allegations on which Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, has been indicted by a Federal grand jury are serious. In unlegal language he is accused of having applied Tammany Hall political methods to private business transactions.

Some day some voice crying out in the wilderness is going to startle the world with the serious assertion that it is just as dishonorable to be dishonorable in politics as it is in business. And I suspect it will be a feminine voice, at that. We men have become so inured to present conditions that we are almost inclined to regard such a declaration as heresy. We look on a lot of things we would scorn to use personally as the regularly approved weapons of politics.

And Tammany goes most of us one better. Intimidation and coercion are the most honored tools of Tammany—most honored by use, at least. And yet Tammany includes a majority of persons who consider themselves mighty honest men.

It is hard to imagine that anyone who can wear a silk hat as authoritatively as Mr. Murphy could possibly stoop to anything improper personally. Indeed, Raffles himself couldn't wear such a hat better. And if they should dig up evidence of any improper business transaction Mr. Murphy would certainly have a good excuse. He could plead that in the press of pre-convention business he momentarily got absent-minded and forgot it was a business, not a political, transaction.

PERPETUAL PEOPLE.

It appears that a London financier has been treated with monkey glands given by Dr. Voronoff and has been reduced in his age from 72 to 36. His name is Robert George Laws.

If this is true, a grave danger menaces us. As the supply of monkeys is limited, there not being as many of them as there are human beings, it is evident only those people who can afford to pay for it are going to be restored to youth. We understand that Mr. Bryan has considerable money saved up. If he gets hold of some of the monkey glands and is made over into 25 he can run for the Presidency for the next fifty years without interruption.

And that is only one instance. God help us, say we, if this thing gets started.—[Life.

later, she again left. "I could not bear to think of it all night and day. I had to go away, I had to," she almost moaned. Then Hargrave and his attorney came to her beach room and told her that the community property was to be divided. Hargrave gave her some real estate and some money. Then he went away. They talked about their plans, and Mrs. Hargrave says she did not know what to say. Her husband mentioned divorce, she says, and she replied that she would abide by what he thought was best.

"Leonard is a good and a kind man, he'll do the right thing. He is trying to bring up the children and I shall not hinder him in what he will decide to do," she continued. "But I must be in touch with my children. I don't know what I'd do if I did not get a letter from them every day." This little, high-strung woman, daughter of a sea captain, school-teacher and later the wife of a hard-working, quiet son of the soil, grew panicky at the very thought of being separated from her children—even in correspondence. The taunting memory and remorse that drove her from the home of her husband so generously left open for her failed to break the tie that binds her to her big contribution to the world that now seeks to condemn her—four healthy, beautiful children. "And I am so very happy that my children stand by me. That is a God's blessing, surely. I don't know what I would do without that one ray of joy that is left for me," she confessed.

"I have no plans for the future. I am going to wait and see. I am sorry for Jewell—that is, I am sorry to see he has been turned out of his house. He is 56 years old and feeble. He has no place to go." As Mrs. Hargrave spoke these words sympathy, that pitfall and glory of all women, was the dominant note in her words.

AND HARGRAVE.

The most optimistic of all the principals—though undoubtedly not the least sufferer—is Leonard Hargrave, the avenger. "I am glad Jewell is going away. He should do that. He wrecked everything, why should he linger. It is the only thing he can do. I am trying to live here with my family. I am trying to do the best I know how to repair the damage he has done. I may succeed, if I am left alone," he said when told of Jewell's plans.

FOR POLL ON JUDGESHIPS.

Straw Vote Ballots Sent to Bar Members; Acid Test for Incumbent Candidates.

Attorney Frank C. Collier, chairman of the grievance committee of the Los Angeles Bar Association and one of the leaders in the recently inaugurated movement to "elevate the bench," yesterday issued the following signed statement, coincidently with the sending out of ballots to more than 2000 attorneys of Los Angeles county, with the purpose of obtaining an expression of opinion as to the qualifications or disqualifications of the ten incumbent judges of the Superior Court, who are candidates for re-election:

"At the request of a large number of attorneys, the Los Angeles Bar Association is mailing a ballot to every practicing lawyer in this county whose business address could be obtained. The list at present contains between 2000 and 2500 names and has been compiled with great care and labor. If any has been overlooked, the oversight is unintentional and a ballot can be secured by proper application to R. H. F. Variel, Jr., secretary of the Bar Association, 697 I. W. Hellman Building.

"Secrecy of the ballot will be rigidly observed. The voting will not be confined to association members, but it is hoped and expected it will be participated in by the entire bar.

"Frankly, this movement is the outcome of a decided conviction on the part of attorneys relating to the efficiency of the courts and is impersonal, nonpartisan and altruistic.

MAY ENTER CANDIDATES.

"The lawyers of the county, who are daily practicing before the courts, are, above all others, the ones who have first hand, personal knowledge of the qualifications of the judges. If, as a result of the ballot being taken, the sentiment of these lawyers is fairly uniform regarding the disqualification of any incumbent judge or judges, then it is hoped that several leaders of the bar may be drafted to make the race for election.

"Public confidence in the ability as well as the integrity of the courts is absolutely essential to successful democratic government. Under the American system the courts constitute the last trench in the defense of human rights and the very highest standard should be maintained.

"I particularly urge that members of the bar give careful attention to the fourth proposition submitted, which provides for the suggestion of names of attorneys deemed especially qualified to act in the capacity of trial judges. What is greatly desired is an honest, fearless expression of every lawyer in Los Angeles county of his choice of the ablest man or men for the bench, regardless of who the candidates are or may be. With such an expression of opinion, men of the highest character and standing can be obtained, and not otherwise.

"Members of the committee have been greatly encouraged by the expressions of scores of attorneys, who have conveyed to the committee their enthusiastic offers of assistance.

"I feel confident that the members of the bar will participate in the vote being taken and that the result will reflect the truthful, conscientious view of the bar as a whole regarding this most vital public matter, unaffected by any personal influence or private consideration."

VOTING PLANS.

The poll of lawyers was decided on at a recent meeting of a large number of attorneys, who petitioned the trustees of the Bar Association to supervise the taking of the test vote. The Bar Association consented, feeling that an expression of opinion by the bar as a whole would be of great value to the public.

The balloting, which will be by mail, is to close at 5 p.m., July 1, and the count will be made in the offices of the secretary of the Bar Association at 7 p.m. that day. All candidates are invited to be present in person or by representative when the ballots are canvassed.

The ballot contains four questions and one request for a statement of preferences, as follows:

"(1.) Is it your desire to return all of the ten incumbent Superior Court judges to the bench at the coming election?

"(2.) The following is an alphabetically arranged list of the ten judges, who are candidates for re-election. Please indicate by placing a numeral after each name the order of your preference.

"(3.) If you answer the first interrogatory 'No,' how many of the above incumbents should not be re-elected?

"(4.) If you answer the first interrogatory 'No,' whom of recognized ability do you suggest to take the places of the number of judges you have indicated should not be returned to the bench?

"(5.) Whom do you suggest as a candidate for the 'short term?'"

SEES PLOT TO SPLIT ALLIES.

City Club Speaker Sounds Caution Against New Propaganda.

The Central Powers are still putting out propaganda in an effort to cause discord among the Allies preparatory to another drive on France, Prof. Charles U. Clark said yesterday in a noon address at the City Club.

The speaker told his hearers to beware especially of so-called news sent out from Europe to create sympathy for Hungary. "The future looks black," said Prof. Clark, "unless we have the League of Nations."

JANITOR AIDS LIBRARY.

C. H. Dennison, who signs himself as janitor at a large hotel on Orange street, has made his second donation of $1 to the Los Angeles Public Library building fund. In the letter accompanying his donation Mr. Dennison says he is "just a bashful kid, close to 70 years young" and that he will be happy to give 50 cents a month for the next twelve months.

WHY MESERVE WITHDREW.

As told in yesterday's Times, Edwin A. Meserve has decided to withdraw from the race for United States Senator from California. In the following statement issued by him yesterday, he gives the reasons which have influenced him not to formally enter the contest.

"I have decided not to formally enter the race for the Republican nomination for United States Senator from California. Some of the potent reasons for this decision are personal, that is pertain exclusively to my profession and business, others are political. With the former, the public is not concerned, with the latter, it may be.

"When in the early fall of 1919, I was requested to become a candidate for this office, it was suggested, and I was convinced that, if Gov. Stephens did not seek the nomination there would be no Republican, other than myself, from the southern part of the State who would.

"Receiving assurances that Gov. Stephens did not intend to run for the place, I announced myself as a candidate. Some time afterwards, Mr. A. J. Wallace, believing that prohibition would be the paramount issue in the coming campaign, and that therefore it was his duty to run, entered the race and became an active candidate. This was followed by Mr. Shortridge of San Francisco coming in, Mr. Kent having been a candidate from the beginning. This made a 'four cornered' fight for the nomination. Ordinarily the coming in of another candidate from the northern part of the State would serve to weaken the candidate already in from that section, but I am thoroughly satisfied this was not and will not be the result of Mr. Shortridge's becoming a candidate.

"Whether of his seeking or not I do not pretend to know, but Mr. Kent, generally speaking, does have, and will have the active support of the ultraradicals, including the radical element in the labor unions. A careful investigation and canvas will, I am sure, prove that, as a rule, those who are 'against the government,' those who believe in and advocate opposition to law and order, those who believe in and advocate labor union control and domination, and those who believe in the right of the employees of the departments of the government and of public utilities 'to concertedly strike, and not only to strike, but prevent others from taking the vacated places, will be found advocating Mr. Kent's nomination and election. This does not mean, nor is it intended to mean, that Mr. Kent is not receiving the support of many of the finest men and women in the State.

"Mr. Shortridge, with his well-known conservative views, will get no appreciable portion of the votes of any of the radical elements in our State. Neither will Mr. Wallace, nor would I. Therefore, Mr. Shortridge's entering the race, by taking away from Mr. Wallace and me, strengthened rather than weakened Mr. Kent's candidacy, to the extent, as I view it, of making him the probable nominee, if the four candidates remain in the race.

Mr. Kent cannot defeat Senator Phelan. This is a Republican year.

AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

—And you do not need to close your eyes to imagine he is seated there at the instrument, because he is there in everything but his physical presence, there with everything that concerns you as a music lover.

He is there with every note of music reproduced precisely as he played it; there with his individuality; there with his unmistakable touch on the up-leaping keys; there with his subtle interpretation and the fire of his genius—all these which no other reproducing piano has ever been able to accomplish to record and give forth again as it is given forth by the famous Chickering-Ampico.

With the Chickering-Ampico, when it enters your home, there comes the invisible presence of Godowsky, Levitzki, Ornstein, Rachmaninoff (playing his C Sharp Minor prelude, if you like) and more than a hundred others to preside over your feast of music.

Does This Interest You?

Then come to our store and ask for a demonstration of the marvelous Ampico, the only genuine reproducing piano. And remember, too, that there is but one Ampico. Let it play for you your favorite music by your favorite pianist. There is all the lighter music and popular ragtime, too, waiting for you to hear and enjoy—played by names famous in vaudeville and musical comedy.

PLEASED WITH NOMINEES.

Republican County Central Committee Indorses Harding and Coolidge.

solutions expressing pleasure at nomination of Senator Harding Gov. Coolidge for the Presidency Vice-Presidency of the United States were adopted Friday night meeting of the executive committee of the Los Angeles Republican County Central Committee. support was pledged to the G.O.P. ticket.

The County Central Committee opened new headquarters in the Building, and members lay an organization plans for active campaign. The text of resolutions adopted Friday night follows:

Resolved, that the Republican Central Committee of Los county, represented by its committee, hereby signifies unqualified satisfaction with nominations made by the National Republican Convention lately held at the city of Chicago. to declare it to be the determination of the Republican party of county to exert all honorable efforts to obtain the largest vote in this county in favor Warren G. Harding for President Coolidge for Vice-President United States. They are representatives of the highest and of American men, and entitled of right to the support of all voters calling themselves Republicans, and deserving the suffrages of all men and women—whatever their previous party affiliations. And it is further resolved that we invite the earnest support of all good citizens for Harding and Coolidge."

ONE JUDGE IS GONE.

A score of individuals charged with violation of the Volstead Act will be arraigned and asked to plead OLDEST PENCIL IN NATION HERE.

Used at Chicago Convention When Cleveland First Got Nomination.

Mrs. C. N. Williams, 4259 South Main street, owns what she believes to be the oldest lead pencil in the United States.

This pencil was used at the Democratic National Convention held in Chicago in 1884—the convention at which Grover Cleveland was first nominated for the Presidency of the United States. John Vest, nephew of Senator Vest of Missouri, was official clerk of the convention and used the pencil. After the historic meeting he gave it to Mrs. Williams.

GETS TENTH OF SUM ASKED.

Damages of $500 were awarded to Sarah E. Sherwood yesterday by Judge Hewitt against Madeline Beveridge, owner of an automobile bus in Laurel Canyon, for injuries received on February 23 while the plaintiff was riding in the bus. The plaintiff sought $5000 damages. Liability was admitted by the defendant and the court determined the amount of damages.

PRESIDENT FREES THREE.

Official notice was received by the local Federal officials yesterday that President Wilson had unconditionally pardoned Edward Ham, E. J. Sonenberg and E. A. Stephens, convicted in the Federal Criminal Court of violation of the espionage law, and sentenced to three, two and three years, respectively, in the Federal penitentiary at McNeil's Island by Judge Bledsoe.

J. Emma Martin of San Bernardino, who was convicted at about the same time, and given a two-year stretch in San Quentin, has made a similar application for executive clemency, and it is presumed that it has been extended but there is no information here on the subject.

The three prisoners who have been turned loose by President Wilson, were engaged in selling copies of the Finished Mystery, a publication of the late Pastor Russell, that had been declared pro-German by the authorities in Washington.

The case of Mrs. Idell F. Kennedy and Dr. Frank Howenstine, who were given eleven and ten-year sentences for a violation of the espionage law, is yet to be disposed of. They are the last on the calendar of criminal cases growing out of the war. Howenstine is at McNeil's Island, beginning his long term, but the case of Mrs. Kennedy for a pardon or commutation of sentence is still before President Wilson.

INDIAN'S BRUSH FIRE GETS INTO TIMBER; REPORTED BY AERIAL SCOUT.

Supervisor Allen, of the Angeles National Reserve, received word yesterday that a fire set by an Indian on the Morongo Reservation, northeast of Banning, to burn up a lot of brush, had communicated to the surrounding timber and burned over 160 acres before it could be stopped. Forest Ranger Morris summoned a crew of fire fighters.

The alarm of fire was reported by the aerial patrol, the utility of which is being daily demonstrated to the forest officials. The service has sent in several false alarms in cases where grass was burning outside of the national reserve, but quick reports have been made on all the fires in the local, Santa Barbara and Cleveland forests with the result that the flames have been extinguished more quickly than if the officers had to depend on the former means of communication.

SETTLES FOR SMALL SUM.

For injuries received last November by Mrs. Laura B. Hughes, while she was alighting from a street car at Broadway and Olive street, she will receive $270, according to the terms of a compromise in Judge Hewitt's court yesterday with the Pacific Electric Company. Mrs. Hughes and her husband, B. W. Hughes, had sued for $15,300 damages. Negligence on the part of Mrs. Hughes was claimed by the plaintiff.

Miles of white beaches

—a glorious, curving sweep of rippling waves and white foam at your feet—that's the spacious summer playground at San Diego, California, for thousands already happily away from heat and dust, and for other thousands now coming.

You will find nothing like it elsewhere.

Swimming, surf bathing, dancing, motoring, fishing, golf—your pet recreations all are waiting for you here by the sea, with cool nights and days, and the salt-freshness of the ocean breeze to whet your enjoyment.

Aquaplaning, that fascinating water sport which heretofore has coaxed the wealthy to the far South Seas, and now finds itself at home in the blue waters of San Diego bay.

Deep-sea tuna, a score of other varieties of ocean fish, and the bass and trout of mountain lakes, furnish abundant sport.

Every attraction and accommodation of a thriving city is added to an exceptional list of sports and diversions, and living expenses are less than elsewhere.

Whether you live in hotel, apartment, cottage or tent, you will find accommodations of unusual merit. The city's many modern hotels close to the bay, with their spacious lobbies and roof gardens, are especially equipped for the entertainment of seasonal guests, at reasonable rates.

Make this your summer of real delight. Eighty-five thousand permanent residents and thousands of seasonal guests are waiting for you to join them at

It is the contour of a road that runs over the summit south of Quail Lake. But from the 7000-foot elevation at which we were flying, the summit itself appeared flat. This sense of flatness detracts from the grandeur of the mountain scenery.

NO SPARKLING WATER.

On the rim of the horizon lay a mountain lake. But the water neither gave a limpid effect nor flashed in the sun. When one describes a sparkling stream viewed from an airplane he is drawing on his imagination. One must be near the surface of the water to get that dazzling effect. The water of that lake looked as though it were covered by a green scum.

Viewed from a high altitude, deep water is dead green in color, and a shallow river or watercourse is as black as asphalt. It shocks one's poetic sense to have it so; but I am trying to record things as they are, not as they appear in romantic fiction, written by groundlings.

Far below us automobiles were running along the Ridge Route. No, they do not give one the impression of ants crawling. That is another fallacy of the imagination. As I looked down on them the first thing that came to mind was a scattered drove of black pigs running along a narrow country lane.

I looked for the mirage that always hovers on hot days above the northern end of the Mojave Desert. The stretches of brown and yellow sand were plainly visible, but there was not the slightest indication of a mirage; for the mirage is an illusion that appears only when one is near the ground.

LIKE MASTER CANVASSES.

But do not conclude that dispelling these illusions takes the romance out of air flight. New scenes appear when one is floating with the clouds a mile in the air, that recall the paintings of the masters. A feeling of awe crept over me as I marveled how those old painters, who had never been 100 feet from the surface of the earth, could give to their canvasses an atmospheric effect that, while absolutely true, they could have visioned only with the eye of the intellect. My nearest approach was to recall the maxim of the ancients that "genius soars high."

When we passed over the summit to the west of the Tejon Pass, we were more than 7000 feet in the air, figured from ocean level, but less than 2000 feet above the mountains. Pilot Pond does not steer through the pass. He follows the western contour of the mountains. There are downward air currents in the gap and it would be like sailing in a rough sea.

Far down on the slope of the receding mountains lay the Tejon ranch, with the buildings and the cultivated acreage plainly visible.

In viewing that stretch of country one is impressed by the possibilities of development. by the vast areas that cultivation can convert into blossoming fields on the ground and into impressionist pictures when viewed from the air.

Herds were probably grazing on those brown hillsides that rise rounded and swelling from the valleys. But animals are merged into the composite color of the fields in which they are grazing when one rides 5000 feet above them.

BEAUTIFUL VALLEY.

Viewed from an airplane the desolation of the desert increases; but above the San Joaquin Valley, which we were now approaching, there hung a golden halo that blended the fields of green, brown and gold in a manner that would fill the soul of an impressionist painter with delight as he viewed it and, perhaps, with agony when he sought to reproduce it on canvas.

One has but to view the San Joaquin Valley from the window of an air sedan to realize that the creator of the universe is endowed with the soul of an artist. The canvases of Corot and Monet are not fiction. They are true creations of nature as the Divine Master himself moulded her. But I would not be fair to myself and the readers of The Times if I did not confess that this air voyage caused me to lose a part of my sympathy for the neoimpressionists and the modernists. The old masters were nearer the truth than these stylists, who are likely to be recorded in history as the Bolsheviki of art.

Bakersfield lay at our feet, looking like a clump of live oaks beside an asphalt highway running through a meadow. But the highway was the Kern River. And beyond the highway like a scattered growth of dead pines, stretching in the shape of a fan north from the river was the Kern River oil field. Its varying contours lay like a single canvas beneath us. I received a better idea of the field at a glance than I could have gained by riding through it for a week in an auto.

We had made the flight from Hollywood in an hour. The schedule of the fastest train is seven hours and a half.

Dropping from the clouds into Bakersfield was like passing into the steam room of a Turkish bath. It was the hottest day of the year in the valley; but the air a mile above the city was as cool as a summer night in Los Angeles. The natives did not seem to mind it, but, driven to take refuge from the heat, I found I had lost my plane-shyness by the time we were back up to the spring-laden altitudes again.

GIANT WHITE PEAKS.

From Bakersfield to Stockton the flight was a dream of beauty. Below us was a carpet of varying shades of green and gold, while to the east, within easy view, lay the great snowfields of the Sierras. There is as much difference between viewing a snow-capped peak from the depth of the valley, and looking down upon the snowfields of which it is a part from an airplane as between grape juice and champagne. Even the memory of the glow of the Alps viewed from the ramparts of Berne fades before the spectacle of those giant Sierra peaks, clad in mantles of white and ivory, moving past like an army of Titians en marche.

I looked from that magnificent array to the tiny black pigs galloping along the State highway in the dust and heat, and I pitied the groundlings down there with the contempt that a god might feel; and I imagined myself President Wilson returning from Paris and looking down on the "little men of pigmy intellects" in the Senate.

The view that the motorists were getting of the San Joaquin Valley was about as comprehensive as an ant would get from running across the canvas of a masterpiece.

Viewed from the clouds, the thriving cities and villages of the San Joaquin gave expression to individual personalities. They ceased to be amalgamations of trees and became living entities.

SHAMROCK TOWN.

Tulare, hidden in green foliage, lay clustered about a railroad function like a mammoth four-leaved shamrock. Its intersecting streets cut it into checkered squares. Eight streets run north and south, six run east and west, giving one in an airplane the impression that Tulare is a six-by-eight town. To the west lay Tulare Lake, the dead green of its waters contrasting strangely with the warm, living colors of the landscape.

Stretching away to the east a white road led through Visalia, a dark patch on a brown landscape, and on to the black forests of the Sequoia National Park.

Across our path, half hidden in the golden halo, stretched the Kings River, giving one the impression of a black serpent, sunning itself on a bank of green foliage.

We enjoyed the delicious sensation of floating in the heavens while the valley unfolded like a scroll beneath us. Half a dozen little cities were visible at a time, each pierced like a string of emeralds by the dark line of the railroad that stretched away, morose and sullen, from horizon to horizon. As I looked down on that sinister band of steel it reminded me of a manacle that civilization might have clasped about the body of the virgin San Joaquin.

ELUSIVE FRESNO.

As the scroll unfolded from the north the pilot turned and called to me that dead ahead was Fresno. The cultivated area in the valley had broadened; many water courses were visible. But where was Fresno? I studied the landscape carefully and finally located it, flung across the track like a black coat a harvester might have abandoned in the field to lighten his labor.

Fresno is very fond of bragging about itself. But if a few of its boosters could see it from the upper deck of an airplane they might get a new point of view concerning its prominence in the San Joaquin Valley. It claims a population of 45,000 and struts about with metropolitan airs. But, when I looked for it the second time, Fresno had disappeared.

As we passed farther to the north I found it again. The whole city, suburbs and all, had been blotted out by a single wing of the airplane. One joint was sufficient to cover the whole town.

I studied the city through a glass, but I could locate only five buildings in the entire place more than one story in height. These five were the Courthouse and four office buildings. The roofs of the other buildings seemed to rest full on the ground, without a single story beneath them.

I know by reason of former visits that Fresno is a well-built city, the metropolis of the central part of the valley. But I could not verify my convictions by observation from the clouds.

OTHER TOWNS.

We had already passed Kingsburg, a little six-by-eight village that lay as though crushed by the weight of the railroad resting across its knees.

Turlock crouched in the midst of a fertile, well-watered plain, looking very much like a bear lying across the railway with its nose to the East and its haunches rising. Green lakes and alfalfa fields stretched all about it.

Madera appeared in the guise of an oak tree fallen across the track, with its roots to the south and branches to the north. I recorded it as an eight-by-ten town.

Merced had the appearance of a nine-by-twelve village that might have been a bouquet of flowers and asparagus fern thrown across the inevitable railroad track, the stems lying to the south. Half a dozen scattered lakes were visible on the western horizon, their dark color giving the impression of shallow marshes rather than great depth.

It must be a great dairying country through which the Merced River flows; but we were flying too high to be able to detect herds grazing in the brown stubble fields below When a plane reaches an elevation of 3500 feet, the herds blend in with the fields.

The pilot called my attention to Oakdale lying miles to the east of us. It made me think of a fly stuck to a piece of yellow fly paper. We were too far away to determine whether it was a three-by-four or a six-by-ten town.

Modesto glided leisurely past. Its contour is not suggestive and it reminded me of a drop of ink splashed on a green tablecloth. Like its sister towns, it is held firmly under the gyves of the railway, which continue to stretch away straight to the horizon. There was something sinister about the railroad that marred the placid beauty of the landscape.

MARVELOUS FERTILITY.

Prosperity must abide in those green fields about Modesto, else they would not be kept so well. The Tuolumne River flows tranquilly along its asphalt-colored course to the junction with the San Joaquin not far to the west of Modesto. Thousands of acres of marsh land are visible, that reclamation will sometime convert into rice fields, sufficient to supply the entire West.

The cultivated area of the valley stretches wider to the west and east as Stockton approaches. Viewed from the air this northern part of the valley possesses a fertility little short of the marvelous.

Clad in her green raiment, Stockton is the belle of the valley. Other cities in the State may appear as handsome from a ground view; but seen from the clouds, Stockton is the queen of the motion-picture cities of the plain. All the streets are lined with trees and the foliage is luxuriant. In the northern end of the valley the live oak appears at its best. It seems to have more foliage than

We Sell to Dealers at the Same Prices as we sell to you and at that we can save money even for the dealer

It is one of the fortunes of war. We are merely the intermediary through which these army materials are made available at such great savings.

ARMY TENTS

Of regulation 12½ oz. army khaki—double weave and double fill—the best Uncle Sam could buy for the money. They are mostly tents which were repaired for issue to troops to Overseas service, but which were not reissued due to the sudden termination of the war.

The U. S. Government repairs only tents that require but slight mending and which are still good for roughest wear. These are practically as good as new and we are able to offer them at prices less than those sold as junk.

No. 625A army tents, 16' x 16', complete with hood, pole, pegs, lines and slides, all in splendid condition and fully guaranteed........ $37.50

No. 725B army tents, 16' x 16', complete with hood, pole, pegs, lines and slides, fully repaired, completely guaranteed................. $35.75

Army officers' tents, 9' wide, 9' 2" long, 8' 6" high, with 3' 6" wall. Complete.................................. $29.00

Above prices are f.o.b. Los Angeles.

U. S. Army Paulins, Auto Truck and Wagon Covers $14.75

Brand new, full size 11' 6" x 14' 8"—of standard U. S. Army khaki-color heavy-weight duck, double weave, double fill—the kind of material that will stand damp, moist climates. It will wear for years. Its khaki color protects it from mildew.

Each cover is completely equipped according to U. S. Army specifications with the necessary ropes both at the ends and sides.

These covers make excellent auto coverings, are ideal for impromptu auto tents, great for campers, for farmers—for hay, grain or machinery protection—as merchandise covers for truck and other commercial hauling concerns, and for cement and other contractors. Two of them fastened together will make a paulin that would cost you at least $55.00 today. The price at which we offer them is less than they could be manufactured for today. While they last you can buy them singly or in quantities at $14.75 each delivered to your town.

All orders should be accompanied by check or money order. Because of our limited stocks we reserve the right to return all orders and moneys received when present stocks are disposed of. First come, first served.

BIBLE LEADERS TO TEACH.

Dr. Oliver and Dr. Gabelein Coming Here for Summer Course at Institute.

From July 4 to August 29 the Bible Institute of Los Angeles will conduct its annual summer conference and Bible school at the institute building, Sixth and Hope streets.

Dr. French E. Oliver, widely known evangelist and Bible teacher, will be the principal speaker during July, and the leadership during August will be taken by Dr. Arno C. Gabelein, editor of "Our Hope." The principal speakers will conduct conferences, classes and lectures every Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday during the two months of the Bible course.

Other teachers and lecturers for the interdenominational conference will be: Rev. L. S. Bauman, pastor of First Brethren Church, Long Beach; Rev. W. E. Blackstone, author, teacher and lecturer; Rev. H. C. Buell, Second Presbyterian Church, Long Beach; Rev. H. N. Bunce, Church of the Redeemer, Los Angeles; Rev. G. W. Davis, superintendent Christian and Missionary Alliance, Los Angeles; Rev. R. E. Day, First Baptist Church, Riverside; Rev. J. H. Deere, First Baptist Church, Pomona; Rev. W. E. Edmonds, Glendale Presbyterian Church; Rev. F. W. Farr, Calvary Baptist Church, Los Angeles; Rev. Milton Fish, First Baptist Church, San Bernardino; Rev. George A. Francis, Baptist Church, Garden Grove; Rev. J. G. Kennedy, United Presbyterian Church, Santa Ana; Rev. S. P. MacLennan, St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, San Pedro; Rev. A. B. Prichard, Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles; Rev. G. M. Rourke, First Presbyterian Church, Long Beach, together with others who have been invited, but whose engagements are such that they have not been able to make a definite decision as yet.

NAVY WANTS SIXTEEN.

Three Months' Enrollment will Bring Trip to Great Lakes.

Commander Thomas A. Symington of the local naval recruiting station, with offices in the Union Oil Building, has received permission from the head of the department to enroll sixteen boys for a short summer training course at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Enrollment for three months in the naval reserve is necessary, but the active duty period will probably run to only six or seven weeks. The boys will receive clothes, board and lodging, $33 per month pay, and their return transportation, but they must pay their own fare from Los Angeles to Great Lakes. Those who decide to take the course must leave Los Angeles not later than July 12.

IN LOS ANGELES FOR QUARTER OF CENTURY.

The Curtis Newhall Advertising Agency of this city is this month celebrating the twenty-fifth annual anniversary of its founding. The business was established here in the summer of 1895, and now has branches and connections covering the Pacific Coast cities and the great centers of national advertising.

Only Ten Floors

erhaps you have noticed the phrase in our advertisements, Ten Floors to Select From."

We used to think this was a great many—and it is for a y the size of Pasadena. We had to repeat the phrase conually to make people realize that there was a furniture re of that size here.

But now—things are different. Our ten floors seem all to us when we look at the huge stock in our five ware-uses and try to find room for it on our floors.

We really need about ten more floors. Regular man e floors like we have now. And we'll be getting them fore long.

ght now we're occupied with our Reorganization plans—
ing to readjust finances in such a way that we can conue the excellent service that our patrons are accustomed to.

So the Reorganization Sale continues for a time but not long. It brings you reduced prices on every piece of furnie in our choice stock together with many special values in , draperies and bedding.

Now is the time, and this is the place to come to if you furnishing a home complete and want to save money.

This Mahogany
Rocker, $29.85

SEEING STATE FROM AIRPLANE.

the live oaks of the south and its leaves are of a more living green.

Most evergreens are tiresome and inartistic. Their dark leaves give one the impression of mortuary wreaths; and there are few evergreens in which birds like to make their nests. I always suspect trees that the birds avoid. But the live oaks of the Stockton and Modesto districts give to the landscape an adornment of rare beauty.

OUR FLANDERS.

From Stockton to Concord, a suburb of Oakland and the farthest point north reached by the Avion, one has the impression of riding over the fields of Flanders in the days before the coming of the Hun. Rivers, sloughs and canals abound. The delta lands of the Sacramento and San Joaquin possess a soil of wonderful fertility; and everywhere there are evidences of intensive cultivation. These waters are affected by the ocean tides; the mud is stirred up by changing curents several times a day and they never lose their color of beach sand.

The asparagus production of those delta lands is almost beyond belief. The deltas of the Sacramento and San Joaquin produce three-fourths of the asparagus canned anywhere in the world. Prosperity is written so broad across the forehead of that territory that it is equally discernable on the ground and a thousand feet in the air.

It was with infinite regret that I felt the Avion hovering over Concord and knew that the reel was exhausted. I would have liked to fly on over Oakland and San Francisco and out above the high seas beyond.

How short the duration of the trip had been, and yet how much to see! We had left Hollywood at 10 o'clock in the morning and it was not yet 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. We had stopped a half hour at Bakersfield and another half hour at Stockton.

AN ANT AGAIN.

Back on the ground again I felt dwarfed and humbled. I had ceased to be a god and felt my insignificance. I was only an ant, following the trail of the human insects to the great ant hill that we call San Francisco.

Far above us floated a white-winged gull with the salt air of the sea still moistening his wings. Perhaps he had crossed the ridge from Suisun Bay to get a nearer view of the giant bird he had seen flying from the south and settling down in the barley fields.

A mail agent came out from the station to get the sacks destined for San Francisco. The Avion distributes mail along the route. It gives the first aerial service that has been established in the West. Mail marked "via air route" can be dropped into a box in Los Angeles at 8 o'clock in the morning and be delivered at the San Francisco postoffice at 5 o'clock that afternoon.

What had impressed me most on the route? A bean field, viewed from a height of 4000 feet. There is nothing wonderful about the color of such a field viewed from the ground. Little of the artistic appears in the dry green of the plants and the brown of the earth. But, when one rises 4000 feet in the air the green and brown are blended by the retina of the eye into a single color, into a shade that has never yet come from the palette of an artist. And with the green and brown are blended the gold halo of the sunlight.

New and strange shades and contours will appear on many a canvas when a new school of artists study their colors from the air.

And it is to California that the artists and the tourists seeking new scenes and sensation must come to study nature from the air. Such a service as the Avion gives could not be established in the East, where thunderstorms and cyclones are certain to mar the flight. In California the air is navigable more than 300 days in the year.

It is here that the element of safety is greatest. Seeing California in summer from an airplane makes touring Europe seem tawdry, uninteresting and commonplace.

YOSEMITE BOOK OUT.

Government Publication Gives Much Information for Tourists.

Harry G. Stevens, general passenger agent of the Yosemite National Park Company, 517 South Spring street, has received 2500 copies of the Department of the Interior's 1920 edition of the Yosemite information booklet for distribution to the public. This edition of the government's publication contains a complete story of Yosemite, embodying a wealth of material valuable to motorists, tourists and vacationists.

Mr. Stevens reports unusually heavy traffic into the Yosemite National Park Company's resorts, with numerous reservations for the High Sierra resorts at Merced Lake, Tenaya Lake and Tuolumne Springs, which will be open in the near future. Reports from Yosemite Lodge indicate that the Tioga road, the thoroughfare between the park and Tahoe resorts, will probably be open by mid-July.

PLAY BALL FOR CHARITY.

Los Angeles and Vernon Teams Plan a Benefit for Needy Children of City.

Thousands of homeless, needy children will be the beneficiaries during the next year of money to be raised on July 19 at the baseball game between the Los Angeles and Vernon, Pacific Coast League teams, at Washington Park.

The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Bureau of Catholic Charities, directed by Rev. W. E. Corr, and the mark set by the committees in charge is $25,000.

The program will include in addition to the baseball game, a number of other features, one of which will be a scene from the Mission Play, given under direction of John S. McGroarty, in which 100 of the Indians and characters in his noted California classic will appear.

There will be many celebrities, cinema stars, boxers, wrestlers, men in public life and others who will do stunts for the benefit of the children. All these will donate their services.

"In the last few years there have been many drives and many contributions solicited for various worthy purposes," said Rev. W. E. corr last night, "but in this case we want to give everybody their money's worth—the best dollar's value in entertainment they ever got. Of course, this is possible only through the generosity of those giving their services, but we are assured of an excellent program by many who have volunteered their aid.

"Mr. Powers of the Los Angeles Baseball Club and Mr. Maier of the Vernon team have promised us with the entire receipts of the baseball game of that day and the players have donated their services, as it is an off-day in the schedule.

"The money will be used in caring for the many homeless and needy children in Los Angeles. We have been able to accomplish wonderful results from the funds secured from a similar game last year. The money enabled us to make a success of a great work which is to be continued in the years to come."

It is expected that Washington Park will be filled to overflowing for the game and other entertainment, as thousands of children from orphanages and homes, and inmates of other institutions will be taken to see it.

Although the entertainment is under Catholic management, children from other institutions—Protestant and Jewish—will be taken to the park to see the fun. Many private conveyances have been offered to carry them there. Refreshments will be served by persons who have already volunteered.

City officials and business men are to sponsor the affair, and many church and society women will be patronesses. Mayor Snyder will head a committee of citizens, who will aid, and Gov. Stephens will be invited to attend and throw the first ball in the game.

An executive committee is in process of organization, and an entertainment committee will be selected at a meeting to be held Monday evening at Columbus Auditorium, where plans will be discussed and decided upon.

The executive work under the direction of Rev. W. E. Corr is being done at No. 825 Higgins Building, headquarters of the Bureau of Catholic Charities.

HUNTER KILLED BY OWN GUN.

Twenty-Year-Old Youth is Victim of Accidental Shooting.

The death of Charles A. Tidd of 437 South Rowan street was caused by accidentally shooting himself with his own gun, it was shown by a report made yesterday to Deputy Sheriff Blasdel by Constable Quiggle of Monrovia, who investigated the case with Deputies Cronin and Hotz. The shooting occurred between Horse Flat and Pine Flat in the preserve of Chester Breckenridge, who was held at first, but later released. The youths, both 20 years of age, had been to the hills on a hunting trip.

POMONA PROFESSOR GETS YALE DEGREE.

Yale University has just conferred the degree of doctor of philosophy on Prof. Arthur D. Bissell of Pomona College, who has been spending his sabbatical year there. Prof. Bissell will return to Pomona in September to resume his work. He will present a course in the psychology of music. His thesis at Yale was "The Psychology of Anticipation in Music," a subject which has never been studied before and in which he has attained notable results.

TAX SAVING FOR VETERANS.

Those who have served the United States in time of war and who desire to avail themselves of the exemption from taxes up to $1000 of assessed valuation, allowed them by the State law, should file their claims with County Assessor Hopkins previous to July 6, according to a statement made yesterday by Mr. Hopkins. He said:

"Last year 5600 veterans and widows of the various wars made claim to the County Assessor for exemption as provided by law. This year, up to the present time, about 9000 have applied for exemption.

"The amount of valuation exempted last year was $3,566,170, and apparently it would be close to twice that amount in 1920. This does not mean that sum in taxes, but in assessed valuation.

"The law provides that anyone who has served in the United States Army, Navy or Marine Corps in time of war is entitled to an exemption on $1000 assessed valuation, provided that person is not worth to exceed $5000, and provided also that the exemption is claimed and an affidavit is filed with the Assessor during the assessment season of each year.

"Tuesday, July 6, the Assessor will turn his books over to the Board of Supervisors. After that time it will be absolutely impossible for a veteran to obtain an exemption for this year.

"This exemption applies only to residents of the State of California."

BEACH CARNIVAL FOR FOURTH CELEBRATION.

VENICE TO HAVE THREE DAYS FROLIC, FIREWORKS AND JAZZ ENTERTAINMENT.

In celebration of Independence Day, Venice will stage a three-day carnival, July 3, 4 and 5. Fun and fireworks each day will feature programs of which the grand climax will be the dynamiting of a balloon in midair Monday night, the 5th.

Clowns, yama-yama girls on trick burros, joker bands and most of the other sorts of fun-makers will all add to the good time. A surprise gift shower from a number of balloons, to follow a day fireworks display Monday afternoon, is another of the features now being arranged for.

Special programs will be offered at the dance pavilion, every day and night during the carnival time. Souvenir gifts, special prizes and new dance music will fire the light-footed. The plunge and all the amusement concessions are preparing to handle an immense crowd.

HE LIKED THEM ALL.

Wife Names Several Co-respondents and is Given Divorce.

After testimony was introduced yesterday in Judge Taft's court to the effect that several co-respondents figured in the life of Harry F Hull, the court granted Mrs. Clara A. Hull a divorce, adding that the husband would have to pay $50 a month alimony. The court suggested to Mrs. Hull's attorney, that every effort be made to locate the husband to get service on him and bring him before the court, and to make him pay the alimony.

According to the complaint of the wife, Mr. Hull stayed at Long Beach, Sawtelle and Santa Barbara with the various co-respondents. Mrs Aggie Riggs and a woman known only as "Hattie" were mentioned as co-respondents.

MESERVE QUITS SENATE RACE.

Everything points to the election of Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge. The Republican party should and must have a strong working majority in both Houses of Congress of 'true and tried' Republicans, who believe in and stand for all that 'Americanism' symbolizes. California, almost above every other State, should have none but true Republicans representing her in the United States Senate. The State is so large and its interests so diversified, as a matter of right, one of these should come from the southern half of the State.

Firmly convinced that if Mr. Wallace, Mr. Shortridge, Mr. Kent and I, all formally enter the race for the Republican nomination, it will mean the nomination of Mr. Kent and the consequent re-election of Senator Phelan, I, as a California Republican, for these reasons which may concern the public, and others with which the public is not concerned, deem it [illegible] further in seeking [illegible] nomination for United [illegible] tor from California.

CHRIST PLAY STAGE SET.

New Testament Drama to Have Its First Public Performance Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow night the hopes and plans of hundreds of people of all sects and churches, people from all parts of the United States who have worked earnestly for many months, will be realized when the first public production of the "National Pilgrimage Play" will be given in the natural amphitheater in El Camino Real Canyon, situated at the Los Angeles end of Cahuenga Pass out in the Hollywood hills.

The "National Pilgrimage Play," unlike the famous "Passion Play" of Oberammergau, will not be confined to the last week of Christ's life on earth, but will begin with prophesies of His coming and Herod's fear, and then, following faithfully the story of the Gospels, will continue the chronicle through the resurrection and ascension.

The immense natural theater in El Camino Real Canyon, which is accessible to all by electric cars or by motor, has a seating capacity of 1000. More could have been provided, but the venture is to awaken interest in the Gospel and not for money-making purposes. Beginning tomorrow night the play will be given every night for ten weeks.

For many weeks persons passing near the mouth of the canyon, where an entrance way has been erected in exact duplication of the old gates of Jerusalem, have wondered at the number of people going busily in and out of the protected inclosure. Had they been permitted to look into its recesses they would have observed men and women at work with carpenter tools, shovels and pickaxes; had they been thereabouts at 4 o'clock each afternoon they would have seen the majority of the workers halt and rest while others of their number, still clad in overalls and jumpers, rehearsed their parts in a play which many hope will outshine the greatest efforts of those wonderful men and women who made possible the beautiful spiritual Oberammergau productions.

EVERY WORD FROM BIBLE.

The "National Pilgrimage Play" contains the story of Christ's entire life and every word He spoke on earth as described in the Bible. The four Gospels of the New Testament have been so transcribed that the words of the greatest spiritual figure that has appeared on earth in all the ages are given literally and without alternation, substitution or the introduction of a single word. The transcription of the Scriptures was made by Mrs. W. Yorke Stevenson, who was assisted by Sheldon Cheney, Brander Matthews, Prof. Baker of Harvard, and Clayton Hamilton. The first production will be under the direction of Mrs. Stevenson and H. Ellis Reed, who was such a favorite in his leading role in "The Light of Asia," presented some time ago.

The committee in charge of the presentation is composed of Rt. Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, Episcopal bishop of Pennsylvania; Rev. Dr. Edward Yates Hill, pastor of the Mother Church of Presbyterianism in America; George Arliss, president of the Actors' Church Alliance; Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal bishop of Los Angeles; Miss Violet Oakley, mural decorator; Clayton Hamilton, author and dramatic critic; Edward W. Bok, until recently editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, and Mmes. Charlemagne Tower, W. Yorke Stevenson and Otis Skinner. The wife of the later is the treasurer.

FOUR MAIN DIVERSIONS.

The play consists of fourteen scenes, divided into a prologue, two acts and an epilogue. In the prologue the players will picture the prophecy of Christ's coming, Herod's fear and proclamation, the angel-heralded nativity and the coming of the wise men. The first act will present the story of the baptism of Christ by John the Baptist, His temptations and teachings, the transfiguration, miracles and episodes in His life, including those of Lazarus and Mary Magdalene. In the second act, the play will show the entrance into Jerusalem, the last supper, Gethsemane and the trial by Pilate. The epilogue will tell the story of the death of Christ, the resurrection and the ascension.

The peculiar topography of the canyon, constructed so that twenty remarkably nature-like stages have been built, make possible many soul-stirring, beautiful illusions. The stages are so constructed that all will be invisible to the audience except the one on which the illumination is directed. Far up the hillside, 300 feet from the audience, a large pipe organ has been installed. Near by is concealed the choir section and space for an orchestra of seventy-five pieces.

Many actors and actresses of note are to be found among the 200 people who appear in the play, but there will be no stars, for it is the desire to have the play the feature, and not the men and women who appear in it.

WILSHIRE WILL CASE RETRIAL IN OCTOBER.

The second trial of the contest to the will of the late Susan Emerson Wilshire, who left an estate of $800,000, will be held on October 13, it was decided yesterday by Presiding Judge Jackson. Judge Houser will hear the retrial. The probate of the will is being contested by Gaylord Wilshire, a stepson, who claims that the deceased was mentally incompetent when she left the bulk of her estate to the Y.M.C.A. to be used for soldiers and sailors. The jury failed to agree in the first trial.

ASK FOR DISSOLUTION.

Stating that on June 3 the directors of the Banning Company decided to dissolve the company, a petition seeking a voluntary dissolution was filed yesterday in the Superior Court. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher appeared as attorneys for the company, all obligations of which have been paid. William Banning, J. B. Banning, David P. Banning, James A. Gibson and James A. Gibson, Jr., are directors of the company.

Delightful Hair Wash

You can enjoy a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist's a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair until both are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing the hair dries quickly with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—[Advertisement.

Great achievements-
Firm foundations

A great engineering achievement and a successful manufacturing enterprise have one fundamental in common—a solid foundation.

As an engineering feat, Chicago's new bascule bridge is the greatest of its kind. Standing open, its two massive sections reach into the sky like the blades of a giant jack-knife. Closed, it is the main artery of communication between two sections of a vast city.

To carry the tremendous weight of these immense "blades" with their countless tons of steel girders requires a firm foundation—reaching into the very vitals of the earth itself.

As this great bridge typifies solidly founded engineering accomplishment, so does the realm of industry afford two outstanding examples—the houses which manufacture and distribute O and G Inner-Locked Belts.

The principles upon which O and G Inner-Locked Belts are built are deep rooted, basic, founded upon years of practical experience in oil country conditions, on years of boring deep into the fundamental science and knowledge of belt making.

Among the daily needs of mankind, oil and its by-products are paramount; without them, no machine could run; without them man would remain primitive, for nearly everything that man eats, wears or uses in his daily work at some stage in its manufacture or distribution depends upon oil.

As the bascule type excels the old drawbridge in eliminating water-way obstruction and speeding-up traffic, so do O and G Inner-Locked Belts excel all other types in eliminating obstruction to a dependable flow of power in drilling, pumping and compressor service. They establish at once minimum overhead, a marked discounting of troublesome stretching, slipping, "come and go"—a guarantee of maximum production.

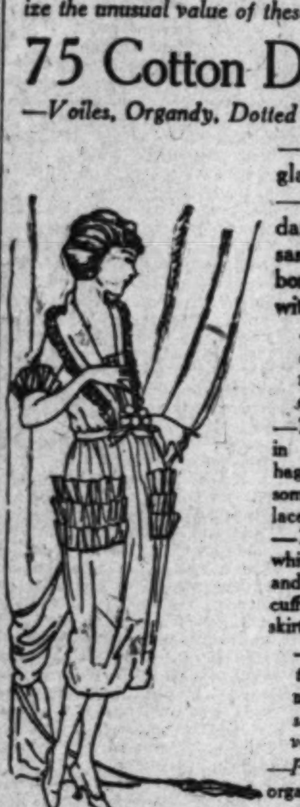
A woman does not need to be an experienced buyer to realize the unusual value of these

75 Cotton Dresses $23.75

—Voiles, Organdy, Dotted Swiss, Gingham—



—Truly, any woman should be glad to possess one of them.

—Practical, too, are they — the dark colored voiles with wide sashes, their little trimmings of ribbon; perhaps with vest of white; with plaited frills of white.

—White Voiles with big black or colored embroidered dots—wide plaited frills of plain white organdy.

—The frilled Organdy Dresses come in pink, orchid, maize, Copenhagen, Nile green, coral and blue; some have wide inset bands of filet lace, dyed the shade of the organdy.

—The Dotted Swiss Dresses are in white, blue-and-white, rose-and-white and orchid-and-white; large collars, cuffs and sashes and bands about the skirts are of plain-color organdy.

—Plaid Voile Dresses come in tan-and-white white-and-blue; white-and-orchid; wide satin sashes; side panels of tucked voile.

—Plaid Gingham Dresses have white organdy vests and narrow white organdy ruffles; skirts have tunics.

—At Bullock's—Monday—Third Floor. Women's Garment Section.

A high dive into the midst of Monday shopping activities!

75 Bathing Suits $3.95

—The kind of suits that like to ride the breakers and really swim. Sea-going bathing suits. Still wondering however such a low price was given them!

—They are made of wool and cotton mixtures. V-necks — small winged sleeves. A wide assortment of color combinations with contrasting colored bands at neck and bottom of suit.

—Bullock's purchased them specially for this little value event. 75 of them. Establishing a very high level of quality at $3.95 each. Monday—at Bullock's—Fourth Floor.

48 Fiber Sweaters $15

will have the jolliest time making you wonder how they ever came to be available at such a price Monday.

—Yes! They are going to have a little sale all their own, because Bullock's purchased them specially, and they are pretty.

—Sports and beach wear are their most fitting uses. They have the voguish Tuxedo collars and fringed sashes.

—Woven in an interesting checked effect of a fine fiber mixture.

—An inclusive range of colors.

—Just 48 of them—if there were more Bullock's would be glad to have them at such an attractive price as $15.00—they should not linger long—Monday—at Bullock's—Fourth Floor.

—Even as though they knew of this beautiful, big sincere new Shoe Section that has opened at Bullock's—Even as though they were determined to be that possibly could be —for purposes of introduction by way of giving women extraordinary cause to come to Bullock's Monday to buy good shoes—and how women should come!

—For such shoes as these at $6.95 fall little short of being sensational—

Look!—Four styles have been pictured!

—No. 1 a black gunmetal oxford with heavy, welt sole and leather military heel. Widths AAA to C. Sizes 4 to 8.

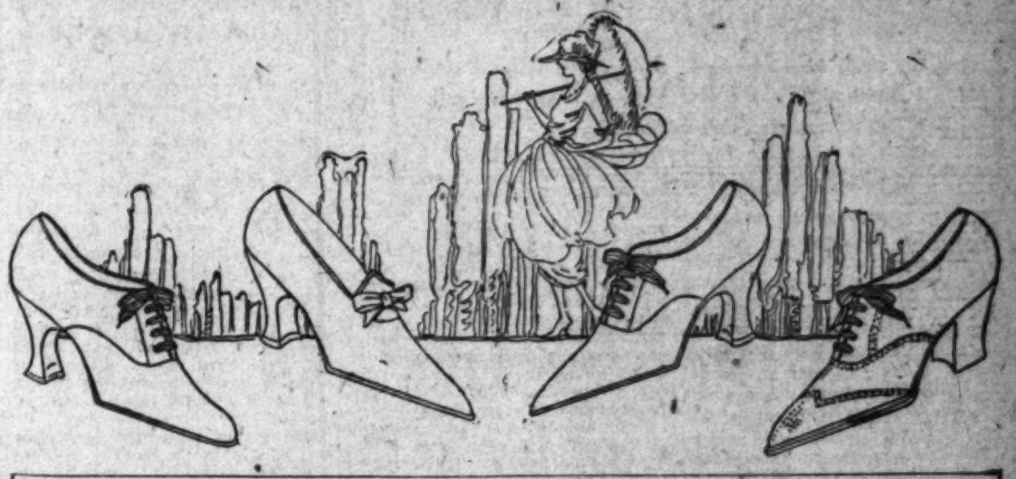
—No. 2 a calfskin welt-sole oxford in tan; leather Louis heel; widths AAA to C; sizes 4 to 8.

—No. 3 black kid, welt sole oxford, with leather Louis heel and short vamp; medium round toe; widths B to E; sizes 3 to 8.

—No. 4 a patent leather one-eyelet tie; leather Louis heel; widths AA to C; sizes 3 to 8.

—And, listen, there are other styles, in either black kid or white Reignskin, included.

—Women should welcome this opportunity to provide new shoes at prices which—but let the shoes speak for themselves on Monday—In Bullock's new Home of Shoes for Women—4th Floor.



2000 Yards Berkeley Cambric (No. 60) 45c Yard

—Bullock's—Monday—Third Floor Bridgeway.

100 White Wash Skirts

—Come to surprise the Miss and Woman of Slight and Slender figure by consenting to

A Feature Price of $3.95

—Six smart styles—in gabardine, linene — and even cotton Tricotine—All white and trim for vacation wear.

—Waist measures are 24, 25, 26 and 27—lengths 34, 35 and 36 inches.

—Ideal for seaside wear—and even business. Easily laundered, coming forth crisp and ready for summer time occasions.

—They are proud of fancy pockets and belts. Also trimmings of self material and neat button touches. But they are particularly commendable for their sterling worth and summer practicability.

—The miss and woman who wears a size 14, 16 or 18 should find economy and style satisfaction in a combination of one of these skirts with one of those splendid Wool Jersey Coats at $12.50—at Bullock's.

—Monday—in the section for the Miss and Woman of Slight and Slender figure—at Bullock's—Third Floor—to the left from the elevators.

—Among the greatest values in Fine Dress Cottons Los Angeles has known—

French Cottons, from Rodier, $1.95 Yd.

—One need not believe it unless one wills—it is permissible that one be incredulous, particularly when one knows for how much more these Dress Cottons sell regularly in stocks that are favored by possessing them—but if one wants a charming new Summer Frock of fascinating personality — nothing will keep one from Bullock's Monday—

But 1000 yards—including lovely Rodier Spiral Crepe; Ratine striped Voiles; French embroidered Organdies; French Cotton Crepes; French striped Chiffon Voiles—38 and 40 inches wide—Rodier cottons that are scarce—that look like hand woven—hand-blocked cottons—that have that sought for non-machine made air—that air exclusive—Beautiful patterns —permanent colorings—

—Why Rodier is only now reassembling his weavers after the disruption of war—His all but human looms are just beginning to whirr—yet Bullock's makes this well-nigh matchless offering—the like of which there has been nothing at least for months. $1.95 yard—At Bullock's—Second floor—

Lisle Vests 50c and 65c

—The comfortable "flat" weave that many prefer; low-neck, sleeveless style; regulation (built-up shoulders) and bodice style tops, some finished with the plain French band, some with beading; in white and in flesh color.

—Regular sizes at 50c.

—Extra sizes at 65c.

1200 Women's Lisle Union Suits, 85c

—Bodice tops with tight knees; white only; sizes 34 to 44.

360 "Nushape" Union Suits $1.25 and $1.50

—Perfectly fitting union-suits; low neck; sleeveless; regular sizes at $1.25; extra sizes at $1.50.

Heavy Weight Glove Silk Vests at $4.95

—Hold them up and look through the weave of the silk—see how even and free from "thin" places it is! Regulation and bodice styles of tops; white and flesh color; sizes 36 to 42.

THE TURGID STREAM OF YOUTH.

In This Story Miss Roseboro' Displays a Wise Tolerance, a Pleasing Humor and a Subtlety That is Entirely Free from Sentimentality.

STORMS OF YOUTH. By Viola Roseboro'. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

It is considerably over a decade since Viola Roseboro' wrote "The Joyous Heart." Since that time short stories of a distinction that only the few and fit can produce have come from her pen. During these years most of Miss Roseboro's energy has been devoted to editorial and critical work. Now comes this new novel, a book that will be read with special interest by what may be called the inner circle of the fiction-reading public. The followers of Harold Bell Wright, Ethel Dell, Zane Grey and others of the best sellers will have little interest in such fiction as Miss Roseboro' produces. Such subtlety and artistry as are hers does not make for amazing popularity.

The story deals with the turgid drama of youth, with the matings and mismatings, the plottings and plannings, the hopes and ambitions that make the path of youth skirt the edge of tragedy or pass through its shades.

Miss Roseboro' uses for the background of her story the old situation of a small town misgoverned by a ring of grafters and of its redemption through the efforts of the ardent young newspaper owner who endures misunderstanding and misrepresentation, threats and deadly peril for the sake of principle. It is a view of life that has a strong appeal, though perhaps not as strong now as when Booth Tarkington wrote "The Gentleman from Indiana." The readiness to sacrifice ease and comfort and even good repute for the sake of the ideal makes a hero one worthy of the name, and scoff as we will we all prefer that our heroes be a little above the common run. Even though Miss Roseboro' is too sophisticated a writer to allow herself to overpraise Perry, speaking of him as one not too highly gifted, he develops without her aid into a very satisfactory hero, to whom we gladly capitulate.

In Lura Anderson, whose "loveliness was of a dark, melancholy mystic kind, and always her soft black eyes pleaded with you not to hurt her," Miss Roseboro' has created a character the counterpart of which is not found in all literature. This rarely beautiful but woefully narrow-visioned creature takes Perry's love for granted—all young men fell in love with her when given half a chance—and finds all life turned to tragedy because of her mistake. If the way in which she rose to the occasion when Perry's enemies tried to down him through attacking her reputation is unreal it is told with restraint enough to make it seem quite credible.

The flavor of the book is revealed in such passages as this, wherein Judge Grantley is discussing the town boss with his sister, Aunt Mag:

"Don't talk so loud, Johnny. That new man——"

"That fellow trimming grass——"

"He'll be under the window in a minute."

But the Judge's incisive speech was cutting through hers:

"You mean I've got to whisper in my home?"

"He's from the Third Ward and you know those people have got so contrary since they've been selling their votes. I've got to get on with him when you're away."

"Can I say I wish Perry had a chance to stay at home?" the Judge demanded, saving his dignity by volume of voice, despite the discretion of his diction.

Penetration combined with subtlety, sympathy free from sentimentality, a wise tolerance and a pleasing humor give the book a character that makes it stand out as one among many.

LATEST FICTION.

MARY MARIE. By Eleanor H. Porter. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

A book that the average girl of 14 or 15 will pronounce charming is this, the last book of Mrs. Porter, published shortly before her death. It is interesting on occasion for an adult of highbrow inclinations to read one of Mrs. Porter's tales with the purpose of trying to determine just wherein lies her charm for "the younger set"—younger in this instance applying to those of mature years, but callow taste as well as to la jeune fille.

She had the ability, none too common, to hold the interest, to weave a glamorous rainbow web around life through which everything is seen as through a romantic mist. Life with Mrs. Porter's heroines is not as it is lived on this mundane plane, but is one where sentiment, not untouched from hysteria, rules the world.

So the joys and sorrows of Mary Marie are unfolded, and we read with tolerant amusement or bated breath, each according to his lights, of the young girl with two natures, one the demure and well-poised Mary who never romps or disobeys, the other the elfish and carefree Marie who must have joy and life and light. The story is told in the first person by the heroine, a method which admits of wide latitude in such unimportant matters as style and form.

That the effect of the book would have been greatly enhanced had the story ended with the reuniting of Mary Marie's father and mother through her efforts, instead of dragging in her own marital discords, will be the opinion of more than one reader.

THE GORGEOUS GIRL. By Nalbro Bartley. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

A novel in which the facts of life are sufficiently emphasized to make them interesting even to the casual reader is "The Gorgeous Girl." Included in the list of characters are the spoiled darling of fortune, whose father spent his life in heaping up riches to the end that his daughter might outshine all others; the unfortunate young business man who married this gorgeous girl, his altogether perfect secretary whose name of Mary Thankful only partly characterizes her; a half-hearted red-headed girl villain who apes the gorgeous girl and betrays her best friend, and a cad who lives up to his part throughout.

With such an array the story progresses entertainingly to its close, when everybody is happy, those who failed to achieve their heart's desire having been mercifully removed to another sphere of action.

If the author is a little hard on the ultra-rich, and if she is a little too fond of her Mary, who is not half so nearly perfect as she is painted, those who like a story depicted in high colors will find no fault with this one. Though lacking in subtlety it makes very acceptable reading of the lighter variety.

THE GIRL ON THE HILLTOP. By Kenyon Gambier. George H. Doran Company, New York.

This is a story of a young Englishman, Roger Lingard, who, after much wandering, returns to his ancestral home in England to look up his inheritance. He is somewhat abashed to find that by claiming his property he will dispossess two charming kinswomen, Dorothy Lingard, who is now mistress of the manor, and Miss Charity Turle, a very pretty young lady who is living with her.

As he is a naturally good-natured chap, he decides to adopt a nom de guerre and settle down in the village until he is able to determine just what course to pursue. He then meets Mary Elliot, the girl on the hilltop. Mary is lovely, fashionably gowned, living in a high state of luxury, though the country is in the grip of the greatest of wars. He naturally comes to the conclusion that she is all that she should not be. In this error he differs little from most men in estimating the qualities of the fair sex.

His conclusion lands him in a "peck of trouble." Roger's situation is a rather unique one. He faces three heroines. That this causes him much uneasiness goes without saying. But, though his problem is a mixed one, chance, or fate, or whatever it is that watches over lovers, steps in and the riddle is finally solved.

There is plenty of action in this story. The characterization is fair. It is pleasingly told and is just the book for holiday season reading.

BRITISH AERIAL PROGRESS.

BRITISH AIRSHIPS: PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. By George Whale. John Lane Co., New York.

A volume treating of the whole field of aerial navigation in England, from their earliest development up to the present, including the plans for the future. The work of the airship in the World War is clearly and concisely told, but it is the last chapter in the book in which the commercial possibilities of airships are outlined that will appeal to the public in general.

BOOK OF VERSE BY LOCAL POET.

Moon Kwan Issues a Chaplet of Very Charming Verse.

A PAGODA OF JEWELS. By Moon Kwan. Joseph A. Eliason, Los Angeles. Decorations by Howard Willard.

This neat little booklet, containing twelve poems and five bits of nonsense, or "Chinese Junk," as the author calls them, is unique in that the poems have a rhythm all their own. They mirror nature in many moods, they cast a warmth and glow over that most sacred of human possessions, friendship, and, above all, they give us a glimpse of America as seen through the eyes of a poet of distinct oriental cast of thought.

One bit of verse that gives an idea of the poet's thought as here expressed, entitled "Incense to You," is as follows:

"Pure is the fragrant incense
And the flower-like soul of you,
Divine is its drifting beauty
And the delicate form of you."

Another of the bits of verse in the nonsense column is from the musing of Loo Koo-Noodle Poet:

"Me wantta be maker of poma.
But them say me 'Nobody Home.'
Alas! Alas! What can 'e do
Poor Noodle poet Loo Koo!"

There are also a brief sketch entitled "A Tale of the Eclipse" and a one-act play entitled "The Turtle and the Lily."

Moon Kwan is a resident of Los Angeles. He has done local newspaper work and has contributed articles, poems and stories to a number of national magazines. He left Los Angeles recently for China, accompanying Witter Bynner and a number of other prominent educators and literary men for a trip through the Chinese republic.

EXPERIENCES IN SIBERIA.

WITH THE DIE-HARDS IN SIBERIA. By Col. John Ward. George H. Doran, New York.

It may not be possible at this time to see the Russian situation and see it whole. Col. Ward does not attempt to do so. But he gives us a clear and startling picture of the situation as he saw it with the Die-Hard Battalion in Siberia. He draws for us sketches of the American, British, French and Japanese operations in Russia, with their inevitable tangle of policies and difficulties of action, the dictatorship of Admiral Kolchak at Omsk, the activities of Lenine and Trotzky and the Red menace. He gives us an admirable and enlightening impression of the temper of the Russian people and their attitude toward their one-time allies.

Col. Ward writes a straightforward narrative, informed with a keen sense of the meaning of the incidents related and an unfailing appreciation, not only of the importance, but of the picturesque values of the scenes through which he moved. "With the Die-Hards in Siberia" is one of those books which become a permanent part of the war record.

SOCIOLOGY MADE CLEAR.

PRINCIPLES OF SOCIOLOGY. By Edward Alsworth Ross. The Century Company, New York.

One of the outstanding facts stressed in this monumental volume is that the productive capacity of our race is four times what is now necessary to keep up numbers of the most advanced societies and three times what is needed to insure such an increase of population as is safe.

The book is a general introduction to the study of sociology. Recognized by all as being one of the leading sociologists of the country, Dr. Ross is also looked upon as having the ability possessed by few writers to present a subject in a clear, clean-cut, interesting manner. For seventeen years he has been collecting material for this book. The actual writing of it has taken perhaps three years and a half and in its preparation he studied at first hand conditions in China, South America and Russia, as well as in the United States. This volume is perhaps his most serious effort. It is a notable addition to the literature of the field.

In its fifty-seven chapters, "Principles of Sociology" sweeps an immense field in a practical, definite way. It is not academic. The word "sociology" scarcely appears and one looks in vain for definitions. There are no tiresome discussions of the scope of sociology, its relation to other sciences, its methods and aims. Not a word appears regarding the history and development of the subject. The book is sociology because it is about society and to the author society means relations among folks.

And so, from the first page, Dr. Ross deals with actual conditions and problems. There are no speculations, controversies or tirades. There is even no introduction, no getting ready to begin. Instead of discussing sociology as a subject, the first chapter shows how the temper of the community is affected by the varying proportion of men and women, young and old, married and single. Throughout the book it is all analysis, reasoning and illustration. Dr. Ross is in no sense "up in the air," for his positions are illuminated and justified by a large number of instances drawn from years of reading of history and from wide observation. His feet are on the ground of reality all the time. In his hands, sociology comes nearer than ever before to being an exact science.

His system does not revolve about a few formulas or key ideas. Many social situations are simple, but society as a whole is not simple. He identifies and describes thirty-odd distinct processes, and, if a count is taken of the minor ones, there are at least twice as many.

"IF SHAKESPEARE CAME TO MOVIELAND?" ASKS CRITIC.

BY CLAYTON HAMILTON.

[Distinguished dramatic critic ruminates on what the immortal Bard of Avon would think were he to revisit the earth once more and suddenly come face to face with the youngest daughter of the drama, the movies.—Editor.]

Henry Arthur Jones has somewhere celebrated "the crowded and varied bustle of Shapespeare, the busy hum that comes from his universal workshop, the drums and tramplings of his hundred legions, the long resounding march of assembled humanity as it troops across his boards;" and several phrases of this well-remembered sentence leaped into my mind when I was first conducted round the lot of the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City.

Despite my long association with the theater, I had never visited a motion-picture plant before; and at first I was a little bewildered by "the crowded and varied bustle" and "the busy hum of the enormous workshop." The whole thing was as new to me as it would be to Shakespeare, if he should revisit the glimpses of the sun and should decide, like Maurice Maeterlinck, to come out to Culver City and study the making of moving pictures.

I found myself wondering what Shakespeare would think of the youngest daughter of the drama; and, as I was shown around the lot, I tried to imagine the Elizabethan playwright as another member of the party. In the first place, although I believe that authorship for motion pictures is still in its infancy, I am convinced that Shakespeare, if he were alive today, would write more easily and readily for the "movies" than for our modern speaking stage. The modern drama is tightly compacted into not more than three or four pigeonholes of time and place; but the motion-picture story moves with greater freedom and amplitude of narrative. Technically, the motion picture more nearly resembles the Elizabethan drama than it resembles the drama of today. Except in the possible instance of "Othello," Shakespeare never consciously constructed a play in acts. The five-act division of his dramas was visited upon him by his eighteenth-century editors. Instead, he constructed his stories in an uncounted sequence of scenes. He handled the categories of place and time with the utmost freedom, and changed his scene whenever he wanted to change it. This is precisely what is done in motion pictures. Shakespeare would have to study Ibsen and learn a new technique before he could write successfully for the modern speaking stage, but his own technique as a narrative artist would fit him, without further practice, to write scenarios for motion pictures. His many brief battle scenes, for instance, which are introduced by such directions as "Alarums and excursions: another part of the field," read almost precisely like excerpts from a script prepared meticulously for the screen.

In one way, however, the motion picture more nearly resembles the modern drama than it resembles the Elizabethan drama. This is its punctilious regard for the element of settings. Shakespeare changed his scene easily because, in fact, he had no scene to change, but though a motion picture may be constructed in an uncouth sequence of from 250 to 300 scenes, each of these scenes is set just as carefully as an act in a modern play. Much more carefully, I should have said; for this is the one department in which the motion picture is immeasurably superior to the theater. The theater in handling the category of place can only imitate or suggest, but the motion picture can reproduce the actual.

It was not until the fourth decade of the nineteenth century that the element of setting in the drama began to be considered commensurably important with the elements of action and character; but there are many indications that Shakespeare keenly felt the importance of this element three centuries ago. His stage was bare, and more than half his scenes might happen anywhere, at any time, but his biggest and most dramatic scenes are precisely localized in place and time, and he must often have felt the need of a medium better equipped than the Elizabethan theater for representing what, in the motion-picture world, are called "locations." His method, of course, was to describe in words the places which he wished his auditors to imagine that they saw, and to this technical necessity we owe the composition of some of the most eloquent descriptive passages in English literature; but I can imagine how joyously his mind would play with the vast equipment offered by a motion-picture plant for the accurate representation of any sort of place at any sort of time. He was possessed of an enormous visual imagination which, because of the limitations of his theater, was necessarily translated into auditory terms; but, if he could command the resources of a modern motion-picture plant, he would find no difficulty in giving us something worth looking at.

I wondered a little if Shakespeare, returned to earth in 1920, would refuse to write for the "movies" because he would be required to sacrifice the music of the spoken word; and then I reflected that the practice of the modern drama would require from him a similar sacrifice. Our contemporary spoken drama, for the most part, is no longer written in verse, nor even in prose; it is written, instead, in conversation, and every effort is made to prevent the conversation from sounding literary.

The plays of George M. Cohan, excellent as they are, belong no more to literature, in any auditory sense, than the silent drama of the screen; and if Shakespeare still retained a hankering for literature, he could always write his sonnets on the side.

Shakespeare, besides being a playwright and a poet, was also an actor, and I wondered what he would think of acting for the screen. It is curiously different from acting in a theater and the difference is that the moving-picture actor has no audience. He rehearses and rehearses, until the last and presumably the best of his rehearsals is photographed; and then his work is done. There is nobody to see him except the camera; and there is nobody to applaud him. He misses the thrilling and human contact with a public that is personally present and can be seen and heard. But, on the other hand, he reaches ultimately on the screen a larger and more lasting public than can ever be appealed to by an actor on the speaking stage. His own peculiar way of smiling may be shown to millions of people in many, many countries all around the rolling world; and this same way of smiling may be shown undimmed upon the screen a hundred years from now, long after the actor himself is dead and buried and his grinning skull is as chop fallen as that of Yorick. It used to be lamented that the art of the actor died with him and left behind no memory less fleeting than smoke in the air or foam from the sea; but the motion picture has at least done this for the actor, it has furnished a medium for recording and passing down to future generations the visual aspects of his art. And, as for his voice, we now have the phonograph. What would we not give today for a motion picture of Will Shakespeare in his habits as he lived, and for a phonographic record of his voice as he read the lines of the ghost in "Hamlet"?

BOOK NOTES.

Books on Ireland.

Ireland, always a burning question, is now a blazing one. To the understanding of this century-old bonfire that won't be put out by either machine guns or soft words from English politicians, B. W. Huebsch has three interesting contributions: "The Evolution of Sinn Fein," by Robert Mitchel Henry of Queen's University, Belfast, just ready; a new (fourth) edition of Francis Hackett's "Ireland," and a pamphlet by George Russell, Irish poet, journalist, patriot and a Protestant Ulsterman, entitled, "Sir Auckland Geddes's Handiwork," reprinted from the Freeman.

Economic Democracy.

After having learned to send Keynes's "Economic Consequences of the Peace" on orders calling for "that book on economics which everybody is reading," Harcourt, Brace & Howe are now getting used to having calls for "that book on economics which is being talked about, but which nobody understands." The second book has been reviewed as a work of art by Ezra Pound, who says the clarity of some of Maj. Douglas's statements in "Economic Democracy" should show the intelligent reader, and show him almost instantly, that "he has here to deal with a genius as valid in its own specialty as any we can point to in the arts."

Old English Furniture.

The Scribners announce the early publication of "Old English Furniture and Its Surroundings," 1660-1800, by MacIver Percival. Mr. Percival's volume covers four periods: the Restoration, the Later Stuarts, Early Georgian and Late Georgian. He has illustrated it profusely, both with examples of each period and reproductions of contemporary engravings, showing glimpses of interiors of the times.

Life in Petrograd.

"Intimate Letters from Petrograd" is announced for immediate publication by E. P. Dutton & Co. The work is by Pauline S. Crosley and is said to give a vivid description of what took place in Russia, and particularly in Petrograd, during those anxious days and months of the overthrow of the old regime, the waning power of the revolutionary government and its usurpation by the Bolshevists. The letters were written to her friends at home, with no thought of publication, by the wife of a temporary attache to our Embassy at Petrograd.

Russian-American Documents.

A volume which will throw a new light on the relations between the United States and Russia from 1917 to the present day will shortly be published by Harcourt, Brace & Howe. It is entitled "Russian-American Relations, March, 1917-March, 1920: Documents and Papers," and it has been compiled by C. K. Cumming and Walter W. Pettit, under the direction of John A. Ryan, D.D., J. Henry Scattergood and William Allen White. It will contain all the available documents, many hitherto unpublished, that bear on our relations with Russia during this crucial period.

Illustrations Speak.

One of the sixty-odd thousand daily visitors to the New York Public Library the other Sunday was an Italian who could speak very little English and yet wanted a book. He had a soiled slip of paper on which was written one word, which he kept repeating, "Puppazi, puppazi." The book which he carried off to the reading room was "The Book of Marionettes," by Helen Haiman Joseph, published by E. W. Huebsch. He pored over the volume all afternoon and confided when he returned it that he was a maker and manipulator of puppets and the manager of a puppet theater on the East Side. The book, he said in broken English, was "molto bene" and, although he could read only bits of it, told him much about the puppets of the past through its illustrations. He went off smiling to his humble shop on the East Side with some new wonders for his audiences, gained from the pictures of puppets made in Egypt ten centuries ago.

PERILS IN CHROMATIC COLORS.

THE RISING TIDE OF COLOR. By Lothrop Stoddard. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is an excellent book of the "Fee, Faw, Fum" order, the blood smelled being our own and the sniffers, so to speak, our yellow, brown, black and probably our red brethren. All these finding us guilty of a skin not colored like their own are preparing to exterminate us, seize our lands and live happy thereon ever after.

If we had not "forgotten the ties of blood and culture" and also failed to realize "the pressure of the colored race from without," we would have meekly and wisely submitted to continued aggression from certain of our "cultural white brethren" instead of entering into a civil war. Thus, we might have remained strong enough to prevent, or at least postpone, the imminent race cataclyam. "But this was not to be!"

All that now remains for the so decimated white race is "to stand fast and stand together." Like the celebrated Pat Moran, we must "do the best we can" in the way of self-protection.

On what basis, then, are we to unite? First, says Mr. Stoddard, "the wretched Versailles business will have to be thoroughly revised." We must also, by an act of faith, accept as fact the finely imaginative Weissman theory of the "race germ." Humanity will then appear the product of a divine handful of race germs, tossed upon the earth's surface. Of these the Nordic germ led all the rest. None of them can ever be appreciably altered. Thus, man is a static being and "The Nordic" is and must remain the one real, right thing in God's universe.

Secondly: We must postulate Latin America and Africa as "our outer dykes," outside of which all Asiatics must at any cost be kept.

Thirdly: We must speedily get ourselves out of Asia, which will as a whole become the prey of the yellow races. The brown races of India and Persia—which, by the way, are of our own Aryan stock—are to be abandoned to their fates. For the long period during which these are being forked into the yellow maw and digested by the yellow stomach we shall be left in peace.

Fourthly: The United States must bar out not only the Asiatics, but also the "inferior white races of Southern and Eastern Europe." The Alpines and the Mediterraneans, we are told, are effective only to the extent to which they have been Nordicised. The glory that was Greece, the grandeur that was Rome, as well as all that the more modern nations of the Mediterranean have contributed to human culture, are to be ignored and the United States become a Nordic preserve behind a wall of exclusiveness.

Whether these proposed measures would create and perpetuate such a feeling as must exist if all white races are to "stand fast and stand together," lest they perish, may be respectfully doubted.

The book is well written and will assuredly be widely read. It is in certain ways as enlightening as it is interesting.

NOBEL PRIZE TO BENAVENTE.

News has been received from Europe that Jacinto Benavente, the Spanish playwright, has been awarded the Nobel prize for literature. The Royal Spanish Academy was informed in advance with the request that it prepare a memorial for the occasion.

The winner of the prize is widely known in America through two volumes of his plays recently translated into English by John Garrett Underhill and published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Nance O'Neill has just finished a highly successful season in New York in "The Passion Flower" (La Malquerida) and she will produce another of his plays next year. In the meantime she will go to Spain this summer to meet Benavente and talk over the production of more of his plays.

American colleges have also already recognized the great Spaniard. His "Governor's Wife" was chosen by the Harvard Dramatic Club for their spring production and one of his plays was produced at Amherst. Before Miss O'Neill produced "The Passion Flower" New York saw "His Widow's Husband" acted by the Washington Square Players and "Bonds of Interest" by the Theater Guild.

Benavente is a remarkable combination of actor-playwright-manager-statesman—and several other things! He is a member of the Cortes, the Spanish Parliament, a noted actor and the new director of the National Theater, the Teatro Español, director of the National Conservatory of Acting, has written no less than eighty plays, produced three plays during the past season with three distinct companies and is a prominent figure in the motion-picture industry of Spain.

BEHIND THE VEIL.

NEITHER DEAD NOR SLEEPING. By May Wright Sewall. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

May Wright Sewall, well known all over America as a club organizer, lecturer and educator, has recently come even more fully into the limelight of public interest through her book, "Neither Dead nor Sleeping." During the past twenty-five years, while Mrs. Sewall was having a public career, both as the head of her school in Indianapolis and on the lecture platform, she was having remarkable psychic experiences, receiving daily communications from her husband, Theodore Sewall, from the famous master of music, Rubinstein, and from other well-known personages who have been nominally dead for many years. Mrs. Sewall went right on with her public life, telling no one of these unusual experiences, but keeping an accurate record of everything against the day when she would be "allowed" (by those from whom the messages came) to bring them to the attention of the world. This record is contained in "Neither Dead nor Sleeping," a most remarkable record of her own experiences and a still more remarkable story of the world beyond as it is seen through the eyes of those who use Mrs. Sewall's hand as an instrument to carry a message back to the people on earth. Sir Oliver Lodge, after reading the first half of the manuscript, said he considered it a very genuine addition to psychic science, and Booth Tarkington became so interested that he wrote an introduction to the book.

One of the most interesting and strongest points in favor of the book is that the author lives so intensely in the world of every day. Even though she admits that, to her, the most vital study in the world is that of the land which lies beyond the veil, she declares it is not the only study worth applying the human mind to.

THE GREEK VASE.

"DYNAMIC SYMMETRY: THE GREEK VASE." By Jay Hambridge. Yale University Press.

Mr. Hambridge has applied the calipers and the rule to the Greek vase, using the last as a collective term, and has found by a series of logarithmic spirals and what-not that therein is dynamic energy. In other words, he has found that the ancient Greek [illegible] the dynamic design from the bud to the flower and the flower to the fruit in his vase making. Or perhaps it would be better to let him speak for himself on his conclusions, all mathematically worked out:

"They (the Greeks) saw that nature was tending toward an ideal, that the principles at work underneath the surface of natural phenomena were perfect, but that material manifestations of the operation of these principles, as exemplified by animal and vegetable growth, owing to vicissitudes of circumstance and the length of time necessary for development, were seldom or never perfect. Realization of nature's ideal, however, and understanding of the significance of structural form enabled the Greek artist to anticipate nature, to attain the ideal toward which she is tending, but which she can never reach. The Greek artist was always striving in his creations, because he adopted nature's ideals. The modern conception of art leads toward an overstress of personality and loss of vigor."

NEW ROOSEVELT BOOK.

TALKS WITH T. R. From the Diaries of John J. Leary, Jr. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

Here is a book which will stand out from the field of Roosevelt literature for its vividness, freshness and authenticity. Mr. Leary is a veteran newspaper man. As editorial writer on the Boston Post, the New York Tribune and the World, he was thrown into intimate relations with Col. Roosevelt for many years. In 1917 the colonel wrote to Col. Van Deman of the military intelligence: "I have long known Mr. John J. Leary, Jr., well and intimately. I vouch for him absolutely. He is a man of exceptional intelligence and energy, of entire discretion, of excellent judgment; a dead game man, and absolutely straight, and a through and through American of the best type, in character and in single-minded loyalty. I would put him in any confidential position under me, if I were given command."

Walking Doll Tours Los Angeles.

Louise Glaum
And her famous little girl on a visit to The Times Building.

"CHILD" MYSTERY SOLVED.

Paris, New York, Chicago—and now—Los Angeles!

Such has been the triumphal itinerary of a mysterious little girl whose appearance by the side of Louise Glaum, the screen celebrity, occasionally since the star's return from New York, has occasioned considerable comment.

The secret was revealed, however, when, as Miss Glaum passed First and Broadway with her tiny charge, a Times photographer snapped the charming motion-picture actress with the kiddie. A moment later Miss Glaum had stepped into her limousine with the child and was on her way to the studio.

With all its ability to walk, dance, bow and curtsey the "babe," it was learned, is only a doll—though hardly an "inanimate" one, for this "walking doll" as Paris has named it, can do anything but talk, eat and —breathe.

Herman Patrick Tappe, the noted women's costume designer, brought it from Paris for Miss Glaum and gave it to the star as he disembarked from the Imperator about seven weeks since Fifth avenue was stirred for once when it first glimpsed the "baby;" then Michigan Boulevard in Chicago stared as Miss Glaum promenaded along the famous thoroughfare with the walking doll and her sister, Mrs Lee Albright on either side.

The "walking doll" of Miss Glaum is the only specimen of its kind in Los Angeles, though Miss Glaum stated that several of the dolls had made their appearance in New York since her departure.

Mr. T. H. Wise brought to this office about the largest hen egg we ever saw, and if the hen fruit sold by the pound, as it should, a dozen would surely bring something. It measured eight and one-half inches the long way and seven and three-fourths around, so you know it was some egg.

MARY PICKFORD TYPES WIN.

Los Angeles girls who think they are doubles for Mary Pickford have had a chance to capitalize their resemblance to the famous screen star in a contest at Solomon's Penny Dance. Each night at 10:30 o'clock Fred H. Solomon and a corps of judges have selected three girls who resemble the star as she appears in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and tomorrow evening the winner will be picked from among the eighteen girls participating.

Of Some Use After All.

The janitor of the Brazil Aerie of Eagles' clubrooms the other day sold Congressional Records that have accumulated in the lodge library. After the book bindings were torn off, the records weighed 626 pounds, and brought $7.35 as old paper. The books sold showed few, if any, finger marks.—[Indianapolis News.

WOMEN WILL BE WOMEN.

The editor of the Boonville Republican repeats this story told to him by Reid Stephens, a Warrensburg friend: "A St. Louis lady who spoke to a meeting of the League of Women Voters in Warrensburg, spent considerable time strolling about the speaker's stand and arranging books on a table on the rostrum before she began speaking. Mr. Stephens was quite exercised over failure of the lady to launch out promptly on the great question. After the meeting she explained: "You see, I was addresing an audience composed largely of women and I wanted them to understand every word. My introductory remarks are essential to the remainder of my address. And I know that women never hear the first part of a speech unless they have first had time to look over the woman speaker to see how she is dressed. Consequently I find I get my message across much more effectively if I first give them time to look long at me from every angle."—[Kansas City Star.

NITRATES FROM THE AIR.

When Thomas Edison was asked recently what he considered the greatest invention since the electric lights, he mentioned first wireless telegraphy and second the American process for making nitrogen from the air. Before the war we depended upon Germany for our supply of nitrogen, and especially for the fertilizers which made our farms so productive. The Germans had deposits which they only need dig out of the ground to sell at enormous prices. Today there are great plants in the south, where the air is put under pressure and frozen to a liquid form from which in turn the nitrogen is extracted. The supply is of coruse absolutely limitless. By harnessing water falls to these plants the work is done very cheaply.—[Boys' Life.

MAY PENSION ALL MOTHERS.

Radical Principle Indorsed at Ohio Meeting.

Welfare of Children is Main Object to be Sought.

Efforts of Private Charity so Far Are Inadequate.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The principle that a child deserves a good living and a good education whether its mother is married or not, and that it is the duty of the State to enable the mother to provide these things, received an impressive indorsement the other day, when the State conference on mother's pensions in Ohio passed a resolution favoring the extension of the mothers' pension law to mothers of illegitimate children.

This radical principle was not indorsed without heated discussion. A woman delegate asserted that the mother of an illegitimate child is an abandoned creature, who does not deserve the help of the State, and somewhat the same point of view was expressed by others; but the day was carried for the unmarried mothers by Judge Frank W. Geiger of Springfield.

"How about the babies?" he demanded. "The real purpose of the pension is to protect the children . . . The illegitimate child needs this protection as much, or very much more, than any other."

He went on to say that the mother, in such a case, also needs the help of the State, and that the State should grant it. This is a startlingly new principle in American law and social custom, but an old if somewhat neglected one in Christian ethics. Judge Geiger took the same attitude toward the unwed mother that Jesus Christ took toward a woman in somewhat similar circumstances.

Admittedly, however, it is not the humanitarian value of compassion for the woman, but the practical and economic value of justice for the child, which is back of the growing movement for the granting of pensions to mothers. Although few Americans realize it, pensions are now granted to mothers, under various circumstances, by a majority of the States in the Union. Only one of them so far has included unmarried mothers in these benefits, but the tendency plainly is to extend the aid to them also.

AGAINST OUR TRADITIONS.

The growth of the mothers' pensions movement is a striking example of how a practical need makes itself felt and is answered despite all theories against it. For the theory of American government is absolutely individualistic. That is, we are all taught to believe that in this country opportunity is equal for all, and that anyone who will work can make a good living, bring up his children in health and comfort, and give them a good education.

In practice this theory seems not to work perfectly. In the old days when there were not so many people in America, nearly everyone got enough to eat, and probably most of them got such education as the country afforded. But of late it has become increasingly apparent that many thousands of American children get neither enough to eat nor a decent education. In the slums of our great cities children die like flies of malnutrition and neglect. In many rural districts they die almost as fast of hookworm, malaria and other diseases that spring largely from poverty, and in some rural districts the children get no education worthy of the name. One of the results of these conditions was seen when the draft brought forward thousands of young men who were undernourished, diseased, ignorant and even illiterate. It is self-evident, of course, that the State cannot afford to go on raising that kind of men, any more than a farmer can afford to raise mangy, stunted and diseased live stock.

It has always been recognized, of course, that some parents would be unable to care for their children and that some children would be born out of wedlock and that the State had a certain responsibility for such unfortunate children. The recognition of these facts created the orphanages, orphan asylums and like institutions which dot the country. But these places do not fill the bill. The child has no home life, no proper freedom. He is not given the living and the education which he deserves, but merely a makeshift substitute, the acceptance of which he often regards as a disgrace.

CHARITY FAILS.

The efforts of private charity have likewise proved inadequate, and so have the attempts to solve the problem by placing children in homes. Despite these measures, the enormous waste of child life has gone on. The system of pensioning mothers with State funds has gained headway because it has, to some extent, met the need when everything else has failed. One State after another has adoptd it, and everywhere it has accomplished good. The laws are all different and few of them are drawn by experts. Few of them provide really adequate pensions and still fewer make any adequate provision for the administration of the law by competent persons. Yet mothers' pensions have triumphed and it has been a purely practical triumph. It is against all American tradition for the State to pension mothers. It is a purely socialistic measure. Washington and Jefferson and the rest of the pantheon of American political gods never indorsed it. But it saves child life, keeps homes intact, keeps women from taking to the street in sheer desperation, and therefore it has triumphed again and again in conservative legislatures where common sense is stronger than devotion to tradition or fear of social theory.

The dangers of granting pensions to mothers are self-evident. There is obvious danger of fraud and waste. There is also an obvious temptation for officeholders to use such pensions as a means of building up their constituencies. Yet those who have had experience in administering these laws say that the practical drawbacks are not as serious as they look. The growing participation of women in politics and public service will probably be a stimulous both to the passage of such legislation and to its proper administration.

MOTHERHOOD A PROFESSION.

This whole movement is really a step toward the recognition of motherhood as a profession which is of great value to the State. It will in all probability lead to more systematic education of women for motherhood, so that when the State invests money in children it will be sure of a return. As it is, most women go into marriage without the slightest training or preparation for the difficult occupation of raising children. The proper motive for marriage in this country is supposed to be romantic love. The typical American girl does not regard marriage and motherhood as the difficult and responsible business which they are; she regards them as a great emotional adventure. There are two inevitable results. In the first place, she is bitterly disillusioned. In the second place she has no training for the only dignified and truly creative occupation which is open to the average married woman—that of raising children. If she is intelligent and adaptable and has a real liking for the business she may adjust herself and make a success of raising a family. But often the children suffer for her ignorance, and often she regards them primarily as a nuisance.

It is becoming more and more the custom for women to take up some trade or profession and prepare themselves for it just as men do. It is probable that in the future the woman who really desires to raise children will prepare herself for motherhood just as carefully as she would for trained nursing, or medicine or the law. The knowledge that the State recognizes her profession as one of the first importance, and that it will insure her an independent living, will greatly encourage her in making motherhood her profession.

TRIBUTE BY DOYLE.

of the most glowing of these penned by Sir Arthur Conan himself a poet of distinction in writing to Alfred Dodd to his original high praise The Ballad of the Iron Cross," its author that he had the last line in the volume the "ballad" formed part on the gravestone of his son. This line, the closing an ode to Rupert Brooke,

"Think of me,
with the sunshine of immortal youth."

MacDonald, who pub- The Ballad of the Iron and is known in America some of the best of mod- English verse, tells me that Alfred Dodd's poem has "never been of in the United States." It he explained, when the created by the submarine made it difficult to send across the Atlantic. Be- of the facts that have been one need not be apolo- about attracting the attention American lovers of fine poetry, so belatedly, as it would seem, to a work of real imagination and power, or about telling more than hitherto has been known even here about the picturesque personality of the man, who, in a burst of sheer inspiration, wrote it.

Alfred Dodd,

Pawnbroker-poet of Runcorn, Eng.

Alfred Dodd, the pawnbroker-poet of Runcorn, numbers among his personal friends his fellow townsmen Todger Jones, V.C., who won the proudest military distinction in his country's gift, by as gallant a deed as any recorded in the war that saved humanity. When Todger Jones came home on furlong to be acclaimed by his native place, one of the first acquaintances that he sought out was Alfred Dodd. The latter, though he had written both prose and verse for many years (he is now 40) had not, at this time, won more than local renown.

THE FIGHT.

Among the many stories told by the V. C. to the pawnbroker-poet, was one of a hand-to-hand fight in a deserted trench in which he and a Prussian officer, who afterwards proved to be related to royalty, and who wore the Iron Cross of the first degree, were the combatants. Each was armed with rifle and bayonet, but both were afraid to shoot lest it should bring enemy comrades to the rescue. So they fought a duel with bayonets, a duel to the death. The Prussian was the bigger man, and at first looked like the winner in the homeric combat that ensued.

"He nearly got me straight away,
For, with a lunging thrust,
He slipped within my guard a stroke
I failed to parry—just
As I slipped carelessly aside—
But for that lucky half-a-stride
I had been a lump of dust.

"For half an hour, or maybe more
Our blades made rings of steel,
Around each other's vitals till
One's senses 'gan to reel—
Breath came in gasps, eyes grew blood-dim,
And weakness seized on mind and limb,
Which neither could conceal.

"A burst of dexterous feints and stabs
Foretold the final note
Had all but struck — expiring strength
Flared to full height. He smote
A long, last blow for precious life—
It missed me and my bayonet knife
Pierced his thick-knotted throat,
And pinned him sideways to the wall;
The fight was lost and won . . ."

When the highly-born Prussian lay dead at his feet, the British V. C. possessed himself of his enemy's Iron Cross. At the end of his story, he held it out on the palm of his hand for his friend to see.

Nearly a year after he heard this tale, the details of it suddenly, one morning, recalled themselves to Alfred Dodd's mind. "It struck me that I could make a very dramtic poem of it," he says in a letter to me, "but when I began writing it it took quite an unexpected form."

Though "The Ballad of the Iron Cross," in both theme and form is reminiscent of "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" (the author, like Coleridge, indulging in prose epitomes of many of his stanzas,) Dodd declares that if he was indebted to anyone in writing it, it was to Edgar Allen Poe.

INFLUENCE OF "THE RAVEN."

"Scarcely had I begun to write," he says, "when, in some indefinable way, my mind reverted over and over again to 'The Raven.' I seemed to realize within my soul the horror of this symbolic Raven of Despair perched everlastingly outside the poet's study door, brooding, watching, with baleful eye the goings out—the comings in. And then my mind seemed to leap forward into a very maelstrom of horror as I put to myself the query, 'And how much more ghastly a fate than this if a returned soldier, with an imaginative eye could discern, not a living raven over his door, but a dead-living-vibrating symbol—say a ghostly Iron Cross, moving ever about him, before, behind, around, a cloud by day, a pillar of fire by night—the malignant thought-form of a vindictive enemy slain in combat?'"

The poem ends with this eloquent "envoi," which has been quoted all over England at gatherings held to discuss means of providing for men broken in the war.

"When we return! When we return,
Will you forget? Your vows intern,
With khaki doffed, in lethargy,
England the same for you and me?
Or idols false must we o'erturn?
Remember we have died for you!
What will you do
When we return?"

"After I had written the poem, writes its author, "the manuscript lay for months in a drawer forgotten. Quite accidentally it was tumbled out one day to fall across one of Mr. Erskine Macdonald's publications. On the spur of the moment I sent it to this publisher merely asking whether there was any literary merit in the poem. Owing to a clerk's carelessness the manuscript was lost, and I had given up all hope of ever seeing it again (and I had not another complete copy by me,) when Mr. Macdonald wrote to say the ballad had been found and that the [illegible] would publish it at once."

A [illegible] broker poet seems, at first thin[illegible], as strange an anomaly as could readily be imagined; but experience has taught us, in recent years, as perhaps never before, in what, apparently, unpromising soil the Flower of Poesy, as often as not, takes root.

RUNCORN CLAIMS DODD.

The town of Runcorn has long claimed Alfred Dodd, the author of "The Ballad of the Iron Cross," as one of its most notable citizens, but he was born in Manchester and spent most of his youth in the "Cottonopolis." His was a "dour" childhood, for, when he was 4 years old, he was placed in the keeping of his grandfather, a strange old man of the hardshell type and the last person to be chosen as the mentor of an imaginative and impressionable child. The only other companion of Alfred Dodd's youthful days was the old man's daughter—a deaf mute!

STILL A PAWNBROKER.

After receiving a fragmentary education the boy was taken from school at an early age to learn the prosaic business of pawnbroking. And a pawnbroker he remains today, in spite of sustained efforts at the outset of his career to thrust aside what was to him then an almost loathsome destiny. It has been his ambition to be a teacher, and to this end, during his apprenticeship, he devoted all his spare time to study, reading "everything" and absorbing a multitude of beliefs. For a time he combined newspaper work with his regular vocation, and became the representative, in his native place, of various leading journals. Finally, however, commerce conquered art. A business man Dodd became, and a business man he remains—with intervals. A prosperous member of the community his pawnbroking business is now only one of various commercial interests, the chief of these being a general store.

NOTED VIOLIST FOR THE PHILHARMONIC.

Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, has engaged twenty-one of the leading orchestral musicians of the East to augment the orchestra for next season. Among the number is Emile Ferir, for many years solo viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will occupy the same chair with the local orchestra.

Mr. Ferir is acknowledged one of the great violists, and has been sought by the leading orchestras of the East, it is said.

EXPLOITS UNIQUE COLONY.

"Jenny Be Good" the Mary Miles Minter picture play, coming today to the Victory Theater, exploits a community but slightly known to American readers and theater patrons—the Portuguese colonists along the New England coast. Most of them come from the Azores, the Madeira Islands and a few from the mother land, Portugal, and it is a matter of much speculation how they manage so quickly to become acclimated and accustomed to the rigors of their new home along "the stern and rock-bound coast" not at all like their sunny native climes.

"BULL" MONTANA LIKED IT.

Bull Montana after posing as an artist's model in Rex Ingram's picture, "Hearts are Trumps" was surprised and pleased to note that the painting was a good likeness of himself. He stood looking at it for several minutes with admiring eyes. Walter Mayo, the assistant director noticing his wrapt expression asked facetiously: "It's pretty isn't it, Bull?" And Bull, highly flattered answered affably: "Yes, and it looks like me, don't she?"

THE TEST THAT TELLS—

If you are not sure of your condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood count and see where you stand or else make the following test yourself: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gaind.

By enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and power into the whole system.

Unlike the older inorganic iron products Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

A Single Application Will Banish Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpansive: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.—[Advertisement.

her make-up as a boy deceives him, she accepts an invitation to visit his club.

"Bubbles" takes a job as a nursemaid and overhears what she believes is a plot to kill her hero of the highway. She catches him just as he is about to take off in an airplane, and they sail up into the clouds together. How the man goes about winning her brings an interesting and satisfactory conclusion to the picture.

Arrangements have been concluded for a prologue to the film in which Miss Anderson will appear in person each night, it is announced.

The Symphony program will contain as added attractions a new Mutt and Jeff comedy cartoon and Fox news views of the world.

Meighan is Featured.

A tug at the heart, with a smile contrasting with a tear here and there, and an altogether happy solution of the problems of a group of very human characters—is the screen version of Edward Peple's carming play, "The Prince Chap," it is said, in which handsome Thomas Meighan appears, beginning tomorrow at Grauman's. The picture is a special production by William C. De Mille. It is declared that in this comedy, the finer, tenderer emotions and impulses are interpreted in an artistic manner.

Mr Meighan is perhaps more than ordinarily gifted with histrionic ability, and possesses likewise great personal charm. An able cast is said to support him, prominent among its members being Lila Lee, Theodore Kosloff, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Ogle, Lillian Leighton, Clarence Geldart, Ann Forrest and others.

Other interesting events on next week's program will be selections by the orchestra, with Arthur Kay conducting, and Jesse Crawford at the organ.

Surprise Romance.

"The Great Accident," which readers of the Saturday Evening Post pronounced one of the most entertaining tales of the year, will be presented in its screen version, with Tom Moore as star, beginning today at the California Theater.

Moore plays the part of Wint Chase, a happy-go-lucky ne'er-do-well of a small town. He drinks, smokes, plays pool and does all the other reckless things that many regular young fellows do. Everyone in the town knocks him and his severely upright father was his worst detractor. And then all of a sudden, just because the hypocrites of the town said he couldn't, he turned around and made good in the most surprising manner imaginable.

Mr. Moore is aided by a company of Goldwyn players headed by Ann Forrest, Jane Novak, Lillian Langdon, Priscilla Bonner, Lefty Flynn, Philo McCullough and Andrew Robson. The picture was made under the personal direction of Harry Beaumont.

Other "high spots" of the program will be the concert orchestra, with Rene Williams directing; an organ program by Louis Swain at 12:30 o'clock today; Herbert Kaufman's new weekly, "The Society Bad Man," Bert St. John's "Salon Divertisement," with Froken Kumby, Danish pianist and Lady Lo Wah, Cantonese prima donna; Arthur Shaw, celebrated organist playing "Tripoli;" news reels and a new Goldwyn Bray cartoon.

Hayakawa as Matador.

Sessue Hayakawa, the oriental star, who comes to the Alhambra Theater today in his newest picture, "The Brand of Lopez," shifts to sunny Spain for the locale of his story. He plays Vasco Lopez, famous matador, a man of quick temper and jealousy, traits that draw him into escapades and adventure.

The star worked on this novel picture for a rather long period, under the direction of Joseph de Grasse. He is supported by Florence Turner, Sidney Payne, Evelyn Ward, Mayme Kelso, Gertrude Norman and Kitty Bradbury. There is a background appropriate to the story's development.

The Alhambra will have several added program features.

Mary Minter and Sennett.

Mary Miles Minter in "Jenny Be Good" and Mack Sennett's two-reel feature "Fresh from the City," will be the principal offerings on a program that includes also news features, scenic selections and music by two contrasting orchestras this week at the Victory Theater.

The title of the Mary Minter picture is derived from the fact that Jenny's grandmother always admonished her to be good. Jenny's mother may not always have heeded such admonitions, but the girl, born midst the howling of a tempest seemed to be dedicated to the task of reflecting sunlight, and though far from being a mollycoddle kind of a girl or colorless or prudish, she fulfilled her mission whether her steps were along pleasant paths or in the depths of sordid misery and human woe.

The feature was directed by William Desmond Taylor and the supporting cast has brilliance, it is said.

Elopement a la Mode.

Owing to the reception tendered "Don't Ever Marry," Marshall Neilan's mirthful comedy, at Tally's Broadway, it has been decided to give it another week's showing, starting tomorrow. Neilan has produced a very amusing farce.

The leading roles are portrayed by Marjorie Daw, Matt Moore and Wesley Barry, as the sophisticated bellhop. A rich manufacturer objects to the point of murder, to his daughter (Marjorie Daw) marrying a poor but promising young chap (Matt Moore.) The young couple are wed, despite protests and threats, only to find themselves in a terrible turmoil and mixup caused by the entrance of two other women who pursue the new groom and try to claim him as their husband. Besides the father of one of the women, the other one's insanely jealous and recently divorced husband, and a "terrible" detective are in hot pursuit.

"Tarzan" Repeats.

"The Return of Tarzan," the sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes," is to play a second and positively last week at the Miller's Theater, beginning today. This exciting story recites the further adventures of the ape-man who returns to civilization and meets with more treachery than from the wild animals of his native haunts. He is forced to battle for his life and the lives of his friends with the Apaches of Paris and later while on a secret mission to Algiers, he becomes involved in a political intrigue from which he frees himself only after a struggle with a horde of religious crazed orientals. The action of the story then shifts to Capetown, South Africa, and Tarzan is again found in the midst of adventure. Finally he returns to his jungle home only to find there that the influences seeking his destruction have followed. Finally, however, he is able to conquer both the beasts of the jungle as well as the wolves in human clothing and finds love and peace with the girl for whom he has waged the struggle.

Gene Pollar is Tarzan, and the girl is Karla Schramm.

Other features of the show will include the latest Christie comedy, "Fore and After," with Earl Rodney; news reels and a musical program played on the Miller organ.

Hobart Bosworth is right at home as the New England diver-hero of "Below the Surface," in which he will be seen at the Palace Theater beginning today. No actor has been more successful in using strong stories of the sea on the screen than Mr. Bosworth. "Below the Surface" has proven one of the season's most sensational successes. Its novelty of theme; its heart interest and spectacular features combine to fascinate.

"Mollycoddle" Runs Along.

Another week of thrills and merriment is promised at Grauman's Rialto Theater. Douglas Fairbanks's picture, "The Mollycoddle," will continue.

In "The Mollycoddle" the star is seen as an American who has lived abroad so long that he has absorbed the mannerisms and habits of the European of the wealthy idle class. Upon his return to his native land, he sheds his foreignly acquired idiosyncracies and becomes a thoroughgoing American "he-man." It is during this metamorphosis, that some of the liveliest action is seen.

THEIR ANNIVERSARY.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER,

Creator of "Helen and Warren."

The dark, greasy length of the boarding-house hall stretched out before her. She left the front door open until she could glance over the letters that lay on the ledge of the hatrack.

There was nothing for her. There never was. Yet every evening when she came in there was always the faint hope that there might be.

Wearily she climbed the stairs. Someone was sweeping on the top floor and the dust came down over the banisters in clouds. She hurried into her room—a back hall room. A chill, musty odor greeted her.

In spite of the cold she raised the window to let in the fresh air. The grayness of a sodden day had deepened into an early twilight. A dismal stretch of roofs and littered back yards lay beneath her.

Dirty patches of snow clung here and there and dripped from roofs and ledges. Clothes flapped dejectedly from countless lines and fire escapes. Ash barrels, bottles, rubbish—

Shivering she put down the window to shut out the squalid scene. The room was now piercingly cold. She lit the small gas stove in the corner; but soon the sickening odor of gas and stove polish made her turn it out again.

Wrapping around her the street coat she had taken off, she lay down on the narrow couch-bed, and sobbed despairingly.

How much longer could she bear it? The sordid misery of it all was corrosive. Could she go on living like this? The monotonous work all day in a noisy, crowded office and the long, dreary evenings in this dingy little room.

And this was the twenty-eighth of November! The third anniversary of her marriage. All day she had been trying not to think of the date, to force from her mind every thought of what it had once meant. But now she gave herself up to the rush of insistent memories.

For almost an hour she lay there, forgetting the dreary, hopeless surroundings in the memory of a sheltered, protected happiness. Always he had shielded her from every care and hardship and now—

Had he looked for her? Had he tried to find her? Her pride had not permitted her to leave any clew. Under another name in a cheap boarding-house district—it was as though she had ceased to exist. And all because of a foolish, futile quarrel—the hot-tempered, intolerant pride of youth.

A harsh jangling bell! She started up with a shudder—the dinner bell. She could not go down tonight. Her whole nature shrank from the thought of the dingy basement dining-room, the long tables with the soiled cloths and damp napkins, the smell of food, the cheap talk and laughter.

She longed to lie still and live on in her memories, but she must eat something to have strength for tomorrow's work. There was a small lunchroom round the corner; she would go there for a bowl of milk and crackers

Wearily she rose, smoothed her hair and put on her wraps before the cloudy, wavy mirror that hung over the washstand.

She groped her way down the dark stairs. The gas was never lit in the upper halls, and only faint strips of light came from under the doors along the way. Voices, clattering dishes, and a sickening smell of grease came up from the basement.

Quickly she let herself out the front door, glad of the fresh cold air that greeted her. The small lunchroom was crowded. It had looked clean and quiet as she passed it every morning, but now the atmosphere was rough and noisy.

She hurried by. She would walk around the block and back to her room. It was useless to force herself to eat in such places tonight. A sob came in her throat as she thought of how, a year ago, they were dining at the Cafe ——. How often they had dined there, always the same table, the same waiter.

Before the muddy steps of the boarding-house a leaping thought possessed her. Why should she not go there tonight? Her heart beat fast. She would sit at the same table, have the same waiter and try to imagine that he was with her.

She had deprived herself of so much—surely she would have this. The $10 she had saved in case she should be sick—but she would not be sick, or if she should be she would work just the same. She would take that money and have one more hour of warmth and lights and music. She would go! She would reserve the table now before her courage failed.

The green and blue bottles of a drug store shone out cheerfully from the next block. A moment later she was there telephoning to the head waiter of the Cafe ——.

"Yes, the sixth table from the entrance on the left side." . . .

"Yes, I'll hold the wire." . . .

"Hello! It's reserved?" . . .

"The one back of it? Very well, I'll have to take that."

For the next hour she did not stop to think—she only acted. Back in the hallroom, with pulsing swiftness, she unpacked a gray crepe de chine, the only gown of her old life that she had brought with her. Eagerly, nervously, she dressed.

A last glance at the wavy mirror and she was again hurrying down the dark hall and stairs, out to the street and into a car at the corner.

Quickly the car passed from the shabby boarding-house district into broad, well-lit thoroughfares. Taxicabs, limousines and crowds of well-dressed people surged by.

With breathless interest she watched the streets and buildings. She was almost there. At a crowded corner she left the car and hurried across to the flashing sign that marked the restaurant.

Past the attendant at the entrance, through the corridors and into the main dining-room. A moment later the head waiter had seated her at her table. It had all happened with bewildering quickness.

And then Park was bowing and smiling before her.

"Good evening, ma'am."

He spoke as though she had been there only a few nights ago, instead of it having been over eight months since he had last served her. It is a way waiters, good waiters, have.

"You're waiting, ma'am?" He tipped forward the chair opposite.

She flushed painfully. Why had she not thought of that? Of course, they would think she was waiting for her husband. Women do not go alone to fashionable dining places, and she had always been there with him.

"Oh, yes, Mr. Wilmer will probably be here later. He phoned that he was detained. But I—I think I'll order and let you serve me now. He may be quite late."

"Yes, ma'am." A menu was placed before her.

She had not intended to say that; the words had come of themselves. But just the saying of them had thrilled her. He was coming later. . . . He had been detained at his office . . . He would join her as soon as possible . . .

Her mind dwelt lingeringly on the phrases. She would try to believe them—to live this one hour as though they were true.

She wrote her order and then leaned back and gave herself up to the alluring charm of it all.

The music, the lights, the murmur of voices—it was all the same. The same crested china—how familiar the design!

The same red silk shades on the table lights In playing with the fringe one night she had broken off a few of the beads. She wondered if she could find that same strand—it would be shorter than the others.

But that had been at their old table—the table in front of her. It was not taken yet; a chair was tipped forward to mark it reserved. She felt an unreasoning resentment at the persons who had engaged it. There were so many tables—they might have chosen some other.

Park was placing a hassock under her feet. She smiled her acknowledgment. Park always remembered her little preferences—a footstool, unsalted butter and a dessert spoon, not a tablespoon, for her soup. All the details of his service were perfect.

At first her excited exhilaration in the surroundings had absorbed her. But gradually she became conscious of her embarrassing position. The restaurant was crowded, and only she was alone. The other women all had escorts, accentuating her sense of isolation.

But besides this was a growing consciousness that she would take back to her hallroom a keener heartache than she had brought. This one glimpse into the warmth and happiness of the past would only make more unendurable her life as it was now. Everything around her brought vivid memories of him, of all the happy hours they had spent there.

A couple at a near-by table were leaving. The man took the fur wrap from the waiter and put it carefully about the girl. How often he had stooped over her with that same tender care! He would never allow a waiter to help her into a wrap.

The orchestra now swept into the opening bars of a Hungarian Rhapsody. That they should play that tonight! The thing he had loved so much, and had so often requested. The weird, minor notes almost broke down her self-control.

And then—she put her hand to her throat—to stop the cry that was there. The man who had passed and who was now taking a seat alone at the reserved table—

He had not seen her! For a dazed moment she was conscious only of that—he had not seen her! Then she saw Park hurrying over. He was going to waiter thought he wrong table because he her.

"Order a taxi— tered.

"Very well, ma'am."

He returned almost deftly and silently her wraps, and then out to the curbing.

When the cab Katherine leaned back cushions, white and

She had not noticed Park's pered order to the driver was several moments before started, nor that it was slowly.

Park hurried back restaurant, straight toward mer's table.

"Pardon me, sir, but like to know that—"

Mr. Wilmer glanced up prise. It was not Park's or expression.

"The lady—the one who come here with you so sitting at the table behind just left—I—"

George Wilmer was on his fork fell clinking to the floor.

"Here? My wife—here? you didn't tell me—you Where—. How did she go?"

"She took a taxi, sir."

"The address? What she give?"

"She gave it to the driver —I couldn't hear. But I go along the avenue There's another driver out knows him—in case you

"Yes—yes; which one?"

They were at the door

"This one, sir!"

"Do you know that taxi— that just left here with a lady?" demanded, as he sprang into the cab.

"Yes, sir."

"If you catch it and have drive to Park avenue I'll give $20 each!"

Katherine, still leaning closed eyes, did not see the kept almost beside her, the drivers' hurried ence.

At length the sound of brakes. The cab drew up stepped out.

It was not the dingy house that stood before her own home. Bewildered, she back.

Then she saw him coming her. A throbbing pause, her unresisting up the steps.

The next moment the closed them in, and all the and heartache of those months she was sobbing arms.

PUTTING COLOR IN THE SERIAL.

Real Oriental Background for High-Power Drama.

Story of McRae's Invasion of Far East.

Strange Lands Visited by the "U" Players.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

Avaunt the yellow age of film literature, particularly the wild, wild serial! In fact it is even now avaunting to make way for a better sort, the sort which Henry McRae has just brought back from the Orient for Universal, and which seems destined to set a new pace.

Serials for the most part belong to what might be called the "early Universal" period of pictures. They aren't being used at all this season in our best theaters. But do you remember how you used to sit and bulge out your eyes at the wild adventures of the brave hero and the beautiful heroine in "The Poisoned Claw" or "The Mystery of the Haunted Tin Armor?" Why, it didn't seem, when you looked at those pictures, as if there could possibly be a single police department on the job in the whole, wide world, those crooked bands of solemn masked murderers did carry on so! And oh, that shivery, mysterious thing in armor who went around looking like an animated cook-stove! Wasn't he the boy for your money, though?

Then there was the hero, who didn't think he had enough for a mess unless he killed at least five crooks at a throw! As for the heroine, what a trustful girl she was, to be sure. No matter how often she got caught by the villains and thrown into dark wells and crocodile dens and amidst crowds of villains, the sweet young thing would get up at any time in the middle of the night at the call of a total stranger's voice, and hike out to be caught again! That girl never did seem to learn any sense!

But now there's a new order of things in the serial world. It has just been invented by Henry McRae.

The new serial is a combination story and travelogue, and you have no idea of the zest in those fresh and inherently interesting backgrounds!

"The Dragon's Net" is the name of the serial and there are 90,000 feet of it. I watched some fifteen reels run off the other day and never wearied for a moment, so adroitly has the historical and travelogue feature been worked into the thrilling story.

Mr. McRae and his company, in which Marie Walcamp and Harland Tucker play the leading roles, spent nearly a year in the Orient. They visited Japan, China, the Philippine Islands and the South Sea Islands, gathering the most interesting material imaginable, and, while, at present, it is intended to show the serial in episodes of two reels, with twenty episodes, it is possible a change may be made so as to show a fewer number of episodes with four or five reels included in each. Universal heads are to determine this.

NATIVE CONCERNS.

During his travels Mr. McRae found one motion-picture company in China and one in Japan. Their methods are archaic and, while the orientals would vastly prefer their own stories and their own actors, if pictures could be properly made for them, yet, as the oriental producers seem to have no idea of picture production, the natives are compelled to depend on the American output. However, it is possible Mr. McRae may accept an offer made him by Chinese capital to return next year and start a company.

At present the orientals are especially fond of blood-curdling thrillers. Next to these, odd to say, they like Charlie Chaplin, whom they laugh at uproariously and imitate, and little Mary Pickford.

One thing about our pictures, however, the Chinese cannot understand, says Mr. McRae, and that is the relationships of the people in the plays. I mean they believe that the picture father or mother, brother or sister, is the real relative of the star, and they get confused when they see different relatives with the same star in another picture. So the exhibitors have a hard time explaining. Both Chinese and Japanese have interpreters in their picture houses, who, unseen, speak lines and explain action in the film. They are very dramatic, their voices rising to a shriek in the exciting parts.

In making his picture McRae has done a wonderful work in the carefully casual manner, so to speak, in which he has introduced titles showing where the locations are that are used as backgrounds, and also giving a hint of their history. Included in the high spots used as these backgrounds are the Ming tombs, the long lane of carved animals leading to the tombs, the great Chinese Wall, the Empress Dowager's $100,000,000 summer palace in Peking, in which views of the interior are for the first time in history allowed to be shown; Kamakura, the old capital of Japan, in which McRae was allowed to take pictures whenever he chose, including private residences, both interior and exterior, strange temples, bits of wonderfully picturesque old gardens; and in the Philippines, pictures of the various industries as well as of historic and governmental buildings, and remote spots on the smaller islands.

In China the picture makers went into the northern part of the country, in Mongolia, where the natives never before had seen films taken. This was also true of portions of Japan. Here the natives worked in the pictures, and were childishly overawed at seeing themselves on the screen.

Included in the film are shots of Shantung, a wonderful grain country, ruined by the graves of the owners' ancestors, most Chinese coffins being laid on top of the ground and the grain having to be planted between. When a Chinese funeral occurs a relative of the deceased goes ahead to find a lucky spot, this lucky spot being usually discovered miraculously by the time the mourners are tired out.

The presence of these graves is naturally unsavory, and Mr. McRae says you can smell China a long time before you get there. Which accounts, he says, for the reason of the burning of so much incense.

A Chinese will go a thousand miles to bring home a dead relative, and sometimes the deceased, owing to the state of the live one's finances, has to be trundled all the way in a wheelbarrow, so that when he arrives he is a mere bundle of sacred bones.

"I met one pretty girl in the world," said Mr. McRae, "who doesn't want to be a picture actress! She was punting a Chinese boat, and she was the most beautiful Chinese girl I ever saw, but she hid her face when we tried to photograph her."

Mr. McRae used a great number of natives in his pictures, but says he didn't let 'em act.

"The Chinese were tickled to work in pictures," he said, "but they wouldn't do anything without a reason being given them, and it must be a good moral reason. They won't play villains, so we had to camouflage a bit in some scenes, and make 'em think they were rescuing their gods or something."

One of these actors was stumbled upon quite accidentally. They heard him first and saw him afterward, in fact. It was near a tempit just out of Shanghai, where the company was working, and they heard the constant tap-tapping like that of a woodpecker.

"What's that?" McRae asked, after about an hour of the noise.

"Why, that's a man praying," answered the Chinese guide. "Come, let's look at him." So the actors peeped in and saw a man kneeling on the floor before a small drum on which he was striking rhythmically and incessantly.

"He's praying for money," explained the guide.

"Whether he was or not," said McRae, "and just how the guide knew, and whether it may not have just been a ruse to get money out of us for the man, which would later be divided between the two, I don't know, but anyhow the man had his prayer answere right there. I think we gave him all of a dollar, and he probably went away and bought a house and lot after he'd worked in the picture with us for another dollar."

There is a photographic glimpse of the Commercial Press, a bureau of information in Shanghai, run by a group of the younger Chinese, and the object of which is dissemination of propaganda in order to let the world know what the ideals of the younger Chinese are, and what they want of the outside world. The plant covers sixteen acres of ground.

BEAUTY ON A VACATION.

Peach Crop is Shortest Ever in New York.

Flo Ziegfeld and Others Having Troubles.

Who's Who Among Reigning Broadway Beauties.

BY HARRY CARR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—The quest for pretty girls in New York grows blood-curdling. Movie magnates and theater managers are tearing their hair. Never were beauties so scarce as this year.

If we are to believe the young lady novelists, every American girl who blows across to Europe is a peach of pulchritude. But, if we are to believe those in the peach business, the crop has gone to seed and the really pretty girls have become extinct.

It may be that the movies have made the public too critical. In the good old days before the cameras came any fair-to-middling Jane with a good coat of kalsomine and a veil could get by for a luscious dazzler.

But the camera is a cruel, cold test. A deep line down the side of a girl's nose looks like the Panama Canal when enlarged by the camera. The slightest blemish shows up like an ink spot on a white sheet of paper.

Girls who can pass this test are not to be found. A New York newspaper recently held a contest for pretty girls, offering a prize of $10,000. More than 45,000 photos were sent in. There was not one single pretty girl in the lot. The prize winner was a husky healthy looking German girl, who worked in Brooklyn, sharpening razor blades.

I saw her pictures. She may be a good girl and kind to her mother; but Providence didn't waste much thought on designing her face.

A motion-picture magazine also held a contest, which attracted world-wide attention, but which attracted not one girl out of all the thousands who could fairly be called beautiful.

Every studio and every theatrical manager in New York spends most of his days in a futile examination of girls who apply for jobs, and most of his nights in prayer that kind Providence will steer in some Jane who can be looked at without despair.

They are so scarce that the theaters are trying all the time to steal them from the movies and the movies are trying to steal them back.

ZIEGFELD'S TROUBLES.

I understand the Florenz Ziegfeld is having a desperate time of it this year. They say he never has had so hard a time before.

Morris Gest went to Europe trying to find them.

The curious part of this search is that rich girls for the first time are trying to get into the beauty market this year. Since they had a taste of something worth while in war work, any number of wealthy women have made a bee line for the movies—the movies rather than the stage.

They have always been telling us—these young lady writers—about the superior type of pulchritude manifested in the well fed classes. And perhaps they do look that way with the glamour of distance and clothes and illusion. But alas, when you get them up close they do not pan out. The two little Binney girls—Constance and Faire—are the only samples I know of really pretty movie girls from rich families.

I am taking a long chance with my innocent life when I start to name them, but I think it will be agreed that the prettiest girl on the stage in New York is Mary Perry of the Follies. She is plainly and unmistakably a child of the people. At that, she is a little disappointing close up. Nevertheless she is lovely enough across the footlights with the brow and eyes of a Madonna.

Constance and Norma Talmadge are without doubt the prettiest film actresses in New York. Constance is a ravishing beauty even off the stage. In fact, she is the only girl I ever saw who could really get away with the "typical American girl" legend. She is the perfect type of the fashion model young lady.

FACES AND FORTUNES.

When Ouida used to tell us about girls whose faces were their fortunes, she never dreamed what those fortunes were due to be like. If there is really a pretty girl in the country, she can make a fortune overnight, simply by sending in her photo to the first manager she hears of.

Mary Miles Minter, a young girl without any special ability to act, gets $50,000 for every picture for the very good reason that she is probably the easiest on the eye of any girl on the screen.

Olive Thomas, a little show girl without training or education, gets $1500 a week on account of her lovely little face, which is not half as lovely by the way, on the screen as off. Nobody has ever solved the problem of transferring the rare beauty of this estimable young member of the Duffy family to the silver sheet.

Camera men usually regard Elaine Hammerstein as one of the most beautiful girls on the screen. But she, too, is hard to photograph. If there were even a rumor that buried in the wilds of a Siberian desert, there was a girl anywhere near as pretty as Miss Minter, there would be another around-the-world race to get her.

At the real beauties sometimes blush unseen. To my mind Katherine MacDonald and Elsie Ferguson

Authorities on Interior Decoration

That fine sense of proportion and balance, and that keen conception of color and harmony so rare of possession and so difficult to command, are very essential to effective interior decoration.

The importance of these fundamental factors is seen not only in the execution of the work but in the creation of the plan of decoration—and even further back, in the expert selection of the correct drapery, upholstery and other materials with which the ability of the decorator must be supplemented.

The "California" provides for the home lovers of the Southwest an interior decoration service of very high character. Some of the ablest artists and authorities in the profession are numbered in the staff of decorators who are at your cordial service here.

And the "California's" selections of smart drapery materials embrace the most unusual ideas of the textile world.

We shall be very glad to have you avail yourself of the co-operation and helpfulness which the "California's" department of interior decoration is so eminently qualified to render for the modest home as well as for the most pretentious.

This store will close on Saturday, July 3rd, at 12:30 o'clock and every other Saturday during July and August will remain closed all day.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Golden Symphony.

(A Screen by Sotatsu.)

Golden clouds, and a golden bridge
Lifting in a great arc, swinging in a high arc,
Under clouds of gold, over clouds of gold,
From the long slow curve of a golden shore
Across wide spaces of dark river!
And behold! A drifting miracle,
Behold the long, steady advancing prow
Of a golden boat, heavier than the sun,
Quiet upon the dark river; bearing two lovers
In robes of state, intricate, luminous,
Upon this dim river, where the great arc
Of the bridge from clouds into clouds
Swings, from golden shore to golden shore,
From the gold earth to the gold heaven!

—[Arthur Davison Ficke.

The De Wolf Collection.

The world of art is full of happy accidents, from the blob or the crisp little vacant space in a water color to the discovery of lithography and etching. If you will remember, it was the hasty jotting down of a laundry bill on a convienient piece of soap-stone, no paper being at hand, that launched the lithograph on its brilliant career. Fortunately the discoverer thought in pictures instead of laundry bills, and so unlimited duplication became a blessing and not a curse.

Etching was discovered in the same careless manner. One Tommaso Finiguerra, a Florentine goldsmith, practiced the decoration of gold and silver plates by filling engraved lines with black enamel. This was allowed to harden. Before filling the engraved lines with enamel, however, it was his custom to rub soot and oil into the incisions, that he might obtain the effect before committing himself irrevocably. By chance he laid a plate so prepared face downward on a sheet of paper. When he took it up he had the first impression of an engraved plate, or more truly the first impression of an etching, what is now known as an artist's proof. Presently everybody was doing it.

"Though I am poor and cannot buy

the depletion of my purse does not debar me from purchasing an occasional modern etching, and sometimes even one that has turned to gold in a collector's portfolio. Thus I may gather together wonderful reproductions of famous paintings, not seldom done by the famous painters themselves, who have often been prone to relax from the brush to the needle. From Rembrandt to Zorn, the painter-etchers have always existed.

You do not, of course, find color in an etching o rengraving. But the beauty of art does not all lie in color. Much of it is inherent in exquisite gradations of lines, in form, in masses, in tones. Much of it consists exactly in what it suggests rather than what it tells—in the fillip that it gives to one's imagination. The etching is an interpretation of nature, never an imitation, as a painting may sometimes become, and its charm dwells in its refined elusiveness. It hints at a dozen things that you, yourself, must discover and explain. Hence it is yours quite as much as it is the artist's. Therefore, too, it never bores you.

Consider its portability, its convenient compactness. It is so small that you may take it with you wherever you go. In the bareness of your hotel room you may prop it up on the cold writing desk, and thus dispel the general gloom. You may transfer it from one wall to another, or you may put it away till the time of need. It is as companionable as a book, as quietly intimate as a friend, as cheap as a dinner—cheaper, if you don't insist upon having a rare print.

Don't let yourself be hypnotized by the little word "rare." A rare print may be the very one you shouldn't have. And why so? As a witty Frenchman once remarked, "A rare print may be rare because it isn't well done." You see, when the etcher pulled off a print that seemed unsatisfactory, he threw it aside and thought no more about it. He made no more impresions from that defective plate. Then some enthusiastic collector happened upon the discarded impression, hailed it as rare—and there you are!

Which is not saying that rare prints are not often superlatively good, but is merely warning you not to be misled by a shibboleth. Don't think that you can't be happy with a print that isn't a "first state" or an "artist's proof," because other states and other proofs are so imperceptibly inferior that it takes an expert to note the difference. And you and I are not experts, let us hope. We are only lovers of art. You may rely upon it that the etcher is also a lover of art—especially his own art—and that he won't send out prints that are bad.

If you would possess some really rare etchings—in art, to appreciate is to posses, the fine is the rare—go out to Exposition Park and study the collection of eighty-eight prints that Wallace L. De Wolf of Chicago has given to the museum. It is now on exhibition in the main gallery. A suitable print gallery will no doubt be built for it, and for the like collections, in the near future. These prints, with the thirty that were already in the gallery's possession, make a particularly attractive and instructive showing. Don't neglect them.

Here are forty-one from the needle of Sir Seymour Haden alone, thoroughly representative of this famous etcher's genius. When we consider that Haden was a great surgeon as well as a notable etcher, his output in etching is enormous. Among his most highly admired prints are "Shere Mill Pond," "Newcastle in Emlyn," "Towing Path," "Out of a Study Window," etc., all in the present collection. "Newcastle in Emlyn" is not one of the "rare" plates, but it is one of the finest from the standpoint of artistic quality. The charming "Towing Path" is well reproduced in the museum's catalogue.s

We have eight prints from Whistler, seven from Zorn, four from Legros, three from Pennell, with one, two and three from various other etchers of fame—Rembrandt, Hellieu, Jacque, Buhot, Corot, Sir Frank Short, Pissaro.

The Whistlers are all excellent imprints, among them being his portrait of Lady Haden, which seems to me far better than the one that Sir Haden made on the same occasion. This etching is titled "Reading by Lamplight." Others are "The Rag Gatherers," "The Little Putney," "Annie, Seated," "Bibi Lalouette."

Anders Zorn is one of the most powerful etchers that ever worked with the point, and it may almost be said that he turned out nothing but masterpieces. His nudes are wonderfully drawn, and the feeling of flesh is remarkable. His portraits are superb. His characterization of Theodore Roosevelt is reproduced in the museum catalogue. Among the prints you will see are "Grover Cleveland," "A Model, Half Length, Laughing," "The Hair Ribbon," "Violinist de Village," "Paul Verlaine."

Rembrandt's lovely little "Raising of Lazarus" is shown, Camille Pissaro's "Geese," Charles Meryon's "Reproduction of the Paris Set." Alphonse Legros's "Ferme de Brieux," "An Old Spaniard," "Banks of the River," "Trees by the Water."

Brief accounts of some of these etchers will be published in this column from time to time.

Parisian Studies.

Exactly five and a half years ago Fannie Duvall left Los Angeles for a sojourn of some years in Paris, Venice and Rome. This was not her first visit, for she had already spent ten years in Paris, studying and painting. She came back six months ago, bringing with her many vivid impressions of Paris during the war. For she hastened to Paris from Venice in the spring of 1915, to cast her fortunes with the land she loved, and to work for it with might and main.

These Parisian studies, with others from Versailles, Rome and Venice, are now on exhibition in the Friday Morning Club, to remain through June and a part of July. The most of them are in the dry, but sympathetic medium of pastel, about a dozen are in oil. The oils were done in Rome and in Venice. An equal number of sketches remain in Paris, where Miss Duvall sold them, thus not only helping herself, but the needy women around her. For in those hard years everybody in Paris was poor, and everybody worked night and day for "the cause."

Toy-making became one of the recognized industries of the artists, French and American, who remained in Paris. The French children needed toys, so did the children of other fighting countries, and as Germany was no longer supplying them, it behooved the artists in France to get busy. Wonderful were the results. Such artistic toys had never been seen before in Paris, their realism was touched with an exquisite fancy, they appealed to the imagination of the happy children who became their owners. At first all the profits went to the relief fund, though later the artists had to keep a part for their own maintenance. For, as I said, everybody was poor in Paris, and proud of it.

Miss Duvall turned to the making of rag dolls. A dozen of these have been exhibited at the Friday Morning Club—a dozen of the most enchanting creations imaginable. Their faces and bodies are made of sateen that Miss Duvall has tinted the color of flesh. Their eyes are wide and inquiring, innocent as childhood itself, their mouths are cherry red, their noses pointed and retrousse, their legs and feet modeled with consummate art. Their clothes are beautiful in color, texture and design, and always appropriate to the wearers. Here are Alice, just stepped out of wonderland, a perfect reproduction of Tenniel's drawings of her; Pierrot, a little Italian maiden; a prince, a tiny duplicate of a fascinating youngster Miss Duvall saw in a park in Versailles; Little Boy Blue, and so on.

Miss Duvall believes that a painter should have a complete change of scene every ten years or so, and if we are to judge from these studies the change from Los Angeles to Paris did her a tremendous lot of good. They are very pure and fresh in color, pictures as well as studies, for each subject was carefully selected before the artist put a single stick of pastel to paper.

Paris and its environs offer a hundred subjects at every turn. The gardens of the Luxembourg are in themselves inexhaustable. So are the gardens of Marie Antoinette's "Bagatelle." Venice and Rome are perhaps more difficult, but there is always the new point of view, and Miss Duvall seems to have found it in every instance. The freshness and spontaneity of these impressions are amazing.

Drawings by Grosbeck.

Half a dozen drawings, in chalk and water color, by Dan Sayre Grosbeck are on exhibition at the Friday Morning Club. They were made in Siberia and Russia, and are brilliant records of some of the artist's war experiences. Grosbeck is master of a facile and virile technique.

Otis Art Institute.

An interesting exhibition of the recent work of the students of the Otis Art Institute was held in the classrooms of the school for three days last week. The exhibition was open to the public and the attendance was large and appreciative. Under the management of C. P. Townsley, an art instructor of wide experience, the Otis Art Institute is taking high rank among the art schools of the country.

ANOTHER "LETTY" SHOW POSSIBILITY.

"Linger Longer Letty" will close its engagement at the Mason tonight. The performance this evening is an extra one, added by special arrangement, to meet the heavy demand. Capacity houses have greeted the comedy, which stars Charlotte Greenwood.

Already the footlight fans are talking of a third of the "Letty" series with Miss Greenwood, of course, again in the star role. Probably Mr. Morosco will commission Anne Nichols, who wrote the "Linger Longer Letty" story, and Alfred Goodman, who wrote the music, together with Bernard Grossman, author of the lyrics, to compose a suitable successor.

PLAYYS IN "BLACKMAIL."

Florence Turner, prominent actress in the pictures industry, has been engaged to support Viola Dana in her new picture, "Blackmail," which is being filmed by Metro from the magazine story written by Lucia Chamberlain. For more than thirteen years Miss Turner has acted before the camera, being among the first of the footlight luminaries to desert the legitimate. When she had just passed her third birthday, she went on the stage for the first time, appearing with Robert Mantell in "Romany Rye." She also played with Julia Marlowe in Shakespearean plays, with Grace George in "Under Southern Skies" and with Henry Irving. Miss Turner has also been on the Keith and Orpheum circuits. She left the stage in 1907, and went with the old Vitagraph Company, remaining there until 1913.

The Convenience of the Tea Wagon

The great popularity of the tea wagon is but the natural result of its versatile service in the home.

For the afternoon teas, the party function, the social evening, the porch luncheon, and for the after dinner service of coffee and confections, it fits into the very spirit of things, and adds dignity and atmosphere to the occasion.

Nowadays every woman is expected to have a tea wagon. As a matter of fact, it is little short of embarrassing for any woman to have her friends find her without a dinner wagon.

The Parmelee-Dohrmann store makes that unnecessary by showing a very extensive variety of desirable styles and values that are really attractive.

The Dinner Wagon Illustrated Is Priced . . . $37.50

It is mahogany finished, has oval drop leaf top, large enough for afternoon tea service, has separate glass tray and is just the kind of a tea wagon to give you real practical service.

PUTTING COLOR IN THE SERIAL.

and most of the service, even that of the young Chinese women who assist as stenographers, is volunteer, which proves how thoroughly in earnest the younger Chinese are in desiring real progress.

"The Chinese still look to America as their best friend," said McRae. "Even the Shantung matter is palliatedt—hey say it had to be done on account of political pressure. And the feeling in Japan toward the United States so far as I could sense it, is also good. I attended a banquet where a prominent Nipponese author spoke, declaring that Japan cannot live without the friendship of the United States."

HISTORIC REMNANTS.

Many of the McRae pictures show the obsolete methods of agricultural and commercial pursuits in China. One of the first sights the party glimpsed on entering Shanghai was a line of Chinese carrying baskets slung across their shoulders. The contents turned out to be gold and silver, and these they will carry long distances through the country without any guards.

In Shanghai, McRae met the most famous Chinese actor. His name is quite unpronounceable and fairly unspellable, but he gets $10,000 a week. The Chinese now use scenery on a revolving stage in the theater where he acts.

"The Japanese Consul opened Japan to us through the letters he gave us," said Mr. McRae. "There we met princes and noblemen, all of whom seemed very friendly, and we were given numerous banquets during our two-months' stay.

"A naive story was told me by a Japanese in Tokio, concerning the attitude of the Japanese toward the World War. The Japanese had an idea, it seems, that the Germans could whip the Americans. They counted the money spent by us on their counting board. Finally the United States spent so much money that their figures ran out and they couldn't count it, and they decided that a country with that much money couldn't be licked.

"'How,' they asked, 'can the Americans be beaten when they have so much money we can't count it on our board?'

"By the way, we found out that the bronco which Douglas Fairbanks sent to the Japanese Emperor as a gift arrived safe after a rough passage, but was nearly lost in landing, due to the raging of a storm at the time."

Mr. McRae has brought back some wonderful stories written by people who have lived in China and Japan many years, founded on history and tradition, as well as character sketches of the natives, and these he hopes some day to film.

When the McRae party reached the Philippines, Manuel Cazon, president of the Filipino Senate, gave McRae the use of a coast guard boat and the party went to the South Sea Isles, where some interesting material was gathered.

And in Manila many views of active industries were taken. Many natives took part. Besides these, scenes for the drama were filmed in which it was found it was almost impossible to get them to do anything that would make them appear to be still in the savage state, or even uneducated, such is their pride and their jealousy of their new civilization.

"While we were in Cebu," said McRae, "we tried to get a Filipino to act in a picture without his shirt on; but he wouldn't do it. Native outsiders watching the picture finally interfered. I argued with them 'But, see, our American actors are appearing that way; they have no shirts on.'

"'Ah, but,' the Filipino answered, 'the Americans have have been civilized for many hundreds of years. We don't want the world to believe we are still uncivilized.'

"I was pretty anxious to get the scenes, however, and finally appealed the dispute to the native Governor of the islands. But to my surprise he was as firm as the others. In fact he became almost tearful, and there was a quaver in his voice that got me.

"'All right,' I said to the native actor. 'Keep your shirt on.' And so he did."

The bright touch of romance on the trip was furnished by the marriage of Marie Walcamp and Harland Tucker, the two stars of the organization, over whom the soft, warm moonlight nights of the South Seas cast their spell, and who were married in Japan. Among their belongings is a little Buddha, their god of luck, which they keep in a shrine. It was while bending their two heads together over the little god in a tiny curio store of Tokio that the hero's arm stole softly around the heroine's waist and he asked the interesting question. And that scene wasn't a scene for the picture, either.

FINISHES DANIELS'S SCRIPT.

Tom J. Geraghty has finished the continuityof "You Never Can Tell," Bebe Daniels's first starring vehicle for Realart. C. M. Franklin will direct. Geraghty will begin work in a few days on his second story for Wallace Reid, he having written "The Charm School," which James Cruze is now directing.

BEAUTY ON A VACATION.

hold the palm for true loveliness of all the girls in America. Miss Ferguson had been a stage star for a long time, but curiously enough Miss MacDonald acted around as a show girl and an extra in the movie studios for a long while before anyone realized that Lillian Russell's successor had arrived.

The fact is that most of the women on the screen and in the big stage successes of New York are rather plain. Beauty is not to be had.

The quest for good-looking boys is almost as discouraging. One of the movie magnates recently sent to every college and university in the country asking boys to go into the film business and thereby earn a fortune. He had thousands of applications and no handsome boys.

LEATRICE JOY WITH METRO.

Leatrice Joy, the 19-year-old star who has made an impression on film fans not usually accomplished in a few years, will be seen in Metro's forthcoming all-star production, "Someone in the House." Filming of the picture already has been started at the company's Hollywood studios. Miss Joy is one of the few youthful stars who started her screen career with a leading role. Three years ago while attending high school in New Orleans, Miss Joy was given a lead in a five-reel drama picturized by the Nola Film Company. Completing her work in this picture, she returned to school to finish her education and upon graduating, re-entered the cinema realm.

EDWARD JOBSON IN STOCK.

Edward Jobson, who has distinguished himself by his work in the parts of judges, fathers, ministers, etc., in numerous pictures, has signed with Metro as a member of the stock company. Mr. Jobson has had important roles in three Metro pictures, "Burning Daylight," with Mitchell Lewis; "The Saphead," in which William H. Crane and Buster Keaton co-starred, and "The Chorus Girl's Romance," starring Viola Dana.

GRAUMAN CONCERT.

Fourth Popular Program Under Kay's Direction.

Another pleasing musical program is announced for the fourth concert by Grauman's Symphony Orchestra today at Grauman's Theater. Many musicians from both the Philharmonic and Los Angeles Symphony orchestras have been added to the regular Grauman orchestra for the morning concerts. Arthur Kay will direct.

Following are the numbers: Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 (Beethoven;) Second Hungarian Rhapsody (Liszt,) Ase's Death, from "Peer Gynt" (Grieg;) "Love Dream" (Liszt,) and prelude to the opera, "The Mastersingers" (Wagner.) Nadine Platinoff, Russian operatic singer, will be heard.

MORENO CONSIDERING STAGE.

Antonio Moreno has received an offer to play the leading role in the first new play to be produced on the stage by Morosco, with a company composed entirely of picture players. This is a Hawaiian drama. Mr. Moreno will accept the engagement providing he can secure a short leave of absence from the Vitagraph company, with which he is contracted. According to present plans, there will be a series of stage plays produced at the Mason, commencing some time next month, with cast of motion-picture actors.

PLAYS HAYAKAWA LEAD.

Helen Jerome Eddy, leading woman and character actress, will begin work tomorrow in Sessue Hayakawa's latest film, "The First Born." It is an adaptation of the stage play of the same name. Miss Eddy will portray the part of Hayakawa's sweetheart. This is the third picture in which Miss Eddy has played with the well-known Japanese actor. The others were "The Tong Man," and "The Man Beneath." She has just finished in "The Siren," an all-star American Film Company production, in which she was featured, under the direction of George L. Cox.

"VERS LIBRE" IDEA ECLIPSED.

New British Bard Invents a Unique Stanza.

Income Tax Commission Seeks Euripides's Address.

"Paradise Lost" Manuscript Held by Family.

LONDON, June 1.—Let all the composers of vers libre and other forms of freak poetry hide their diminished heads, for they are now in the figurative presence of one who in the vernacular of the day, has got them all "stopped." Let them make humble obeisance to Hibbard Gilson of the British Isles—at present no more definite address for Hibbard can be supplied—who has just cantered into the literary arena with a book of outpouring yclept "The Hidden Splendor," which assuredly captures the pastry.

Unless some American publisher grabs up Hibbard as a gladdening curiosity, I imagine that "The Hidden Splendor" will remain hidden, so far as publication in the United States is concerned. Hence I am tormented by no fears of appearing to advertise it.

In his slim volume, which emanates from Cambridge, Hibbard introduces a new form of stanza which, he claims, gives a medium of expression that "possesses the advantages of both prose and verse," and "crystalizes each thought." One of the stanzas will indicate tht the method of crystallization.

We need not fail for want
Of earthly things; but should confess
Success be not so hard
To gain, if more of them,
Were ours; that there are some Who could have led Us t'higher height,
And did
Not
Hence though
Did we succeed
Gloriously,
Our work still would have been
More brilliant, had they,
Our dearest friends, kept close
To us—had they returned the love
We gave unstintingly.

Every stanza is cast in that queer, wasp-waisted shape—with a monosyllable, like "we" or "yet" or "and" for the middle line—so that the stanza looks as if it had been punched in the stomach. And the thoughts thus pompously "crystallised" have not the least importance.

IN QUEST OF EURIPIDES.

More than once, when plays by Goldsmith, Sheridan, Tom Taylor and other long dead and gone dramatists have been revived in London, calls of "Author! Author!" have come from untutored enthusiasts in the pit or gallery. One might have thought that such exhibitions of readily excusable ignorance approached the limit, but they have been surpassed and made to seem as naught by the recent performance of a branch of His Majestys government.

The manager of a London theater where two plays by Euripides are being performed tells me that the Income Tax Commissioners, faithful in the execution of their duties and panting to collect a tax on royalties, have written solemnly demanding the name and address of the author of "The Trojan Woman" and "Medea." The manager proposes, I understand, willfully died in 406 B.C., with the express object of baffling them.

OWNS MILTON MANUSCRIPT.

It probably will be news to most persons to hear that the original manuscript of the first book of "Paradise Lost" is in the possession of a well known English family and has been since 1772. The family is that of Rear Admiral Lewis Clinton-Baker, among Britain's most distinguished naval commanders, who, at the good age of 54, is about to embark on a stormier sea than any of which in his lengthy career he has had experience—the sea of matrimony. The admiral's bride-to-be is Miss Rosa Agnes Henderson of Berkeley House, Frome.

The manuscript of the first book of "Paradise Lost" was presented to one of the admiral's prujenitors by a descendant of John Milton. It is now in the possession of Henry Clinton-Baker, of Bayfordbury, Hertford. The latter offered it for sale at Sotheby's auction rooms some sixteen years ago, but the closing bid—$23,750—was rejected.

Admiral Clinton-Baker, who is marrying so late in life, has had an adventurous career. He was a midshipman at the bombardment of Alexandria, and senior captain in the First Battle Squadron at Jutland.

Thomas Hardy, who is a member of the committee formed to save Lawn Bank, the one-time home of Keats, from destruction, may be said to have begun his literary career fifty-five years ago this month, for it was in April, 1865, that his first article, "How I Built Myself a House," appeared in Chambers' Journal. Oddly enough, it was in the same magazine that George Meredith's first contribution to literature was printed, in June, 1849, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first short story, in 1879. Stanley J. Weyman was another beginner in Chambers'.

Dean Inge of St. Paul's, the "gloomy dean" as he has become known owing to the note of pessimism that characterizes most of his public utterances, is about the last man in England that one would have expected to hear telling funny stories. He told several quite entertaining ones, however, in an address he delivered to the members of the Booksellers' Provident Institution at their annual meeting this week.

A most respectable bookseller, the dean said, was a good deal surprised at a brisk demand for a learned and dull work listed in his catalog. This work had a long title which ended "with elucidations of obscure points." The mystery was explained when he found that the last two words had been misprinted "obscene prints."

Here are two more stories told by the supposedly "gloomy" dean:

A short time ago a distinguished author had to tell his little son that he was unable to make a purchase desired by the boy, explaining that he was too poor, because people did not buy his books as they ought.

"Daddy," replied the boy, "I wish you had written the Bible; one sees that book in every house."

Matthew Arnold was once "up" before the Income Tax Commissioners, who told him that his return was not in accordance with his great reputation as an author.

To this Arnold replied: "You are typical examples of the educated public. May I ask whether you have bought any of my books?"—and it was discovered that no one had.

Some Brides, Brides-elect, Bridesmaids and Dainty Buds.

Until her wedding, which was a charming and fashionable event in Pasadena a week ago yesterday, Mrs. Shirley Hall was Miss Barbara Scoville. Misses Ackerman, Emery, Sherk, Goodhue and Wilshire were bridesmaids and little Elizabeth Hall the flower girl. On the same day Miss McCoy and Miss Griswold announced their engagements to Charles Frederick Kammerer and Dr. John Rush McCoy, respectively. The Misses Bishop and McArthur are two lovely buds who entertained at a supper-dance last Thursday evening.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Garden Wedding.

In an out-of-door chapel, built with palms, eucalyptus trees, bamboo and bay trees, Miss Margaret Mortenson and Mr. Ernest Crawford May, two prominent young folk of Pasadena, yesterday afternoon made their marriage vows. The ceremony was read by Dr. W. O. Carrier of Chicago at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mortenson, at 184 South Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena.

The bridal party entered the sylvan chapel coming down a tiny lane of bay trees and stood in a rose bower for the ceremony. Dr. Carrier presided at the marriage of the bride's parents and also of her sister, Mrs. George R. Carr of Chicago.

The bride was a picture in her gown of white embroidered net and French chiffon over Duchesse satin. The bodice and flounce and the court train were of old rose point lace and the veil was also trimmed with the rose point, all of which was on the wedding gown of Mrs. Carr, the bride's sister. From a coquettish little cap effect of the lace, the long veil hung, caught here and there with orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of white orchids, and lilies of the valley. Mr. Mortenson gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Evangeline Grier of this city was maid of honor and wore a fetching little frock of jade green organdie with hat to match and carried a bouquet of sapphire-colored delphinium and pink roses.

The bridesmaids were Misses Florence Marsh in rose organdie; Florence Ackerman, in lavender organdie; Margarita Schneider in blue organdie, and Ruth Hoyt in yellow organdie. All wore big garden hats to match and carried delphinium and pink gladiola. Little Miss Jean Van Bever of Oak Knoll was a darling flower girl in her frock of white organdie sashed with pink. She carried a basket of rose petals. Lieut.-Commander W. B. Hetfield, a cousin of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Messrs. Frank Gilcrest, Clyde Payne, Jr., Harlan Christy and Arthur Dodworth.

There were several hundred guests to witness the ceremony and for the reception which followed. Mr. May is vice-president of the Security National Bank of Pasadena, of which his father, Mr. Ernest H. May, is president. He is one of the most popular young men in society and club circles in the Crown City. He served overseas as lieutenant in the Navy and was on Admiral Rodman's staff. When the armistice was signed he witnessed the surrender of the Austrian navy. He was one of the first men in Southern California to volunteer and in anticipation of the conflict went into naval training the year before.

The couple left for a six weeks' honeymoon trip to the Hawaiian Islands and upon their return will be at home in Pasadena. The engagement of the young couple was told exclusively in The Times last fall, the announcement having been made at a big supper-dance given at a fashionable country club just out of Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Mortenson.

At Villa Margharita.

Mrs. Lucien N. Brunswig and her young daughter, Miss Marguerite Brunswig, have asked to receive with them on Tuesday afternoon at their reception a coterie of prominent society matrons. They are Mmes. William A. Edwards, Daniel Murphy, Miss Sue Sinnott, Mrs. Mary Wilcox Longstreet, Mrs. Dean Mason, Mrs. Michael J. Connell, Mrs. Russell McDonnell Taylor, Miss S. Lynch, Miss Louise Burke, Mrs. Walter M. Brunswig, Mrs. Marshall Wellborn, Mrs. Walter Jarvis Barlow, Mrs. Wesley Clark, Mrs. West Hughes, Mrs. William J. O'Donnell, Mrs. E. T. Earl, Mrs. William May Garland, Mrs. James Soutter Porter, Baroness Alfred de Ropp, Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. W. H. Workman, Jr., and Mrs. Granville MacGowan.

This will be an important event in society this summer. It will be in the nature of a midsummer informal presentation for Miss Brunswig, who is already quite a charming little belle and one of the most popular in town, her delightful and quaint manner and her beauty being a combination that is irrisistible. She will make her formal debut in the winter.

Gov. Brough Here.

Gov. Charles A. Brough, who is serving his second term as Governor of Arkansas, will visit his mother, Mrs. Cora S. Brough of Sanborn avenue, following the adjournment of the Democratic convention at San Francisco. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Brough, for whom a number of social functions are to be arranged. Mrs. Nancy Rice Anderson of Nashville, a niece of Mrs. Brough and cousin of the Governor, who is also attending the convention, will visit here, coming down with Gov. and Mrs. Brough.

Garden Party.

One of the prettiest affairs of the month was the garden tea that Mrs. Fred Hooker Jones gave yesterday afternoon at her country home in Sierra Madre in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Warren Orcutt, who are leaving shortly for a tour of Canada and the Eastern States, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Gertrude Orcutt, who is just home from school at the University of California.

Tea tables were placed under rose bowers and big trees about the gardens where a coterie of matrons and maids presided. Among those assisting were Mmes. E. W. Clark, W. S. Bartlett, Matthew S. Robertson, W. G. Eisenmayer, J. H. Miles, A. L. Kelsey, A. N. Sanford, Volney S. Beardsley, Charles H. Toll, W. I. Hollingsworth, C. Q. Stanton, R. J. Waters, G. Burkett Logan, M. H. Ross, Merton Jenks, Lee Schlesinger, George Howard, Joseph M. Hooker, Misses Gertrude Orcutt, Elizabeth Nall, Eleanor Anderson and Dorothy and Adelaide Stewart.

Pre-Nuptial Affair.

Miss Marguerite Orena and Mr. Frank Casey, who are to be married on Tuesday, were honor guests at a dinner and dancing party last evening given by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Owen and William Owen at the Los Angeles Country Club. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLaughlin, Misses Cecile McLaughlin, Gladys Carson, Joseph Ross and Messrs. Hugh Golden and Earl Carson.

For Two Girls.

Two charming society girls, Miss Marie Clarke of Garden City, L. I., and Miss Helen Worthington, who has just returned from Mrs. Merrill's school, in Oaksmere, N. Y., were honor guests at a large tea that Miss Winifred Jones gave on Friday afternoon at the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. E. Evans of 333 North Orange street, Glendale.

Miss Jones was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones and by Mmes. F. P. Worthington, Thaddeus Winter (Dextra Baldwin,) W. E. Evans, F. W. Pigg, L. A. Phillips, M. E. Smith, H. B. Clarke, R. M. Jackson and Misses Ruth Bardsley, Catherine Rhodes, Mary Elizabeth Boyle, Lois Finnigan, Amelia Hogan and Ouida McQuatters.

The guests were Misses Grace Helen Adams, Eleanor Anderson, Virginia Anderson, Alina Barman, Alice Burton, Frances Brown, Marian Brown, Kathryn Burmand, Nancy Bilicke, Margaret Barnard, Dorothy Brown, Maye Bettinger, Mary Briggs, Ann Craig, Isabella Childs, Marie Collison, Dorothy Cooke, Hazel Christian, Elizabeth Darwill, Virginia Deardorf, Alice Durant, Jean Dulin, Helen de Laine, Geraldine Denio, Elizabeth Everhardy, Agnes Eisenmayer, Ruth Gordon, Nanette Francisco, Eleanor Gardner, Virginia Graves, Louise Gonzales, Licienne Gray, Eleanor Griffin, Lura Hodge, Katherine Heward, Florence Herron, Helen Iten, Carmen Joice, Margaret Kellogg, Dorothy Klauber, Marion Kellog, Margaret Klauber, Muriel Keyes, Gwendolyn Longyear, Dorothy Keefe, Ruth Mabee, Kathleen Murphy, Margaret McGarry, Katherine McGarry, Elinor Moses, Mary McAlister, Kathryn McCahan, Marie Marlow, Elizabeth Miller, Helen Mosher, Jeanette McLennan, Barbara Mitchell, Doris Oesting, Mary Okie, Ruth O'Donnell, Marguerite Orena, Katherine Pauly, Janet Prendegast, Rowena Schneider, Margarita Schneider, Pamilla Schneider, Elizabeth Sturlock, Adela Smith, Martha Steiger, Marie Staunton, Katherine Thomas, Mae Wild, Beatrice Ward, Elsie Wright, Josephine Weirick, Annette Wallace, Katherine Wigmore, Janet Wright, Viola Yorba, Blanche Young, Mmes. Harry Huffam, F. S. Chambers, Smith McMullin, Elsworth Peyton.

Mrs. Huntington.

Mrs. Henry E. Huntington, who with Mr. Huntington is sailing on July 31 for Europe, was hostess at a delightful luncheon at her home in San Marino, having as guests Mmes. Howard Huntington, Hugh Livingstone Macneil, John MacFarland, Hansen Moore, Edwin Jessup Marshall, Robert London, Princess Hatzfeldt, Miss Campbell, Miss Anne Patton and Mrs. Cameron Erskine Thom.

Mrs. Banning.

Mrs. Hancock Banning, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wright, motored up to San Francisco, where Mrs. Banning will remain several weeks, visiting in Berkeley, with her son, George-Hugh Banning and his bride, who was Miss Gladys Armstrong. Mrs. Banning and Mr. and Mrs. Wright are also to enjoy the festivities in connection with the National Democratic Convention. Before she left Mrs. Banning gave a little supper party at her country home at Wilmington, having among her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. William Preston Harrison, Mrs. Edwin T. Earl, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Holterhoff, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sidney I. Wailes, Mrs. Mary Banning Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnell Taylor and Mr. William May Garland.

Mrs. Wright also entertained at a smart luncheon at the Los Angeles Country Club on Monday, having plates for sixteen.

Picturesque Wedding in Bay City.

Mrs. M. J. Grier, and her son, Lisgar P. Grier and daughter, Miss Evangeline Grier, have returned from San Francisco where they went to attend the marriage of Thomas Johnston Grier and Miss Sally Havens, which was a brilliant social event in the Bay City on the 16th inst.

The ceremony took place at Wildwood, the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Frank Havens. With its fine East Indian scheme of architecture, Wildwood presents a splendid study in historic art, and the house shows the finest interior decoration of any home around the bay. There were decorations only in the music room and on the tables arranged for the wedding dinner.

An altar was arranged in the music-room and at the entrance of the bower, two great Easter candles were lighted. The floral effect was obtained by means of baskets of pink roses. In this room a broad aisle was made, down which the wedding procession passed, and on either side of the aisle were grouped the wedding guests. The procession was led by the ushers. Walker Havens, William Engs, William T. Banning, George O'Brien, and Jack Raggio. Following were the two tiny daughters of Harold Havens, cousin of the bride, Patricia and Jane Havens. They wore picture frocks of green organdie, much beruffled and each walked alone, trying with all dignity to make their steps keep time to the difficult Lohengrin music. The bridesmaids were Misses Marjorie Spring, Mary Hillman, Evangeline Grier, Mary Kennedy, Sally Long and Lou liamson.

Diamond Bowknots

BROCK AND COMPANY'S diamond paved bowknots are among the most beautiful—surpassingly beautiful—diamond originations.

These wondrously fashioned productions are in platinum mountings with blue-white diamonds of remarkable luster. There are also calibre sapphires, calibre emeralds and calibre onyx bowknots, all exquisitely designed and finished.

The marvelous lace-like construction of the bowknots, wherein the ribbon effect is so skillfully and amazingly reproduced, creates wonderment and intense admiration.

It is a pleasure to learn from our visitors that our exclusive and distinctive collection of these fascinating productions is the finest they have ever seen.

Miss Bennett wore a gown of embroidered net, with bands of filet lace, and her bridal bouquet was fashioned from pink rose buds and sweet peas.

After a wedding reception the couple left for an extended motor trip, but expect to be home to their friends after the first of August.

Dinner Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Barrett are to entertain a company of twenty at dinner at the Fourth of July dinner dance to be given July 5, at the Los Angeles County Club.

In New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jeffras have moved into their new home at 4071 Leeward avenue.

Tea Dansant.

In honor of Edouard Francois du Barry, who takes the part of a French artist in "Prince Chap," at Grauman's Theater, Raymond Martin yesterday afternoon gave a tea dansant at his home in Pasadena, Claremont Manor, and later took a party over to the Mission Inn in Riverside for dinner.

Tonight Mr. Du Barry will entertain a party at Grauman's and later have them for a midnight supper. Among his guests will be Miss Mary Louise Martin, Raymond and Richard Martin, Roy Fernandez and one or two others.

To Wed on Saturday.

Of interest to their many friends is the coming marriage of Miss Gertrude Roberts and Harlan Loud. Miss Roberts recently was graudated from Occidental College where she was prominent in many activities.

The romance began several years ago when both were students in Lincoln High School where Mr. Loud was well known in athletic circles. The ceremony will be presided over by Rev. Dr. Coyle in the Highland Park Presbyterian Church, Saturday afternoon next at 4:30 o'clock. Miss Thelma Loud will be maid of honor, while Misses Dell, Eckstrum and Mary Dunn will be bridesmaids. Bruce Findlay will be best man. After an extended motor trip the couple will return to Los Angeles to reside.

Engagement Announced.

On Thursday at a luncheon given by Mrs. C. U. Whiffen of Crenshaw Boulevard announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Hazel Jacobs and D. L. Stevens, both of this city. Miss Jacobs is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jacobs of 122 South Serrano street. No date for the marriage has been set.

Bridge Luncheon.

Mrs. William E. Gill entertained at a bridge luncheon on Friday in honor of her mother, Mrs. C. W. Fort of Kansas City, who is her house guest. There were twenty guests among whom were Mmes. L. Sage, Joe Crail, Charles Crail, H. Funk, Scott, H. Harbison, Wilmans, W. A. Moses, Whitcomb, L. Hitt, Woodmancy, D. Hunsaker, L. McQuaid, W. L. Frazier, C. Lessings, H. Cloak, C. L. Thompson, L. Dewitt, and the Misses Helen Mauzy, Eleanor Gardner, Margaret and Effie Jarrott, Velma Funk, Ruth Scott and Nettie Chase.

Marriage Announced.

Mrs. Edith De Karr announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ione Leonore De Karr and Harold E. Moore, which took place at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Moore of this city on Wednesday, the 23rd inst. Rev. Mr. McIntyre officiated.

Engagement Told.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Robinson of Budlong avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Helen Robinson to George W. Davis, student at the University of Oregon. Miss Robinson is a student at the University of Southern California. The wedding will be in the fall.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Benjamin Widon announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Bessie Widon to Mr. Joe Rosenblum, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Rosenblum. A reception was given in their honor Sunday last at the home of Mrs. Al Kornofsky. No date has been set for the wedding.

Motor Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hertz, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholl Schneer of New York and W. E. McGorry are to motor to San Francisco for the Democratic convention.

On the visit the party will be guests of Mrs. O. C. Cole of Oakland and later will visit Mrs. Hertz's mother, Mrs. Thomas McGorry, who has just opened her summer home at Los Gatos.

In Long Beach.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Painter, 3541 East Second street, Long Beach, when Miss Helen Crampton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Crampton, became the wife of Foster W. Gary, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gary of Joplin, Mo., and the nephew of Theodore Gary, the president of the Kansas City Home Telephone Company of Kansas City, Mo.

The house was beautifully decorated. A large altar built in the arch between the living-room and the dining-room was completely covered with carnations and smilax, with a large wedding bell made of carnations in the center. Large wicker vases filled with American Beauty roses were on each side of the altar. The long colonial stairway was draped with smilax and carnations and a heavy silk rope extended from the foot of the stairs to the altar, forming an aisle.

Miss June Crampton, sister of the bride, and Miss Sarah Posey were bridesmaids, carrying wands of Nile green ribbon and tulle. The maid of honor, Miss Florence Kyergaard, was dressed in a gown of orchid voile and wore a large corsage of orchids. The bride was in white satin, with a veil of white tulle trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a large bouquet of the same blooms. Donald R. Leeson of Los Angeles was best man. The music was furnished by Ira Charles Ross, formerly of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. G. Klene of the Calvary Presbyterian Church, Long Beach.

The bride, formerly of Joplin, Mo., is a graduate of the Joplin High School and of the Springfield (Mo.) State Normal School. She came with her parents to California three years ago. The bridegroom also formerly resided at Joplin. He is a graduate of the Joplin High School, the University of Kansas and Stanford University. During the war he served overseas nearly two years as a member of the Aviation Corps. He is now in business in Los Angeles.

After a honeymoon trip, the young couple will reside in this city.

House Warming.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Lighton have just taken a palatial new home at 2045 Highland avenue, Hollywood, and are planning an elaborate house warming, with members of the local literary and cinema colony as guests.

Mr. Lighton is known as a magazine writer and has recently turned his efforts toward producing for the screen, while his bride of a few weeks, who is better known as Hope Loring, was in charge of serial and short-reel productions at Universal City.

The new home is of the Spanish type of architecture and is surrounded by tropical plants. A lawn fete will probably be given. The house is built around a spacious patio, with every room opening onto it. William Lighton, creator of the "Billy Fortune" characters in magazine fiction, and father of the bridegroom, will make his home with his son and daughter-in-law.

Alumni Dinner-Dance.

The ballroom of the Hotel Alexandria was the scene of a dinner-dance last Wednesday by the officers and members of the Los Angeles Alumni Association of Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity. The tables were decorated with Jacqueminot roses—the flower of the fraternity. The members and guests present included not only a few of the younger men active in collegiate affairs, but the older alumni and their wives as well.

The patronesses were Mrs. Shirley E. Meserve, wife of the president of the association; Mrs. Orra Eugene Monnette, Mrs. Lovell Swisher, Jr., Mrs. Robert J. Leebrick of Long Beach, Mrs. Charles Meyer and Mrs. Selwyn Brittain.

The dinner was given as a farewell to the delegates of the alumni association, who are leaving to attend the biennial national convention of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity at Minneapolis. These are Orra Eugene Monnette, Shirley E. Meserve, Fred Pettitt, Jr., and Hewlings Mumper.

Home Wedding.

Last Tuesday evening Miss Lauline Root and J. Hamilton Fiske were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Root of 971 Arapahoe street, by Rev. Holland F. Burr of the First Congregational Church. The bride wore a short frock of white taffeta, with a net veil caught with orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of bride roses. Her sister, Miss Helen Root, was maid of honor and wore a frock of turquoise blue taffeta and carried pink rosebuds.

Little Margaret Root, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was frocked in pink organdie over a slip of pink satin. She carried a basket of rose petals. George Burnett was best man. Miss Amy Jane Newson, classmate at Berkeley

—o—

At First Congregational.

Miss Mildred V. Leader and Harry L. Moses were married last Tuesday afternoon at the First Congregational Church. The bride, who has been in California five years, is a kindergarten teacher. She has taught four years in San Bernardino and the past year in this city. Her parents reside at Dowagiac, Mich. Mr. Moses's mother lives at Binghampton, N. Y. He has been here ten years.

The couple left Friday to remain at San Diego a week. They will be at home later at the Edgerly Apartments.

—o—

Fuller-Goyheneix.

Mrs. Louise Fuller and Jack Goyheneix were married Saturday, the 19th inst., by Rev. John A. Eby. A luncheon followed. After a brief honeymoon trip they will be at home at 332 Westminster avenue.

—o—

At St. John's Church.

Before an altar of candles and summer flowers, Miss Madeleine Miller and Delevan A. McCafferty were married at St. John's Episcopal Church the evening of the 16th inst. Dr. George Davidson officiated.

The bride, who wore ivory taffeta and Duchesse lace with an old pin of Roman gold that had been the property of her great grandmother, was given in marriage by her father, Merrick M. Miller. Jack Ellis Miller was best man and Miss Bertice Hutchins was bridesmaid, wearing a pink organdie frock. Miss Lelon McCausland of Seattle was maid of honor and wore a frock of blue taffeta. Bonnie Belt, dressed in orchid organdie over flesh satin, was flower girl. She carried a basket of roses.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. McCafferty is from Bradford, Pa., but is interested in oil in Texas and he and his bride will live at Cisco, in that State.

—o—

At St. Paul's Church.

Miss Mary I. Cunning and Millard A. Casper were married at St. Paul's Church the 15th inst. by Rev. Patrick Bradley. Miss Muriel Axton was maid of honor and wore a suit of oyster silk and an orchid-colored hat, and carried Cecil Brunner roses. J. Walter Cline was best man. The bride wore a frock of white silk with hat to match and carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunning of Hollywood and is a graduate of Immaculate Heart Convent. The groom is a son of Christian Casper of this city.

After a wedding trip the couple will be at home at 1715 North Vermont avenue.

—o—

Richards-Prudhon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Richards announce the marriage of their daughter, Loretta, to Harold Edward Prudhon, young attorney of this city and son of Mr. and Mrs. Edolph Prudhon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. M. Schaefle at the First Presbyterian Church.

The bride wore cream Georgette with silk lace and white brocaded satin, and hat to match. She carried bride's roses. The maid of honor, Miss Edith Richards, sister of the bride, wore pale pink organdie with touches of orchid, and an orchid-colored hat, and carried lavender sweet peas and Cecil Brunner roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Susan White and Miss Arline Cronemiller, wore pale green organdie with hats to match, and carried lavender and pink sweet peas. Howard Prudhon, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Raymond Albert Hughes, William Caldwell, Charles Casey and Duncan Poundstone.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Louise Hoebel sang "Wishes" and "At Dawning," and the wedding march was played by Sibley G. Pease. After the ceremony a reception was held.

—o—

Attractive Wedding.

Miss Ruth Elizabeth Burnight of this city and J. Russell Neptune of Fresno were married the 17th inst. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Burnight of 629 West Thirty-sixth street, with Dr. Tully C. Knowles officiating. The bride wore a dress of white charmeuse with a veil of tulle caught up with band to pearls. Her shower bouquet was of bride roses and white sweet peas. Miss Dorothy Felton of Long Beach, her maid of honor, wore pale green organdie and carried yellow roses. Ralph Burnight was best man. Bobby Burnight, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. Among the guests were members of the faculty of the University of Southern California, where the bridal couple have received degrees.

By Mrs. Enderly.

Mrs. T. W. Enderly gave a picnic luncheon at her new summer home in Beverly Glen. The long table was decorated with ferns and wild flowers. There were thirty-five guests.

—o—

Marriage Announced.

A wedding of unusual interest to students of the University of Southern California was that of Miss Pauline M. Pearce and Leslie Stevens, which took place the 11th inst. at the Chi Delta Phi sorority house. Mr. Stevens is a member of the Phi Alpha fraternity and of the present graduating class at the university. The marriage service was performed by Dr. C. S. Seitter of Redlands.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and a veil of lace sent her by the bridegroom from Malta while he was in the naval service in the Mediterranean.

—o—

Home from Wedding Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Reese have returned from their honeymoon trip by motor through Southern California. They were married the 6th inst. He was a lieutenant in the Army during the war and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Reese of Ogden Drive, Hollywood. The bride was Miss Hazel E. Rattray, daughter of Mrs. Emma Murphy and grand-daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. B. Barnett of Long Beach. The couple will reside at 1027 East Ocean avenue, Long Beach.

—o—

Pretty Wedding.

A pretty affair was the wedding of Miss Mildred E. Merryman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Merryman of Los Angeles, and Julius Arthur Eichhorn, also of this city, at the home of the groom's brother, H. J. Eichhorn, on the evening of the 16th inst.

The bride was in white chiffon and georgette, with a long white veil of tulle caught by a string of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas with maidenhair fern. Miss Christie Eichhorn, the groom's niece, was bridesmaid, wearing a frock of pink and carrying a bouquet of pink sweet peas.

The bride was given away by her father. The groom's brother, Martin Eichhorn, was best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. C. Ingham under a bower of ferns, with white and pink carnations, in the presence of sixty-five friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

Drummond-Burnett.

Of interest in both social and business circles in Los Angeles was the marriage the 19th inst. of Miss Lorene B. Drummond and Emil J. Burnett, recently in the Federal service here. The wedding ceremony was conducted at 8:30 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church by Rev. Hugh K. Walker and was followed by a wedding supper at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Burnett left at once for a honeymoon trip by automobile. On their return they will be at home at the Baltin Apartments.

Miss Laura Killman was maid of honor and Otto G. Reimer was best man. The bride wore a gown of white organdy and a picture hat of the same material. The church and altar were banked with ferns, pink gladioli, sweet peas and honeysuckle foliage.

Mrs. Burnett before her marriage was secretary to Maynard McFie, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Burnett during the past nine years was in the Federal government service. During the war and until last February, he was examiner in charge of the local United States Employment Service. He is now employed by one of the largest Los Angeles manufacturing establishments. He is a Shriner and a member of the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations.

Wedding Plans.

Miss Margaret Getten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Willard Getten, and Donald Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bryden Stewart, will be married July 7 at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Faith in Inglewood. Miss Julia Getten, her sister, will be maid of honor. Misses Ethel Markelew and Mabelle Lewis are to be bridesmaids and Milon Maclospey will be best man. Robert Bell and Walter Stewart are to usher.

By Mrs. Haugh.

A delightful affair was the tea and theater party that Mrs. Ben Haugh of Carondolet street gave in honor of her niece, Miss Elizabeth Hough, and of Miss Marie Behrle.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. Swift.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lincoln Swift of 1259 St. Andrews Place were hosts Tuesday evening at a dinner and dance at the Los Angeles Athletic Club for fifty friends.

The big L-shaped table was strewn with roses, while low mounds of dahlias, gladioli and other choice flowers formed center pieces.

SOUTH PASADENA.

Forty friends gathered on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Pratt of 314 Hawthorne avenue, in honor of the fifty-ninth anniversary of Mr. Pratt's birthday. The affair was a surprise planned very skillfully by Mrs. Pratt and a few of the guests, the latter including folk from several Southern California towns, as well as from Los Angeles and South Pasadena. A sumptuous dinner was served by the hostess. As many of those present were former friends and acquaintances in Indiana, many pleasant reminiscences were enjoyed of Hoosier days.

The home of Mrs. Ola M. Frazer, 1628 Laurel street, was the scene of a charming garden party on Friday night, when 100 young folks enjoyed the evening with dancing and other amusements out in the open. A Los Angeles orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. The hostesses were the Misses Virginia Frazer, Martha and Doris Dutton, Helen Godfrey, Pauline Hammer, Maxine Williams, Margaret Malone and Amy Stephens.

Miss Alberta Calkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Calkins of Diamond avenue, and Roy Armstead Rogers of Los Angeles, were married Friday evening at the Mission Inn at Riverside. Upon their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will take up their residence in South Pasadena.

Miss Catherine Ward has returned from Stanford and will spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ward of Monterey Road.

LINDSAY.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Vaughn at Orange Cove was the scene of a pretty wedding last Wednesday afternoon when Miss Lola J. Vaughn became the bride of Paul G. Lowery. The bride was attired in a gown of white georgette crepe, with hat of the same material, while for a going-away gown she wore blue georgette. Following the wedding ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. They will spend their honeymoon at Huntington Lake, after which they will make Lindsay their home.

George Bartlett, accompanied by his family, is leaving for Northern Michigan and Toronto, Can., at which points they expect to stay two months.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. French, together with their grand-daughter, have gone to Michigan to spend the summer.

Orville P. Freeman, formerly of this city, is now a commercial flyer in Illinois. His parents advise that his territory extends all over the Middle West.

Mrs. M. K. Henderson, Miss Ruth Mason and Miss Myrtle Weaver are on a trip to Lake Tahoe and San Francisco. Miss Weaver will spend most of the summer in San Francisco, while Miss Mason expects to go to Stockton.

Mrs. N. Eller and Mrs. C. L. Johnson and daughter, Alpha, have returned to their home in Topeka, Kan., after a visit to Mrs. Fred Eberhart.

C. V. Henry and family are on a motor trip to Fort Collins, Colo., where they will remain for some time.

Miss Eda Larson entertained in honor of Miss Laura Webb, prior to Miss Webb's departure for the East a few days since.

Mr. and Mrs. Val Loewer of Columbus, O., and Mrs. Mildred McGorty of New London, Ct., are the house guests of George W. Trauger.

Burgess More and S. A. Warson, accompanied by their wives, have just returned from a trip to Tia Juana, Mex.

Dr. J. L. Bruce is attending the Western States Osteopathic convention in San Francisco.

PORTERVILLE.

A quiet wedding was performed last Tuesday afternoon at the home of Rev. C. T. Harrison of the Methodist Church when Miss Laraine Hepburn, daughter of E. J. Hepburn of this city, became the bride of A. M. Tobias, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tobias. After the ceremony the couple left for Southern California. After a two weeks' visit they will return to this city where they will be at home to their friends on Sunnyside avenue.

Senator William R. Flint of San Jose, Dist.-Atty. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. William R. Moore of San Juan were recent Porterville visitors.

Miss Frances Sheela, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sheela of this city, and Donald Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Jones of Porterville, were married Thursday at the home of the bride, in the presence of friends and relatives, Rev. J. A. Milligan officiating. Following the ceremony a luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Jones then left for an outing at Tahoe. On their return they will reside on Roche avenue.

WILL SOON FILM SPANISH NOVEL.

Active Preparations on Foot for "Four Horsemen."

Scenarioist Holds Conference With Author.

Real Soldiering to be Done in Military Scenes.

In "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," from the famous Ibanez novel, which Metro is preparing to film with Rex Ingram directing, is promised one of the most spectacular and important productions of film history. The human interest of the story, as well as its wide historical significance, promise to make the production progressive literature for the screen. It is to be known as a Rex Ingram production.

Writing the scenario is June Mathis, head of the Metro scenario department, and she brings to bear on the great story, not only a wealth of experience in adaptation, but an original and brilliant mind and real vision. She recently spent some time while in Chicago, with the author, and together they outlined what appeared to be the best way of adapting the story to the screen. Naturally that story presents some difficulties, not only as to the presentation of war stuff at this time, but in other directions, notably the treatment of the German theme, since the world is now at peace with Germany, theoretically, at least.

Work on the scenario is going forward and Mr. Ingram is approaching the production with much enthusiasm. He expects to begin early in July, and the cast has been nearly selected. Miss Mathis is to assist him in an advisory capacity throughout the making of the film.

The military part of the drama is to be thoroughly supervised, in order that it may be correct in every detail. Rex Ingram himself served during the late war, and he intends seeing that his soldiers behave like soldiers and not like comic opera or melodrama spear-carriers. They are to be thoroughly drilled and trained.

So far as the characters are concerned, character development is to be emphasized, said Mr. Ingram, the other day, because if you make your human angle interesting, it doesn't matter where or when you lay the scenes of your story. The cast is therefore being chosen with unusual care. Included in it are Maurice Costello, Stuart Holmes, Alice Terry, Frank Losee, Rudolfo Valentino, Brindsley Shaw, and Nigel de Brullier. Other roles are yet to be cast.

The locale, being French, South American and German, calls for unusual research work, and this has been entrusted to a corps of workers. The castle of the hero's family is to be built at a cost of $25,000.

The reproduction of the story is not to be wholly academic, says June Mathis, but incidents, both dramatic and along comedy lines, growing naturally out of situations, are to be created, as she considers this treatment necessary in transferring any written story to the screen.

Naturally a spectacular feature of the production will be the showing of the symbolic "four horsemen.

A big ranch near San Diego is to be used for location work in the South American ranch scenes, but most of the locations are to be built at the studio.

The whole production is to be tinted artistically, and it is quite probable that colored photography will be used in a part of it.

Dwan Cutting Picture.

Alan Dwan is cutting his last release for distribution through Associated First National. The title has not yet been announced. The cast will be headed by Mary Thurman, and will include Niles Welch, Eugenie Besserrer, Joseph Dowling, Frank Campeau and George Hackathorn.

Mann's Smart Nephew.

A few days following his return from San Francisco, Hank Mann visited the home of his little nephew. Trying to amuse the youngster, he told him about his ride home.

"And did you come in a train?" interrupted the child.

"Sure, I did," Hank answered, nodding his head assuringly.

"And did you see the ears of the engine?"

"Of course not," Hank replied, smiling. "Engines don't have ears."

"They do, too," quickly spoke the child. "I've heard of engineers lots of times."

And the child won the argument.

Will Visit Snow Country.

"That Girl Montana," by Marah Ellis Ryan, has been put in production with Blanche Sweet as star, at the Jesse D. Hampton studios. The company will spend two weeks at Truckee, Cal., in the filming of the exteriors. The cast includes Mahlon Hamilton, Edward Peil, Frank Lanning, Jack Roseleigh, Charles Edler and Kate Price. George H. Plympton wrote the scenario and Robert Thornby is again directing Miss Sweet, following the completion of his first special, "Half a Chance."

Seena Owen to Travel.

Seena Owen is planning a visit to Seattle, her former home. From the Northwest she probably will go to New York and return via Texas, where she is interested in the oil fields.

Yosemite Lures Mary.

Percy Helton, prominent in the cast of "The Five Million" on Broadway, has arrived to tour Northern California with Mary Miles Minter, her mother, sister and party of friends. The Realart star will visit the Yosemite and Lake Tahoe in her ensuing three weeks between pictures.

Rosemary with Hampton.

Rosemary Theby, screen luminary, has been engaged by Jesse D. Hampton productions. She will support H. B. Warner in his present vehicle "Going Straight." Henry King is the director.

Two Circus Pictures.

It has been nearly two years since Universal produced a circus picture and now there will be two stories of the big tops being filmed at the same time. The first is Eddie Polo's serial, "Circus Life," work on which was started last Sunday, and the other is "Out of the Sky," in which Edith Roberts will appear as a "big show" performer, and which will be put in production in a few days under the direction of Reeves Eason.

Dean Picture Under Way.

Priscilla Dean has started her first production since "The Virgin of Stamboul." It is a drama of the underworld called "Outside the Law," written by Tod Browning, who is also directing.

Eileen Finishing Film.

Eileen Sedgwick is finishing "The World Inside," in which she is featured with Joe Moore, and will soon start her starring serial, "The Queen of Diamonds," which Edward Hull will direct for Universal.

Joins Screen Fraternity.

Jack Roseleigh, actor of the "legitimate," is the latest deserted to the screen. He will appear in a number of Jesse D. Hampton productions. Roseleigh recently completed a season on the road with Mme. Bertha Kalich in "The Riddle Woman."

During his stay in Hollywood, he will reside with Albert Roscoe, his brother.

Swiss Mountain Scenes.

Rex Ingram, Metro director, selected a location in the mountains along the Ridge Route near Bakersfield to represent Swiss mountains in scenes for "Hearts are Trumps," which is now in its sixth week. Mr. Ingram made frequent trips into Switzerland while he was studying art in Paris a number of years ago and for that reason has been especially particular in locating mountain scenes that will correspond as nearly as possible to the Alpine ranges.

"Warning" to Picture People.

Florence Deshon was entertaining guests at dinner when the earthquake shook the apartment building. Her colored maid, in the act of serving, turned from deep African to a green phosphorescence. Her fright was soon replaced by a holy wrath, which she turned upon the guests, all of whom were picture people.

"Yoh all might's well considah yohselves warned," said she. "If yoh all don't start praisin' the Lawd pretty soon, instead of transgressin' and shimmyin' around, yoh gwan to be shimmied right off this yere earth."

New Heavy is Here.

Macey Harlam has arrived here from New York to play the heavy in Betty Compson's second starring production, which has not yet been named. Mr. Harlam has been acting in the "legitimate" for twenty years, having appeared in the companies of A. H. Woods, Morris Gest, David Belasco, Harrison Grey Fiske, Charles Frohman and other leading producers. When Mr. Harlam finishes work with Miss Compson he will return to New York.

Double on Sweethearts.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran usually have a pair of sweethearts in their comedy features, but in their next story, "Once a Plumber"—which will be started at Universal City tomorrow, they are blessed with two sets of ingenues. The four parts will be played by Lillian Hackett, Edna Mae Wilson, Florence Lawson and Ethel Ritchie.

McWADES INVITED NORTH.

Margaret McWade and Edward McWade have received an offer from the Golden Gate Cinema Studios in San Francisco, recently incorporated by Frank Burr under an authorized capitalization of $1,000,000, to attend personally the official groundbreaking festivities on July 10. The McWades have decided to stick to the local colors with their answer, expressing a desire to remain loyal supporters of Los Angeles studios.

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR SHIFT FOR HELENE.

If any reformer declares that the life of an actress is one of pampered ease and luxury, he'll find Helene Sullivan ready to controvert him on every point. There was one day last week when Helene broke every union regulation that was ever invented.

At 7:30 a.m., she left home and made a hasty trip to the Garson studios, where she is under contract. At 11 she was at the Morosco for an extra rehearsal, at 2 she was dressed for the matinee, and at 8 she was ready for the evening performance. At 11, when the rest of the Morosco cast went home to seek their downy couches, Helene changed her make-up, and remained to play an all night engagement with Katherine MacDonald, who was using the theater for location. And it wasn't until the next morning, at 7:30, that she started back home again—just twenty-four hours or arduous labor.

Isabel Withers,
Leading woman in "Keep Her Smiling," which comes to the Mason tomorrow night.

DANCING STUDENTS AT LITTLE THEATER.

Students of the dancing department of the Egan School will present a performance Friday evening at the Little Theater.

Mlle. Prager, directress and head of the department, is widely known for her professional work in many productions staged in New York, and she is presenting her pupils in a program which will be unique, as no special style of dancing is to be featured. Mlle. Prager has designed all the costumes and sets to be used and everything from the minuet of days gone by, to the present day jazz is programed. One of the chief offerings listed is "Dance O' Mania" which Bernard Granville is creating a success in the East. Elizabeth Kevane, one of the school's most talented and beautiful dancers will be seen in this number, and Marjory Green will do the act written specially for the tiny actress by Marshall Stedman. The "Racketty-Packetty" dolls will appear in their rags and tatters in contrast to the dainty costumes of the rest of the program.

INSECTS SOON MAY TROUPE.

Novel Process for Filming Their Antics Has Been Developed.

J. Warren Caterpillar and Miss Theda Grasshopper may be seen in the films soon by virtue of a new process of cinematography invented by J. H. Robinson, a local movie scientist. The new idea will enable insects to act on the screen.

The process crystalizes the insect and then by a secret formula he is animated before the camera and goes through any sort of gymnastics that the entymological director may decide upon.

Robinson is new arranging with a local releasing corporation to distribute the films.

MANY STAGE PLAYS SOON TO BE SHOT.

Among the well-known stage successes soon to be produced by various independent producers for distributors through Associated First National Pictures are "Twin Beds," with Mr. and Mrs. Carter de Haven; "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," Charles Ray; "Sowing the Wind," Anita Stewart; "Smiling Through" and "Branded," Norma Talmadge; "Penrod," with the diminutive Wesley Barry, and "Wedding Bells," Constance Talmadge.

EARTHQUAKE HELPS.

Russell Simpson, who is portraying the title role in Goldwyn's adaptation of "Black Pawl," has gone to Santa Cruz for the purpose of filming the "storm at sea" scenes for production. Reports from Reginald Barker from the island yesterday were to the effect that the earthquake had caused a young tidal wave, and they were getting plenty of stormy sea. They will return early next week, to resume filming of interior sets at the studio.

ANN FOREST IN THE ROUGH.

How a Viking's Daughter Came to Filmland.

Bill Farnum Christened Her, and with Scotch.

Stormy Seas, "Dangerous Days" and a Contract.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

Bill Farnum christened her down at the bottom of the Grand Canyon, and he gave her a name, which, as he, himself, said should be short and snappy and yet convey the idea of some big thing. Her own real name sounds like a foreign steamship line and that's no wonder because she comes from the land of skippers, Denmark. What is more she was born on an island in the midst of the stormiest kind of an ocean—which they call by the name of the North Sea, and every morning for breakfast they had a wreck or something to look forward to.

We're talking about Ann Forest, and if you saw "Dangerous Days," you'll remember her as the little girl who was licked a la "Smashed Buds" by a brute of a father, and afterward sacrificed her life in the effort to save the man who was kind to her when the powder factory blew up. "Dangerous Days" was an antique war romance as a picture, but there was nothing either out-of-date or underdone about Miss Ann's acting in the brief role she had in this Mary Roberts Rinehart photoplay.

This week she's to play important roles on two screens. In "The Great Accident," which is to show at the California she has the lead, while in "The Prince Chap," which comes to Grauman's, she is a character ingenue. She confided to me that her ideal of picture work for herself was character ingenuing, and evidently her ideal is a good one, because she has just lately signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky for five years, on the strength of "The Prince Chap." First call on her services goes to Cecil B. De Mille. And Mr. De Mille has already called, according to advance announcements, and will feature her in his next special production.

So there we have some of the ways and wherefores of Miss Ann's rise in the films, and not the least of these I imagine was the fact that Farnum officiated at the christening. They broke a bottle of Scotch in the performance, which is enough to make a shining star of anybody. And after they'd laid the Scotch on the line, why, Ann climbed to the top of a high flagpole on a dare and kissed the American flag, just to show she didn't care a darn about her Danish birth, even though she claims the blood of the Vikings gurgles in her veins, and she can trace her ancestry back to about 1500 or less.

If you don't believe this attractive blonde young lady can climb a flagpole you've got another long guess coming. She didn't live on an island for nothing, and the first bits she did in the films were daring diving stunts and horseback riding. She began at Santa Barbara with the American and then went to Universal, and finally she commenced to play real acting parts and leads, first with William Farnum, and then later at Goldwyn's and Famous Players-Lasky.

HUMAN INTEREST PREDOMINATES

Alluring Picture Program is Forecast for Week.

"Burning Daylight" Spells Gripping Adventure.

"Prince Chap" Affords Tom Meighan Feature Role.

Human interest is the Aladdin who'll evoke the magic of plot interest from the projection lamps at the various screen theaters this week. And like Aladdin the sequence of adventures which will follow will be both gay and troublesome. However, it looks as if the heart interest situation will be sustained along with a degree of excitement and thrills.

For example, there's the picturization of Jack London's "Burning Daylight," which promises something especially alluring in stories of the Northwest. There's "The Great Accident" with Tom Moore as a much-misunderstood hero who surprises everybody with his unsuspected abilities. Thomas Meighan is said to have an exceptionally fascinating role in "The Prince Chap,"' produced by William De Mille. Harry Carey will be seen in a good snappy romance. Mary Miles Minter has a feature that promises a strong appealing quality. "Bubbles" indicates a light and elusive charm. For out-and-out comedy "Let's Be Fashionable" will probably afford smart entertainment. Douglas MacLean and Doris May co-star in this feature. Sessue Hayakawa will bring a novelty in the portrayal of a Spanish Matador.

"Don't Ever Marry," "Below the Surface," "The Mollycoddle" and "The Return of Tarzan" are popular photoplays that are repeating.

A romance of the East and West with excitement is the way that "Human Stuff," Harry Carey's latest photodrama is heralded.

"Human Stuff" will be at the Superba Theater, starting today. It is said to surpass "Bullet Proof" and "The Three Godfathers," the star's recent successes.

The story concerns a two-fisted young fellow, who would rather wear the sombrero of the West than the tall hat of conservative business. How his family try to anchor him to a mahogany desk and how he breaks away makes the theme.

The locale changes from an eastern mansion to the wildest region of the West and the cleverly-wrought plot carries the players through a sequence of dramatic events.

The program is rounded out by an unusually funny comedy, "A Villain's Broken Heart," in which Billy Engel and Celeste Zimlick were directed by J. A. Howe.

An elaborate musical program, special educational features and screen novelties have been arranged.

Co-Stars in Breezy Comedy.

Probably no motion-picture stars have had a more meteoric rise in popularity than Thomas H. Ince's co-starring team, Douglas MacLean and Doris May, who established themselves as luminaries in the film constellation with "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave." In their newest comedy, "Let's be Fashionable," at Clune's Broadway for the week opening today, they are said to have a capital vehicle for their talents.

It is a breezy and satirical picture laid in a California summer resort. The two young stars appear as a married couple of limited means, sincerely in love with each other, but trying to emulate the pace set by their opulent and blase neighbors. Their difficulties are not financial, but social, and their efforts to be smart and sophisticated, to acquire affinities and a knowing air, nearly result in scandal and heartbreaks for them.

Mildred Considine, vaudeville writer, is the author of "Let's be Fashionable," which appeared in one of the leading magazines, and the scenario is the production of Luther Reed, author of "Below the Surface" and other successes.

George Webb, Wade Boteler, Norris Johnson and others are prominent in the suporting cast.

Jack London Story.

The spell of the far north, of moving ice-fields and of vast forests, of wonderful nights lived amidst the wilds, and of days of hardships during the gold stampede is said to be woven into a captivating romance of the screen in the picturization of Jack London's "Burning Daylight," which is showing at the Kinema Theater. The photoplay is a Metro Screen Classic. The inital showing was given yesterday with large crowds in attendance.

"Burning Daylight" reflects the spirit of the great outdoors, with dazzling splendor. Mitchell Lewis enacts the chief role.

A prologue and orchestral and cinematic numbers make up the remainder of the program. Nicola Donatelli personally conducts the Kinema orchestra in the overture and popular selections.

Merry Play of Youth.

Exit all villains, scheming adventurers and dark-hearted plotters; enter "Bubbles," who, like the great god Pan, strews the path of life with joy. "Bubbles is the title of the photoplay which the Symphony is showing, beginning today. It is the screen name of Mary Anderson, the star, who goes through a series of effervescent escapades dressed as a boy. She is like a mischievous nymph radiating youth, happiness and good will. Conventions of life do not bother her, and she sets a maiden aunt on edge with her light-hearted pranks.

She starts out on the road of life on her motor bike and meets a young man. Then the whirl-a-gig of infectious mirth begins. Believing

COMEDY GOES ON MERRILY.

Lighter Shows Again Have Spotlight Center.

"Keep Her Smiling" Heads List of New.

"At 9:45" Will Supply the Thrill Interest.

Effervescent fun and frivolity continue to lend a zest to the attractions of the stage. Nearly every house is sporting comedy this week, practically the only exception being melodrama, "At 9:45," which is a stock attraction. "Keep Her Smiling" is the principal new laugh bill of the week. It is a clever domestic comedy with piquant satire.

A real summery production will be the Bothwell Browne's bathing girl act, which is a vaudeville headliner. Musical shows predominate in the variety program, one of the special features being a tabloid "Follies."

"Flora Bella" is to be presented for another week by the Wilber Opera Company, while "The Naughty Wife" is still pleasing large audiences.

For serious drama the patrons of the theater will have the "Pilgrimage Play" as the chief source of inspiration.

"Keep Her Smiling."

"Keep Her Smiling," the comedy of American domestic life, will be presented at the Mason Operahouse, beginning tomorrow night.

The play, which comes here after long runs in New York, Boston and Chicago, was the vehicle in which the late Sydney Drew starred in up to within five days of his death. It was written by John Hunter Booth, author of "The Masquerader," who based his plot on the stories of Edgar Franklin, published in the Saturday Evening Post.

The two leading characters are a married couple, Henry and Polly Trindle. Henry is a much-imposed upon and underpaid cashier of a big New York firm. Polly has induced him to buy a home (on the installment plan) in a wealthy residential suburb. Henry has led Polly to believe his position and income are very different from what they are, and her social ambitions and unconscious extravagance drive Henry to desperate methods. His one aim in life is to "keep her smiling," no matter what the cost or consequences. To ever increasing requests requiring heavy expenditures, Henry comes nobly to the front, saying "Polly, darling, when you smile at me like that you can have anything!"

The crisis comes when Polly gains his consent to a fashionable party with New York caterers, florists grand opera singers and Russian dancers for entertainers. Just how Henry meets the bill of $6000, presented during the festivities, with only $5 in the world, involves a series of hilarious complications.

The play requires an unusually large cast of twenty-five players. For the role of Henry, formerly played by Sydney Drew, Richard Walton Tully, the producer, brought over from London the English comedian, David Miller. The part of Polly, formerly played by Mrs. Drew, is now interpreted by Isabel Withers. The rest of the players are practically of the original cast, it is said, and include De Witt C. Jennings, Lincoln Plumer, Lillian Concord, Vira Rial, Rose Emerson, Ethel Conroy, W. A. Whitecar, William T. Hays, John M. Washburne, Jack Pendleton, J. Irving Southard and Enrico Sbordi.

Bothwell Browne Show.

Bothwell Browne and his bathing beauties form the distinctive headliner of the Orpheum bill opening tomorrow afternoon. The act is headed by Mr. Browne, whose impersonations of the gentler sex are unique. The Browne sisters, who introduced the white piano-accordeon to the public, appear. They all appear in a twentieth century bathing revue, in which the varying styles of water garb are shown. The other feature on the bill is Nellie V. Nichols, with a new line of character songs. Oliver Smith and company appear in the playlet, called "A Touch in Time," Werner and Amoros trio appear in a clever melange called "Love's Follies," and Emil and Willie have a novelty act called "Just a Pair o' Eyeglasses." Henri Scott, bass-baritone, will remain over, as will George Fox and Zella Ingraham, and Ned Norworth, the nut.

New Musical Play.

Melodramatic thrills will provide diversion beginning tonight at the Majestic. The Wilkes stock company will stage "At 9:45," by Owen Davis.

The bill combines tense situations, laughs and rich settings and judging from the manner in which it went over in New York, it should capture big favor here.

Evelyn Varden and Edward Everett Horton will play the leading roles, and they will have the assistance of the capable company, including Alice Elliot, Mrs. Tyrone Power, Marie Curtis, Arri Rodman, Franklin Pangborn, Forrest Seabury, Jerome Sheldon, V. Talbot Henderson, John D'Ormond, Arthur Rutledge, Fred Cummings, Sydney Riggs, Sam Moran and Harry Londsdale.

Tabloid Follies.

"Follies of 1920" will headline the bill at Pantages this week. This is not to be confused with the musical revue, "Pantages Broadway Follies," that will be the first attraction at the newly named Pantages Music Hall, the present Pantages Theater on Brodway, when the vaudeville moves into the new house at Seventh and Hill.

The feature of the current program is said to be a snappy musical comedy tabloid. There are a dozen choristers, a girl ingenue and four men, who provide the comedy. There is a short introductory picture which tells the story up to the point, where the screen is raised, to show the people on the stage.

Laurie Ordway, she of the English accent and the red-headed pianist, is of the rare, but choice London Music Hall variety, and she gives more occasion for hearty laughs than the public expects. The Four Danubes, well muscled and athletic youths, toss each other high in the air, and perform feats of skill. Rucker and Winifred, tar babys from south of Mason and Dixon's line, depict a negro sport and a Chinese laundryman. Howard and Helen Savage give a novelty entertainment in rifle shooting.

ANN FOREST IN THE ROUGH.

I came to this country," said Ann in one of those slangish bits of emphasis which she interjects into her conversation. "It's eight years now. I missed New York the first trip, for we came by way of Montreal and Tacoma.

"After I got to Tacoma I begged father to let me get out and tuck up against the world for a while. I knew I'd never amount to anything unless I did. I'd probably have settled down and married some clerk. Finally father consented, and I started south with no very fixed destination, but just a curiosity to see things, and among those things was a motion-picture studio. After I saw that I made up my mind that I had something they could use, and I offered my services doing stunts."

You'd never know but Miss Forest had been in this country for a score of years from her accent. The one she has seems more like English than Danish, but occasionally the old Norse will creep out.

"GWENWICH WILLAGE."

"When I went back to New York a couple of years ago, I was afraid of my R's and W's. I didn't dare to say Greenwich Village, because I was afraid of arousing a laugh by making it sound like Gwenwich Willage."

Her gayety and sense of humor are peculiarly un-Norselike, yet Miss Forest has a very serious taste in plays. She always likes to go to the tearful or problem dramas. She doesn't care a bit to play in light comedies herself, and had rather do slapstick if she must be funny. However, she does like to arouse the sympathetic laugh, and that is why her character parts are so successful.

"Mr. DeMille claims I have a strong sex appeal. But if I have, it's totally unconscious. He declared that even in the ragged clothes I wore in 'The Prince Chap' there was sex appeal, and if this were visible under those circumstances, why, I'd have it even stronger in fine clothes.

"Mr. DeMille wouldn't cast me in a role of the mother of three children. I asked him why not, and told him that if I'd followed my own natural inclinations I'd had two or three children by this time.

"No, I'm not thinking of getting married until my career is complete. But I do want to some day, because I know what a home means?"

"And a family, too?" I queried.

"And a family," she smiled.

Which shows that Ann is still a North European away down in her soul, even if she breezes along through life like a regular girl.

INTERNATIONAL CAST IN BENNETT FILM.

The cast supporting Enid Bennett in "I Wonder If—," the latest Thomas H. Ince production, has literally been gathered from the four quarters of the globe. Miss Bennett is Australian by birth, and American merely by marriage and adoption. Fred Niblo, her husband-director, is a nephew of Uncle Sam.

Geoffrey Webb, the hero of the romance, is an Englishman, this being only his second American picture, though he is a well-known figure on the English stage.

An even more recent importation is Derrick Ghent, the young Belgian who portrays the part of the foreign prince in the story by Frank Dazey. Mr. Ghent is still having trouble with the English language, which is, according to him, "the more difficult tongue I evair hear, onless Russian."

Marie Pavis, whose dusky hair and dark eyes proclaim her French and Spanish lineage, plays the adventuress, and her partner in crime is he of the unmistakable Scotch name, Donald MacDonald.

Rose Dione, who interprets Mlle. Louise, is so French that she still relies more upon her hands than upon her tongue in conversation, and between scenes she can be found diligently pouring over an English primer

STUDENTS IN COMEDY.

Advanced students of the Wallis School of Dramatic Art will present a three-act comedy, "Up in the Air," as the two hundred and twenty-second public production, Wednesday night, in the Gamut Theater. In the cast are Alfred Manhoff, Preston Bishop, Ralph Acker, Harold Bishop, Armond Patzen, director; Lora Lowery, Charlotte Muckler, Clara Ewing and Joan Moore. Another company will entertain the Baptist Church society Tuesday night with a one-act play. Donald Chapman of the "tot" class will give his patriotic speeches and dances on the program in Patriotic Hall Saturday night. A program is being prepared for the Friday night "Review" in Wallis Hall.

GOT ON HER NERVES.

A score of elderly colored people were engaged by Jack Ford, directing Frank Mayo in "Hitchin' Posts," to appear in one of the southern scenes. An old mammy was sitting on the side lines while Mayo and Joe Harris were indulging in a pistol duel. Three or four times they rehearsed the scene, with the director shouting "cut" just as they reached the crucial point. The old colored lady, who was much engrossed in the scene, finally muttered, "Lawsy, I suttinly wish them two gemmen would do suffin' definite."

VIDOR HAS BLOW.

Realism Goes for Naught With Movie Fiends at Reviews.

King Vidor had a bitter blow the other evening, during the running of his new picture, "The Jack-Knife Man," at a popular theater near Los Angeles. He sat, quite unknown, in the center of the dark house and directly in front of two girls, aged probably 18, of the type known as movie fiends. Their comments were enthusiastic until a scene appeared, showing Peter Lane, the Jack-Knife man, weeping over some small shoes belonging to the departed child he had loved. It was a delicate scene. Mr. Vidor had worked two days on it, to get the proper pitch of emotion, to gain natural tears that would show the depth of feeling needed. He had hired a special orchestra, special lights, quiet and atmosphere.

Then, when the tears began to flow, one movie-wise young lady said with a faintly stifled yawn, "Dear me, the glycerine bottle again."

And says Mr. Vidor, she'll never known how near she came to instant annihilation!

MOROSCO PLANS MANY ACTIVITIES.

Oliver Morosco will use the Little Theater, the Morosco and the Mason in producing his new plays, it is announced. At his local theater he is now conducting rehearsals on "The Clam Digger," a powerful drama by Eleanor Holmes Hinkley, one of the recent Harvard prize plays. This is regarded by Mr. Morosco as a fitting successor to "The Bird of Paradise." It will be the next attraction to follow the present comedy, "The Naughty Wife." On July 12 and 19 Morosco will produce plays at the Mason Operahouse. He will open with "Seven Miles to Arden," written by Anna Nichols. The author will arrive here from New York next Tuesday. She has just completed a new play, "The Gilded Cage," which Morosco will produce in the near future.

Henry Duffy, one of the most promising of the younger leading men on Broadway, New York, will appear in "Seven Miles to Arden." Priestly Morrison, Morosco's general stage director, will leave New York Monday for Los Angeles. He will supervise productions at the Little Theater here, beginning with "Whistler."

Sue McManamy, Los Angeles girl, will appear in the producing company at the Mason, Morosco having agreed with Manager Wyatt on a general program.

NEVER CUT A CORN

Besides Being Dangerous, It Makes Them Grow Faster.

Cutting or paring a corn is always annoying, often painful and many times dangerous. Besides, it only makes the corn or callus grow faster.

The best way to remove corns is by painting them with Cactus Corn Compound. It stops the pain at once and in a short time the corns die and fall off. The remedy is painless, absolutely safe and positive in its results, and can be used in the privacy of the home.

A small bottle of Cactus Corn Compound costs only a few cents at any drug store and is sufficient to remove dozens of corns. Your druggist will refund your money if this safe and simple home treatment fails to give you satisfaction.—[Advertisement.

FRESNO.

Twenty members of the Ninth Aero Squadron, who are now stationed at Knox Mundorff Field here in the air forest patrol service, were the guests Thursday night of the Epworth League of the St. Paul's Methodist Church at a picnic held at Roeding Park. A picnic supper was served at 6 o'clock, following which games and amusements were enjoyed. The boys of the air forest patrol were conveyed to the park in automobiles.

Mrs. L. Grider was surprised this week when twenty-seven of her friends of the North Side Christian Church brought baskets laden with viands for a chicken dinner and assisted her in celebrating her eighty-first birthday.

Three generations were present at the gathering.

Among Fresno people who have enjoyed recent outings in the Yosemite Valley, are Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dearing, Helen Thomas and Jane Dearing, Dr. D. H. Trowbridge and family.

Mrs. E. M. Harris and two sons, Everett and Earl Harris, have gone to Huntington Lake to occupy their summer cottage there.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Payne and daughters and Mrs. C. A. Payne of San Diego, motored to Ocean Park this week, later planning to go north over the coast road to San Francisco.

Mrs. Frank R. Henry and children, Wallace and Betty, left this week for an extended visit with the former's parents in Webbwood, Ont., Can., expecting to return the latter part of October.

Mrs. Mattie C. Bassett and her mother have returned from a two months' sojourn at San Diego and are at home at Casa Blanca vineyard.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Minard have returned from a trip to Huntington Lake.

Miss Helen Hart expects to leave tomorrow to spend two weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Nolan in San Francisco. She will be joined by her mother, Mrs. T. G. Hart and Miss Ruth Hart later.

SANTA PAULA.

The wedding ceremony of Miss Josephine Beckley and David Darling, Jr., on Tuesday evening, at the Universalist Church was solemnized by Rev. Frank Lincoln Masseck, using the impressive double-ring ceremony. The bride was attended by her father, Leroy Sallsbury Beckley. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the Ebell clubhouse, where a reception was held and refreshments served. Mr. and Mrs. Darling left by automobile for Yosemite at the end of the reception.

Seventy-five members of the Atmore family, including relatives, held the annual Atmore family reunion at Foster Park on Sunday. The name of Atmore is well known in this locality, as the late Richard Atmore was one of the earliest pioneers, a son of a family of thirteen children, eleven of whom lived to an old age, and two of whom are now alive and were at this gathering, Matt Atmore of Sespe, and Newton Sespe, aged, respectively, 83 and 80 years old. The members of the family included children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and connections by marriage of the original Atmore's, ranging in age from the two most venerable men down to Master Harry Miller Peyton, aged 4 months.

VAN NUYS.

Miss Doris McWhirter and Van McWhirter entertained a number of their friends Tuesday evening at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McWhirter, on East Gilmore street. Those attending were Misses Alta Houston, Esther Witmer, Mary Jane Keffer, Margery Leslie, Violet Hepburn, Josephine Cornwell, Irma Clever, Marguerite Huffaker, Katharine Whitsett, Zella Birk, Katharine Yunker, Jessie Campbell and Miss Inez Lawrence of San Jacinto, Messrs. Merle Colgrove, Nerr Colgrove, Stanley Petit, Dean Severns, Gabriel Ruiz, Edwin Angier, Robert Taylor, Lem Martin, Glenn Martin, Ward Campbell, Albert Bond and Clifton Lehman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dickey and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shepard spent the week-end in the Yucaipa Valley.

Mrs. A. C. Walden of Santa Rosa and Mrs. A. C. Martin of Oakland are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Nafzgar in North Van Nuys.

Mrs. L. Boutierre of Van Nuys, Mrs. W. Frederichs of Owensmouth and Mr. and Mrs. Franc Borchard of Zelzah left Saturday for Catalina with the Knights of Columbus for their annual outing of one week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Gibson spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. K. Bell of Long Beach.

Mrs. C. H. Schlueter left Wednesday for a six weeks' visit in Chicago at the home of her parents. Last Sunday Mrs. George B. Scott entertained in her honor with a very enjoyable picnic, held in Pacoima Cañon. About thirty guests were present.

Mrs. Joseph De Muth has returned from a month's visit with her sister, Mrs. James Belknap of Cañon City, Colo.

ALHAMBRA.

As usual the June bride comes to the fore in society happenings this week. Miss Rebecca Phelps, one of the most popular of the girls of the senior class of the Alhambra High School, was one of the brides of last week, her marriage to Cecil G. Bills of Los Angeles taking place a few hours before her graduation. Many delightful affairs have been given for Mrs. Bills. Her wedding and graduation dress was of palest pink georgette, and she carried a bouquet of Killarney rosebuds.

The Misses Cleora and Bobbie Smither were joint hostesses at a shower for Miss Pratt and Miss Hinkle of Los Angeles, both brides-to-be. Decorations were shades of purple from orchid to deep purple. Tiny orchid baskets filled with purple hearts, marked the places for twelve guests. A spider web, unwound, was found to lead the way to two handsome hand-painted plates, gifts from the guests to the honorees.

The same hostesses entertained later in the week for Miss Martha Savage of Alhambra. Orchid and white were used in decorating, and music and games furnished the afternoon's entertainment for the dozen guests.

Mr. Melnot Brunner, a retired business man of New York, and Miss Henrietta Deacon of Stoughton, Mass., were married at a pretty home wedding at the home of the officiating pastor, Rev. S. J. Kennedy of the Presbyterian Church. The ring service was used. Guests present were old-time friends of the couple, the bride's father having come from Stoughton for the ceremony. The new home of Mr. Brunner on South First street will be the home of the couple upon their return from their honeymoon trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Merl Osborn of Phoenix, and Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Copeland of Westgate were dinner guests at the home of Mrs. F. H. Carruthers, Sunday.

CLAREMONT.

Bridges Hall of Music at Pomona College was the scene last week of three weddings. On Tuesday, following the college commencement, there were two ceremonies. Miss Annabelle Frink, a Pomona graduate of the class of '18, became the bride of Harold F. Frey of Huntington Park; Merrel Dare Clubb, a member of this year's graduating class, claimed as his bride Miss Edith J. Jordan of Los Angeles, who attended Pomona for two years. Mr. Clubb and his bride will leave early in August for the East, where the groom will enter Yale for graduate work. Mr. and Mrs. Frey will make their home in Huntington Park. Friday evening, June 25, Miss Laura Charlton Squire, head of the department of physical education for women at Pomona College, and Prof. George S. Burgess of the department of economics, were married at 8 o'clock. President James A. Blaisdell of Pomona College officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess are now away on a month's honeymoon trip. Upon their return they will live here, where Mr. Burgess will continue his teaching at the college.

BAKERSFIELD.

Honoring Miss Phoebe Colton, whose engagement to Thomas Sawyer of Los Angeles has just been announced, a dinner was given by Miss Ruth Lyons at a local hotel. Among those present besides the hostess and honor guest, were Mmes. Fred A. Burrell, C. C. Hughes, F. C. Colton, W. B. Lyons, Misses Clophine Bender, Mabel Sawyer, Frances Gaddy, Addie Scofield and Earestine White.

The swimming and dancing party planned by the Woman's Club was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the summer season. The affair was in direct charge of Mrs. Frank G. Munzer and Mrs. A. Weill, with Misses Genevieve Cauuza, Mamie Barlow, Christine Noriega and Mmes. Frank Easton, W. Gordon Sedgwick and J. L. Hanna assisting.

The marriage of Miss Violet May Chamberlain of Old River and Waldo B. Caldwell has been announced. The young couple is now enjoying a camping trip above Glennville.

Miss Beatrice Egan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Egan, has returned from Berkeley, where she has been a student at the University of California.

A pleasant outing was enjoyed this week at Twin Pines, the mountain lodge of A. W. Bannister. Mr. Bannister, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Bannister and Will Bannister drove to the place for the week-end, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. James C. Begg, Mrs. Rose Grogg and Mrs. W. Goehegan. Mrs. Bannister will remain at the camp for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Clark and small daughter, Mary Elizabeth, have gone to the Jack ranch for the summer.

Miss Egie May Ashman, formerly a Bakersfield girl, but now with the Red Cross in San Francisco, was the guest of friends here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hanson and children have left for Chicago, where they will spend the summer visiting Mr. Hanson's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Chenoweth and three children, and Mrs. Chenoweth's sister, Miss Rosalind Curran, will leave soon for Pismo for the summer.

The Misses Alice and Lida Saeck-

Mrs. E. A. Jackson of Los Angeles spent the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dickson on West Montecito avenue.

TITLE ECHOERS WIN.

Help Fellow Who Can't Read Anyhow; Here's Proof.

The movie patron who reads titles aloud is usually termed a pest, or even worse, by those seated in close proximity.

In fact, the London Punch says: "Far be it from us to slip ashes in anybody's ice cream, but the bird we'd like to mourn for is the one who reads movie titles out loud."

But there is one motion picture that is even better enjoyed when the titles are read out loud, namely, the wise and witty wordings selected from the columns of newspapers. Concerning this reading aloud of "Topics of the Day" the following conversation was heard in a theater:

"Sure an' you're laughing at them words on the screen. I thought you couldn't read."

"Right you are, me boy, but the guy next to me is reading them out loud."

INCE BUYS STORY FOR DOUG MacLEAN.

Charles Belmont Davis's stirring story, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince for adaptation to the screen with Douglas MacLean in the title role, according to an announcement made this week from the Ince Studios on the west coast. The Davis narrative, which drew generous bids from many stars and producers when the author announced its eligibility for motion-picture rights, bears no relation to the stage play of a similar name and, to avoid any confusion, will be released to exhibitors under an original box-office title to be announced later.

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home" treats of a new phase of adventure and romance as interpreted by a typical full-of-fun American lad. It will be released through Paramount-Artcraft exchanges, and is Douglas MacLean's second production as a star in his own right, the first picture of the new MacLean series, "Tanconna Yillies," having been completed this week.

What she [illegible] Friday at the lunch table [illegible] have startled a men's [illegible] many a women's club, but [illegible] Morning Club—well, she [illegible] most earnest plea for a [illegible] for women in the [illegible]

[illegible] appearance of Mrs. Thurston [illegible] the wife of a cultured [illegible] clergyman of the [illegible] Puritan type. She dresses [illegible] Perhaps she lives the [illegible] her mind is too versatile, [illegible] to fit the type com[illegible] Whether she tries to think [illegible] type or not, I do not [illegible] At any rate, here's to Mrs [illegible] may she live long in club [illegible] continue to bring re[illegible]

[illegible] small bomb exploded [illegible] luncheon table was the one hurled by our eastern friend, Miss Harriett Vittum, fresh from the Republican National Convention, when she told the true inwardness of that convention and handled the subject of politics without mitts. As this is not a political column perhaps what she said may be omitted. The way she said it is well worth remembering. She was the next to the last speaker after five others. The way she picked up what the others had said and wove it wittily and logically into what she wanted to say was a model of after-lunch and after-dinner speaking.

As Mrs. O. Shepard Barnum was at her best in her introductions, in which function of her office she excels, the day, the last one of the club year, was full of interest. Even the first speaker, who wanted to talk to Mrs. A. S. Lobingier as chairman of the building committee, and forgot all she had to say after the first three words made the program unique, for who ever heard of a Friday Morning Club member failing in speech before? And then her pluck! She kept on till she had it. It was a good speech too and she received more applause for her pluck than any other speaker at the table.

Another thrill was when Miss Vittum told how Hugh Gibson was received among the Polish people in Chicago two weeks ago. As Mr. Gibson is a member of the club every woman member some way felt as though her only son was being praised and so all shared the glowing pride of Mrs. Frank Gibson.

The Dances.

Did ever a whole body express laughter so completely as did Doris Humphrey's beautiful young body when she danced Bach's "Bouree," the second number of the interpretive dances at the club last week? Miss Claire Niles was no less lovely in her dance of spring, but a trifle more trite. Ruth St. Dennis, as always, was a miracle of movement with her muscles rippling slowly from the deltoid of her shoulder to the tip of her fingers. Her peacock dance is the most humorous serious dance one could imagine, so true to the peacock in its pride, vanity, strut, pluming of feathers, its silly love, wound and consequent dragging of feathers. A mere child could tell what each movement expressed had he ever seen a peacock. Most resplendent of all the five dances she gave was the Babylonian one, when she seemed to grow from the calyx of a lavender fleur de lis, gilded over with barbaric jewels, into a pure blue flame of passion.

South Side Ebell.

A charming luncheon at Blackstone's tea room Tuesday marked the close of the official year for the South Side Ebell Club, when Mrs. Warren J. Holden, president of the club, presided as hostess-in-chief, together with the members of her board, entertaining in compliment to four newspaper women who are interested in the women's clubs of the city.

Mrs. Marian Tracy Whiting, a talented member of the dramatic section of the club, in an informal way that was a delightful relief from the scheduled program, entertained with whatever song or recitation a guest might request.

The members of the board, besides Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Whiting, who were present, were Mrs. G. Salm, Mrs. Fred Moore, Mrs. Evadne Littlejohn, Mrs. A. E. Pulling, Mrs. L. K. Potter, Mrs. J. L. Thornton, Mrs. W. A. Shout, Mrs. Charles Ruble, Mrs. R. O. Daniels, Mrs. Martha Wieben and Mrs. Fred Rogers.

So enthusiastic is this club in the success and enjoyment of the past year the members have decided to create a "porch study circle" during the summer under the direction of Mrs. Whiting. The first meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Holden, 922 East Forty-first street, Wednesday at 1 p.m. The community sings are also continued into the summer. The last one, led by Prof. Hugo Kirchoffer, was held Saturday evening at the home of the president. Besides the singing, each member performed a stunt, wise or otherwise, as her fancy prompted. Refreshments were served.

La Camarada Club.

La Camarada Club met for the last time this year about the lunch tables at the Jonathan Club Wednesday, when there were seventy-five guests and members present. As their name indicates, they are a group of friends who meet together for jolly good times, and this function was no exception to the rule. With each table gay with French baskets of spring flowers and appointments of happy colors, a wonderful menu, a spirit of fun pervaded the affair that is seldom equaled in club circles.

The president, Mrs. J. E. Gribble, gave the address of welcome. Mrs. D. A. Judd responded and presented Mrs. Gribble, who is about to enter upon her third term, with a federation pin in the name of the club. Mrs. J. S. Trewhella responded to a toast in the place of the president of the district federation, Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley. Others who responded to toasts were Mrs. Frank L. Wheat and Mrs. Eugene McCorkle, whose toast took the form of an original poem. After the toasts a musical program was given by Miss Frances Haviland, whose rich low contralto is a surprising delight in one so young, and Mrs. Jessie McDonald Patterson, who sang a group of songs. Both soloists were accompanied by Miss Georgella Lay.

The executive board for the coming year consists of Mrs. J. E. Gribble, Mrs. F. L. Irwin, Mrs. V. C. LeRoy, Miss D. Noland, Mrs. J. A. Walton, Mrs. L. L. West, Mrs. W. St. John and Mrs E. H. Whitehorn.

The Ebell Club.

The Ebell Club members are looking forward with zestful anticipation to the last regular program of the year, when Mrs. Charles Hulbert Toll, the popular president for the coming year, will have returned from the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Des Moines. She will give a report of the biennial meeting. The installation of officers will be followed by a musicale. Those artists who will take part are: Mrs. Alexander Pantages, violiniste; Celeste Nellis Ryus, pianiste; Raymond Harmon, tenor; Charles T. Terry, accompanist, and "The Vickers Quartet."

D.A.R.

The reception to be given Tuesday for Mrs. Cassius C. Cottle, newly-elected vice-president general of the D.A.R. from the Pacific Coast, and Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey, newly-elected Vice-State Regent of California, promises to be a very brilliant affair. It will be held in the ballroom of the Alexandria Hotel and will take the form of an at-home. Refreshments will be served from a large table in the ballroom and will be presided over by Mrs. John C. Barlow, Mrs. Emmeline B. Harmon, Mrs. Peacock and Mrs. Harry Martin. The assisting hostesses will be Mrs. George Charles Dennis, Mrs. J. Jerome Canavan, Mrs. Emmet Wilson and Mrs. Jerome Bond Williams.

Mrs. Thomas B. Stowell and Mrs. Eunice J. Eastman will greet the guests at the door. The decorations will be pink carnations and roses. Miss Mary Gowans will sing several songs, accompanied by Mrs. Frederick Taylor. Tickets may be had of Mrs. M. M. Maybury, 1315 South Harvard boulevard. Telephone 72157.

Philanthropy and Civics Club.

"The Relation of the Courts to the People and the People to the Courts," will be the subject of an address by Judge Reeve before the Philanthropy and Civics Club Tuesday at the weekly meeting at the Elks' clubhouse. Preceding the address the birthdays of club members that occur in June, will be celebrated with a large birthday cake.

Throughout the summer it is the plan of the club to hold the meetings as usual. Each Tuesday sewing will be done for poor children in need of new garments. Already plans for Christmas gifts and charities, are under way, thus keeping the record of the club to the high level which has been established and held thus far. Those members of clubs whose activities are over are invited to join with the Philanthropy and Civics Club. Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith is the president.

Wednesday Morning Club.

Discussion of proposed bills coming before the next Legislature, was a feature of the called meeting of directors of the Wednesday Morning Club, last week. One of three indorsed, No. 6 on the list, sent out by the legislative council, received a unanimous vote. This is a bill prepared by Mrs. Frederick Houser.

While interested in affairs of State and Nation, these women do not overlook community interests, as evidenced by the fact that they voted to co-operate with the Lincoln Heights Board of Trade and other civic bodies, in arranging a Fourth of July celebration at Lincoln Park, this year, that will be something out of the ordinary and promote community spirit.

Reciprocity Club.

The last meeting of the year for the Reciprocity Club was a day spent in the lovely gardens of Mrs. Catherine Pierce Wheat, the president, last Wednesday.

The tables were spread under the magnificent old trees of the garden, overlooking the Arroyo Seco, which is now covered with a riot of wild flower bloom. Rustic baskets, filled with white and yellow daisies and blue cornflowers, were the table decorations. A brief program, followed the luncheon. Mrs. Mollie Bloom Flagg, president of the San Joaquin District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. J. W. Fuller, president of the Wednesday Morning Club, and Mrs. M. E. Jenkins of the Women's Legislative Council, were the speakers. The program closed with an account of a vacation trip made by Mrs. Wheat and her husband among the great trees and the mountains of the northern part of the State.

Woman's City Club.

The Woman's City Club will meet Monday at 1 p.m., in Lincoln Hall, Walker Auditorium, the speaker of the day being Miss Helen Matthewson, dean of women at the southern branch, University of California. Her subject will be "The Southern Branch, University of California: Present Problems."

P. B. Dougherty, president of the Arroyo Seco Club, will also address the club briefly on "Our Attitude toward Our Vacation Grounds."

As Monday, July 5, is a general holiday, there will be no meeting of the club.

California Federation of Music Clubs.

There will be a president's conference and publicity luncheon for the presidents of the Federated Music Clubs in the southern part of the State, at the Men's City Club, Wednesday, at 12:30 p.m. This

The sale begins at 9 o'clock in the morning in the Men's Section at the Hope Street Entrance.

FIRST FLOOR

New Woolens for Skirts and Coats

Plaid skirts with Jersey coats of harmonizing color form street and sport costumes of many interesting variations.

A fresh allotment of plaids and Jerseys specially adapted to such a combination has just been received.

Plaid, Check and Striped Skirtings, 54 inches wide, in an unusually complete assortment of colors.

They represent the very late ideas in design as well as color. Black and white is in high favor. These Skirtings are priced at $6.00 and higher.

Jersey, in plain colors and heather mixtures, 52 inches wide, makes delightful coats for general wear, whole suits or golf dresses. It is priced from $4.50 to $6.50.

SECOND FLOOR

New Arrivals in Sport Oxfords

Smart Sport Oxfords have arrived within the past week. This news will be of unusual interest as an advance showing of modish footwear.

These are made of soft white calf with trimming of black Russia. The black leather forms the wing tip, lace stay and back stay. Perforations and pinkings add to the attractiveness of the model.

These shoes are from one of the best makers in the country, yet they are moderately priced at $16.00.

FOURTH FLOOR

Styles in Jewelry

What is being worn by smart Parisiennes by way of jewelry?

Bracelets with the short sleeves, of course, but the bracelets nowadays are of ribbon or bone; rhinestones glistening in bar pins, slipper buckles and earrings; beaded sautoires with curious Egyptian designs—

But let the news from the Jewelry Section be itemized:

Rhinestone Bar Pins and Brooches set with semi-precious gems, at $2.50 and higher.

Rhinestone Buckles for slippers in many new patterns, at $3.75 and up.

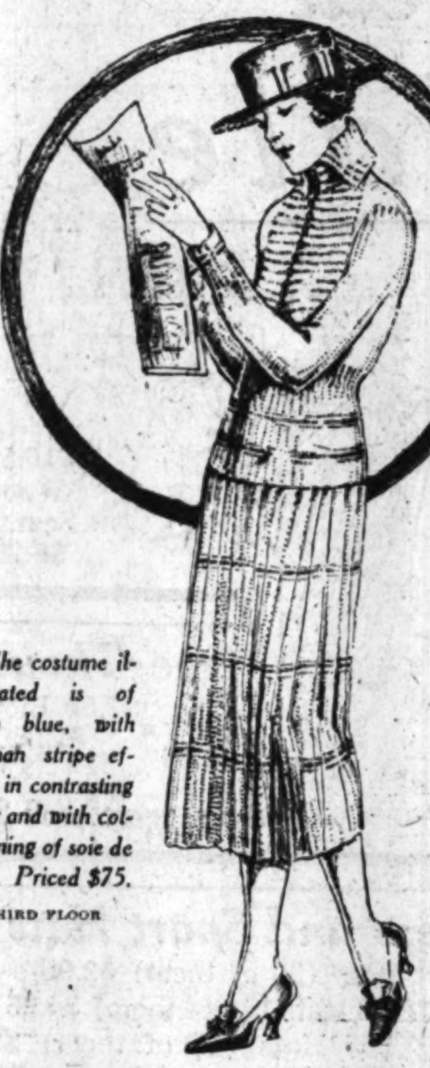
Wrist Bands (Bracelets) of black grosgrain ribbon, with ornaments of rhinestone or cut steel. At $5.00

Neckpieces of narrow velvet ribbon with cut steel crossbars and pendants, at $22.50

Rhinestone Bracelets, Rings and Ear-Rings, prices beginning at $5.00

French Beaded Sautoires—one of our newest importations—in many handsome designs and colors, prices beginning at $15.00.

FIRST FLOOR



The costume illustrated is of navy blue, with Roman stripe effects in contrasting color and with collar lining of soie de l'ore. Priced $75.

THIRD FLOOR

Reve de Soie Frocks From France

Different—as the whimsical thought of a Parisienne—comes this new arrival from the source of style.

Pure Silk Thread is knit to give a heavy appearance, yet is really comfortably cool. Of this new fabric, a costume is created on the new lines distinctly French.

The Skirt is straight, without even a placket, yet one puts it on easily and is sure of a perfect fit—due to the elastic at the belt and the elasticity of the fabric.

The Blouse is in slip-on effect with a deep neck opening which may be worn back or buttoned high about the throat as one prefers. It is snug fitting about the waists and hips, being worn over the skirt.

The color combinations are individual. One model of black has stripes of white and gold—a soft brown is combined with gold metallic thread—a deep dawn shade has stripes of gold and white—and an all white model has the skirt knitted in accordion plait effect.

These Costumes are now being shown on request.

THIRD FLOOR

Midsummer Hat Styles

A Hat from Robinson's will enhance the beauty of the frock of challis or organdie.

Doubtless one frock or the other has a touch of organdie. An all white organdie hat or one with embroidery in pastel tints would be a further bit of freshness and crispness.

An unusual Hat in flesh-colored georgette is trimmed with silver cloth veiled with the georgette, and with large flowers of silk and velvet.

Other Hats for various midsummer occasions are of figured voile, celophane, batavia, hair braid, lisere and braided nets—in all the new colors. Until one sees this assemblage of Hats one has only a meager idea of hat beauty and individuality.

The prices are reasonable.

THIRD FLOOR

Wash Fabrics At Low Prices

Only Three More Days are left of the June White Sale.

Many staple materials—such as Longcloth and Voile—which one can always use—are not always available at greatly reduced prices. The time to buy is now, when it is downright economy—when thousands of yards of Wash Fabrics are underpriced.

Among these extra values are:

400 yards of Madras, good quality, 32 inches wide, at 48c.

200 yards of Poplin, mercerized finish, 27 inches wide, at 55c.

200 yards of Organdie, for frocks of summer freshness, 39 inches wide, at 95c.

50 pieces of Longcloth, good quality, 36 inches wide, 10 yards to the piece, at $2.95 a piece.

500 yards of Voile, charming for afternoon dresses, 39 inches wide, at 95c.

Three days left—but Monday will offer the best selection.

without extravagance

Price alone does not imply quality without extravagance. There must be reputation for reliability back of the goods covering both materieals and makers and including the concern actually dispensing the finished product to make it safe to say "here is true quality without extravagance."

It is such quality without extravagance that recommends and permeates every pair of shoes sold in this store — that makes Innes Shoe Co. footwear preferred by all women who are influenced by true quality and correct style—the real basis of value.

meeting will mark the first of the series to be held during the coming season. Similar meetings will be held in the north.

The conference will enable the presidents and the State chairman to discuss the plans for the coming year and bring closer co-ordination between the clubs and the federation. A number of the county directors will also be in attendance.

Pathfinder Club.

The goal for which the members of the Pathfinder Club of Compton have been strenuously working was reached at the last meeting Wednesday when the mortgage on the clubhouse was burned. This happy event was the result of hard work along many lines and was thus a fitting climax to a pleasant and profitable season.

The annual club luncheon was followed by a program given by the students of the Long Beach High School in a two-act comedy, "Behind the Beyond."

Mrs. John N. Abbott, retiring president, installed the newly-elected officers at this, the last meeting of the club for the year.

English Study Club.

The English Study Club held its annual banquet Tuesday at the City Club. About forty members attended. Mrs. P. C. Tennis presided, and Mrs. Sara Rittenhouse Brown was toastmistress. Mrs. W. Rowland MacCormack gave a toast "To the Toasters." Miss Lillian Humbre toasted "The Studio Atmosphere;" Mrs. O. E. Slinack, "Classic Myths;" Mrs. A. B. Knight rendered three vocal selections. Miss Matilda Stevens gave a toast "Before and After Taking;" Miss Nell Hightower toasted "The Club Colors;" Miss Grace Boal spoke on "Beginnings," and Miss Alma Jane Lyford on "The Thought Behind the Word."

The regular monthly meeting will be held Tuesday, July 13, in room 301, Blanchard Hall.

Woman's Press Club.

The crowning event of a successful year for the Southern California Woman's Press Club was the annual picnic of the organization Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Helen Lukens Gaut in Pasadena. The feast was served in the picturesque gardens surrounding the home. Noted guests contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion, including James W. Foley, poet, who gave his philosophy of life, reading also two of his poems by request. Marah Ellis Ryan, author of "The Soul of Rafael" and other famous novels, spoke, as did also the Baroness de Ropp, a woman of literary renown of Russia, Mary Conan Doyle, daughter of A. Conan Doyle, and Winona Godfrey, popular magazine contributor of the day.

Reports of the work given by the retiring officers bore evidence to the achievement for the year. The record of the historian, Emma Seckle Marshall, giving the accomplished work of individual members, was enthusiastically received. Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Clara Spalding Ellis, who also spoke, were the founders of the organization.

Mrs. Mary Clough Watson, who has served efficiently for two terms as president, spoke, as did Mrs. Georgina S. Townsend, the newly elected president. The other officers for the coming year are: First vice-president, Myra Nye; second vice-president, Mrs. Eleanor Danforth; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hazel Gough; recording secretary, Mrs. Elsie M. N. Caldwell; treasurer, Mrs. Caroline McQuinn; historian, Mrs. Emma Seckle Marshall; auditor, Pearl Rall; directors, Rose Ellerby, Netta Marquis and Mrs. Clara Spalding Ellis.

Cosmos Club.

Mrs. W. I. Clendenon, president of the Cosmos Club, will entertain her newly elected executive board with a luncheon at her residence, 1714 Raymond avenue, Monday.

West Ebell.

The last meeting of the year for the West Ebell will be the annual luncheon Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. at the club rooms, 4802 Western avenue. The report of officers and standing committees will be read at that time.

Mothers' Club.

The Mothers' Club of the Slauson playground will give a reception Wednesday at 8 p.m. in honor of Mrs. Dora Kruger, the past president of the club, and her executive board. The club will also honor at this time Mrs. Viola A. Van Order, the newly elected president, and her staff of officers. The reception will be given at the Slauson playground clubhouse.

Harmony Sewing Circle.

The Harmony Sewing Circle of the Helen Jean Christie Tent, No. 17, Daughters of Veterans, will meet at the home of Mrs. D. C. Judd, 521 West Twenty-third street, Wednesday to sew for the Crippled Children's Guild.

Players and Playcrafters.

Four amateur plays were given Thursday evening at the Gamut Theater by the Players and Playcrafters, two organizations who collaborated in the productions. The plays were "The New Justice," by Mary E. Garbutt; "The Cavalier," by Calude M. Giradeau; "King of the Hedjaz," by Sidney Sprague, and the "Honyokers," by Lillian Sutton Pelee.

"BYRD OF THE DAWN."

Picturesque Location Selected for Hedda Nova Film.

Unusually picturesque, it is believed, will be one of the outstanding features of "Byrd of the Dawn," being produced at Laguna Beach, Cal., according to Director Paul Hurst, who is handling the production for the Laguna Del Rey Art Film Corporation. As the title suggests, many of the scenes will be taken as the sun creeps over the mountains, and the rugged shore line together with the range of mountains which run to the very edge of the Pacific afford rare settings.

Another touch of the romance and color of the old Spanish southland will be given by the Indians and Mexicans who live at historic Mission San Juan Capistrano, which is but a few miles from the home of the film company. Mr. Hurst has made arrangements to secure a large number of these natives who are sufficiently removed from the city to retain all of their picturesqueness.

Hedda Nova, the famous Russian actress, will have the stellar role of Byrd and has been living at Laguna for some weeks past to thoroughly familiarize herself with every detail of location.

"I ended corns forever in this scientific way"

Millions have said that about Blue-jay.

Others tried it and told others the same story. So the use has spread, until corn troubles have largely disappeared.

If you have a corn you can settle it tonight. And find the way to end every corn.

Apply liquid Blue-jay or a Blue-jay plaster. The pain will stop.

Soon the whole corn will loosen and come out.

Think what folly it is to keep corns, to pare or pad them, or to use the old harsh treatments.

Here is the new-day way, gentle, sure and scientific. It was created by a noted chemist in this world-famed laboratory.

It is ending millions of corns by a touch. The relief is quick, and it ends them completely.

Try it tonight. Corns are utterly needless, and this is the time to prove it.

Buy Blue-jay from your druggist.

Hair Kept Beautifully Wavy, Indoors or Out!

If you will apply a little liquid silmerine before doing up your hair it will have a prettier wave and curl than probably it has ever had. The waviness will look perfectly natural, and the hair will be sleek and glossy like plush. It will remain in curl the longest time, regardless of heat, wind or moisture, and you won't have to be continually fussing with loose strands or flying ends.

Liquid silmerine is, of course, entirely harmless. It leaves no sticky, greasy or streaky trace. It is also an excellent dressing for the hair, keeping it delightfully soft and silky. A few ounces from your druggist will last for weeks. It is best applied with a clean tooth brush, drawing this down the full length of the hair.—[Advertisement.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them, anyway, since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful, free from freckles, pimples, blotches and other blemishes. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.—[Advertisement.

New and Wonderful Hair Removing Secret
(How to Get Rid of Roots and All)

The secret is out! Any woman bothered with superfluous hair can now rid herself of this trouble absolutely—not only the surface hairs, but the roots as well—by what is known as the "phelactine process." The new method does away with numerous and expensive visits to the electrolysis expert. Does away with depilatories or shaving at frequent intervals. Nothing like it ever known before. Get a stick of phelactine from your druggist, follow the easy instructions, and have the surprise of your life.

You do the work in a few seconds, in your own home, without the least injury. The hair-roots come out before your very eyes, leaving the skin soft, smooth, hairless. Phelactine is odorless, non-irritating, and so harmless you could eat it.—[Advertisement.

THE NEW.

IN STORES AND HOMES.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray

Up-to-Dateст:

The coat dress is more than ever modish, even the frocks of cotton often taking unto themselves the features of the suit-coat.

And—turn about being fair play—coats take on the features of dresses.

And—many of these new coats are of black taffeta, it is rumored, with white taffeta muffle collars, cuffs and belt, embroidered in rich colors laid upon the white.

Raffia embroidery done solidly upon the crowns and partially covering the brim of summer hats, are a colorful and becoming finish, and no other trimming is needed.

Now is the time to buy:

Voiles for summer dresses.

Dream silk frocks just arrived from Paris.

Curtain materials which will be made up free.

Natural pongee for summer coats and dresses, while special prices prevail.

The wardrobe trunk for less for summer travelling.

The Boston bag for vacation carrying.

Flags for the Fourth.

A Herald from Paris.

First of the new modes to arrive from Paris—unrivalled Paris, where they do create couturially as in no other place—is the "dream silk dress." Or suit. Or frock. "Reve de Sol" is the name by which it is introduced. This suit, or frock, or what-you-will chimes a new note in fashion's hour. Knitted of pure silk thread, the skirt is a slipon, equalling the waist in slender snugness. The colors are as unusual as is the knittery. Navy with Roman stripes. Brown with similar stripes. Black and white. Peacock, and a distinctive touch inwoven in the waist—a metallic antique golden thread. Then there is, of course, all white. The [illegible]-difference of these new clothes guests cannot be told in words. Your own eyes must fill with their distinctiveness, that words may grow to meaning in description in your mind.

Toppers

Anything so it's a jacket worn with a separate skirt. Never in their history have these garments been so universal as now. Many a girl of the must-have kind robs all other departments of her wardrobe, in order to obtain an all silk sweater jacket for this summer wear. Others more conservative of cash, content themselves with jersey blazers, with sweaters of fiber silk, or with chic jackets made from cloth. Colorful, comfortable, convenient, smart—the contrasting coat is prima facie evidence of up-to-dateness in the season's wardrobe.

Southern Beauty.

Life-long study of the complexion and of its needs, must of necessity go into the compounding of reliable and effective helps to beauty. Such has in reality gone into the production of that line of creams and lotions bearing the clear-cut silhouettes of southern beauties of ye olden tyme. No belles in the history of the world, have been more famed for loveliness than those same Dixie fair ones. To preserve such joy-forever was the continuous study of feminine rulers of those days; and the same study is the foregone conclusion of those inventing a complexion preservative re-echoing the fame of those whose names have come down to us through the years.

Sovereign Summer.

More and more the tendency grows toward a distinct marking of the seasons, even in California where we may say we have summer all the year. More do we concede the change of season, more do we make changes in attire and in the dressing of the home, paying homage to the glad time of the year. Glad time we may rightly call it, for from June to October, life in the glorious open claims us wholly, and especially so in California.

It is because of this, that we have developed a distinctive mode in dress; that we have led the world to pay to us that sincerest flattery, imitation. California sports attire has set the fashion world a new pace. California sports have arrested attention in the far metropolis. California decorative effects for lawn and beach have also made a new mode for the outdoor world of furnishings. Our pergolas and patios have remodelled architecture throughout the continent. Our big beach umbrellas and canvas lounging chairs, although perhaps not originating here, have here taken on new colorings and have thus added a new note of gaiety to outdoor gatherings everywhere.

The Light Delights.

At that furniture store so highly exclusive as to worthily represent California, they are showing a fine collection of Oriental rugs, and showing them in a novel way. Foot lights placed along the inside of the windows, focus their radiance upon the beauteous carpets, bringing out the silken splendor of their warp and woof, so that passersby may see and realize.

Stunning Set.

Parasol, hat, cushion: This is the newest set. They are of organdy in a rosy tint, all frilled and as exquisite as the girl who shall carry them.

Pearling the World.

We were speaking of Los Angeles Industries (I always spell them with a capital—they take capital, you know.) "Are you aware," asked the man, "that right here in Los Angeles we receive, set, and deliver a marvelous number of perfect pearls?" He named the amount in dollars, but I was lost in fascinated admiration of the pearls displayed. Undressed pearls, they were, or I would call them so, since they were without setting—just the lovely, satiny globules as they come from the water! Some were as milky white as a babe's first little teeth; others were of creamy tints and some looked as though the first rays of some pearly sun were kissing their shimmering surfaces. Would you believe that Los Angeles had a truly extensive distributing place for dispensing these wonderful creations both wholesale and retail and for setting them as well? Oh, we have many industries of which you have never dreamed.

Fashion's featuring.

A dark blue poplin has a huge muslin collar of watermelon pink.

Evening dresses are often entirely covered with sequins and beads.

A touch of white neckwear generally brightens up the dark dresses.

Embroidery in jet edges the revers and cuffs of a black satin suit.

A traveling coat of green velour de laine has a deep-pleated cape collar.

Narrow, loosely tied belts are worn with the straight bodice effects.

The uneven line at the bottom of the skirt is noticed on the new frocks.

Slippers and pumps are decorated with rather elaborate perforated patterns.

Evening frocks are shown in vivid colors, such as rose, jade and champagne.

A skirt of black taffeta is smart worn with a black-trimmed white pique bolero.

A smart little frock of black taffeta has a deep tunic of embroidered white organdy.

Ladder-stitching is effective on white lingerie blouses.

Many of the summer hats are made of frilled taffeta.

Dark blue twill is used for street dresses resembling suits.

Striped materials are being used for bindings and pipings.

Evening frocks have tulle flounces with uneven edges.

The dropped shoulder line is smart with the short sleeve.

Fall suits will have very deep cuffs and high choker collars.

WOULD HAVE CAREY POSE.

Charles Russell, the western artist, several of whose works were recently acquired by wealthy easterners at an exhibit in Pasadena, has asked Harry Carey, the Universal film star, to pose for him for a life-size figure typifying the passing spirit of the old West. The artist claims that Carey's bearing and features lend themselves to this purpose very readily. Russell recently visited the actor on his ranch, about thirty miles from Universal City, and made a number of preliminary sketches of the star.

THE PICTURESQUE.

Salisbury Company is Busy in Shasta Country.

Monroe Salisbury has taken his entire aggregation of Monroe Salisbury players to Castle Lake in the Mt. Shasta region of Northern California for filming the big outdoor scenes for "The Barbarian," Salisbury's first independently produced starring vehicle.

The new road built from Sissons, Cal., to Castle Lake, in order that Salisbury could convey his company and equipment to that previously unfilmed region, was formally christened Tuesday by Miss Ann Cudahy. Miss Cudahy and her younger brother, Michael, have important roles in support of the masculine star.

The road was built by the Chamber of Commerce, the townspeople of Sissons, and the forest reserve service.

The picture is being shot with two cameras, one recording in black and white, and the other in natural color photography. Donald Crisp is directing the production with a cast including Alan Hale, Milton Markwell, Jane Novak, Harrison Post, Guy Milham, Sidney Dean, Larry Steers, Lillian Leighton, Marcell Daly, Barney Sherry, Eleanor Hancock, J. O'Neill and Master Michael and Miss Ann Cudahy.

MUD SLINGING RECEIVES BOOST.

Mud slinging has at last been adopted by polite society.

Through negotiations just concluded between the Special Pictures Corporation and Dawn Films, incorporated, Special Pictures will each week release a reel in animated mud.

The new company was recently incorporated in Los Angeles. Jack Dawn, formerly associated in a directorial capacity with Century comedies, is the president; Harry Coles, treasurer, and Harry Mahon, business manager.

Under the new process a specially prepared clay will be modeled to make a 700-foot subject. Actual scenarios will be prepared for animated representation, and a complete story will be told with the mud characters.

LAGUNA ART PROGRAM.

Dancing, Music and Living Pictures to Entertain.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LAGUNA BEACH, June 22.—The dramatic committee of the Laguna Beach Art Association will give an entertainment at the Civic Art Gallery Thursday and Friday evenings. Living pictures, esthetic dancing and music will comprise the program. Several well-known masterpieces of the painters' art will be represented by living models.

Mary McDonald of Riverside and Thelma Forman of Laguna Beach will interpret dances. James Murphy will be heard in a number of vocal selections.

The entire performance will be under the direction of Mrs. Goodrich, Miss Mary Gray and Miss Gayne Peake. It is being staged for the benefit of the art association.

NO DUTY ON HUN BOOKS.

An invidious distinction unwittingly made by the Canadian customs tariff has just been brought to light. It is that books printed in the German and Austrian languages are admitted free into the Dominion, while those printed in English or French have to pay duty.

Item 172 of the tariff provides for the free admission of "books printed in any language other than the English and French languages, or in any two languages not being English or French, or in any three or more languages."

This regulation has been in force for nearly twenty-five years, its object being presumably to afford a measure of protection to Canadian publishers.

It is somewhat surprising that its invidiousness did not strike someone a little earlier; but it is surely obvious that it should be rescinded at the earliest opportunity. The Hon. Mr. Burrill says that the cancellation of this preference is under consideration.—[Winnipeg Telegram.

REALLY THERE WAS NONE.

On Johnny's first day at school he was given a registration card on which his mother was to write his birth record. The following day he arrived without the registration slip.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "you must bring an excuse for being tardy and don't forget the slip about when you were born."

All out of breath the next day, Johnny rushed in, holding a note from his mother.

"Teacher," he gasped, "I brought the excuse for being tardy, but I forgot the one for being born."—[Columbus Dispatch.

Convicted.

A plate-glass window in a High-street store was broken out recently in such a manner that the firm name was broken off and the only lettering that remained intact was:

"Yoerger did it."—[Columbus Dispatch.

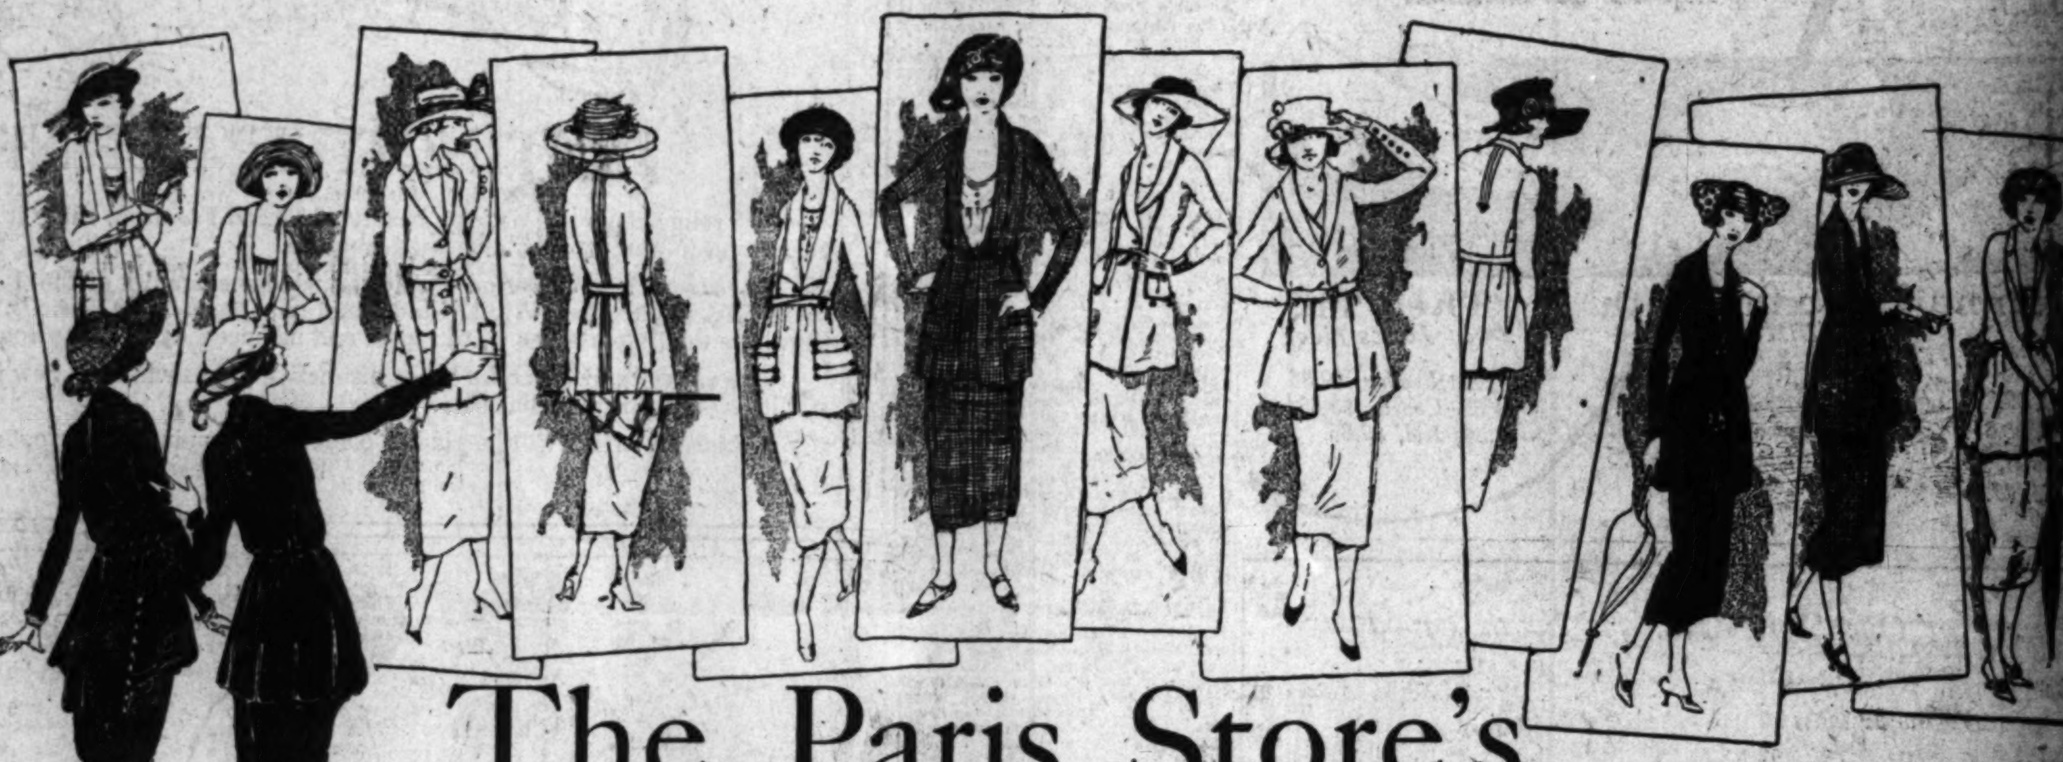
ANY summer straw hat in stock may be taken away tomorrow at either $5, $8.75 and $10. Good values in silk hats, too.



The Paris Store's Clearance of Suits at $23 $28 $33 $39 $48 $54 $59 $64

Contains every good style and quality from misses' jerseys to elaborate creations for matronly women

AND each and every one of these suits represents two kinds of economy in what you pay and what you get.

Real economy as we look at it is not in what you pay for a thing but in what you get for your money. Sometimes a $35 suit is very expensive and sometimes an $80 suit is cheap. That depends on who makes and who sells the garment.

Paris Store suits, no matter what the price, have that in-built quality, style and value which has given us the reputation for having the better-than-the-ordinary. That's one kind of economy.

The other is, that right now, ALL grades of Paris Store suits are greatly reduced. It's clearance time. And regardless of how good or stylish they are, they have exceedingly low prices.

Prices at a Half and Less—Some of These Suits Were Originally $125.00

Do You Want a Jersey Suit?

There are 25 shades to be had at the above prices. The styles are the approved Tuxedo and Norfolk models, with belts and patch pockets, etc.

Or a Velour Check Suit?

Some mighty pretty color combinations are here in blue and black, black and white, blue and tan, etc. They are in the fancy belted styles, with shawl collars.

Do You Want a Tricotine?

Almost any suit style you could think of, such as straight line suits, tailored or extremely fancy suits. Whatever your size or type you're sure of finding a suit of this material to please.

Or a Poiret Twill?

Not a great many suits of this dependable material left, but those that are here are in very smart styles for women and misses.

Or a Serge?

A lot of styles to choose from among the serges. Are you a woman who wants a conservative style serge suit? You can get one here. Are you a miss seeking a fancy braided serge suit? You'll find it here.

Or a Peachbloom?

In ultra smart styles, with lots of original touches. In paprika, navy blue, etc. Not very many of these left.

Taffeta Frocks Reduced to $19, $24, $28

The spell of taffeta remains unbroken, and will remain so as long as fashion continues to create such welcome styles as are found here in such variety. Frills and still more frills are everywhere employed to obtain most unusual effects.

Organdie Dresses $19, $24, $28, $33, Up

Dozens of dainty styles in delicious summery colors. Lacy collars and cuffs with tiny plaits, gorgeous colored narrow ribbon girdles with short sashes floating at the sides, ruffled apron tunics, and frills employed in most refreshing ways contribute to their irresistible appeal.

Frocks of Georgette $33, $44, $48, $54, $57

For some women the sheer beauty of Georgette possesses all the charm one could desire in a frock for dress occasions, while others prefer the elaborately beaded models. Both types are here at the above prices in all the delicate summer shades.

FINAL ELLIS CONCERT.

CHORAL SINGERS WILL GIVE PROGRAM AT TRINITY.

The Ellis Club will render the closing concert of the season Tuesday evening at Trinity Auditorium. A well-balanced program has been selected. The club's soloist will be Mme. Isabella Piana (Isobel Curl,) coloratura soprano. Mme. Piana is now the wife of a high official in the Italian navy, and she and her distinguished husband are spending a year resting in the United States.

The singer will render "Ah Fors e Lui," from Verdi's "La Traviata," and a group consisting of "The Fountain," by Vincent Jones; Cadman's "Thistle-Down" and a composition by the club's accompanist, Mrs. M. Hennion-Robinson, "The Seasons."

The chorus numbers will be the "Flying Dutchman's" review (Spross,) "Beauteous Night" from the "Tales of Hoffman" (Offenbach,) "Who is Sylvia" (Schubert,) "Willow Song" (unknown author,) "O Mistress Mine" (Barratt,) a negro melody, "Oh, Peter, Go Ring-a-dem Bells" (Burleigh-Brewer,) the "Three Fishers" (Goldbeck,) "Toreador, Hola" (Trotere,) "Song for June" (Johnson,) "Gentle Friend Pierrot" (Leoncavallo,) and Dudley Buck's "Chorus of Spirits and Hours," with tenor solo by Ralph Laughlin, and pipe organ accompaniment by Dr. Ray Hastings. Mrs. M. Hennion-Robinson will be the accompanist, and J. B. Poulin, director.

Dunning System Pupils.

A demonstration recital to prove the efficaciousness of the Dunning system of musical training will be presented by the pupils of Isobel M. Tone, resident exponent of the system, Wednesday afternoon at the Friday Morning clubhouse. Indications of the progress made by the students in the study of harmony and key relationships will be furnished by exercises and an attractive series of musical compositions will be offered. Some of the numbers will be played by pupils who have been taking lessons for only two to nine months, and whose ages range from 6 to 13.

Musical selections will be from Mendelssohn, Liszt, Strauss, Neidlinger, Gurlitt, Rogers and others. Those who will appear include Joan Burroughs, Margaret Colegrove, Helen Page, Hulbert Burroughs, Keith Davidson, Beatrice Stephens, Jean Roe, Marie Brown, Natalie Tatum, Donn Tatum, Aaron Silverman, Mary Donnell, Audrey Wallhaus, Florence Anderson, Ada Jeanette Shaffer and Ruth Upton.

Pianist Joins Colony.

Mrs. Frank N. Carter of New York, a sister of Mrs. Urquarhardt, formerly president of the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, is now a resident of Los Angeles, and will shortly open a piano studio here. Mrs. Carter was for several years a pupil of Letchetitzky.

Orcutt Students Appear.

Pupils of May Arcutt presented a carefully prepared program Saturday evening at Blanchard Hall. Especial talent was shown by Miss Julia Smythe, aged 11 years.

Contralto as Soloist.

Florence Middaugh, contralto, who recently arrived here from Denver, will be soloist at the approaching community concert in Hollywood July 4. Miss Middaugh filled several very successful eastern engagements immediately prior to taking up her residence here.

Bollman Pupil Pleases.

Nellie Colburn Walker, a pupil of Maude Fenlon Bollman, has been appearing as soloist at a number of recent events. During the past week she was on a program presented by Charles Demorest. She also sang a solo at the last concert by the Woman's Lyric Club, and at the Hollywood Festival. She will render a composition by Frederick Stevenson, "I Sought the Lord," at the Church of the Messiah today.

Mrs. Bollman herself achieved prominence in the East with her own recital appearance. She studied with such noted teachers as Herbert Witherspoon, Oscar Seagle, Frank La Forge, Isadore Luckstrand, Richard Hageman and Theodore Toedt. She is a soloist in the First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena.

Recital at Egan's.

A large number of the musically talented students of the Egan School, will appear in a recital under the direction of Bertha Winslow Vaughn, in the ballroom of the Little Theater, Tuesday evening. On the same program Frank Egan will present one of his most interesting and talented pupils, Isabelle Foyer, who will give added charm by four clever readings.

Summer Music Session.

The summer session of the college of music, University of Southern California, will open tomorrow, and run until August 6. In addition to applied and theoretical subjects there will be interpretation classes in piano for advanced pianists and teachers, which will be conducted by Olga Steeb, head of the piano department. Arnold Wagner will be head of the public school music department and member of the voice faculty. Leila Ellis, pianiste, former graduate of the college, will have classes, and Annie Craig will be student adviser and assistant member of the voice faculty. Children's classes will be conducted by Adelaide Trowbridge.

Maude Fenlon Bollman.

Conservatory Commencement.

The faculty and students of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music had their commencement exercises Thursday evening at the Ebell Clubhouse. Those who were presented in the program were Louise Gregory, Helen Van Vleck, Alta Jury, Faith Hitchkock, Helen Blomquist, Coral Atkins, Ruth Kale, Mabel Briney, Edith Holmes, Helen Rutherford, Doris Valentine, Susie Rohman, Myrtle Winnie, Marjorie Long, Iva Bonser and Harry Cassidy. Diplomas, prizes and certificates were presented at the close of the program.

Community Chorus Plans.

The Hollywood Community Chorus season closed Monday evening at their regular meeting, under the direction of Hugo Kirchoffer. The soloist of the occasion was Herbert Douglas, pianist, who played a Chopin program.

It was the annual meeting of the chorus, and J. J. Palmer presided. Mrs. J. J. Carter was elected president; F. G. Leonard, vice-president; Harriet Gray, secretary, and Mrs. Bernard Brown, chairman of the music committee.

It was announced that during the summer there will be "sings" every Sunday at 4:30 p.m. at the Theater Arts Alliance site.

Helen Thorner Here.

Mme. Helen Thorner, a gifted recital artist, formerly living here, has been visiting Los Angeles during the last week, making arrangements with Impresario Behymer for next season. At Santa Barbara under the direction of Mrs. C. E. Herbert of that city, she will give a series of intimate song recitals of the fine type which she does so well, while in Los Angeles she will be heard in public recital, as well as a number of private musicales.

Blanche Seaver Returns.

Blanche Seaver, a favorite accompaniste of Los Angeles, has just returned from the East where she went on a flying trip to visit relatives in Chicago and finish the details of the publication of her two newest songs. "Baby's Catechism," a delightful bit—which, by the way, will be used on the Schumann-Heink programs next season—has been accepted for immediate publication on generous terms to the composer. A new Japanese song has also been accepted, and in addition to being placed on sale in the fall, will be incorporated in a new musical comedy this summer in the East.

Mae Enderly to Tour.

Mae Shumway Enderly will spend the summer at her home in Beverly Glen. In September she will go on tour with the Chautauqua, and her engagements will take her east shortly after.

DAMROSCH "CURSE" ON DISCORD MAKERS.

LORD MAYOR GIVES MEDAL TO DISTINGUISHED CONDUCTOR.

LONDON, June 18.—High tribute was paid to the New York Symphony Orchestra today, when Sir Edward E. Cooper, Lord Mayor of London, gave a luncheon for its members at the Mansion House. Many distinguished people were present to honor Walter Damrosch, conductor of the orchestra, and the other American musicians.

Among those attending the luncheon were John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, and Mrs. Davis; Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States; Sir Gilbert Parker, the novelist, and a number of noted English musicians, including Sir Henry Joseph Wood, Landon Ronald and Sir Alexander Campbell MacKenzie.

The Lord Mayor, himself a musician, who sang for twenty years in St. Paul's, conferred on Mr. Damrosch the rare honor of the Medal of the Royal Musicians' Company, of which the Lord Mayor is master. The medal has been struck, but not yet received, he said, and will be sent to Mr. Damrosch at New York.

CURSE ON DISCORD-MAKERS.

In a brief speech Mr. Damrosch said that the seven weeks' tour of Belgium, France and Italy had been accomplished despite every kind of strike, and their mission had been cultural as well as musical.

"We feel that we have promoted the amnity of nations," he added. "We have arrived here whole, sane and healthy, and our reception has gladdened our hearts.

"We want to wish a dark, weird, heavy curse upon those mischievous persons who try to accentuate the superficial differences between Americans and English."

The conductor was cheered for several minutes at the conclusion of his address.

DAVIS ON NATION'S HARMONY.

Ambassador Davis said that the orchestra's visit had been the occasion of satisfaction on the part of every American in London. He hoped that their harmony was the symbol of that which had always obtained between America and England.

When the Ambassador proposed the health of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress Mr. Damrosch suggested three American cheers, which were given lustily.

The Lord Mayor, replying, repeated the expression of heartfelt satisfaction over the orchestra's visit, and hoped "that the harmony which now exists between the two countries will continue forever."—[New York Times.

LYRIC WRITER LECTURES

Speaks on Influence of St. Brigid in the Arts.

A musically illustrated lecture was given by Kate Beirne-O'Rourke, writer of song lyrics, before a large class of pupils and the teachers in charge of the music department at Boyle Heights Orphans' School, last Monday, June 21.

The subject was "Saint Brigid," the patroness of Ireland, her life as a royal princess, her life as a nun and foundress of the first convent in Ireland with its school of arts and her miracles and music. The speaker was assisted by Lewis A. Kerwin, who played "Sacred Music" by Irish composers of the fifth century. "Saint Brigid, the Mary of Erin," the sacred number dedicated to the Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell, Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, by Miss Beirne-O'Rourke and Mr. Kerwin, was sung by a chorus, with Mr. Kerwin at the piano.

In concluding Miss Beirne-O'Rourke offered a prize for the pupil who will offer the best essay on "The Life of Saint Brigid" on the school opening, next fall.

SHE'S :: NOTED :: COLORATURA.

Singer Returns to Her Former Home.

Mme. Isabella Piana.

COLORATURA PAYS VISIT TO HER HOME

Isabella Curl-Piana Has no Worry From Opera Temperament.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

To have left Los Angeles eighteen years ago and to return to find a new city in the place which one has called home is the experience of Isabella Curl-Piana, coloratura soprano, who is to be soloist with the Ellis Club Tuesday evening and later with the Philharmonic Orchestra. Mme. Piana was born at Riverside and was a graduate of the college of music, University of Southern California, under F. A. Bacon, eighteen years ago. She sang here and hereabouts and then went to Italy, the promised land of the voice student, to learn "bel canto."

Several years of study abroad put her in a position to appear before Italian, French and English audiences in opera, recital and oratorio. Her voice is high and light, but there is a lyric quality in the lower register, and so she was able to undertake such roles as Violetta, Gilda and Dinorah, which she did at the Teatro Nazionale at Rome, and the Dalvermi in Milan.

Then she married Commander Piana of the Italian navy. But her career continued and broadened and she has not ceased to collect new leaves for her laurel wreath.

Mme. Piana is the least opera-prima-donnaish person in the world. She has none of the phrases, manners or general make-up of the professional. In the first place, she shows one a picture of her husband rather than of herself and, when called upon at her apartment, did not intimate the presence of an opera baby, as all prima donnas do. She has never been divorced and does not intend to be. With this information one felt a bit disheartened, which effect the singer at once discerned.

"I am sorry I have nothing notorious to tell you about myself," she said. "My life has been perfectly smooth and free from complications. I am so happy to be here, but it is like coming to a new place entirely.

"I tried to return three times before I succeeded, because, you see, I am an alien now. When I could get a steamer I couldn't get a permit, and vice versa. Anyway, I wanted to wait until my husband could accompany me, and the present was my only opportunity, for he has been liason officer aboard the H.M.S. Queen, which was stationed for two years of wartime at Taranta, Italy.

"When the war broke out I was on tour in England and I canceled all engagements and went home to Italy to do war work and to sing at benefits. After the Italian drive on Austria there were so many refugees and so much misery to be relieved that one could do nothing but help. So, except for benefit concerts, my musical career ceased abruptly.

"My husband has leave for a year and I shall stay here for that time."

Mme. Piana's programs show an amazing number of American songs. In fact, many of them show nothing else, except, of course, the operatic arias which one expects from every coloratura. There are, however, in her repertoire many hundreds of numbers of many nationalities.

The singer arrived here a month ago and has presented one program at Riverside and one at Pomona. Tuesday evening she will make her first appearance in Los Angeles in eighteen years.

McADAM PUPILS VISIT.

Winning Success in Screen and Vaudeville Work.

Two pupils of the McAdam School of Dancing, who have achieved prominence on the screen and the Orpheum circuit, were recent visitors to this city. They are Miss St. Moore and Mr. Sheltoni, both of whom have revealed a marked interpretative ability in the Terpsichorean art. They have shown an especial talent for dancing that is effective on the screen, which, in itself, is a distinctive branch of the study. They will shortly fill an engagement for another tour, it is announced.

The critic of the Paris "L'Homme Libre" said in part: "Although I am chauvin enough to demand the integral fulfillment of the Treaty of Versailles, I think I can risk the statement that I found much more complete pleasure in hearing the Heroic Symphony executed by the orchestra of M. Weingartner than that of Walter Damrosch. But I am prepared to give due praise to the good translation, if I may so express myself, which the latter gave us of 'Istar' and the praiseworthy intentions which he exerted in interpreting the subtle Maurie Ravel."

The "Liberete" critic thought "the real sense of Beethoven and of Franck escaped" the New York Symphony, but finished by stating that the playing of "Daphnis and Chloe" "aroused great enthusiasm."

According to "Figaro's" critic "the constant efforts of the active director of the New York Symphony Orchestra have not been in vain." But he finishes by saying "America, as a young nation, prefers and appears better to understand the rude audacities of our contemporary school than the sweet classics of the old masters."

A bit of a sting to all this but—there must always be a beginning, and those who undertake it usually have to take what comes.

Nevertheless, I predict that the next orchestral invasion of Europe—whether it be by Damrosch or some one else—will enlist more liberality or the critical mind.

PRICKING A BUBBLE.

Misinformation is such a vigorous and rapid traveler that very often it manages, by its indisputable activities, to make a nonexistent thing appear to be the truth. Take, as a concrete specimen, the prevailing opinion that Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein is blossoming into a full-fledged grand opera impresario . . . or "impresariess."

The public has been told that an "arrangement" was made between Mrs. Hammerstein and Fortune Gallo, and so it was. But—Mr. Gallo is still the sole director of the San Carlo Opera Company, and he will continue to be when that organization gives its most pretentious season next September in Mrs. Hammerstein's Manhattan Operahouse.

I should not be surprised to see Mr. Gallo withdraw from his contract with Mrs. Hammerstein which affects their comanagement of the Manhattan. He has found his "pressing duties" elsewhere increasing of late, and . . . well, you know what that means.

GIVING DADDY AWAY.

A traveling man at the Chittenden the other day was telling of one of his customers, a hardware merchant in one of the smaller places in the State, who enjoys the game of pool as a diversion after business hours.

Frequently after closing his store he drops in a pool room next door and enjoys a game or two before going home. His little daughter, who often waits on him while indulging in his pastime, one evening after going home said to her mother, "What kind of a game is that daddy plays when he takes a stick and hits a ball, then says 'Oh h—l'?"—Columbus Dispatch.

USE OF BAMBOO TO MAKE PAPER.

Londoner Suggests Plan to End World Shortage.

Hope on Pulp Situation by Government Expert.

Great Wealth of Material Found in Tropics.

BY MAYNARD EVANS.

LONDON, June 14. — William Riatt, F.C.S., consulting cellulose expert to the government of India, who has been engaged for more than twenty-five years in searching for new paper-making materials, expects to find in the tropics the only solution of the problem of the world-wide paper shortage, a shortage which has brought country newspapers and book publishers alike to such a crisis as they have never known before.

"I see no permanent solution of the oft-recurring difficulty of paper-makers' supplies except in these waste annual growths of our tropical and subtropical forests," he says. "If literature came to an end for lack of paper and if the great forests of the temperate zone disappeared—as experts say they will—in twenty-five years, under the demand for wood pulp, civilized humanity would find relief in India and in tropical Africa. We have in India grasses on which a considerable amount of research work has been done by the Forest Research Institute of India with a view toward their utilization for paper making, but we have not yet arrived at a complete success, owing to certain practical difficulties. The experiments on the grasses or reeds of the swamp country in the Bahr-al-Ghazal province of the Sudan have so far not given complete success, as might be expected, seeing that in physical and chemical characteristics they are exactly similar to the savannah grasses of India.

FIELD FOR NEW SUPPLY.

"While these grasses, therefore, promise a large source of supply for the future, they cannot at present be counted on as a practical proposition. I think that eventually the difficulties will be overcome, but at present the field for a new source of supply is held by bamboo. The difficulties that we have found with grasses do not occur in the case of bamboo, and such difficulties as there are have already been overcome. It can now be said, in fact, that there remain no practical difficulties in transforming bamboo into pulp, and that there is here the promise of a large supply under conditions which, compared with a material like wood, are permanent, for while wood takes from thirty to fifty years to grow, bamboo renews itself annually. In Burmah, particularly, the transport conditions for it—and transport, it must be remembered, is always a serious matter in this industry—cannot be surpassed. In many places, indeed, the whole transport in and out of the factory can be accomplished on inland tidal water."

This statement is the only ray of light in the black situation which prevails in the British paper market. Since January 1, 280 British newspapers and periodicals have had to increase in price. The present price of newsprint paper manufactured in British mills is 13 cents a pound or $283.48 a ton; before the war it was roughly 2 cents a pound or $50 a ton. For every ton of paper made in Britain a ton of coal is used and the average cost of conversion in a British mill is $60 a ton—a cost to which the recent increase in the price of coal will add. The tremendous demand for paper in the United States is largely blamed for the state of things in the British paper market. Formerly the United States took only a third of its supply from Canada permitting Canada to ship its large surplus to Britain and also permitting the United States itself to ship a certain amount to Britain. A good deal of paper is still coming to this country from Canada but the supply is wholly inadequate. Britain is now thrown back on Scandinavia and Finland for its supplies and the Scandinavians and Finns are making hay while the sun shines.

Added strain has already been thrown on Britain's slender paper supplies by a number of American buyers who have recently come over with signed blank checks and instructions to buy up all the paper they could get their hands on.

But the lack of machinery here is only a side issue. The only remedy is the opening up of further sources of supply. As long as Britain is at the mercy of Scandinavia, there is no reason, paper dealers say, why prices should not still be doubled.

In the British book-publishing world, the situation is still worse. Early in the year the best quality of paper used for novels—70-pound antique wove — was priced at 15½ cents and quickly rose to 17½. A month ago it had risen to 18½ and 19. Three weeks ago it had come up to 23 cents. At present it is at 25 cents, and one well-known London merchant told me today he would not be surprised to see it go to 30 cents in a week. Many publishers have been sounding the Scandinavian market, but the position there is as bad as it is in England. It is a fact that some of the Swedish and Danish publications are unable to obtain and keep in stock more than 200 reams of any variety of book paper. Norway, being the main supply center, is better supplied, of course, but paper is not obtainable there in large quantities, either. The Danish factories are quite unable to cope with the demand, so that the northern country, on a decreased output basis, finds she has to meet bigger orders than ever before.

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS

On legal affidavit, John Hart Brittain, business man, certified to this: "My head at the top and back was absolutely bald. The scalp was shiny. An expert said that he thought the hair roots were extinct, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth.

"Yet now, at an age over 66, I have a luxuriant growth of soft, strong, lustrous hair! No trace of baldness. The pictures shown here are from my photographs." Mr. Brittain certified further:

INDIAN'S SECRET OF HAIR GROWTH

After hair growth.

"At a time when I had become discouraged at trying various hair lotions, tonics, specialists' treatments, etc., I came across, in my travels, a Cherokee Indian 'medicine man' who had an elixir that he asseverated would grow my hair. Although I had but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my amazement a light fuzz soon appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and ere long my hair was as prolific as in my youthful days.

That I was astonished and happy is expressing my state of mind mildly.

Obviously, the hair roots had not been dead, but were dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilizing potency of the mysterious pomade.

I negotiated for and came into possession of the principle for preparing this mysterious elixir, now called Kotalko, and later had the recipe put into practical form by a chemist.

That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved."

How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair

It has been proved in very many cases that hair roots did not die even when the hair fell out through dandruff, fever, alopecia areata or certain other hair or scalp disorders. Miss A. D. Otto reports: "About 8 years ago my hair began to fall out until my scalp in spots was almost entirely bald. I used everything that was recommended but was always disappointed until at last I came across Kotalko. My bald spots are being covered now; the growth is already about three inches." G. W. Mitchell reports: "I had spots completely bald, over which hair is now growing since I used Kotalko." Mrs. Matilda Maxwell reports: "The whole front of my head was as bald as the palm of my hand for about 15 years. Since using Kotalko, hair is growing all over the place that was bald." Many more splendid reports from satisfied users.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

PAYING THE PIPER.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

"What's the matter with matrimony?" asked a man despairingly, after we had listened to a harrowing recital of the domestic squabbles of a young couple in whom we were both interested.

"Here's Jim and Bess who start out married life with everything in their favor—youth, and health, and intelligence, and enough money to live on comfortably, and crazily in love with each other. I'd have sworn that that marriage was a sure-thing success—couldn't fail—yet here they are, in five years, fighting like Kilkenny cats, and both of 'em wishing they had the courage to beat it to Reno.

"What has happened to disillusionize them with the holy estate? What's the matter with matrimony, anyway, in these days that so few people seem to have nerve enough to endure it with fortitude, to say nothing of considering it a heaven on earth where they lived happily ever after as in the story books."

"There's nothing the matter with matrimony," I replied. "It's the same good old reliable institution it was in our fathers' and our grandfathers' and our great-grandfathers' time. The trouble is with the people, and what is the matter with them is that they are no longer willing to pay the price.

"The average young couple get married thinking they can welch on Cupid and it can't be done. Hence these tears and criminations and recrimination and the sound of connubial fetters being rended and broke and homes wrecked.

"Youths and maidens have an illusion that matrimony is a free picnic where all that they have to do is to dance, and feast, and make merry with the good-looking and joyous companion whom they have picked out for mates. They are too ignorant to know that there is nothing gratis in this world—not even love—and that instead of the holy estate being a cheap pleasure resort we are required to give up everything we possess for a pass through its doors.

"And so when matrimony presents its little bill to them they are unprepared for the staggering price they are asked to pay, and howl to heaven that they won't be mulcted that way and they'll go to the divorce court first.

"Perhaps our fathers and mothers didn't enjoy paying the matrimonial piper any more than we do, but at any rate they seem to have realized that the debt would have to be liquidated for when they married they settled down, and accepted with a good grace the responsibilities of a family and bowed their necks to the matrimonial yokes.

Young people nowadays, especially girls, don't look upon getting married as a settling process, but as a liberating one. If they are rich girls it frees them from parental authority and the eye of chaperones. If they are poor girls it relieves them from the necessity of earning their own living and keping working hours. In both cases it gives them for the first time in their lives a chance for a little fling on their own.

"Hence the idea of turning their back upon gaiety, and for wearing pretty clothes, and giving in ten times as much to a husband as they ever did to father, and working fifty times harder in a kitchen than they ever did in an office does not appeal to them. It isn't what they expected to pay for their wedding rings.

If a girl told the truth she would admit that what she demands of marriage is all that she has plus the love and support of a husband who will always be flattering and cajoling her and never too tired or busy to take her out of evenings.

She wants to be as free as an unmarried woman to come and go. She wants the things money buys though married to a poor man. She wants to live in idleness, and to make no sacrifice of her individuality. She only wants the kind of children who are born in embroidered French muslin and blue ribbons and golden curls and who never howl with colic or get dirty.

There is no such graft in marriage as she hoped to find. To most women marriage means adapting themselves to crotchety husbands. It means sacrifice. It means labor that is never done. It means staying at home and made-over clothes and few pleasures. It means washing little faces and walking sick babies and hearing lessons and living in a bedlam of noise.

That's the price a woman generally has to pay for wifehood and motherhood, and it is because so many are not willing to pay it that there are so many disgruntled women, and so many miserable homes. They thought, poor simple souls, that somehow they could get the best thing in the world without giving any return for it.

Nor are men any more willing to pay the price of matrimony than women. A man thinks that he can enjoy all the freedom of his bachelor days and just superimpose a home and wife on top of that as a cook puts a fancy meringue on top of a pie. He wants to come and go as he used to without tears or reproaches from wife; he wants to stay downtown for little games with the boys without scenes at home; and to take old women friends out to tea and lunch without arousing the green-eyed monster in his spouse's breast.

He also wants to spend his money on himself as he used to, for his idea of matrimony is as false a one as the girl's. He has visioned it as a place where a young and beautiful wife, always exquisitely dressed and in an angelic temper, waited in a vine-wreathed cottage—that was run on air—to welcome him after his day's work was done—in case he felt like coming home.

He finds that the marriage bond is forged of chilled steel and that he is chained as tightly to his partner as ever any other two prisoners were and that no criminal has ever got more of a life sentence than he. He finds that marriage reduces the average man to little more than a wage slave, who spends his life toiling for doctors and grocers and butchers and tailors and dressmakers. He finds that even the best of wives have their days when they are nervous and cross and unreasonable, that children can be demons and brats as well as seraphs.

The loss of freedom, unending work, self-sacrifice; that is what a man must pay for matrimony and many a one defaults on the promissory note he has given a girl in the days of courtship.

In the meantime there stands marriage; offering just what it always has to men and women who are willing to pay the price—a devotion that never fails. Loyalty that sticks through thick and thin, and good and evil days. Tenderness like the tenderness of God. The cling of babies' arms about the neck. Price in stalwart sons and lovely daughters. The renewal of your life in your children's life. The serenest, purest happiness that ever comes to a human being.

But you must pay the price, for life is the inexorable debt collector that exacts the last farthing for everything she gives.

You cannot have your wedding cake and eat it too. You must pay the price.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Question: What is the weight of a Liberty motor, and what is the weight of the water it carries in its radiator, and what is its horse power? L. I. O.

Answer: The air service states that a Liberty engine weighs 806 pounds, the horse power is 400, and the weight of the water contained in the radiator is seventy-four pounds.

Q.: What is the oldest living thing in the world? J. M. T.

A.: Trees are the oldest living things in the world, and the General Sherman tree of Sequoia National Park is probably the patriarch of them all. It was a goodly specimen when Moses led the children out of the land of Egypt, and was 2000 years old when Jesus of Nazareth was born. When last measured this tree was 279.7 feet high, and 102.8 feet in circumference.

Q.: How many golf professionals are there is this country? L. E. R.

A.: According to the Spaulding list, there are 1372 regularly employed golf professionals in the United States.

Q.: What is the difference between wood, lumber and timber? A. L.

A.: The term wood is of general application and covers both timber and lumber. Timber is wood suitable for use in buildings, carpentry, etc., whether in the tree or cut and seasoned. It is also applied to forest land covered by trees producing such wood. Lumber is timber which has been sawed or split for use as beams, boards, planks, etc.

Q.: What is the oldest forage crop grown, and what is the best? L. W. A.

A.: Alfalfa is the oldest plant, so far as known, to be cultivated solely for forage. It was grown by the Greeks and Romans. According to Pliny, it was introduced into Greece from Media at the time of the Persian wars with King Darius, about 470 B. C. Media or Persia is probably the region of its original culture. Red clover is the most important of all leguminous forage crops, both on account of its high value as feed and from the fact that it can be so well employed in rotations.

Q.: Where is the American River? L. E. I.

A.: This river is in North Central California, rising in Eldorado county and emptying into the Sacramento River, a short distance north of the city of Sacramento. Gold has been frequently found along its banks.

Q.: What does the word "amen" mean? A. S. R.

A.: Amen is a word of Hebrew origin, meaning "thou has said it" or "so I believe."

Q.: What is meant by "the black hole of Calcutta?" E. S. T.

A.: The name was given to an apartment in Calcutta in which a party of English were confined on the night of June 20, 1756. The garrison of the fort connected with the English factory at Calcutta was captured by the Nawab Siraj du Daula, who caused all the prisoners taken to be confined in a room 18 feet by 14 feet 10 inches. This cell had only two windows, obstructed by a veranda. Of the 156 people who spent the night in a horror of thirst, heat and agony from pressure, only twenty-three survived the experience.

Q.: Are there any silver mines in Kentucky? M. B. T.

A.: The Bureau of Mines states that there are no silver mines in the State of Kentucky. There is an old legend which prevails throughout the country regarding lost silver mines in this State, but there is no foundation for it

Q.: Did any Irishmen come to America on the Mayflower? P. O. L.

A.: William Mullins and Christopher Martin, who are both enrolled on the log of the Mayflower, were Irishmen.

Q.: Who invented the modern clock? K. L. F.

A.: The balance clock, the first of modern clocks, is ascribed to Pope Silvester II, A. D. 996.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Are They Helping?

GARDENA, June 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I see where 300 club women are demanding legislation to prevent the Japanese from owning and farming land.

I am wondering if any of those women have sons farming and helping to feed this nation.

I attended a crochet class recently, and farming was discussed. The lady who sat opposite to me said: "I have a ranch of forty acres in the Santa Ana district and five big sons, and not one of them shall work on it. So we rent it, and it is awful the condition in which it is kept."

This is truly an example of the majority of mothers. All they think about is raising their sons in cuffs and collar style, working for a month's pay to buy fine-looking shoes and corsets, fingers the color of ducks' feet from smoking cigarettes.

It is high time young America was set to work, that it abandon money spending and high times. Then there would be no need for legislation to keep out Japanese or anyone else.

I have sons myself, from 11 years up, and they work hand in hand with the manure pile and education, which is the pathway to useful manhood.

MRS. MARY SIMPSON.

Marble Cheaper Than Lumber.

A report to Washington from the American commercial attache in Rome is to the effect that American lumber has gone to such price heights in the Italian market that builders find it cheaper to put in marble stair cases than to build them of wood. Such is the combined effect of mill cost, plus freight rates, multiplied by the exchange premium of four to one that Italian buyers have to pay to translate our money into theirs.—[New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Peg o' Los Angeles goes buying

Hand-painted miniatures on wood are smart for pendants.

Have you seen that lovely new shop of Swobdi's at 705-707 W. Seventh? In these spacious rooms, which became a necessity on account of their increasing clientele, one may try on charming chapeaux to the heart's content. The French rooms are simply exquisite and for the sake of these Mme. Swobdi is even now on her way to Paris to select le dernier cri from the French designers. She will stop also at New York, from where she is sending Fifth-avenue models for your adornment.

One-piece dresses of sports silks are very smart.

When longing for some real delicacies after the matinee or to make a delightful ending for an evening at the theater, did you ever try the fountain specials at the Elite? Some very unusual and quite wonderful concoctions are served here and, of course you know that they are famed for their French pastries at 641 S. Flower.

The smartest stockings have satin stripes.

There are so many luxuries one wants these days and sometimes it's a problem to figure out the "ways and means." Perhaps I can help. Have you, by any chance, some diamonds you are not wearing? If so, I know a man who will buy them at top prices and the money thus acquired can be used to purchase—oh, 'most anything. See Fergusson, 206 Haas Bldg.

The outdoor togs need not be mannish—but may have soft, becoming lines.

Everyone is talking about the wonderful home cooking at the Russian Tea Room. Their pastry is simply delicious and their salads have a reputation all their own. Special business luncheons are served at 50 and 75 cents, also splendid evening dinners and delightful afternoon tea, 631 S. Grand.

The Key to Beauty witch hazel toilet preparations have been compounded to prevent the bad effect of California climate on the skin by Anna M. Bergeron, skin specialist, on sale at Robinson's, Ville de Paris and Bullock's, or the manufacturer's office, top floor Haas Bldg.

What joy to take your ocean plunge without having your hair come out of curl. This experience can be yours if you have a permanent wave put in by Emma Atkin on the famous Nestle machine. She makes lovely curls and waves which look even better after a good wetting. She curls white hair without yellowing it. 736 W. 7th. 66782.

Some fascinating bathing suits are of gold and silver metal cloth.

You have the most wonderful chance now to have your furs made over at special summer prices. Peter Kadlec will make them into the new fall styles, he does most clever work. Fifth floor, Brack-Shops.

The Sportsman's Tent is really just a big umbrella with drop curtains all around. It has a spread of ten feet and will easily accommodate two cots and can be rolled into the most compact of bundles. On the beach this umbrella can be used as a sunshade or with part of the curtains lowered for a wind break. See it at Robinson's.

Jade in various designs is much used for pendants.

Foggy days hold no terrors for the maiden who has had her hair permanently waved. Experts do this work carefully and do not hurt one at Hudgen's exclusive permanent wave shop, which is the oldest on the coast and the largest west of New York—occupying the whole front of one fourth floor of the Brack-Shops. The hair is steamed—not baked—and remains soft and glossy. 62862.

There is such charm about the Peggy Frocks for tiny tots! They are created in such exclusive styles, one doesn't see them everywhere, and then, besides, they can be made to order, although there are many ready-to-wear at both shops, 2026 Orange and 666 South Alvarado. Lovely lingerie and negligees and smart frocks, too, are now being made for grown-ups. Wilshire 296 and 558771.

Hats made of rows and rows of narrow ribbon are smart for sport.

To make the midsummer purse stretch until fall—especially when one is sorely tempted by the alluring shop windows—is quite a feat. But if you know this shop in a home, "Everywoman's," the task becomes a pleasure. Here you find frocks and sports togs, hats and shoes galore, which are sold for a mere song—smart, up-to-the-minute things, too. It's 448 South Alvarado, first house north of Sixth. 558983. Open daily and Monday and Thursday evenings.

Too fat? Too thin? Not exactly well? You can be brought to normal weight and measurements and be vastly improved in health by the Reiss system—without drugs or starvation. It's intensely interesting, too. 802 Title Guarantee Building, 220 W. Fifth. Phone 67815.

If you desire exclusive designs, exquisite workmanship and wonderful quality, seek Ye Hande Made Shoppe, where the best is always the least expensive. They make negligees, caps, bags, flowers, everything in underwear. Fifth floor Brack-Shops.

The newest bracelets are of green and amber celluloid, set with jewels.

Yes, indeed, they clean automobiles, clean the upholstering and rugs, and dye them, too, if need be; renew the straps and generally rejuvenate the cars. And, don't forget, if your Palm Beach suit needs cleaning, send it to these same folks, the Cooper Dye Works, 1369 W. Washington. 25109.

When that most exclusive shop announces a sale of millinery one feels that without a doubt there will be offered the choicest of hats! And you all know what Mandel's is, at 733 S. Hill, next door south of the Alhambra. Every straw hat will be sold at cost. Among these are many exclusive Bendel models, Phipps, Joseph, Burgesser and Redfern, also many charming chapeaux from their own work rooms. There are smart sport hats in the new light colors, dress hats and hats for every occasion and for every face, a gala array! Here, too, one finds a line of most exclusive blouses, bought before the rise in prices; some slightly soiled will be offered at cost. There are over blouses, fresh and new tailored waists, blouses trimmed with real laces, many of these imported, the latest models, and these also will sell to you at cost.

Nothing so freshens up the costume of midsummer as does the new chapeau. And well miladi knows this—so it does not take much urging—but just a tiny hint, suggesting the last sale of the season at Jack Lane's—to send her flying townward early Monday morning. On the tenth floor of the Brack-Shops she'll find the most fetching hats for all occasions—hats which cannot fail to change the tone, indeed the whole expression of an accustomed frock or suit. And when once she learns that the prices are to be five, seven-fifty and ten—there'll be no keeping her from buying several of them, I'm sure.

Every woman desires a lovely skin and she can have it if she has her skin toned up with those scientific packs at the Markman Beauty Parlor. They bleach the skin, take out those tell-tale lines and give that youthful glow so coveted. The famous Madam Huntingford Hot oil scalp treatments also are given. Tenth floor Brack-Shops. 14363.

Not-a-Pin but a "Slip-Grip" tie fastener—for men's soft collars, girls use them for mannish blouses, too. You'll find these at Barnes', the "Time Piece Specialist," 709 S. Hill. He is also showing those smart Waldemar watch chains, made of onyx, pearls and silver and some lovely mesh bags and wrist watches.

A necklace of indestructible pearls is a most fetching addition to the smart costume. At the exclusive pearl shop of R. D. Howes and Son, fifth floor, Brack-Shops, you will find a fine line of these. Pearls restrung.

On warm summer days a crisp salad looks so inviting—and tastes even better. So everyone says who visits the Boston Lunch Room at noon time. At 709 S. Hope they also serve most excellent pastry and meat dishes.

It is such a satisfaction, when you need a bungalow apron or a house dress, to step in to the Nifty Nell Shop and select what you want out of stock. They have the smartest and cleverest frocks of gingham, voile, percale and many other wash materials, which will fit you to perfection. Their uniforms for nurses are most popular. 692 S. Alvarado.

The most surprising sale of the season. Kruger, that clever tailor, will make you the most beautifully-tailored suit—fashioned from the latest spring fabrics—for only $50. There will be many smart novelty mixtures to choose from, but the offer is for this week only. Fourth floor, Brack-Shops.

If you have some very particular work in cleaning or dyeing, try the Fanset Dye Works, 1010 South San Pedro. Phone Main 4242. They make a specialty of out-of-town orders and pay charges one way.

You are as old as you look, so have that graying hair tinted any shade by Lois Hardin, expert, 306 Haas Building. Phone 62715.

This week you'll have a remarkable opportunity to buy negligees at wonderful reductions! Think of this, just because it's slightly handled, you can buy a charming Georgette negligee for $12.50, just half its regular price and a heavy satin one, for $10, and beautiful silk fiber sweaters will be on sale at Cowen & Son's this week for only $12. Wool tuxedos, formerly $10.50, at $7.50. Ripple sweaters, formerly $12.50, will sell at $7.75. Slip-ons at $5.95. Pure silk Radmore hose; $2.50 values at $1.98, and fiber silk hose at $1.49. Wool bathing suits marked $8.50, now $6.95, and lisle ones at $3.50. 724 South Hill.

Beach days will be far more joyous if you have your hair permanently waved! And no matter if it is very fine or even white, Mrs. Lux can wave it on her famous Nestle machine. This process is a steaming one, which keeps the hair from breaking and makes it soft and glossy. Expert hairdressing and permanent marceling at Nestle Shop, eighth floor, Brack-Shops, 63332.

Many are the delightful creations originated at the famous Cawston Ostrich Farm in South Pasadena. There's the bridal bouquet made of flowers fashioned from ostrich feathers, a gem of loveliness! There's the cut-ostrich scarf, an ideal summer wrap, there are hundreds of other things, which you will see in their display rooms and the ostriches themselves are worth a trip to see!

On hottest days it's so cool and delightful at the charming Mary Louise, twelfth floor, Brack-Shops, and many are the luncheon, tea and dinner parties given there. If you have not enjoyed the service of this famous retreat, you have missed a lot of joy.

Oh, tub dresses can be as neat and sweet as they are practical and such are the Williams-Wear house and porch dresses. These are made of the best ginghams and are noted for their fit. In many styles you'll find them at 734 South Hill.

Organdy flowers are the latest for trimming hats, for boutonnieres, corsage bouquets and divers other adornments. They are sold at all stores and are made to order. Call Mrs. Walker. 288497.

That Curtis window is worth a trip to see. Wonderful western pictures in sepia and those delightful Curtis orotones of Indian life are shown at Phil S. Bernay's clever art shop, 315 West Third. These are charmingly framed in that exquisite style which is Bernay's own.

You might feel that your vacation was extraordinarily expensive if, on returning home, you found that your silver, your oriental rugs and many things you treasured had disappeared. Why should you wait until "something happens" before taking precautions? Fill your trunk with things you value and put it in the storage vaults of the Guaranty Bank, Seventh and Spring; it costs little.

The sweater is no longer merely useful—it is a thing of beauty as well.

The Vanity Fair Tea Room announces that it will be closed on Saturdays during July and August. However, if you are going picnicking on Saturdays or Sundays they will gladly take care of your orders on Fridays. Call 62954. During the month of July this tea room, 927 S. Hill, will not serve evening dinners. But you will be able to have your orders filled for their famous pies, cakes, jellies, etc., as usual.

The most artistic frames, delightfully different, are shown at Spier's, 52? W. Eighth. Hand-painted eucalyptus leaves are decorated here and packed for shipping anywhere.

Organdy hats are the most diverse and beautiful, and everybody is wearing them.

A "vacation special" is offered by that clever tailor, Linson—serge suits at $65 and poiret twill at $75. Call 13542 this week. 304 Brockman Bldg., 520 W. Seventh.

Why not learn to make your corsets to your own measure under the supervision of the National Corsetieres, 227 Grosse Bldg., 124 W. Sixth? Pico 163.

The Hollywood Assembly Tea Room is planning for a big day on the Fourth of July—you'll be delighted with this charming place. Call 578443 for reservations. The Los Angeles Assembly continues to serve its delightful dinners. Fifth Floor, Brack-Shops. 13857.

Your furs can be remodeled into nifty neckpieces, chokers and small summer furs at the Bogue Fur Shop, 746 S. Hill. A 50 per cent discount is offered this week.

Sports hats trimmed with appliqued cretonne and yarn embroidery are very smart and lovely.

Superfluous hair and moles are removed by the electric needle by Anna M. Bergeron, who is an experienced operator, 20 years in business in Los Angeles. She guarantees no scars and no return of hair. Phone 12937. Top floor Haas Building.

Ostrich feathers and Marabout in combination form the fashionable light wrap for these summer evenings. Your old feathers and Marabout can be made in the most beautiful models by Vallely & Vatcher, 646 Broadway, 6th floor (opposite Bullock's). Why not have them make a beautiful fan of your old feathers? There could be no more desirable present and at very small cost.

You can get rid of those ugly warts, moles and superfluous hair with very little inconvenience—if you see Cuba Mentz, who will remove them with the electric needle, without scars. 306 Haas Bldg. 62715.

The white sports skirt is with us again this season, worn with the brightly-hued coats.

There's to be a sale at the Baby Specialty Shop this week, 734 S. Hill. Dandy wash suits for tiny lads at $2.50 and boys' black straw hats from $1.65 to $3.50. For little girls you'll find smart frocks of white voile and lawn for only $3 and gingham dresses, for $1.50. Peach rompers will sell from 75 cents to $2.25 and creepers, white and colored, from $1 to $3.50. Lingerie hats for girlies will be offered at $1.75 and up.

The little French one-piece bathing suits are very cleverly fashioned.

Gorgeous Chinese embroideries, many of which make lovely centers for cushions, madarin skirts, suitable for piano scarfs and table covers, and mandarin coats which are much used for dressing gowns, are found at the Chinese shops of F. Sui One, 806 W. Seventh and 510 N. Los Angeles, China Town. A tour of these quaint shops is most interesting and you'll be surprised at the many wonderful things they are showing. Their line of Canton reed and bamboo furniture is very fine and most reasonably priced.

The tailored suit for sports is often made of homespun, which comes in many shades.

That the Blue Bird stands for happiness everyone knows full well and so it is not surprising to find that the Blue Bird Phonograph is a regular harbinger of joy! Indeed, it's quite impossible to even guess the amount of pleasure these Los Angeles talking machines are giving. The Blue Bird is a wonder, with its perfect reproduction and its artistically fashioned cabinet. I heard it demonstrated at the Smith Piano Company, Ninth and Grand, and was completely carried away with it. I noticed that they still have a few of those "lunch basket" phonographs and also the "Portophones" both of which are fine for vacation trips.

"Forewarned is forearmed," so remember that you should begin the summer by caring for your complexion. Wonderful facials are given at the Alexandria Hotel Beauty Parlor, also expert work in hair tinting. All kinds of beauty work is done here, and they do beautiful permanent waving on the Nestle machine. Mezzanine floor. 67953.

Reduce your hot, ungainly flesh. Be attractive, comfortable and well. Take it off where you wish without effort, diet or drugs. Weight Reducing Co., 618 Brockman Bldg.

You would be surprised if you knew how many professional dressmakers, as well as private individuals, are using those original cambric patterns which are designed and cut to measurement by Madam Des Lauries, 5915 Hollywood blvd. Phone 579934.

Now, where else, pray, is it possible to hear wonderful symphony concerts for the trifling sum of 30 cents? Every Sunday morning at 11 Grauman's Theater is filled with eager, music-loving people—many of whom often must make sacrifices in order to hear a concert now and then—listening with rapt attention to the rendering of the classic music of all time. And Grauman's Symphony Orchestra, with Arthur Kay directing, holds its audiences spellbound. Today's program is as follows: Overture "Leonore," No. 3, to opera "Fidelio," by Beethoven; Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6, by Liszt; Ase's Death, from "Peer Gynt," by Grieg, and "Liebestraum," by Liszt; Prelude to the opera, "The Meistersinger," by Wagner, also solos by the famous Russian opera star, Mme. Nadine Platinoff. Seats are reserved and you may remain to see the picture—"Homer Comes Home," featuring Charles Ray.

Hand-painted lace for lingerie and frocks is new. You'll find it at 731 West Eighth, also beaded hosiery made to order. 12325.

Yesterday eighty-seven girls attending the classes at the Wilkinson College of Swimming, Flower street at Sixteenth, successfully passed their examination, and went home smiling and happy in the possession of a medal, a certificate, balloon and diploma.

The examination was very successful, and Prof. Wilkinson compliments the clever mermaids on giving such an excellent display of graceful swimming. These rosy-cheeked prize winners did not look like the same pale-faced, timid maidens who three months ago were so nervous and afraid of the water. They have gained strength and happiness through the new style swimming, which is a most exhilarating recreation for the vigor of the rising generation. New classes start next Saturday, one at 10 a.m. for girls aged 12 and under, another class at 11 a.m. for girls over 12. Twelve lessons are given for $2, and a cut rate of 25 cents for use of suit, towel, hair dryer, etc. Swim for health and beauty in the germ-proof water.

PROVINCETOWN PORTUGUESE.

Down at the extreme end of Cape Cod, is the tiny village of Provincetown, a picturesque place of narrow, twisted streets and small cottages, once a great whaling and fishing center, now a dreamy end-of-the-road lure to artists and summer idlers. In little Provincetown there is a dark-eyed, swarthy, southern type dominating the rest of the population in number and by right of priority. These are the descendants of the Portuguese sailors and their wives who settled there generations back. They have become entirely American, yet retain their own language, while speaking ours. Their colorful vivacity and love of brilliant colors lend a touch of flame to the gray-green harmony of the place, in the kerchief pinned over ebony locks or the scarlet tie floating across the fisherman's blouse. But there is no problem in Provincetown; the Portuguese there are the soundest of American citizens, less alien than the artist colony that spends the summer months scattered among the cottages and painting seascapes, landscapes and types with indefatigable zeal.—[World Outlook.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD MENDICANTS.

In many parts of Western Asia even tiny children have developed begging into such an art that only the highly skilled eye can detect the real from the bogus cases of want. A Near East relief worker writes from Kermanshah that while walking along the street her attention was called to a 4-year-old girl writhing on the ground. Her eyes were glassy her cheeks flushed, and she seemed to be burning up with fever. At her side was a little fellow about the same age, tearfully begging the passerby to give him money to help his poor little sister. The "relief lady" summoned an ambulance from the Near East Hospital in the town and rushed the little girl off for immediate treatment. The doctors began to work over her anxiously, but found that there was absolutely nothing the matter. She was a trained street beggar, successfully shamming illness to arouse sympathy and to wheedle coins from people.—[World Outlook.

PHONETICALLY GUESSED.

Perhaps you all may have heard the story of the teacher who requested a small colored boy to compose a sentence containing the word "delight" and was much surprised when the youth advised her that in the winter time when the wind blows, if a window is opened the wind will blow out "de light." Well, a Columbus teacher vouches for this story of a Kentuckian recently admitted to her school who during a grammar lesson was called upon to use the word "seldom" and solemnly advised her that he had two rabibts, but he "selled dem."—[Columbus Dispatch.

LONG DRY SEASON FOR AFRICA

Africa is drying up. The Governor-General of French Equatorial Africa, which includes from Senegal to Congo, made his territory arid by a decree which was effective January 1. Importation of liquor was prohibited, and the lid put on native "bar-rooms."

On the Gold Coast a number of Accra chiefs were asked their opinion of the liquor traffic. "The white man has always brought it in for trade," they said. "If now he wishes to stop it because he's found it's not good, we are agreed and will be glad to take a better substitute."—[World Outlook.

A Light-headed Customer.

A Jeffersonville merchant has recently placed an automatic weighing machine in front of his store. A few days ago a citizen was observed standing on the machine and closely scrutinizing the dial. His hat was in his hand although the thermometer marked a low temperature and a passerby asked him why he had his hat off. "I want to see what I weigh without my outdoor garments," said the citizen blandly. His interlocutor walked away muttering, "He would not weight much less if he took his head off as well."—[Indianapolis News.

STUDENT RIOTING BECOMES SERIOUS

Buenos Aires Finds Red Leadership in College.

University of La Plata has Episode of Killing.

President's Party Accused of Being Behind Row.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BUENOS AIRES, June 20.—The students' strike at the University of La Plata, which culminated recently in a shooting affair in a lecture room and the killing of one of a group of students taking an examination, is attributed by some newspapers to the incitement of politicians and by others to "the absorption of anarchistic ideas" by student agitators.

The tragedy was the most serious of a number of acts of violence on the part of the strikers that have occurred during the past few months. Demanding reforms in the administration of the university, including an enlargement of the rights in the control of the administration already possessed by the student body, the strikers took possession of various of the university buildings on four different occasions and ejected the faculty. The faculty have had to call on the police to oust them, having been powerless to maintain discipline.

LEADERS WERE REDS.

The strike was at first regarded as "college boy nonsense," but was soon given a serious aspect by the newspapers because of the evidence that the ringleaders were actuated by Bolshevist ideas and because it has led to threats by the Federal administration to remove Gov. Grotto of Buenos Aires Province and appoint an "interventor" to rule in his stead.

Gov. Grotto is a political opponent of President Irigoyen and antiadministration newspapers have accused politicians of the President's party with inciting the students to create disorder to make an additional excuse for Gov. Grotto's removal.

When the students first declared the strike by their organization, the Federacion Universitaria, they took forcible possession of the central building of the university and hoisted the red flag on the flagstaff. They were dislodged by the police and leniently dealt with. This performance was repeated in several other of the university buildings.

STUDENTS BATTLE.

The violence which culminated in the death of a student occurred in the college of medicine when a number of striking students attempted to prevent other students from taking an examination and rushed into the lecture room, flourishing revolvers.

Fist fights between the strikers and the orderly students were followed by the firing of about fifty shots and Felix Viera, a youth who had come from Paraguay to take the examination, fell wounded. About 120 students were arrested in a police round-up which quickly followed and 120 revolvers were taken from them.

SALE of SMOCKS

450 of Them—In Three Groups, At

$2.17 — $2.87 — $3.87

Representing Remarkable Price Lowerings

—Just in time to purchase smocks for over-the-holiday wear, comes this extraordi- nary selling event. Two decisions are responsible for this offering.

—First, we decided to purchase the remaining stocks of three manufacturers, each of whom needed the space for his Fall output. This merchandise we obtained at a decided advantage.

—Second, we decided to include all smocks from our regular stock of much higher priced lines, making this an unusual three-day event.

Japanese Crepe, Voile, Linene and Other Wash Fabrics are the materials from which these Smocks are made.

THE SMOCKS At $2.17

—are of plain and printed voile, of linene and other materials. There are different models; some having collars and pockets, others being in coat style; also some with patent leather belts. You will find them in blue, pink, rose, peach, tan, yellow, green and lavender; all effectively trimmed. Sizes 36 to 44.

THE SMOCKS At $2.87

—are mostly of linene and voile, in such wantable shades as rose, pink, blue, green, tan and lavender. There are styles with round or square neck lines, and those fashioned with fitted pieces and pipings. All are embroidered in attractively blended colorings. Sizes 36 to 44.

THE SMOCKS At $3.87

—are of beach cloth, Japanese crepe and plain and fancy voile; in a generous variety of styles with round or square neck lines. There are rose, pink, Copenhagen or light blue, tan, green and yellow. Some are trimmed with contrasting materials; and all are prettily embroidered in wool floss. Sizes 36 to 44.

By Their Breakfasts You Shall Know Them

There's Nothing Like an Old Model Wife, if You Know How to Wave.

—By THOMAS L. MASSON.—

Divorces are on the increase. So the authorities say. I name no names. I quote no statistics. I am not that kind of a liar. I only know that in well-informed efficiency circles it is stated that it is getting to be quite as common for a man to be separated from his wife as it is from his bank account.

You don't even have to be a moving-picture star to get a divorce. In fact, you may be a quite married man in one State and an alfalfa widower in another. You are married or not, according to location. Domestic life is a matter of time tables, and, as everybody knows, time tables are unreliable. As a state, Alimony has not yet been admitted to the matrimonial union, but it is getting to be a fair sized territory. Not being a statistician, I do not know how far all the divorced couples would reach if placed end to end—maybe as far as from Reno to Harlem.

In the meantime, it is our sacred duty to sift this matter to the bottom. It can't go on. We cannot just keep on marrying women only to discover that they don't love us any more, just when we have got them so they are trained. To leave our dens alone and not go about changing blotters on us and filling the place full of sofa pillows and mosquito netting.

We American husbands have enough troubles without having to change wives all the time. They tell me that in some of the higher circles around and appertaining to Manhattan Island the wives come and go oftener than the hired help. This is all wrong.

If you are a multi-millionaire, think of coming home after a hard day's work on the stock exchange and finding a strange lady playing bridge with your guests and making a noise like a hostess. Think of having her calmly announce: "Yes, I am your new wife. And do you know, Charles, you forgot to have the monogram changed on the limousine." Think of the inconvenience of a thing like that!

Besides, it's hard on others. We American husbands mustn't get selfish, whatever else we do. It isn't fair to the people we employ to keep ringing in a new wife every few weeks. It's hard on the income tax expert who makes out your form, to have to remember all the new names. It's hard on the grocer. He never knows whether the lady who calls from your house and asks for two more pounds of sugar is entitled to it or not. Of course, the children like it. Novelty always appeals to them. But the joy to the little ones of getting a new mama every once in a while ought to be curbed. Children have too much pleasure, anyway. That's what's the matter with this country; the children are all spoiled. Why, in New York City alone there are 70,000 of them who, because they cannot feed at home, are actually given meals by the authorities. If we are going to let them have all the new parents they want they will get so after a while they'll all be living at home after they are 16, just for the fun of it.

We husbands have got to stand together in this important matter. If it is necessary for us to be divorced from a perfectly good wife every once in a while then the whole management ought to be put on a regular business basis. A nation-wide movement to standardize divorce is in order. The first thing necessary is a matrimonial clearing house. A man who can't get on with his wife ought to be able to hand her in and exchange her for another according to definite rules. Up to the present time the whole thing has been mismanaged. Too many of us husbands are being scrapped. It can't go on.

Think of any intelligent human being, earning a living and with a little money saved up, going to a nice girl and saying: "Darling, I cannot live without you; if you don't say yes I am ruined," and then about three years and four months later remarking in frigid accents, "It can't happen too quick to suit me."

Think of it, fellows—three years ago she was indispensable—today she is not even worth retreading.

The fault lies on both sides, when you look at it from the outside, but when you look at it from the inside it always lies on the other side.

When at fellow loves a girl so much that he can't live with her after that third year, something is wrong with the system and not always with the girl. Individuals don't count in matrimony any more than they do in Brooklyn. But they thing they do and that's what causes the trouble. When a man who has been broken to the matrimonial harness, sympathizes with himself, so he begins to sit up and take notice of the vampires that pass in the night, then he is soon going to spend his week-ends in a different spot from of yore. When a woman poses as a household drudge, and begins to stand in the doorway on bright summer days every once in a while and looks up and down the streets, then we may expect a sudden fall in temperature accompanied by moving vans and hail and farewell signs in the distance.

Just because two people are breaking even on growing homely, why can't they live together permanently without calling in the police? For it is a very rare man who realizes that if the luster is beginning to dim in the eyes of the girl he has sworn to love and protect, he also is beginning to lose his hair and develop knocks in his machinery.

The real trouble is so simple that merely to state it is to make every husband and wife see that I am right. The real trouble lies at the breakfast table. Until all husbands and wives learn how to behave at breakfast, I can offer no hope of any improvement. To prove this is not a matter of statistics, but of common understanding. The shortest way to the divorce court lies from the breakfast table. If you can get on with a woman at breakfast and she can get on with you, the vampires will cease from vamping and the triangle will be a traiangle no more. For married people life is only one matrimonial day, constantly repeated. What you do at breakfast is what determines the day.

All over this country there are married people who won't be living together in another year—and why? Because they don't know how to come down to breakfast. By their breakfast manners ye shall know them.

It is 7 a.m. in the home of the coming divorced. The man, with the morning paper clasped firmly in his hand, approaches the breakfast table. His face is like a thunder cloud. All the responsibility of the world is on his shoulders. He is already opening his office mail in advance. His wife is a trifle late that morning. She has no object in getting there early except a defensive one, because she knows that she is the last thing in the world that her husband is interested in. She expects him to growl. Over many months she has helped to sharpen his morning grouch.

And the following conversation ensues:

" 'Scoffeeready?"

" 'Nminute."

"Huh! Whadderthinglam?"

"I know-what-you-are."

"Huh!"

"Don't tell me you're not coming home tonight."

"What's the use o' my tellin' yer anything. Yer wouldn't believe it.

"Huh!"

"Well, I may not be here myself."

"Huh!"

(Drinks coffee, buries himself in paper. Rises.)

"I'm coming home—do yer get me?"

"Well, all right, I can stand it if you can."

(He goes out without a word. She starts to clean up, her lips curled into a half sob.)

Therefore, I say, if we husbands are going to keep the home fires burning, we must cease to consider ourselves too much, and must cultivate the cheero breakfast habit. Your wife is always the most beautiful woman in the world if you have a mind to think so. And you have a mind to think so if you start the day right.

And so it is now going to be just like this.

His step is springy as he approaches the breakfast table.

"No hurry, dear—By Jove! You must read this. It's a scream. I'll leave the paper for you. Whatchoo been doing to this coffee?——Matter? Never tasted anything better in my life. But you always were a wonder . . . . Said that too often Anything you need today? Did you thing I was going to forget? . . . . Never! Yes. I'll be home at six. Johnny on the spot. . . . . Happy day."

And then wave your hand at her as she presses her face against the pane.

Every permanent American home has a permanent husband wave.

THE UGLY SIGNBOARD.

Of course, a signboard is designed to attract attention. In some cities they appear to be attracting attention which threatens their existence in certain districts. This is a good thing, for at their best they have not been much of a scenic attraction and at their worst they have been pretty bad.

In Chicago, where a good deal of thought has been given to city planning, an ordinance was passed prohibiting signboards on roofs of buildings and requiring majority consent for permission to erect signboards in residence districts. The signboard people fought this ordinance to the United States Supreme Court and were worsted. And the decision gave the people the right to have no signboards in the neighborhood of their homes if the majority agreed.

It is interesting to note that the arguments on which this case was defended by the people had to do rather with public safety and health than esthetic considerations. The boards were to be kept from the roofs for fear of their falling into the street, and the charge was made that they were a fire menace and a convenient ambush for robbers in residence districts.

Perhaps these practical phases afford the most convenient point of attack for the present, but from an esthetic point of view the signboard is forever and everywhere an offense.—[Detroit News.

His Ignorance.

"How did that easterner come to fall for such an ancient confidence game here in Kansas City?"

"He said he never dreamed there were bunco men outside of New York."—[Kansas City Star.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

"Come out of the streets and into my club," is the slogan adopted by Mrs. Laura J. Williams of Philadelphia, organizer of the Kensington Boys' Club.

To assist poor boys of 10 years of age and upward, Mrs. Williams gives the use of the front floor of her modest home on week day evenings. The club is closed during the day for the simple reason that Mrs. Williams is a working woman. The work has been going on for a year and has shown such surprising results that its organizer has offered the rear lot of her premises in the hope that philanthropists will erect upon it a modest building to house a small gymnasium and a reading and game room, which can be used for lecture purposes.

The latest innovation in the club is practice in the use of the bugle. This was made possible by the generosity of William R. Scott, who is connected with the educational department of a large Philadelphia business house.

The sum of $10,000 was subscribed June 18 at Lake Geneva, Wis., by 700 delegates to the Young Men's Christian Association student conference to further religious work at middle western colleges next year. The pledges were made at the close of an appeal from A. J. Elliott, who spoke of the necessity "for a spiritual awakening among university student bodies as the only foundation for a solution of world problems."

The money will be used to promote evangelistic services at institutions in the Lake Geneva territory.

A real community center is the hall where church services are held in Powell Butte, Crook county, Oregon, says an Interchurch surveyor. The people of the community built the hall by subscribing to shares. A Ladies' Aid Society and a Sorosis Club look after community philanthropic and missionary enterprises, and socials, entertainments and Chautauquas are held in the hall. Illustrated lectures are given in behalf of the Red Cross and charitable organizations. "Since the church doors are always open, many attend services who would not go near the usual church," comments a resident of the section.

There will shortly be inaugurated in the city of Bahia, Brazil, an institute to be known as the "Posto Odontologico Bonifacio Costa." Its purpose is to provide dental treatment free of charge to the children of the poor."

BITS OF VERSE.

At Sunset.

Who would have youth renewed?
Not I. It is too shrewd,
Too dazzling for the stars it sights;
Give me half-lights!
Who would re-live past years?
Not I. Wild hopes and fears
That once the soul in travail rent
Their force have spent.
Who doubts as in his prime?
Not I, Schoolmaster Time
Hath taught me; taught of life and death,
And planted faith.
Who longs for paths once trod?
Not I. The worst—think God!—
The stoniest roads, the mire and clay,
Lie far away.
Who would recall his friend?
Not I. Mine be his end!
Here tumult reigns, here crowds increase;
With him is peace.
Who counts his loss as gain?
I! Strength, fordone, and pain,
Have opened heaven, around, above,
And shown me love.
—[P. A. Barnett, in London Spectator.

Lines to a Tadpole.

How can a "poet" tune his lyre
To croaking frogs and dripping mire?
E'en strike a note below the cleff
To match Anura's throaty breath?
Or does it profit if I rhyme
The tadpole up to hopping time?
Or state that in the Philippines
It flies about on webby wings?
The subjects for myopic eyes,
That deal with bugs and worms and flies;
And can be dealt with, goodness knows,
Far better in cold English prose.
In these hard days the adult tad
No longer makes the stomach glad;
And hungry bards turn from the frog
To lowly spuds and wiener dog.
So, even if suggestive of
The bubbling glass and leg of frog,
Such fancies merely bring regret
That only tads can now be wet.
—[Edward H. Flood in Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Question Never Answered Here.

How could we know,
How can we tell,
The force, the psychic interflow
That weaves the spell
Which keeps us serving here?
Between our sight
And Lifes new day
May spread less than a second's flight—
Perhaps Life's way
Of mocking what we fear!
—[William Struthers in Boston Transcript.

May Moon.

The May moon is of magic, as on her feet of glee
She dances through the trellis and dances on the sea.
The May moon, dear, forever
In that dear spell of May
That touches with its elfin joy
The dreams of yesterday.
The May moon sits in glory upon her throne of blue,
Where starry realms of splendor deck the wide and wondrous view.
The May moon, sweet with beauty,
The old familiar earth
Yearns like the seas of sapphire
To join her mystic mirth.
The May moon softly silvern and sometimes burnished gold
Rides on her viewless palfrey like some great queen of old.
The May moon, she the lovers
Commune with in the gleams
Of longing and of passion
That burn through all their dreams.

Nothing Serious.

A passionate proposal,
The damsel could not doubt:
'Twere plain to see this lovelorn swain
Knew what he was about.
She lightly fluttered toward him—
Oh, wondrous were her charms!—
And as a dewdrop to the sea,
She slipped into his arms.
Then bawled a rude director,
The most uncouth of men,
"Ye gods, I thought you two could act!
We'll shoot that scene again!"

The Seamstress

On Friendship.

Why, no'm, I don't reckon you'd say I got so very many friends. 'Course I know right smart people. They's a good many nice folks I've knowed ever since I was a girl in the county where I was raised. I don't dislike so very many of 'em. Yet, and still, if I was to reach out and try to count them what I know are my real friends I don't reckon it would be a number to scare anybudy.

Well, it looks like to me, that's the way with everybudy. I meet up with a whole lot right here. I like to stick to the ones I've been sewing for a long while. But you know I got to go to some new ones onct in a while. And that is the way it is . . .

Yes'm, that's the way it looks sometimes right at first. You see 'em with so many that you think they must have a auful sight of friends and you wonder what is the matter with you that you don't have no more.

Well, one time I asked a woman how it was she got around to so many folks. I said I thought it must be right nice to have so many warm friends what cared so much for you.

Well, and she said that everybudy had a different idea about friends. She said that she enjoyed running with a lot of people and not expecting very much of any of 'em. She says, "I don't test no budy very much. My friends are just the people I run with, that's always the way I call 'em. It don't make no special difference," she says, "what they'd do for me. If you begin counting your friends thataway, you always git disappointed and it is as much your fault as theirs for expecting too much. So I always just say," she says, "that my friends are the people I run with wherever I am."

Well, I reckon more of us would be happy if we was to hold on to that some. Because you know if your neighbor acrost the street don't come over and see you when you are sick or if some of your best friends don't do it why it hurt right smart. And then when you begin counting obligations, you nearly always think you do more for your friends than she does for you and they ain't no end to that . . .

Well, it does seem a little bit cold way to look at it and I think it's mighty bad for us never to be put to no kind of a test. It ain't my idea of a true and tried friend. Because them kind ain't got no obligation to stay true to you and they do all kinds of things to your face and back. Yet and still—

Ma'm? That is just what I was agoing to say. It certainly does hurt if you think you can put yourself in your friend's hands and have faith and then find out that she has played you a mean trick.

No'm, a real friend what has got the makings of loyalty in her can make you feel that you are safe in her hands whether she is present or absent.

And my land! Ain't it a comfort to know that you kin lean on her and know she ain't going to take what you say and make something to throw back at you some time?

Well, it looks like to me that most any kind of a sweater is good style right now. Some of 'em ain't good sence, like the silk ones what you can't afford, but they's all kinds and they tell me that the jersey sport coat is the newest of all of them. But my land! If they ain't cut right, where are you?

I saw a girl with copper-colored hair the other day wearing the prettiest copper-colored sweater I ever saw, yes'm. And she had on a copper-colored sailor with a soft old blue facing. And her skirt was soft old blue flannel, like the band and facing of her hat—

Ma'm? Yes'm, flannel certainly does make pretty looking skirts. It's always so lady-like looking. You can remember when they wasn't anything else worn for sports skirts . . .

Ma'm? Well, some of 'em's plaited and some of 'em are just made straight. 'Course if you live in this warm climate and want to stay there this summer you can't have no flannel skirt and duvetyn sports coat.

And then it's up to you to have as thin a sweater as you can get.

Ma'm? Haven't you never seen some goods they call "fisher-maid net?" It would be pretty to have a coat or sweater-like made of it to wear anywheres, with a white skirt. It is silk stuff with open squares in it.

I reckon a good many women will have dresses made of fisher net, but I would make it into a sweater if I was you. Mebbe none of your friends will have one just like it. They ortn't to be spiteful about it if they have. Ef they's one trait what I hate in a woman it's for her to be selfish with a friend about clothes. But yet and still, I could even overlook that in her if she was a friend. We got to overlook some things when we are making a estimate of the good things in our friends.

Yes'm, if you are your friend's friend she will take it for granted all the time and give you some leeway for your faults, just you like you have to do for hers.

Now you take any other thing (them pins are so small they are mean about gitting in between my teeth) a friend don't try to use you every chanct she gets, no'm. She's trying to look out for your interest instead of hers. And if the men are around and she's young she won't try to place you in a uncomfortable position and make you feel small and ridicule—

Ma'm? Why 'course they do each other that away. That's taking advantage and it's mean and small and it ain't worth what they are after—to get the men to like 'em the best, no'm.

Yes'm, you got to have loyalty. First you got to know what loyalty is. You know Lonny (that's my husband) says, and he's right, that loyalty and friendship is treating the other feller as you'd wish to have him treat you—'specially when you ain't lookin'.

MAKING ANTIQUE RUGS.

How "genuine antique rugs" are manufactured and prepared for European and American markets is told by an American who visited Bagdad. The shopping streets seem like tunnels. They are arched overhead with brick to keep out the heat; thus they run, like subways, up and down the bazaar quarter. Through those long, stifling, faintly lighted tunnels throngs the eternal crowd of men, mules and camels. Often one will see a fine rug lying flat in the filth of a narrow street, ground beneath the tramp of men and beasts, but there is method in this. Foreigners make oriental rugs, bright and new, in Persia, and sell them through Bagdad. Since an "old rug" is worth more, wily brokers have hit on this way to make a new rug look old.—[Indianapolis News.

That Troublesome Apostrophe.

The woman living next door to the schoolhouse was a spinster of uncertain age. And she seemed to put in most of her time watching the schoolhouse so that she could find some reason for complaints. Many had come and many had been settled in a way that had caused sorrow to the boys of the school. And this spring came a new one. During a ball game in the school yard several of the boys had occupied as their grand stand seats the roof of the lady-next-door's chicken house.

The principal was inclined to stand with the boys so she made their punishment very light. They were to write a note of apology to the woman. The note was written and dispatched one morning. That afternoon brought a fiery spinster to the building. She said the note was insult added to outrage.

The principal took the note and read, "We, the boys of the N—— school, offer our apology for sitting on the old hen's house during our ball game last Friday."

The boys said it was all the fault of a misplaced apostrophe. The teacher was wise.—[Indianapolis News.

Why Didn't I Reduce Long Ago

We guarantee—$100.00 cash—that if you weigh too much you can reduce your weight and figure satisfactorily or it will cost you absolutely nothing to follow our famous KOREIN SYSTEM, which includes the taking of Oil of Korein and the following of a few easy, simple directions. No starving (eat sweets if you like), no strenuous exercising. Oil of Korein is a vegetalized oil, contains no thyroid, no purgatives or other drastic ingredients.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS—

WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 360 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert. MRS. F. A. SCOTT, Suite 407 Bumiller Bldg., 430 S. Broadway.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR—

HUMILIATING AND UNSIGHTLY.

There is only one method known today of permanently removing superfluous hair, and that is Electrolysis (electric needle.) This process in the hands of a reliable and expert operator insures absolute satisfaction. I stand back of my work and guarantee any hair treated by me will be permanently destroyed, leaving no scars.

WANTED — OFFICE MANAGERS FOR WORLD Land and Investment Company. Experience unnecessary. Prefer to teach you our method, which insures success. There will soon be hundreds of permanent offices open for every class of men everywhere, to handle what he likes best. Land, stocks, bonds, oil companies, business chances. Any salesman will make $500 per month and up to $100,000 per annum. We can handle a $100,000,000 deal as well as a $200 cigar stand. Organization properly applied will accomplish anything, lack of organization ruins your ambition and earning power. The unpleasant part of salesmanship, is hunting a buyer, and having him doubt the reliability of your statements and your offerings. Every offering of our organization will be investigated thoroughly, and the buying public will know that we do not offer anything but producing business.

We bring the buyer to you through organization, you close the deal in your office, which is furnished by the company, you have no advertising bills, no office rent, but 100 people coming to you, instead of you looking for one buyer. Don't fail to investigate the opportunity of your lifetime to put your ability at the highest point of its earning power.

We will show you why investment stocks decrease in value, and show you how to market the right kind of unlisted stocks, the cost to you is less than the rent of a good office for one month.

FOR SALE—

BUY
NOT AUTOS & PAINT.

This is a very peculiar ad, but you are going to read it all the way through. When I was over at our Used Car Department today, a salesman said to, "We Sell 'Arnold and Dollars and Cents,' not Autos and Paint."

I thought that was the strangest selling argument on Auto Row, but it isn't. That salesman hit the nail on the head. "Arnold and Dollars and Cents" probably sold more automobiles out of our Used Car Department last month than any four other dealers put together.

What the salesman meant was, that the public has confidence in the "House of Arnold," whose reputation was built on the solid foundation of honesty and fair dealing to the public.

The "Dollars and Cents," meant that we sell Used Cars "As Is," which also means "At Cost."

The reason for selling the cars at cost is simply that we take those automobiles in as part payment on new cars and we want to collect the money they represent. Our profit has been in the new car sale.

When you buy a car from us the depreciation has been written off and you get the advantage.

AS AN ILLUSTRATION

We have one 1920 Maxwell at $1035, which you can buy for $345 down and pay the balance at $43 per month. This is the star bargain of all medium grade automobiles in Los Angeles. The quality of this car and its performance will sell it before ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The owners of 1920 Maxwells say that "Economy" is their middle name. The tires are 30x3½ inches. That is a big feature in these days. Maxwells rarely give less than 10,000 miles to the tire. It is a point well worth considering in this 1920 Maxwell which you will come to see today.

We have half a dozen standard makes to select from, some priced as low as $175. You can't afford to lose time on street cars.

1918 Hudson speedster. This car is in the very best of condition. Top and upholstery in good shape. There are nine tires; two are brand new cord tires, never used. The two cord tires on the car are almost new. The five fabric tires are in first-class shape. This car has been left with us for sale. This is a bargain for some one at $2000. We can arrange very liberal terms to responsible parties.

1917 Hudson Super-six Touring. Five wire wheels and all cord tires, nearly new. Painted gray with red wheels. Top and upholstery in fine shape. This is one of the best-running cars that you could want to ride in. $1450, very liberal terms.

1920 Essex Sedan, in the very best of mechanical condition. One extra tire that has never been used. This car has been left with us to be sold. Party owning car will take $2400 for a quick sale. Very liberal terms.

(Mr. Buyer.)

Do you know it is much better to buy a used car from a reliable new car dealer because we get the choice of cars that have had but one owner and which have had the best of care?

Below we offer a few specials which have been overhauled and repainted and we need our room and must sell them quick.

(1918 Olds 8 7-pass.)

Overhauled and repainted. Has air shock absorbers, side wings and lots of extras. Excellent tires and a real bargain for someone. Better hurry.

(1918 Moon 6 5-pass.)

This car is a dandy and very economical and can hardly be told from new. All good tires and a dandy looker.

(Pathfinder twin six 7-pass.)

Anyone desiring a car of this type cannot afford to miss seeing this. Wire wheels and five good tires and a beautiful paint job.

(National Six.)

MR. AUTOIST—

Mr. Autoist take an Auto Kamp tour this year.

The AUTO KAMP TRAILER, a complete home on wheels, comfortable beds, electric light, stove, table, ice box, food compartments, etc., cuts out expensive hotel bills, mountain cabins, beach apartments, go where you like, stay as long as you like, will make your vacation trip a complete success. You have seen nothing quite so comfortable and complete. A delayed shipment of 1920 models just arrived and, as camping season is now on, they will not last long, so don't wait. Call and inspect. MARRY M. WATERMAN, 1311 S. Figueroa.

PLAIN TALK ON TEACHERS' PAY.

Mrs. Dorsey Addresses High School Organization.

Asserts Its Salary Demands Lack Reasonableness.

But Instructors Vote to go on With Campaign.

The question of salaries for Los Angeles High School teachers came up again for discussion yesterday when Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, superintendent of the city schools, in an address to several hundred teachers at the Polytechnic High School auditorium, told why it is inadvisable at this time to meet the demands made by the secondary school instructors for a scale of pay higher than that fixed by the Board of Education for the coming fiscal year.

Supt. Dorsey's symposium of plain facts relative to the school finance situation was presented after the High School Teachers' Association had invited her to talk to its members and to explain why they were not granted the salary increases they asked.

"Your request for salary increases, as high school-teachers, was unreasonable," she told them. "It takes courage for me to stand before you and tell you this, but the effect your request made upon the Board of Education would have been better if this request had been reasonable."

In explaining why the Board of Education cannot this year comply with the request of the high school-teachers, Supt. Dorsey told of the dire need for repairs at many public schools. The recent temblor, she said, did much damage. Ten thousand additional students were crowded into the schools this year, while the teaching force suffered the loss of 100 of its members.

"It is necessary that the Board of Education should have every cent it asks for to repair our schols," she said. "These schools at present are in a shameful condition. The housing of the school children in this city is in a most deplorable state. We need 250 new teachers, 250 for the normal schools and 100 to replace last year's loss. Of all the money received for school purposes the teachers are receiving 89 per cent.

"This is the condition as it exists this year. It will not be the same next year."

At the close of the meeting the High School Teachers' Association, in a resolution adopted unanimously, voted to carry on its campaign despite the attitude of the Board of Education. The resolution, presented by Miss Elsie Whitman of Jefferson High School, was as follows:

"I move that, in view of the fact that the citizens of Los Angeles are still not fully informed with regard to the real issues which we consider are vital to our campaign, we continue our process of education of the public through our present plan of publicity."

IN SCHOOLS' CAUSE.

Mrs. Dorsey Asks Support for Campaign Anent Funds.

An appeal for the community's support of the campaign being waged by the school-teachers throughout the State for a new division of the State school funds was issued last night by Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, Superintendent of Schools.

"Monday is the last day for the teachers' petitions to be signed," she said, "and it is a worthy cause that should be pushed to the limit by the teachers and all persons interested in the education of our children. The campaign is being waged in all parts of the State and I am heartily in sympathy with it."

The petitions call for an increase of State and county taxes and a readjusted division of the State school funds.

BOAST COX AS "WET."

Ohio Boosters of Their Governor in City; Suit Cases Bulge.

A special train of Cox boosters, not delegates, but just Ohioans going to San Francisco to root for Cox, passed through Los Angeles yesterday. The boosters announced that beyond all question Cox is wet, and the train is said to have included several representatives of Ohio breweries who carried big, bulgy suit cases. Some of them dropped in at the Alexandria and offered to bet that there would be lively times in San Francisco as soon as they got there. There were no takers.

The Indiana delegation also passed through Los Angeles yesterday. One of them informed a reporter that Marshall will be the next President, and never cracked a smile. They have wonderful facial control, those Indianians.

FILM PEOPLE DANCE.

New Art Directors' Association Entertains to Raise Funds.

The first annual dinner-dance of the Motion-Picture Art Directors' Association of Los Angeles was given at the Hotel Alexandria last night and was attended by about 300 persons, including many of the real personages of the motion-picture world. The purpose was to raise funds for the establishment here of a technical library, in line with the design of the organization to make motion pictures more artistic. A souvenier program, with a clever cover designed by Milton Menasco, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and containing original contributions by several members, was given each guest.

The association is a new organization. Its president is A. W. Alley.

TO OPEN STORE HERE.

Representative of Chain of Clothing Houses is in Town.

A. M. Bedell of the Bedell Cloak and Suit Company of New York, which has a chain of stores in several of the principal cities, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday to arrange for the opening of a store in the Jevne Building, Sixth street and Broadway, about September 1. The store will occupy the five upper floors and half of the ground floor, Mr. Bedell said. The other half of the ground floor is leased to the Owl Drug Company. Mr. Bedell said the store will open with a $250,000 stock of women's suits and coats. He is at the Alexandria.

PACKED WIFE'S TRUNK.

Sent Her Home to Her Mother When He was Eight Months Wedded.

"Eight months after we were married he packed my trunk, bought me a ticket and told me to go home to my mother, as he didn't want to be tied to a woman," testified Mrs. Winifred Agnes Morris yesterday in Judge Crail's court. The court granted her a divorce from William H. Morris, whom she married at Santa Ana on July 26, 1917, and separated from on March 7, 1918.

CONVENTION CITY STILL DOUBTFUL

Rotarians Tentatively Choose Edinburgh, Scotland.

Won't Decide Unless Transportation is Assured.

Los Angeles Delegates Work for Olympic Meet.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) June 26. Edinburgh, Scotland, was tentatively selected for the 1921 convention of the International Association of Rotary Clubs at the final meeting of the board of directors at the Traymore Hotel today.

William Logie of Glasgow, the chairman of the convention delegation from the British Association of Rotary Clubs, was informed that it is the intention of the directors to formally select Edinburgh at another meeting of the board in Chicago in August, providing in the meantime assurances have been received that satisfactory transportation will be provided for the Rotarians of the United States and its possessions otherwise the convention will go to Los Angeles.

MANY WOULD GO.

Directors estimated that fully 2000 representatives of United States clubs will want to cross the Atlantic if Scotland is to be the next year's stamping ground, and as the moving of so large a party is no small proposition, the directors don't intend to take any chances of a slip-up. One of the largest of the ocean lines is said to be ready to place two of its best steamers at the disposal of the Rotarians, but it is the purpose of the directors to have everything signed and sealed before the choice is finally made.

Chesley R. Perry was re-elected international secretary-general and made editor and business manager of the Rotarian, official publication of Rotary, at today's session. Another pleasant incident was the presentation of two Rotary emblems from Atlantic City's City Hall to the Rotarians of Glasgow through William Logie, the envoy from that city. The presentation to Glasgow was made by Mayor Edward L. Bader.

Delegate Logie also was presented with a gold badge which makes him for the time being a special detective of Atlantic City, no matter where he may go in the world. It was the universal feeling of the delegates that a wise choice was made in the selection of Estes Snedecor of Portland, Or., for president and this feeling was heightened by the fact that the result was accomplished without a shadow of bitterness among the opposing candidates and their followers. The Los Angeles delegation cheered word to the effect that Los Angeles was making a bid for the Olympics for 1924. Immediately upon the receipt of the report that Los Angeles delegates made a canvass of the foreign delegates and interested them in this new fight for 1924 honors. Favorable impression was made on the foreign delegates, many of whom are influential, and the chances of Los Angeles to get the Olympic Games are great.

REX BEACH CAUSES SECRETARY'S ARREST.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—In January, 1919, Rex Beach employed a stenographer named Paul Dair. In November, Beach went to Mexico, leaving a book of signed checks for Mrs. Beach to fill out in the payment of her household expenses.

Dair, Beach alleges, instead of mailing the checks, indorsed them himself and collected at least $1200. A month later, Beach charges, Dair, posing as Beach's confidential friend, borrowed $1500 from a "pal" of the author. This was in Chicago.

On Beach's return he got a bench warrant and Dair was arrested.

ASKS WILSON TO BREAK SILENCE.

Georgia Bourbon Would Have the President Decline Third Term.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Representative Upshaw, Democrat, Georgia, in a letter to President Wilson today, told the Executive "that it would have a wholesome and composing effect if you would declare before the gavel falls at the opening hour that you would not accept a third term."

"Permit me to say," the Georgia Representative's letter added, "that I am reinforced in this conviction by comments that I have heard from your strong supporters in every section of the country. A third term for any President is counted by them a dangerous tendency in any republic. The feeling seems pregnant everywhere that Washington was right and wise when he refused a third term, thereby establishing a precedent for our republic that has been mandatory through all these years."

RICH CHINAMAN MUST PROVE HIS CITIZENSHIP

ORIENTAL MERCHANT OF LOWER CALIFORNIA FAILS TO GET BORDER PASSPORT.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Charlie Ming, a rich and well-known merchant in Lower California, who claims freedom as an American citizen to cross and recross the border will be required to prove his American citizenship in order to secure the privilege. Although full-blooded Chinese he asserts that he was born in California and therefore has all the rights of a native born American.

His case was one of a number similar in character which was decided today by Commissioner-General Caminetti in which he held that crossing and recrossing the border could only be permitted on absolute proof of citizenship.

The statement was made here that Ming had been granted a [illegible] passport and that certificates proving his birth in California had been filed at the time that the passport had been issued.

DANIELS SILENT ON ATTACK BY ADMIRAL

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Secretary Daniels would make no comment today on letters from Rear-Admiral Decker attacking him, made public at Washington by Senator Hale. He would not even read the abstracts submitted to him.

If there was anything in Admiral Decker's communications that required his attention, Daniels said he would take it up on his return to Washington, not before.

FOR SALE—

A FINE OLD HOME.

Once in a while, even in Hollywood, we are able to offer a rare bargain in fine homes. This is one of these bargains. We are the personal agents for the owners of a very beautiful estate located in the heart of Hollywood, on a prominent hill. An acre piece, averaging 140x300 ft., under perfection of cultivation, with fine old trees, shrubs flowers, nooks, rustic seats and winding shaded paths—a very finely-built old fashioned home of Spanish type, cement construction; 12 large rooms, also rooms in garage; 3 baths. This is an opportunity to buy at a price $10,000 below any ever offered on this property before. Do your own remodeling on this fine home and own a property which will be worth $75,000. There are reasons why the owners must sell and go away. We are offering this property at $32,000. There is another acre of highly improved property which the owner will sell for $12,000, should you require more land. This joins the estate on the east line. It places you under no obligation to have us show you this property. We will be glad to have you make an appointment and see it at your convenience—but if you are really interested, make it soon. The terms are easy, requiring no great amount of cash.

FOR SALE—FLAT BUILDING, THE ONLY ONE left of its kind, to our knowledge and belief, that can be had right. This building was constructed by day labor under the direct supervision of the owner, who has followed that work as a life profession. It contains 24 rooms, that is 4 6-room flats with 2 baths to each flat, tile baths, tile sinks, genuine mahogany finish. All heavy timbers throughout, with a roof on the building that will last, and not a 2-ply, which is generally used. We invite inspection. FOR SALE—OF INTEREST TO HOMESEEKERS.

We are desirous of bringing about, as rapidly as possible, the settlement and improvement of a tract of very rich land, deep loam soil, exceedingly fertile, especially adapted to long-staple cotton, also all kinds of fruits, vegetables, grains and alfalfa, which is now lying idle. Plenty of pure, soft water near surface for irrigation. Sufficient timber on land for fuel and fencing. Climate ideal for health. In our opinion this will make the richest settlement in the West, and the right kind of settlers will be given a wonderful chance. Price of land only $3.75 per acre, mostly cash. We prefer that each actual settler acquire only 160 acres, but 320 acres can be allotted to people with sufficient means to improve immediately. We can settle about 75 families on first-class land. Must be progressive American citizens with a record for honesty and reliability. No others need apply. We furnish first-class references and full information in personal interview only. This is the chance of a lifetime, act promptly. Address K, box 163, TIMES OFFICE.

FOR SALE—

5500 acres of land with 10,924 acre feet of water.

There are several thousand acres of land adjoining this property that can be irrigated from our reservoir and be put under cultivation in addition to the 5500 acres. There is now 2100 acres of alfalfa and about 900 acres of other hay, meadow producing about 6000 to 7000 tons of hay annually.

The place is well improved, and all tools, implements and equipment needed on a place of this kind, are there and in good order, most of which are new, including truck, tractor, and up-to-date machinery of all kinds.

This property is situated on the Utah and Nevada line at an elevation of 5320 feet.

There is an orchard of 700 fruit trees on the property, it is an ideal subdivision property as the land is very fertile and produces all kinds of grain, hay and vegetables.

For the MOST BEAUTIFUL 22-Acre
ORANGE GROVE

IN THE VERY HEART OF RIVERSIDE'S HIGHEST CLASS RESIDENCE DISTRICT, only a few blocks from Courthouse. FULL BEARING TREES OVER 20 YEARS OLD, producing more than some groves valued at $4000 per acre not so well located or as good soil or water rights; 40 SHARES WATER STOCK FURNISH ABUNDANT CHEAP WATER THE YEAR AROUND.

Property has been well tended and cared for for over 12 years by highly experienced and efficient man who is still in charge. Large house and other buildings on place.

THINK OF THE ADVANTAGEOUS LOCATION, SURROUNDINGS and PROBABILITIES OF THIS really UNUSUAL PROPERTY.

Only a few minutes' walk from the business center of Riverside.

Near to finest Polytechnic High School and two other good schools.

ACCESSIBLE BY TWO ELECTRIC STREET CAR LINES ON BOTH SIDES OF IT.

FRONTING TWO 100-FOOT MAIN BOULEVARD STREETS, paved, curbed, sidewalks, with wide parking.

Basement sewerage system which adds greatly to value of property for subdivision purposes.

ALL OTHER MODERN PUBLIC UTILITIES SERVICE is available to this property. It is certainly a MILLIONAIRE'S DREAM PLACE TO OWN AND LIVE with a handsome income on his money, which undoubtedly will return him four for one within the next few years in the resale of the property for subdivision.

BUT IT'S RIPE NOW FOR HIGH CLASS SUBDIVISION.

None better anywhere, I don't believe can be found at double or even treble the price.

It could be made THE "WINDSOR SQUARE" of RIVERSIDE at nominal expense, being level, no blind streets, served by two street car lines, two fine boulevards, SURROUNDED BY ARISTOCRATIC HOMES BUILT ON RESTRICTED PROPERTY, easy walking distance and accessible to business center, fine schools, churches, stores, AND THE FAMOUS MISSION INN OF RIVERSIDE.

WHERE CAN YOU GET ANOTHER SUCH A BUY?

A property producing good crops every year, with IMMENSE CROPS in sight for this year, which GOES WITH the PLACE.

This property is capable of producing $20,000 per year in crops.

'TIS A RARE AND WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY to pick up, really choice income property at a nominal price, WITH THE UNUSUAL SUBDIVISION POSSIBILITIES AND PROBABILITIES NOT COMMON TO BUT FEW PROPERTIES.

AT THE VERY LOW PRICE OF $45,000
IT WILL SOON BE SOLD.

The buyer who delays in investigating the merits of this property, certainly will have living regrets if he sees it and becomes informed after it shall have been sold to another. Don't think this idle talk. WE HAVE THE RARE QUALITY TO SHOW YOU AND CHALLENGE THE COMBINED REAL ESTATE AGENCIES OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA TO PRODUCE ANOTHER BUY ITS EQUAL.

MINES AND MINING.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machines ever built for territories from 800 to 2300 feet deep. Write for particulars and circular.

MOST OF OUR ANCESTRAL TREE ON

Pa's side of the house, were more or less what yer would call, half-baked, all 'cept old Uncle Eph Peabody; "I lay my success," ses he, "to stickin' to and running COUNTRY HOTELS."

'Long 'bout 1889, we had a sort of a family reunion, an Uncle Eph sewed $16 in 'th old tight fitting Prince Albert coat, that he had graduated in twenty-two years before at Saggette, 'an blew into the city.

My, it was an impressive sight, as 'e stood up at the head of the table, an ses he, bringing his fist down on the table 'en breaking two cups and saucers. Folks, ses 'e:

"I wouldn't trade the 'hull kit and biling for my COUNTRY HOTEL." And you'll say the same if you will only buy the following:

Only a little over an hour's ride from this city, live, hustling, country town of 20,000. Lovely brick, corner, rooms all on one floor, 33 single rooms, hot and cold water in every room, 6 private baths, elegant ground floor lobby, ladies reception room, office furniture and rugs, ALL EXTRA GOOD. Right across from the depot and 'postoffice. Good for $500 month all year round. Good long lease at a rental per month of ONLY $70.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

AN AMERICAN PROTESTANT GENTILE WITH an unquestionable record of many years' successful business management along financial, commercial and hotel lines, seeks a connection with some high-class concern where his services as an executive or office manager and a preliminary investment of not to exceed $10,000 cash is desired. Would be interested in whole or part purchase in a banking, commercial or manufacturing business or a better class hotel in Los Angeles or other good Coast city. Must be a profitable going concern with a clean record already established. Not interested in new ventures, retail business, mines, patents or promotion schemes of any kind. In addition to an opportunity for the investigation of the proposition offered, satisfactory references of principals will be given and required. The advertiser will be glad to correspond with any responsible business man who has need of his services and money in any enterprise which comes within the above requirements and regrets that he cannot reply to any others. Until July first please state briefly what and where your proposition is and how a personal interview may be had. Address K, box 14, TIMES OFFICE.

A SYNDICATE IS PURCHASING PROPERTY THAT they will sell to an incorporated company at a profit. $5000 invested in this syndicate will receive $18,000 worth of stock which can be sold three months after the issue. If you want a ground floor proposition and have the money to take advantage of this deal, send me your address and phone number and I will arrange an interview. Address P, box 438, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

WANTED — A MAN OR WOMAN TO INVEST $10,000 with me. You can give your time to the business or be a silent partner. I will guarantee you 2 per cent a month before I draw any profit from the business. WE HAVE IMITATORS, BUT NO COMPETITORS.

EASY TERMS ARRANGED AND LIBERTY BONDS ACCEPTED AS CASH IN PAYMENT FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITIONS:

BEACH CONCESSION PARTNERSHIP.

You can get better returns from a beach concession than from any other business with the same investment. Here is an exceptional opportunity for you. A well known concession; owner has instructed us to find him partners for several of his concessions. He is tired of being robbed by hired help and will sell ½ interest in paying concession for $1250. There is a five-year lease which is worth big money. You receive a good salary for your time and divide profits 50-50. Fifteen days trial is given to see if each partner is congenial. Previous experience is not necessary, but you must have references as to honesty and integrity. Your chance to earn better than $100 weekly. Call and get full particulars. See MR. DUGDALE.

AUTO AGENCY PARTNERSHIP.

A well known car which has been manufactured for the past nine years. Owner is distributor for the whole of Southern California, and has 12 sub-agents in different parts of the State. Immediate delivery of the machines is guaranteed, and the business will clear from $20,000 to $25,000 during the next 12 months. You are getting in on the ground floor of one of the best businesses in the city and one that will always net you big money. Price for half interest, $10,000 and low terms. See MR. DUGDALE.

MANUFACTURING PARTNERSHIP.

A large well-known eastern firm has instructed us to find them a responsible man to take charge of a factory in this city. They already have branches in eight States and are doing a wonderful business in manufacturing a product that is a necessity of life. This is a sound, legitimate business that will be known throughout the country within a very few years. The investment required is only $2540 and if you can qualify for the position, which only requires ordinary business ability, you cannot do better than to get further particulars. See MR. WELTMAN.

PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIP.

A strictly meritorious proposition which has never before been offered for sale, publishes a well known magazine with more than $5000 of paid advertising. A salary of $200 monthly is paid and your share of the profits. All books open for inspection and every investigation courted. The owners require further assistance and will sell an active interest for $3500 on reasonable terms. The duties are light and easily learned, so that no previous experience is necessary. It's a sound investment and really worth your investigation. See MR. STEPHENS.

WHOLESALE BAKERY.

A bakery that has been established in this city for 20 years and is now doing a business of $12,000 monthly. A well known business, fully equipped in every way. All books are open for inspection and every investigation courted. Owners are retiring and will sell for $11,500 on easy terms. See MR. STEPHENS.

WHOLESALE COFFEE.

Owner has made all the money he requires in this old established business. He is retiring and you can step right in and make a steady $450 monthly by buying the business for $2750. The stock is worth the money, so you cannot go wrong. See MR. STEPHENS.

SPECIAL PARTNERSHIP.

This is some investment. It's an active interest in one of the most popular rides on Venice pier, with a 3-year lease. Is now POSITIVELY clearing $350 WEEKLY, and is being run by hired help. The owner cannot give it his undivided attention owing to other large interests. It cost BETTER than $10,000 to install and if you are competent to take over the active management you can buy 1-3 interest for $3500, on LOW terms. Leases on Venice pier are now practically an impossibility. This is a proposition which will average you better than $600 monthly. Call and get further particulars. It is a real money-maker, and worth your investigation. See MR. DUGDALE.

PHONOGRAPH FACTORY.

This business is making big money and has valuable contracts. Owner wishes to expand and will sell ½ interest for $1750. The money goes back into the business. A proposition which has a great future and one that should be quickly sold. See MR. GOLDRING.

MANUFACTURING PARTNERSHIP.

Half interest for sale in old established manufacturing business, clearing $1200 monthly. Owner requires partner to give general assistance and will sell equal ½ interest for only $5000, on easy terms. A sound paying business that will quickly return you your investment. References given and required. See MR. DUGDALE.

DRUGS, DRY GOODS.

Swell corner location, 15 miles from L. A. Receipts average $80 daily and there is a good lease at the right rent. There are elegant fixtures which could not today be duplicated for $10,000. Owner is retiring and will sell for $6000 and give easy terms. See MR. STEPHENS.

GARAGE SPECIAL.

One of the best paying and equipped garages in the city for its size. There is 50-car storage at $8 per month and a complete repair shop employing 4 mechanics. The business is now clearing around $500 monthly and there is good lease at low rent. The price, only $4000, for quick sale, and the first to see will buy. See MR. WILEY.

RESTAURANT PARTNERSHIP.
The chance of your life. An equal ½ interest in a restaurant which owner guarantees is clearing $1000 monthly, for $1500. Located on swell corner with dandy fixtures. Large counter and seating for 120 persons. Owner is an expert cook and requires partner competent to look after the front and take the cash. It's the best buy we have for the money and one that will be quickly sold. See MR. WELTMAN.

FOUNTAIN, ICE CREAM.

Disagreement of partners is the cause of this business being sold at such a ridiculously low price. Fixtures alone cost better than $5500 and owners will produce receipts to prove this. Has valuable marble bar and everything is in tip-top shape. Profits are guaranteed $700 monthly. The business, including valuable lease is yours for $4500 and very low terms for quick sale. See MR. DUGDALE.

GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP

PARTNERSHIP PARTNERSHIP
Partner wanted in this paying garage and repair shop, located right in auto row and clearing around $600 monthly. The repair shop is fully equipped with machinery and equipment and stock will invoice all that is being asked for the business. Previous experience not necessary as buyer will be required to give general assistance and owner will teach him the business. The shop now employs 4 mechanics, who are kept busy all the time at $1.50 an hour. Price for ½ interest, $2800, and very easy terms to responsible party. See MR. STEPHENS.

AUTO PAINT PARTNERSHIP.

Caters to highest class trade at top prices. It's now working on eight cars and has $600 of work on hand. Employs two first-class painters and doing an A-1 business. If you are a willing worker owner will teach you. It's your chance to get into an old established business that has always and will always return a good income. It's up-to-date in every way and the price for ½ interest only $750. See M. WELTMAN.

BAR
GENUINE BARGAIN.

If you are looking for something really good you will buy this. It's located right on main thoroughfare and doing a good business. One of the nicest and best fitted up old-time saloons in the city and you can buy it for only $750. See S. WELTMAN.

LIGHT LUNCHES.

Owner is leaving for Seattle, July 1, and is compelled to sacrifice this paying business for only $2000. There is a good lease and elegant fixtures, which you could auction for more than price asked. Is now clearing $500 monthly. This is a genuine proposition and a real bargain. See MR. DUGDALE.

AUTO TOP AND PAINT SHOP
SPECIAL PARTNERSHIP.
This business has been established for past four years and is clearing better than $400 monthly. The shop is fully equipped for painting and trimming, and is up-to-date in every way. Owner cannot handle alone and requires hard working partner to give general assistance. It's a chance for you to earn better than $30 weekly and the price for ½ interest is only $750. See MR. WILEY.

AUTO REPAIR PARTNERSHIP.
Your chance to buy an equal ½ interest in one of the best shops in Pasadena for only $500. This shop is positively clearing better than $450 monthly right now. Previous experience not necessary if you are a hard worker. The shop is fully equipped with valuable tools and welding outfit, necessary to do all kinds of work. It's a dandy buy at the money and a quick seller, so call early. See MR. WILEY.

RESTAURANT.
This is a swell restaurant doing $50 a day. Is located in modern brick building with good lease. The fixtures are worth more than price asked, but owner is sick and must sell. If you are looking for an A-1 bona fide restaurant, making real money, investigate this one at $2700. See MR. GOLDRING.

PHONOGRAPH STORE
PARTNERSHIP PARTNERSHIP
This business is clearing $800 monthly and is increasing daily. Owners are handicapped from expanding through lack of capital and they will sell an active interest for $3500. It's located right uptown on main thoroughfare. A high-class business with elegant fixtures and heavy stock. A good buy at the money. See MR. GOLDRING.

CONFECTIONERY AND LIGHT LUNCH.
Our best buy. Stock and fixtures will more than invoice price asked. This business is positively clearing $250 monthly and a trial is willingly given before payment. It's an ideal business for a lady who wants to make comfortable income with a small investment. Price only $1250 and VERY LOW terms. See MR. WELTMAN.

GROCERIES AND FEED.
Owner has purchased a ranch and will sell this paying business now clearing better than $250 monthly for $1500. It's a sacrifice, not a sale at this money, as there is more than value in sight for your money. See MR. STEPHENS.

BUSINESS CHANCES—Wanted.

100 YEARS FROM TODAY.

Agents will still be calling at your place of business pretending that they have a buyer who wants your business and that he has the cash. Of course you are sick and tired of that sort of business. He merely wants to list your proposition so as to have a good list of places on hand that he MAY sell in case some straying buyer may come in. He very seldom advertises it, afraid to spend the money.

We won't guarantee to sell your place of business, in one day, or make a lot of promises, but we do claim that we will take your place, concentrate our efforts on it, advertise it and do everything within our power to consummate a quick and satisfactory sale.

List it with us, giving us at least a 30-day exclusive listing and you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have it placed where if perfect co-operation counts, it should be turned in due time.

FACT AND COMMENT.

To encourage persons of limited means to build and own their homes, to aid them in obtaining at the least practicable cost, desirable and [illegible] house plans, and to enable such persons to secure the benefit of the advice and skill of architects of experience and standing—these are the aims of the "architect's small house service bureau" recently inaugurated in Minneapolis and indorsed by the board of directors of the American Institute of Architects.

The bureau, we are told, has no connection with the sale of building [illegible] equipment or supplies, but aims to give professional protection and service at the lowest cost.

Such a movement, on its face, is entitled to public commendation. That it should be given the formal indorsement of that [illegible] body from which most of our architects receive their ethical guidance is significant. It may [illegible] the architects themselves are seeking to bridge the gap that long has existed between [illegible] and the "common man"—[illegible] is here used with a [illegible] humility and with due [illegible] to such of us as happen to [illegible] in tail—who, long neglected by the fine arts, has come to [illegible] architecture as he might on [illegible] coat—something better [illegible] on the rich man's back. At [illegible] the architects since the time of the Pyramids have, with few exceptions, been disposed to venerate their [illegible] to an extent that it has come to [illegible] as the one item easiest to [illegible] from the small home-building [illegible] list. Therefore the rise of the "architectural salesman," whose [illegible] is that he can "sell architecture" and then "hire a regular architect to do the work."

But that is not the point we seek [illegible] at this time. It would [illegible] that this "architectural service" experiment in Minneapolis is worth emulating. As a matter of fact there is no American community more in need of closer affinity between the average home builder and competent architectural adviser—[illegible] that both may prosper—[illegible] Had we had such an [illegible] from a competent group of [illegible] a year or more ago—one [illegible] doing a real public service [illegible] a city might today have spared the humiliation of having [illegible] acknowledge the large number [illegible] constructed, cheaply designed and over-priced dwellings that have been permitted to go up in the unprecedented rush to get under [illegible]

[illegible]

To follow this thought to another [illegible], it occurs to the Fact and Comment man that this "architect's home service bureau" idea has much merit to engage the interest of a number of the younger elements of our local architectural fraternity who might find considerable [illegible] and certainly a vast amount of valuable experience, in organizing [illegible] in off hours such a service [illegible] type of home builder who [illegible] "architectural values" from [illegible] or $10 set of plans "knocked [illegible] a person who has served his apprenticeship in some one of a [illegible] fields that do not even remotely touch architecture. There are [illegible] younger architects in Los Angeles [illegible], highly skilled graduates of leading technical schools, not certificated by the State examining board, who in this way could do a real public service in bringing up to a better standard the [illegible] in small home architecture and do it at a low cost to the home builder and without "taking an [illegible] of meat from his employer's [illegible]" if such might be the fear. The thought concerns particularly the younger architect or designer, [illegible] yet to come into his share of recognition; although not a few of this class, as the Fact and Comment man knows, are employing their talents and ideas on work that their employers are glad enough to [illegible] credit for.

[illegible]

Why the Delay?

[illegible] ninety days ago Contractor John Hayes announced with cheering assurance that, within thirty twenty-four-hour turns of the City Hall clock, he would be ready to don his overalls, grasp his pick and shovel and make dirt fly on the Second-street tunnel. Of course, citizens concerned with the completion of that highly important bore gathered to watch the progress, and finding that performance has failed to keep step with promise are now beginning to ask questions and wonder why the delay.

Perhaps there has been no delay. It may be that when Mr. Hayes put over his thrilling "I-will-be-ready-to-proceed-in-thirty-days" speech he made a mental reservation which permitted of a more elastic arrangement than the hopeful tunnel advocates had reason to suspect. At any rate, the start is yet to be made, and the city, or a greater part of it, wonders why.

Recently the Fact and Comment man was informed by a person intimate with City Hall affairs that there was not much chance of action on the construction of the tunnel until all the assessments were in, and that up to that time a group of property owners upon whom a levy has been made were reluctant to make their payments at this time. It is not to be supposed, however, that Mr. Hayes regrets his bargain. He has already assured us that he does not and that $1,000,000 will amply pay him for the time, labor and material involved in the contract. All this sounds good. If the only reason, then, is that all the assessments are not yet forthcoming, it might be suggested that a way be devised to quickly remove this obstacle and get the job under way.

FOR LONG BEACH.

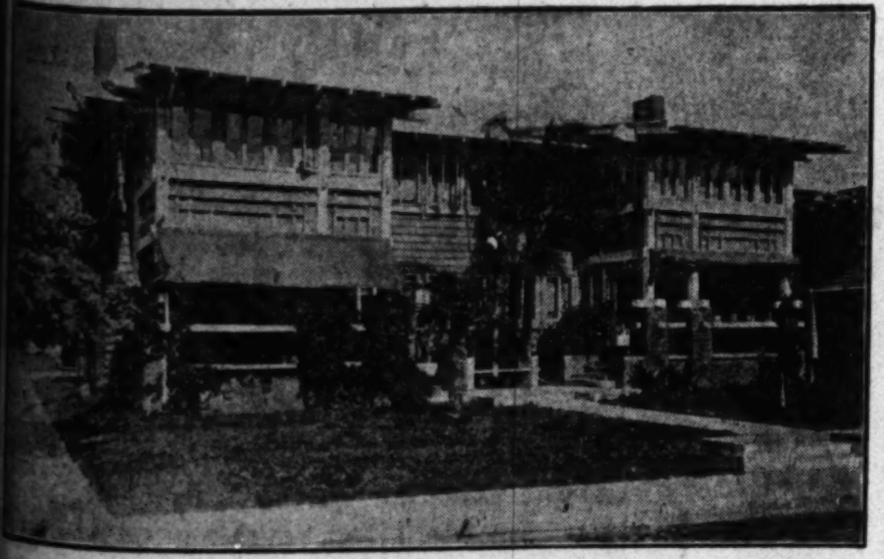
Work Started on New Office Building and Theater.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, June 27.—General contract bids are now being called for and excavation is under way for the new theater, store and office building at the corner of American avenue and Bronce Way. The owners of this new substantial development for Long Beach are Lineberger, Hite & Lineberger, and the architects for the building are Walker & Eisen of Los Angeles.

The building will be 50x250 feet in dimension, and the front portion of the building will be three stories high, with stores and theater lobby on the ground floor and thirty-four offices on the floors above, served by elevator. The rear part of the structure will contain the theater, auditorium and stage. The auditorium, together with the balcony, will seat about 1500, and will be equipped with general lounge rooms for men and women, a nursery and the excellent appointments for the convenience of the guests. A full stage for the portrayal of legitimate plays will be constructed. An organ and a unique lighting system will be installed, and a correct system of heating and ventilation will be provided.

The exterior of the building is handled in an adaptation of Spanish renaissance, using architectural terra cotta for facing material. A decorative marquise will cover the entrance. Fully equipped, the building and furnishings will represent an expenditure of about $200,000.



HOLLYWOOD FLAT BARGAIN

PRICE Only $16,000

This splendid four-family flat building is located on a sightly corner in a fine residential district just off Hollywood Boulevard. Each flat consists of beautiful living and dining room, cabinet kitchen, large airy bedroom, dressing room, glassed in sleeping porch and disappearing bed, besides laundry porch and much closet space. There are individual gas radiators, genuine fireplaces and water heating apparatus in each flat and the best of hardwood floors prevail throughout. Four gas ranges are included in price. The building which is exceptionally well built is in first-class condition and has been occupied by the same tenants for several years. There are no leases. Mortgage of $7500 can remain. Will pay better than 23% net on actual cash invested. For appointment to inspect premises call early Monday as rare bargains of this kind are picked up quickly.

ADDITIONS TO CITY'S BUSINESS CENTER.

WOOLWORTH COMPANY TO BUILD; LOFT BUILDING TO RISE ON HILL STREET.

Two new business structure are to be erected in the downtown district of the city, according to announcements which have been made by the builders. One of these buildings will consist of a five-story class A structure for the F. W. Woolworth Company on the site of the building which it now occupies, at 719 South Broadway, and the other will consist of a new six-story building, also class A, for the Joseph Basch Company on property recently purchased from Stafford W. and Howard Bixby on South Hill street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets.

The F. W. Woolworth Company purchased a lease to run for a period of forty-two years on the Broadway property from the Sun Drug Company. The new home of the Woolworth Company will have a frontage of sixty feet on Broadway and a depth of 160 feet, and the entire structure will be occupied by the firm. While no plans have as yet been prepared for the building, it is estimated that the type of structure which the company proposes to build will cost about $300,000. It is the intention of the company to remove part of its executive offices from San Francisco to Los Angeles upon completion of the new building, construction of which will be started as soon as satisfactory temporary quarters can be found.

The Joseph Basch Company contemplates the erection of a first-class modern office and loft building on the property recently acquired on Hill street. Plans for the building are now being prepared by Architects Walker and Eisen. The building will be a steel and reinforced concrete fireproof structure, and will contain office rooms, display rooms, repair shops, and a large mezzanine floor. It will be devoted exclusively to the rental of period furniture and properties to the moving-picture studios. The lot, which is 52x150 feet, was sold to the Basch Company through W. W. Robson, of Metcalf & Ryan.

BANK WORKERS TO HAVE PLAYGROUND.

HOME AND HIBERNIAN BANK TO BUILD ON SITE CHOSEN BY EMPLOYEES.

The Home and Hibernian Savings Bank has announced its intention of securing, as soon as possible, a site for a vacation resort to be kept open throughout the year for the use of its employees. A committee, headed by T. M. Perry, manager of the Hollywood branch of the institution, was appointed to select a site suitable to the needs of the institution, and one which will be easily accessible to the employees of the bank, but final decision as to the site chosen will rest with the employees.

At the present time the committee has under consideration a site in Los Flores Canyon, in the Santa Monica Mountains at the entrance to the Rindge estate, and it is believed that this location, combining both the attractions of the mountains and the sea, will be the choice of the employees. It is planned to establish automobile stage service between the resort and the city in order to assure accessibility to those who wish to make use of the resort over the week-end or for a longer period.

Plans now under contemplation by members of the committee in charge of the project call for the construction on the site selected of a two-story central building, which will be used for entertainments, dancing and clubrooms. The second floor of the building will contain, according to tentative plans, dormitory rooms. Surrounding this main structure will be a group of tent houses for the use of families of the employees, these tents to be served by a large community kitchen.

This plan has been under consideration for some time by the officials of the Home Savings Bank, it was stated, but definite arrangements were deferred until the consolidation of the Home Savings Bank with the Hibernian Savings Bank has been completed, in order to give the employees of the latter institution a voice in the selection of the site and the arrangement of the buildings.

HOUSE TRANSFERS.

The Crisp Realty Company reports the following property sales: Mary J. Turner to Dr. Charles S. Rees and wife, Beverly Apartments at 746 South Bonnie Brae, $30,000; Emil Kunze to Jane Sharpsteen, 1540 Fairmont Way, $2650; Robert L. Huch to R. F. Cleghorn, 2122 and 2124 Scott avenue, $5300; S. A. Barbour to F. C. and Gertrude Grider, flat at 123 South Witmer street, $9000; Catherine E. Barto to Nellie S. Rolls, 320 Newland street, $3200; Alice Hepburn to C. Valentine, 3922 Trinity street, $6000; C. E. Jansen to Alice Hepburn, 155 East Eighty-fourth street, $3150.

FINE THEATER FOR CALIFORNIA HOTEL.

PLANS INCLUDE GARAGE AND SERVANTS' ANNEX FOR BIG HOSTELRY.

Plans are being prepared by Myron Hunt, architect for the California Hotel, for a moving-picture theater, garage and servants' quarters for the big hostelry. This group of buildings, to be built on the west end of the main structure, will cost about $250,000 to complete, according to present estimates.

Entrance to the theater, which will have a seating capacity of 575 people, will be had through the west lobby of the hotel, where the shops and the grill are to be located. It is planned to make the theater a thoroughly modern and up-to-date structure, including a pipe organ, artistic lighting fixtures and comfortable seating arrangements.

The garage building will be constructed in two separate units, and will have a housing capacity for 150 cars. The servants' quarters will also be housed in a separate building, which will contain bedrooms, bathrooms and dining-room and kitchen. All three buildings will be built of reinforced concrete, and will conform to the architecture of the main building.

Contracts have been let to the Weymouth Crowell Construction Company for the construction of approximately one-half mile of semi-covered pergolas, to connect the main structure with the bungalows which will be erected in the adjacent grounds. These pergolas, which will give protection in all weather, will cost about $15,000 to complete.

The underground work for piping water, gas and electricity to the hotel and the bungalows is nearing completion. Three types of water connections have been installed, including an automatic sprinkling system in the buildings as protection against fire, water supplies for the main building, and the supply for the gardens and lawns. To provide for future expansion, a double source of gas and electric supply has been installed.

ENTERS LOCAL FIELD.

Eastern Corset Company Opens Branch Here.

With the establishment of a wholesale branch on South Los Angeles street, the Jackson Corset Company of Jackson, Mich., will enter the Pacific Coast field as manufacturers of a trade-marked corset. W. H. Kleinsorg will be the local manager of the firm. The new store and display room will be in the building recently completed for the Jaffa Brothers Company at 820 South Los Angeles street. The lease was handled by W. L. Evans of the W. Ross Campbell Company.

Other leases reported by Mr. Evans are the store at 927 South Broadway for Harry C. Fryman to the Graas-Mayer-Duncanson Company, to be used for a floor-coverings display and salesroom, and the one-story brick building at 836 South Olive street for Mrs. Mary T. Devin to the Argus Enterprises, to be used as a sales and display room for motion-picture theater supplies.

TO SELL KERN LANDS.

C. L. Shirk, of Shirk, Anderson, & Faulkner of Bakersfield, is a visitor at the Van Nuys Hotel. Mr. Shirk stated yesterday that the Miller & Lux lands in Kern county, with the exception of the Button Willow ranch, would be placed on the market in the near future. The land, which includes several thousand acres, may be sold in its entirety, or it may be subdivided and placed on the market in small tracts, to be sold on a partial payment plan.

BUILDING ACTIVE.

New Homes and Schools Going Up at Redlands.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, June 26.—Contractors and builders of Redlands report great building activity in this city. Two of the University of Redlands group of buildings are nearing completion, and three more have been started. The men's dormitory, built at a cost of $60,000, is about completed and the science hall, which cost $140,000, is almost finished. Work is well under way on a girls' dormitory to cost $60,000, and on two fine arts studios, which will be erected at a cost of $25,000. The plans for a $250,000 auditorium and chapel have been prepared, but the work on this finest building of the whole group will probably be deferred for five or six years.

L. W. Clark has just built a bungalow that cost $8000, and G. H. Huizing has finished a $12,000 bungalow. Both of these residences are on Fern avenue. G. Dexter's bungalow on Smiley Heights will cost about $8000, as will also that of Walter Hartzell on Alvarado street. The home of G. Boettger at Olive and Buena Vista streets was completed at a cost of about $9000.

The contract for the new intermediate school, to be built at a cost of $140,000, has been awarded to Robert Ogden, and the excavation work has been started. The contract calls for the completion of the building by January 1 of next year.

WORKMEN'S HOUSES.

Fifteen Homes to be Built at Van Nuys for Employees of Factory.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, June 26.—Final arrangement for the erection of fifteen houses for the use of the employees of the Robert-Morton pipe organ factory were made this week. Representatives of the Los Angeles Building Company, which will construct the houses, were in Van Nuys Monday and Tuesday, taking up options on the lots selected and making payments on them. Cash will be paid for all of the lots, which are scattered throughout the townsite. All of the houses will be built in the townsite, however, and they will be of modern design, to cost from $2500 to $3500.

The force of men employed at the Robert-Morton factory is being increased in order to meet the growing demand for these instruments. Officials of the company state that some difficulty in obtaining workmen has been encountered on account of the limited housing facilities of Van Nuys, but it is believed that with the construction of these new houses, the situation will be greatly relieved.

Last week three organs were shipped by the company, going to San Diego, Venice and Framingham, Mass. The price of the three organs was $45,000. During the coming week three more will be ready for shipment to Walla Walla, Wash.; Raleigh, N. C., and Jacksonville, Fla. Shipments will be made in the near future to New Orleans, Fort Worth, Tex.; Kansas City, Mo., and Phoenix, Ariz. The company will also build an organ for the Pantages Theater in San Diego, making four of the Robert-Morton organs for theaters on the Pantages circuit.

IN LARGER QUARTERS.

Having outgrown its present quarters in the Haas Building, the Conant Investment Company has leased an additional suite of offices on the sixth floor of the same building, and part of the sales force of the company has moved into the new quarters. Dr. Ira F. Harlan, formerly of Missouri, has joined the Conant organization.

NEW SITES FOR HOME BUILDERS.

Historic Outpost to Become Residential Park.

Whitley Heights Tract is Formally Opened.

Big Long Beach Project Now Nears Completion.

Announcements made during the past few days of three new subdivisions to be opened in the suburbs of Los Angeles testify to the active growth and development of the residential portions of the city. One of the most interesting of these projects will be the subdivision of the Outpost, an eleven-acre tract of land in Hollywood around which much of the history of Southern California centers. With the purchase of this tract by Mrs. Louise Knappen Woollett, president of the Hollywood School for Girls, the Outpost will enter upon a new era of development.

Mrs. Woollett, who purchased the property for approximately $100,000, has announced her intention of using about one-third of the property as a site for the high school of the Hollywood School for Girls, and the remainder is to be divided into residence lots. While this will be a comparatively small subdivision, it is the intention of Mrs. Woollett to convert the property into a unique and distinctive private residential park.

From the Franklin-avenue entrance of the property to the site of the proposed school buildings a private roadway will be built, to serve the purchasers of property in the tract, and the residential sites will face on either side of this road. Plans are being made by Mrs. Woollett for the construction of a large school building at the rear of the property. The present structures will be altered and converted into modern school buildings, and the entire group, when completed, will be connected by a series of cloisters. A small canyon behind the school will be converted into an out-of-doors theater, with a seating capacity of about 500 people, and in the rear of the school buildings the tennis courts and athletic grounds will be built.

HISTORIC PLACE.

The Outpost is rich in association with the history and development of the Southwest. Still standing on the property is the adobe house formerly occupied by Gen. John C. Fremont, and it is claimed that in this house the treaty of peace which brought to a conclusion the war between the United States and Mexico was signed by Gen. Fremont and Gov. Andreas Pico. About twenty years ago the Outpost became the property of the late Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, who erected the present buildings on the property, and planted the trees which now have attained a magnificent growth.

It is the intention of the developers of this property to preserve the historic adobe house, which will probably be converted into a small museum devoted to historical exhibits connected with the development of Southern California.

NEW SUBDIVISION.

Another important Hollywood subdivision, Whitley Heights, was formally opened on Thursday evening with a barbecue on the heights attended by about 200 prominent local business men. For several months H. J. Whitley has been engaged in preparing this property for subdivision. Four roads have been built entirely around the hill, approaching the crest by an easy grade, and ornamental street lights have been erected along these roads. These lights were turned on for the first time on Thursday evening.

The new subdivision is situated at the head of Whitley avenue, north of Franklin avenue, and comprises a hill which commands a sweeping panorama of Hollywood and Los Angeles. The property has been surveyed and subdivided into about 100 residence lots, and each lot is so planned as to prevent the construction of buildings which will obstruct the view of other residents on the hill.

This is the last of the H. J. Whitley properties in Hollywood to undergo subdivision. In 1901 Mr. Whitley, who is known as the "Father of Hollywood," bought about 400 acres centering around the present site of the Hotel Hollywood. At this time the property was given over to the production of oranges, lemons and winter vegetables, and the only roadway in the entire district was the present Hollywood Boulevard.

Shortly after the acquisition of this property the Los Angeles Pacific Boulevard and Development Company was organized, and with the organization of this company began the growth of Hollywood into a high-class residence suburb. The 400-acre tract was subdivided into the tracts known as the Hollywood Ocean View tracts, and sold for residence sites. When the corporation closed its affairs, the property now known as Whitley Heights remained unsold; and this property was taken over by Mr. Whitley, who transferred a reservoir site on the top of the hill to a water company for $1, the company in return to supply water to the lower tracts. Recently this reservoir site was repurchased by Mr. Whitley for $30,000.

Mr. Whitley has announced that when the sale of this property is completed, he will devote his attention exclusively to his San Fernando Valley properties and to his land mortgage business.

BELMONT SHORE PLACE.

Belmont Shore Place, a new subdivision adjoining Long Beach, is to be opened to the public in the near future. For several months a group of Los Angeles business men have been engaged in developing this property for subdivision, dredging a channel in Alamitos Bay for pleasure boats and filling the tidewater flats adjacent to the bay to a height of six feet above high tide level. The entire reclaimed tract will contain about 300 acres.

It is pointed out by the developers of the tract that this improvement will permit the expansion of Long Beach to the eastward, a growth which has heretofore been prevented on account of the cliffs which border the sea in this direction. The new tract is located within the city limits of Long Beach, and is served by street car from that city. Half of the reclaimed land fronts the ocean and the remainder has a frontage on Alamitos Bay, which has been widened and deepened for harborage purposes. It is also proposed to pump sand to the shore of Alamitos Bay when the present dredging work is completed, in order to provide a good swimming beach along the bay as well as along the ocean front.

Griffin, bungalow at Ramona Acres, $3500.

GALE COMPANY DINNER.

R. M. Gale of the R. M. Gale Real Estate Company celebrated the proposed expansion of the firm by a banquet given at the Alexandria Hotel yesterday evening. The Gale company has leased the ground floor office room at 503 South Spring street, and preparations are now being made for the removal of the company to its new quarters. Future plans of the company were discussed by Mr. Gale, who acted as toastmaster for the evening. Among those who attended were R. T. St. John, J. C. Nass, R. Bezan, W. H. Anderson, A. A. Price, H. PLANS MADE FOR FINE CATALINA RESIDENCE.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY HOME TO BE BUILT ON HEIGHTS OVERLOOKING AVALON BAY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

AVALON, June 26.—Overlooking Avalon Bay from a commanding site on the upper terrace of East Avalon, the $100,000 residence of William Wrigley, Jr., the Chicago millionaire and owner of Catalina Island, will be one of the most imposing structures on the island, according to plans for the residence which have been drawn by D. M. Renton, general manager of the Catalina Island Company.

Three stories in height, its two wings forming a semicircle at the crest of the hill, the Wrigley home will resemble an Italian castle in its architecture. The main entrance will be through a circular pergola leading into the extensive gardens of the court yard, formed by the wings of the building.

Reinforced concrete and steel with Catalina serpentine marble columns and interior tiling will be used in the construction of the building. The first floor of basement will comprise a large Turkish bath, billiard-room, organ chamber, refrigerating room, storage room, laundry, servants' dining-room, and trunk and storage rooms.

In the semicircle of the second floor is designed a living-room 22x60 feet, overlooking the bay. A feature of this room will be a large pipe organ, with an echo organ built into the opposite wall. The southern wing of this floor will contain the dining-room, butler's pantry, kitchen, workroom and six maids' rooms with baths. The northern wing will comprise a reception hall with the main stairway leading to the third floor and to the billiard-room below. The reception rooms open into a large sunroom, which takes in the remainder of the northern wing of the building. The bedroom suites of Mr. and Mrs. Wrigley and five guest rooms are located on the third floor.

WEST END SALES.

The Los Angeles Investment Company reports the following sales of residence properties in Rodgers Park and Angeles Vista Heights: To Michael Schoelch, 1040 West Sixty-eighth street, $6250; Helen B. WILL CONVERT INTO HOTEL.

SANTA MONICA, June 26.—The Westlake Military Academy has been purchased by C. C. Waring, who plans to convert the main building of the school into a modern family hotel. In addition, about fifty family cottages will be constructed in the grounds adjacent to the main structure, these cottages to be rented to summer guests at the resort.

FIGUEROA-STREET SALE.

The unusual advantages of Figueroa street for commercial purposes is becoming more apparent. The sale of the northeast corner of Twenty-third and Figueroa street, 120x150 feet, by the Roy C. Seeley Company to one of its clients was completed yesterday. It was stated, however, that the plans of the purchaser were not ready for announcement as yet.

RIALTO TRANSFERS.

RIALTO, June 26. — Henry Schulte, a recent arrival from Wheaton, Ill., has purchased the twenty-acre orange grove of Mrs. W. A. Van Frank. The Santa Fe Building and Loan Association has sold one of its bungalows on South Orange street to L. D. Smith.

Westlake Apartment

This apartment has the most ideal location in Los Angeles, being right on Seventh Street, one block from Westlake Park. The construction is for three more stories, and there could also be a building on the corner 50 feet, leaving a 50-foot court. Floors and finish are hardwood throughout. Beautiful lobby, furnished with solid mahogany and oriental rugs. Large ballroom and billiard-room and sun parlor. Furniture is mahogany, birdseye maple and walnut—Oriental and Wilton rugs, Haviland China and Cut Glass.

Thirty large apartments. Twelve doubles and eighteen singles, besides janitor's quarters, storeroom, etc.

Taking into consideration the fact that Seventh Street property is steadily advancing in value; the magnificent building that stands on a corner lot 150x140; the present income of which can be increased easily 25 per cent, and the possibilities of further improvement on this property, it is absolutely a sacrifice at the price of $190,000. Very attractive terms can be arranged. For information regarding income and other points, see JOHNSON or GRAYSON

She was not designed for passengers and could not accommodate them without rebuilding the deck house.

But she has berths for the crew as good as those in tourist Pullmans. They have the finest of mattresses and bedding. Turn a tap and cold water comes gushing out. Turn another tap and hot water is at hand. Down a passage way is a shower bath done in enamel.

The ship's galley is as neat as those on most warships. The cook serves a menu, if you please. When press representatives went to luncheon aboard, the crew had soup, salad, choice of roast beef or lamb stew, pudding, tea or coffee.

An old windjammer, who signed up as winchman, almost choked when he saw another member of the crew wipe his lips with a napkin. The windjammer said he always used the back of his hand and in his day sowbelly and hardtack were served all the time in rough weather.

Capt. Foldat, a man with a young-looking face and iron gray hair, has been on the sea for thirty-four years. He says the Everett is the finest coastwise cargo boat he has ever been on. He says the McCormick line is trying to make things so pleasant for their crews that they will stay with them. C. A. Jarde, an old-time shipmate of the captain's is chief engineer. He is enthusiastic over his engines. In fact, all the officers are as pleased over their floating home as a child would be with a new toy.

It was only a few years ago, said the captain, that the crew on merchant vessels slept in dark holes, ate poor food and had no light for reading. Now their quarters are like the second cabins on old liners. They have electric lights, and almost everything else except a manicure and barber shop. But the sailors shave only between voyages.

FRANCHISE SOLD.

The franchise for the extension of the Western-avenue car line from Melrose avenue to Santa Monica Boulevard, to serve the Hollywood District, was been sold recently by the City Council to the City Railway Company for $100. The City Attorney was instructed to submit the necessary ordinance. The City Railway Company is the operating company of the Los Angeles Railway Corporation. The establishment of this extension to Santa Monica Boulevard has been advocated for several months by the Board of Trade of Hollywood, in order to relieve the congestion of street railway congestion of that community.

SALES AT POMONA.

Orange Groves and Residence Properties Change Hands.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, June 26.—J. A. Fitch, local realty broker, reports the sale of the thirty-acre orange grove of the Mrs. T. B. Stone estate, situated on San Antonio avenue, north of the Foothill Boulevard, to D. C. Carper, a recent arrival from Louisiana. This property, improved with modern residences and farm buildings, is considered one of the finest income-producing properties in the Claremont-La Verne district. The Valencia orange grove of W. White, consisting of ten acres in the Glendora district, was sold to A. Talbert.

Other sales of orange groves consisted of the ten-acre grove of Mrs. D. B. Hendricks on West D street to Russell Roberts for $20,000, and the ten-acre grove of F. E. Perley and Horatio Haskell to Fred C. Jacobs for $20,000. The latter property is situated on Benito avenue, in the Monte Vista district.

The two-story, eight-room residence of Mrs. Emily Hall at the corner of Piedmont and Gordon streets was sold to H. A. Bucher, formerly of Lander, Wyo., for $6500. Mrs. R. G. Mangold recently purchased the two-story brick building on East Second street, near Garey avenue. The first floor of the building is occupied by the Orange Belt Department Store, and the second floor is given over to apartments. R. Sutton Whittier sold his residence on East Pearl street to Otto Arnoldt. The eight-acre improved orange and walnut groves of Messrs. Crookshank and Somers, situated at the corner of Holt avenue and Weber street, was bought by A. Goodacre.

AT WINDSOR HEIGHTS.

New Restaurant and Office for Workmen and Visitors.

To accommodate the workmen, visitors and property owners of Windsor Heights, the Tracy E. Shoults Company, which is marketing the big subdivision, has started construction on new offices and a restaurant for the tract. Until the brick store building is completed, the restaurant will be housed in a temporary frame building. An experienced restaurant man has been placed in charge, and it is planned to serve guests at cost. The new offices of the company will occupy the corner at Third street and Larchmont Boulevard. The Shoults company reports that there are nearly 200 homes now in various stages of construction in Marlborough Square, Windsor Heights and New Windsor Square, the three tracts owned by the company.

AT ANGELES MESA.

W. P. Jeffries, president of the Angeles Mesa Land Company, reports that eight new hollow-tile houses have been completed in Angeles Mesa. The exterior finish consists of stucco over the hollow tile, and the buildings are painted in various colors. The floor plan consists of five rooms, including a living-room, dining-room, kitchen with breakfast nook, two bedrooms and bathroom. The living-room and dining-room are finished in Southern gum, and the remainder of the rooms are finished in ivory and white enamel. The fireplaces are constructed of hand-wrought tile.

BEVERLY HILLS
THE BEAUTIFUL

Offers an exclusive home site safeguarded from the business world and contaminating influences—secluded and apart, yet within twenty-five minutes from the center of Los Angeles, the Metropolis of the great Southwest, and fifteen minutes from the beach resorts, reached over four of our finest boulevards.

The subdividers of this beautiful property feel that where a man spends a considerable sum of money on his home, he is entitled to protection against an undesirable class of buildings so that his investment may be protected and the seclusion which he sought when he chose this quiet and restful spot might be his for all time.

Ornamental electric light, water, sewer, gas, paved streets, sidewalks, curbs and street lights are installed and the building restrictions which are ironclad, cover the period to 1940. The smaller lots are from 80 ft. to 100 ft. wide and from 150 ft. to 350 ft. deep to 20-foot alleys, ranging from $1800 up. The higher ground commands higher prices and is offered in parcels of varying sizes.

People who have traveled the world over and have always displayed the keenest judgment have selected Beverly Hills for their home. A few of these prominent people are:

Burton E. Green, King C. Gillette, M. H. Whittier, R. P. Bishop, Douglas Fairbanks, Kirk B. Johnson, E. L. Doheny, H. D. Lombard, Charles Ray, Wm. B. Joyce, S. M. Spaulding, Raymond C. Thorne, E. F. UNIVERSITY TAPS BUSINESS FIELD College Organized to Train Executives for Future.

Courses to Lead to a Brand New Academic Degree.

Actual Experience in Shops and Offices Included.

To meet the needs of modern commercialism and to better prepare young men and women for the field of business activities, the University of Southern California has organized a college of commerce and business administration as an integral department of the university.

This innovation in collegiate courses will lead to the degree of bachelor of science in business administration, and it is intended that it shall hold the same relation to modern business as a profession that the college of law holds to the legal profession.

In outlining plans for the new college Dr. George Finlay Bovard, president of the university, said:

"The establishment of the college of commerce and business administration comes in response to a recognition of the demand, now rapidly increasing, for an institution of full collegiate rank, which shall be able to offer adequate and thorough preparation to picked young men and women for the new era in commerce and business. The purpose of the college is to so equip the student that he will have at once a broad outlook upon life, with its demands for social service, a thorough knowledge of the principles that underlie sound business activities, and a comprehensive grasp of actual business practice. In addition, therefore, to the substratum of liberal studies, and the more fundamental business subjects required of all, the student will be able to choose, during his last two years, the particular courses that lead to the actual entrance into the special field he has selected for his life work. Thus, having laid the broad foundation of higher commercial training during the first two years, he will be in a position to elect his own desired group of special studies, such as foreign trade, banking and finance, transportation, public service, accounting, etc.

NOT JOB TRAINING.

"It should be clear from the outset that the college of commerce is not an institution for mere business training, or a school devoted to job training. Rather is it an institution devoted to the far broader and higher field of professional educational training in commerce and business. It is conceived that the future will demand broadly-educated men, men of social vision and individual initiative, whose chief function will be the work of leadership and co-ordination, rather than that of job holding. The education of the future business executive or commercial engineer must be at once liberal and technical.

"No course of study, however thorough, can take the place of actual business experience. Consequently, the policy of the college will be to have the students do a substantial amount of field work, including inspection trips and investigation work, and to devote much of their time during the fourth year of study to actual employment service in co-operating business houses in Los Angeles, under the supervision of a faculty member."

MEMBERS OF FACULTY.

The faculty will be as follows: George Finley Bovard, A. M., D. D., LLD., president of the univer- Rockwell Dennis Hunt, A. FIGHT VENICE'S LICENSE TAXES.

Owners of Pier Concessions Start Suit to Renew "Blanket" Form.

Seeking a permanent injunction to restrain the city of Venice and its officials from collecting individual license tax from each of the concessionaires on the Venice pier, the Abbot Kinney Company, Frank M. Prior, Fred M. Church and about 100 others filed suit in the Superior Court yesterday against the Venice license collector, Chief of Police Loomis and members of the Board of Trustees.

The license for conducting concessions on the pier at Venice were formerly covered by what was called a blanket license tax paid by one company which sublet to others. Recently an ordinance was passed requiring payment for each concession.

UNSHAKEN BY QUAKE.

Even Less to Worry About Than Traffic, Says Newcomer.

LOS ANGELES, June 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I want to congratulate The Times on the excellence of its story of Monday night's earthquake. You did not lie about it or seek to minimize it, and I shall for that reason always have faith in The Times, and look to its columns for the truth about current events. The boost spirit is so rampant in Southern California that a newspaper which will approximate the truth about an earthquake in this region would, in my opinion, not lie about anything, so I am for you always. I have been here less than a year and I am so in love with the country that all the earthquakes—temblors, if you insist—could not shake me out of it.

Rather than print the absurd rot that some of your contemporaries carried about the quake, it would have been better to have ignored the story entirely. Talks with long-time residents of this city have convinced me that quakes in this region have been few and far between, and that they are infinitely less dangerous to life and limb here than is our automobile traffic, yet no one would think of foregoing the delights of Los Angeles as a place of residence because of street accidents due to the number and overenthusiasm of autoists.

An intelligent story about the local quakes, an elucidated scientific explanation of their probable cause, some understandable detail about the "fault," its slipping, etc., would go much farther to assure newcomers than a lot of twaddle to the effect that the only thing that worried passengers in the Southern Pacific station was the fact that the station clocks stopped, and they were fearful that they would miss their trains.

[Signed] QUAKER.

CITRUS REVIEW FOR WEEK.

ORANGES.

The market on California Valencia oranges is strong and active. Prices in eastern markets have jumped from 25 to 50 cents per box on best grades, while f.o.b. quotations at this end have been advanced 50 cents per box.

Latest estimates show between 8500 and 9000 cars of Valencias remaining for shipment, but it is possible that this estimate will be cut down somewhat when a thorough canvass of all Valencia districts is made July 1.

F.o.b. quotations on Valencias are on a basis of $5 to $5.50 per box, according to grade and sizes.

Central California districts are now wound up on Valencia shipments for this season.

All indications point to a bumper crop of both navels and Valencias next season. The "June drop" has not materialized so far this season, according to growers, and they are exceedingly optimistic as to the crop outlook.

Cantaloupe shipments have again increased to 300 cars daily. Warm weather has caused the melons to ripen quickly and continued heavy shipments are looked for. It is estimated that there are about 2000 cars remaining for shipment.

Estimates of losses to green fruit crops of the Fresno district by the hot wave of the 19th and 20th of June are increased rather than diminished by reports gathered by shippers from all parts of the valley this week. Tokay grapes were the heaviest sufferers from the heat. The damage to this variety is estimated at 40 to 50 per cent. The damage to Emperors is also severe and will probably amount to 30 per cent. Malagas are reported to have suffered least of all, but will run to at least 10 per cent.

LEMONS.

Mediterranean lemons have again invaded United States markets as far west as the Missouri River markets and the California lemon growers are suffering accordingly. The fact that an American dollar is worth three or four to one dollar in Italy is drawing the Italian lemons here. There are yet about a quarter million boxes of foreign lemons afloat as a visible supply and a cargo of 50,000 boxes is being auctioned at New York as the week closes. It is doubtful whether Italian exporters are going to find their adventure into American markets profitable in the final analysis because at the prices with added freight charges the deal does not look attractive on its face. You can never tell what a lemon importer is doing except to watch his further movements and the fact that the visible supply is still maintained afloat by added shipments looks as though they needed American money against which our protective tariff is proving very inadequate.

California shippers are ready for the final showdown. California lemons have matured and are packed and largely on the rails ready for the usual hot spells to start suffocating the eastern populace. As our groves are maintained in California for the purpose of alleviating these annual visitations of misery and because it is more than ever difficult for the general eastern public to secure relief from any other liquid refreshment it is still hoped that a seasonal average may be struck that will close the fiscal year in October without actual loss of blood to the California lemon industry.

BRITISHERS BUSY ON DOMINION DAY PLANS.

OVERSEAS CLUB IS PROMISING MANY THRILLERS AT PIER AT OCEAN PARK.

Dominion Day, the "Canadian Fourth of July," will be celebrated July 1 at Pickering Pier at Ocean Park. The program for the celebration is being handled by the British Overseas Club, and includes several "thrillers."

Leroy Scott, known as the "Handcuff King," will jump into the sea from a height of 100 feet while he is locked hand and foot in eight handcuffs. He promises to emerge from the water in a few seconds from all shackles. Later in the day De Villiers, billed as an "aerial daredevil," will ascend in an airplane to an altitude of 4000 feet and then step from one plane to another, and later make a parachute landing on the pier. There will also be a program of music and speeches, and dancing and refreshments.

The British Overseas Club is comprised, in the main, of returned British and Canadian veterans of the World War. The organization is philanthropic, and supports many of its members who were maimed, blinded or incapacitated during the war.

BOOST RIM OF WORLD.

American Travel Bureau Plans Office for San Bernardino Resorts.

Favorably impressed by the beauties of the Rim-of-the-World resorts which he visited on a recent tour taken by the Southern California Editorial Association, Gordon Smith, president of the American Travel Bureau, which maintains ten tourist information branches in California and has connection with travel bureaus in more than a hundred cities from coast to coast, announced yesterday that on July 1 he will open a San Bernardino mountain resorts information department in the Hellman Day and Night Bank at Fifth and Main streets.

"The Rockies offer no more complete and entertaining series of resorts than are represented all along the route of the Rim-of-the-World trip. The combinations of mountain and lake are incomparable."

In this new branch of the American Travel Bureau, which will handle nothing but San Bernardino mountain resorts information, Mrs. Alan Roxborough, who is familiar with the section, will be in charge. Daily telegraphic, phone and mail data will be forwarded to the bureau by the various resorts in the region.

Settle the Home Question

We Will Sell You a Home
On Payable-Like-Rent Terms

This Month We Will Complete

Forty New HOMES and we are selling them as fast as they are completed

WHY?

Because our homes are built under supervision of experts.

Because materials are purchased wholesale through our own mill and lumber yard, and thoroughly seasoned in our own kilns.

Furthermore, we subdivide acreage into beautiful and sightly residence lots and streets, curbs and sidewalks are constructed of the materials from our own sand and gravel pits.

Ornamental shrubbery is supplied to each home we build from our own twenty-acre nursery.

For these reasons we build a better home for much less money and sell it on payable-like-rent terms.

Prices $4850 up to $11,950

MATERNITY COTTAGE WILL BE DEDICATED.

CEREMONY TO BE CONDUCTED AT ASSOCIATION'S NEW BUILDING TODAY.

The Maternity Cottage Association's new building at 127 South Utah street, will be dedicated at 2:30 p.m. today. Mrs. William Baurhyte, president and organizer of the association, Rev. E. Stanton Hodgin, and Dr. L. M. Powers, will give brief talks during a ceremony at which R. Morgan Galbreth will preside. The public, which is invited to attend the exercises, will be given an opportunity to inspect the building.

Sixteen beds are provided in this new building; of these, two at annual cost of $145 each may yet be secured as memorial gifts. There is also opportunity to furnish the roof garden or halls, and also to contribute to paying off the $8000 mortgage.

Since its opening in 1907, the Maternity Cottage has been the birthplace of more than 3000 babies, children of wives who could not afford large hospital expenses, but desired financial independence, or else were unable to pay any fees at all. The demand for such care is increasing and the Maternity Cottage has proved a pioneer in the maternity and infant welfare work which the National League of Women Voters is now urging upon the Federal government.

Gifts for furnishings of the new Maternity Cottage include: Sterilization room, Mrs. Claire B. Carpenter; confinement room, Dr. Charles Salisbury; nurses' living and dining-room, Mrs. W. E. Osborne; nursery, the Wilkes' Players in memory of Mrs. Eliza Tupper Wilkes; the diet kitchen, the Chi Omega sorority. Various rooms or individual beds have been furnished and will be maintained by W. S. Howard and his little daughter, Betty; Mrs. F. S Barnard, the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church, the National Park Seminary Alumnae Association, the Iota Beta Phi, and the Boyle Heights, Echo Park Mothers', South Side Ebell and Irwindale Women's clubs.

SUMMER SCHOOL WILL NOT BE ALL CLASSES.

MANY TRIPS, LECTURES AND CONCERTS PLANNED BY U.S.C. STUDENTS.

Six weeks of intensive study in the summer session of the University of Southern California will be varied by a series of hikes, watermelon "feeds," gay little department parties and social affairs at the French House and the Spanish House.

While university credit will be awarded for work completed in the "summer university," the six weeks will be interesting to the visiting teachers and many week-end parties to near-by resorts are being planned.

The registration for the session, which opens tomorrow, will include teachers and students from Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Oregon and Washington as well as from a number of other parts of the country. It is expected that 1500 students will be registered for the classes.

Thirty-five visiting professors had arrived last night from different parts of the country ready for the opening tomorrow and in addition forty members of the regular faculty will take part in the work.

A series of public lectures to be given by members of the faculty and visiting educators will be a special feature to which the public will be admitted. It is expected that Miss Olga Steeb, famous pianist, who will give classes in this session, will give a public recital as one of the star events of the session. Dr. E. A. Winship, editor of the Boston Journal of Education, will deliver the opening lecture, next Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, on "Visualizing Education." He has made forty trips across the continent to speak before educational assemblies.

The Southern California Association of Music Teachers held their annual reception in honor of visiting musicians and artists in the art studio yesterday afternoon as one of the opening events.

HOLDS MAYOR'S POST.

President Workman of Council Acts in Snyder's Absence.

President Workman of the City Council presided in the Mayor's office yesterday as acting Mayor. He will continue in that position until Mayor Snyder returns to the city July 6.

Many friends called to extend their congratulations, including Councilman Wheeler, between whom and Mayor Snyder most frigid relations exist. Mr. Wheeler said that until yesterday he had not been inside the Mayor's office for six months.

After preliminary investigation of the precedents involved, City Attorney Burnell said yesterday that he was inclined to believe that Mr. Workman will not lose his vote in the Council while acting as Mayor. Mr. Workman said that he does not intend to vote unless some vitally important matter arises in the Council. The Councilmen will take turns in presiding over that body during Mr. Workman's absence.

HARDING INDORSED.

Republican Protective League Also for Osborne and Shortridge.

The Republican Protective League of Los Angeles has entered upon the political campaign by passing resolutions strongly indorsing Harding and Coolidge and also declaring for Henry S. Osborne for Congress and Samuel M. Shortridge for United States Senator.

The resolutions say that Mr. Osborne has been, throughout his two terms, "a true and devoted representative of the people." Mr. Shortridge is indorsed because of "his great ability, his intense devotion to the Republican party, his aggressive type of Americanism and understanding of the needs of the people."

PLAN FOR NEW CABLE LOWERS BRAZIL RATE.

The new cable which the Western Union Telegraph Company will lay to Brazil in connection with the Western company has already had the effect of reducing the Brazil rate from 85 cents to 65 cents per word. Further reduction will be made, when the cable is put in operation, to possibly 50 cents a word.

This rate can be made on account of shorter and more direct routing by Western Union cable, whereas the all-American route used at present follows the west coast, then across the Andes to Buenos Aires, and thence up the east coast, making a longer and more expensive routing.

Santa Fe
Follow the trail of the Santa Fe

The Santa Fe has blazed a trail which every person who is interested in the construction of any type of building can well afford to follow.

Within the past year the Santa Fe has built eleven dwellings of hollow tile for roadway employees at various points in the San Joaquin Valley. These have proven so very satisfactory that they are now building at Winslow, Arizona, for employees of the Santa Fe Mechanical Dept. and more Hollow Tile construction is now contemplated at other points in the near future.

Ten Houses of Hollow Tile

This work is by the Architectural Dept. A.T.&S.F.Ry. Company, R. B. Ball, chief engineer.

Low first cost, elimination of depreciation and upkeep expense, unlimited permanence, protection from extremes of heat and cold, and wide architectural latitude are characteristic features of Hollow Tile which are influencing its extensive adoption for all kinds of permanent construction by individual builders and by large corporations whose judgment is to be relied upon.

Orders for Hollow Tile should be placed amply in advance to insure delivery when desired.

Your Texas Oil Investment
Shown by Our $10,000 Statistical Map

Experts have been busy for weeks preparing the most complete Geological and Statistical Map of Texas ever compiled.

This Map is Now Ready for You. It Cost $10,000 to Prepare and is Worth It

On the face of the map, which measures 18x24 inches, are shown geological surface structures, with brief explanation of their character in every-day language.

All known oil and gas fields, accurately located, with average production of each field.

Location, size and ownership of all refineries operating or under construction.

Location of all principal pipe lines and ownership.

Railroads, county lines and principal towns.

On the reverse side appear the following tables and charts:

Table showing increase in crude oil and gasoline consumed and number of automobiles in use from 1910 to 1918, inclusive.

Chart showing increase in production of crude oil from 1910 to 1917, inclusive, comparing production of United States, Texas and the world.

Table showing number of wells drilled and number producing for each field, from 1912 to July 1, 1919.

Table showing approximate production for each of the principal Texas fields in 1918 and first six months of 1919.

Table showing dividends paid by principal North Texas companies from date of organization to March, 1919, inclusive; also dividends paid by large, old-established oil companies over a long period of years.

PRODUCE PRICES HOLD FIRM AND UNCHANGED.

POTATOES AND CANTALOUPES WEAKER; TOMATOES ON UPWARD TREND.

Most of the leading lines of fruits and vegetables maintained a firm tone during the session on the local produce market yesterday, and there were few changes recorded during the day. Country receipts, although in liberal supply, were somewhat lighter, as were also the arrivals by rail, and good stock was moved rapidly during the early hours of the session. New potatoes, however, were easier under a dull demand, selling mostly at a decline of about 10 cents per lug box. In the shipping market, prices were practically unchanged for this commodity, although the buying demand was weak, and sales were light. Cantaloupes continued weak under heavy supplies, and the market dropped 25 cents per crate yesterday for this commodity, best stock selling at $3.75 to $4 per crate.

Tomatoes ruled firm and higher, moving up 15 to 25 cents per crate yesterday. Best stock was selling as high as $2.25 per crate, with demand and movement active at the higher level. For other lines the market ruled firm and practically unchanged.

BARLEY RULES HIGHER DESPITE DULL BUYING.

The trend of the local grain market for all shipments of barley was sharply upward during the session on the local exchange yesterday, despite the fact that little buying support was apparent in the market. Trading interest centered principally in the mixed cereals, which also ruled strong and higher. Cash barley closed weaker, but other near-by shipments were 50 to 75 cents higher at the close. In the futures, all June shipment made an advance of $1 per ton, July moved up 25 cents per ton, August advanced 50 cents per ton, and other months took an upturn of 75 cents per ton. A sale of all December delivery was made at $3.01. Cars of No. 2 yellow corn in bulk brought $3.72½ and $3.71¼, No. 3 eastern milo in bulk sold for $2.92½, and No. 3 mixed milo and kafir changed hands at $2.88¾.

HURRY CONSTRUCTION OF PLANT AT HARBOR.

VEGETABLE OIL PRODUCTS TO BEGIN AT ONCE ON FOUR-STORY BUILDING.

Construction work on the first unit of the $500,000 Vegetable Oil Products plant at the foot of Canal street, on the east side of slip 5 at Los Angeles Harbor, is to be begun at once, plans for the $60,000 refinery of the company having been approved yesterday by the Harbor Commission. The building is to be four stories in height, and the construction is to be of hollow tile and steel.

The State Fish and Game Commission is also to build a laboratory and enlarged station at Terminal Island, according to a communication filed yesterday with the Harbor Commission.

Lee Chamberlain & Co. reported to the commission yesterday that port facilities requires the building of a municipal sterilizer at a cost of about $10,000 for the handling of imporpted corn, such as exists at San Francisco. The commission began an investigation which may result in building a sterilizer at this port.

STARTS EAST TO FIND AUTUMN'S BEST STYLES.

Myer Siegel of the well-known firm of Myer Siegel & Co., specialty house, left Saturday for the eastern markets to search for the newest and most exclusive styles for fall and winter. Mr. Siegel is optimistic regarding merchandise for fall.

Just before leaving, Mr. Siegel said: "Los Angeles women are becoming more and more critical regarding styles as Los Angeles is becoming more and more a style center. In years gone by selecting apparel was rather an easy matter, but today one must employ artists of the highest ability to meet the approval of the women of the playground of the West."

Accompanying Mr. Siegel are his wife and Miss Bessie Levy, buyer for coats, suits and gowns.

How to Buy Oil Stocks

The most successful and conservative way to invest in oil stocks is to look into the personnel of the company, its holdings, policy and management; if the men behind the company bear a reputation for honesty and fair dealing, and at the same time have made a success in business, and have a good chance for oil, you can afford to invest your money with them and take a chance.

We invite the public to see what we have in the line of holdings, policy and honest management, before buying stock elsewhere. Call or write our office, 246 Title Insurance Bldg., Los Angeles, for circular and full details.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; Mine Stocks Flurry; Bank Club Visits Beach.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

It is a betwixt and between season. Summer goods are moving. The fiscal year is ending. Vacations have commenced. Stock taking is under way. Speculation waits on politics. Summer tourists are on their way or packing their trunks; prices are trembling in the balances awaiting readjustment, and buyers are holding off in the expectation of lower levels. Banks are pressing their deflation policy. Builders have their ears to the ground ready to take advantage of expected reductions or to proceed if the expectation proves fallacious. For these and other reasons business is quiet. Not dull exactly, but there is a tendency to wait and watch before embarking upon new enterprises.

Food Prices.

Aside from a few seasonal declines in vegetables and fruits the food index remains fairly level. Farm products are in diminished volume, due to lack of sufficient labor, and poor transportation. Exports are not moving very satisfactorily, but this fact does not have any material effect upon home prices. Dairy products remain high, and in spite of investigations it looks as though the milk dealers would put over the announced 2 cent per quart increase on the first of the month. Commission men are almost a unit in predicting higher prices for many supplies in the fall and winter. Sugar shows signs of weakening, but the high price has already had a halting effect on the canning industry. Meats are slightly cheaper, but dealers say the decline will not go much farther On the whole the food price situation does not look so favorable for early declines as does the market in essential commodities.

Placing the Blame.

The recent epidemic of price cutting for certain commodities appears to be causing manufacturers a good deal of mental anguish, and the filing of frantic assertions that there "ain't no such animal" as cheaper goods. These manufacturers allege that it was a great mistake to hurry the decline, meaning, probably, that they had hoped to cash in on the high prices for at least another season. On the other side of the fence the retailers, or some of them, say that the manufacturers have no one to blame but themselves, and that they killed the hen of the golden egg by over feeding; that is, by filling the stores too full of merchandise. They cried "shortage, shortage," which had the same effect on the trade as the cry of "wolf" had on the fabled village folk. To meet the danger they bought, and bought until the point was reached where they simply were compelled to begin to unload at cut prices and that is where the shoe is pinching the manufacturer, and where it is going to continue to pinch him.

Business and Politics.

There appears no good psychological reason why business should slow down almost to a stop every four years, but it is a fact that on the eve of the great political conventions there is always a quiet season during which business of all kinds remains in a state of suspended animation until the worst or the best is known. And yet there has seldom been a good reason why a political campaign should depreciate or discount prosperity. We repeatedly encounter references and excuses based upon the statement that "you know this is a Presidential year." Whatever was desirable in the way of purchasing, or building or speculation is just as necessary as it was before Mr. Harding was nominated or before Mr. McAdoo or Gov. Cox or anyone else is nominated. Business and politics should be divorced. They have little in common, or should have little in common, and the decree is logical on the ground of incompatibility. In 1912 it was thought that we were in a fair way to accomplish this result, but because of war conditions in 1916 there was no chance of continuing the test. This year we hear more than ever about slowing down because of the election.

The Credit Situation.

Southern California banks are standing pat on the question of restricting loans for speculative purposes, but are pursuing a liberal policy in making loans to those engaged in commodity dealing when the funds are to be devoted to assisting legitimate markets. This is the policy which will tide us over the present era of reconstruction without the sudden jolt which some figured a few months ago might precipitate a panic on the part of those in the car, and if carried on with the same careful far-sightedness will ease us down the grade and out onto the level track without much damage. Bankers often do not receive the credit they should have. They stand as a bulwark between a headstrong public and safety. Often it is an unpopular attitude, but to the bankers of Los Angeles, and California and the nation belongs much of the honor of keeping the Ship of State on a level keel. The prosperity of the community means the prosperity of the bankers and it is a precious good guess that these men are not going to scuttle the ship which carries their cargo.

As Others See It.

The business outlook as seen by the Wells Fargo Nevada National Bank of San Francisco indicates broader buying of merchandise following important price concessions, inducements which have stimulated trade and converted large stocks of valuable merchandise into cash, thus clearing the way for other goods. "The credit situation," it is said, "has been somewhat relieved by this movement and something has been accomplished in the way of lowering living expenses. These reductions had to come sooner or later and although most of them have been at the expense of retail profits, they are likely to be an influence towards reducing manufacturing costs. A noteworthy incident has been the tendency towards public and private economy, and some definite reduction in the outlays for extravagant living.

GENERAL BUSINESS CONDITION

"There has been naturally some unsettlement in general trade as a consequence of price reductions. The country is still doing a large volume of business, however, but it is being transacted more conservatively and with regard for the possible vicissitudes of a falling market. Many new corporations are being formed, some 950 new enterprises having been incorporated in the principal States last month, these properties representing a total capitalization of more than $1,350,000,000. This shows an increase of more than 300 new companies formed as compared with the same month last year and means that since the opening of 1920, new incorporations have reached $7,500,000,000 capitalization, this being a gain of 200 per cent over last year, and more than 500 per cent as compared with the same months of 1918. Most of these companies are no doubt honestly capitalized and well financed, but some are not properly fortified with working capital. Many speculative issues have been offered, such as in mining properties and oil fields. Careful discrimination should be exercised today by intending purchasers, who would do well to confine themselves to investment in lines of activity where they are directly acquainted or to look for reliable and conservative advice."

Los Angeles Stocks.

The week-end on the Los Angeles exchange closed in a flurry of hectic activity in several mining issues which jumped about like a Segunda flea. Telluride, for instance, displaced about 15,000 shares during the session at prices which advanced from the opening at 74 cents to later sales at 79, which was the final bid for the day. Tom Reed, on the other hand, was a heavy trader, but on a declining market, opening at $1.36; closing sales at $1.32 with $1.30 bid. Thirty thousand shares of Gold Ore changed hands with 5¼ cents the maximum price. It was being offered at the finish at 4⅞ and sales were recorded at 4¾. Gold Dust was another of the Oatman's in fair demand and was comparatively steady at from 18¾ to 18⅞ cents. Aside from the mines there was little doing, nominal trading in leading oil stocks disclosing no important departures from price levels prevailing throughout the week. There was practically no trading in industrials and government's were very quiet.

Bank Club at Play.

The members of the Guaranty Bank Club, an organization of the employees of the Guaranty Trust and Savings Bank, with their families and guests, met at the beach home of President Avery at Venice yesterday afternoon for a week-end outing. The club's entertainment committee had provided accommodations for bathing. Dinner was served at 6 o'clock and for some time thereafter the amusement concessions received their share of patronage. A box party in the dance pavilion concluded the evening's entertainment. The outing was one of a number of entertainments arranged by the committee for the benfit of the Guaranty Club members.

New Wage Law.

Employment departments of the big stores and other concerns utilizing female help are busy rearranging their wage schedules to meet the requirements of the new law which becomes effective on Thursday and which fixes a minimum of $16 per week for experienced hands. Some employers claim that they will be hard hit, and forced to make provision for large increase in gross pay roll; others say that it will be more a matter of readjustment than anything else.

WEEK-END COVERING STRENGTHENS COTTON.

FAVORABLE WEATHER MAP, POOR TRADE ADVICES CREATE SELLING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—The cotton market opened at a decline of 6 to 17 points under continued selling encouraged by favorable weather map and unfavorable trade advices.

There was trade buying of July, however, as well as considerable covering for over the week-end, and prices soon rallied.

The world's visible supply of American cotton is now below last year's figures, according to the week-end reports, but statistical features attracted little attention in the market.

CORN PRICES FIRM ON SHORT COVERING.

RUMORS OF IMPROVED RAIL FACILITIES CREATE A WEAK UNDERTONE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 26.—Declines in the price of corn resulted today from definite announcement by the Railway Labor Board that a wage award retroactive to May 1 would be made on or before July 20. The announcement was taken by many traders as meaning improved efficiency in traffic operations from now on. Opening prices, which varied from ⅛ to 1 cent lower, with July $1.74 to $1.74⅝ and September $1.66⅞ to $1.07½, were followed by an option that in some cases went above yesterday's finish.

Later the market scored a material advance because of week-end covering by shorts. The close was firm, 1 to 2⅝ cents net higher, with July $1.76⅝ to $1.76½, and September $1.69⅝ to $1.69¾.

After opening unchanged to ¼ cent higher, including September 84⅝ to 85 cents, oats continued to ascend.

Lard and ribs were firmer with hogs.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—The advent of the mid-year, with its extraordinary large interest and dividend payments, offered no change this week in this financial market, beyond a further contraction of time funds and materially higher rates for call money.

Resumption of the railroad strike at eastern terminals acted as further check to production and intensified foreign congestion with consequent heaviness in railroad shares.

In other branches of industry, authorities reported further reduction or absolute suspension of operations.

Politics seemed to exert little influence, although increased interest was shown in the coming convention at San Francisco.

Foreign Government Bonds

Within the space of a week's time, French and Belgian Government Bonds have increased 13% in value, and since May 1st, 1920, have increased 40%.

The bonds of these countries still offer possibilities of over 100% profit, and it is our firm conviction that they offer one of the best forms of investment to be found at the present time.

Backed by a Property of Permanent Value

It is inconceivable that the property of Miller & Lux, Incorporated, can ever be wiped out, its valueand earning capacity ever seriously impaired. The properties are so wide in extent, the sources of earnings so widely varied that one is assured of absolute soundness in

Miller & Lux Incorporated Ten-year 7% Gold Bonds

This security is backed by over a million acres of highly productive lands, which, with water rights and improvements, is worth over fifty million dollars. This land is so situated that as irrigation is developed and intensive farming supplants "dry farming," the values of the land will increase materially.

These bonds are further secured by personal property which alone is worth more than the total principal sum of this loan.

Take advantage of the opportunity to invest today in this profitable high-yielding security with assets more than four times all indebtedness. The price is 100 and accrued interest. Bonds may be had in $500 and $1000 denominations. Exempt from personal property taxes in California and a legal investment for savings banks in California.

Minnesota Sugar

THE present rate of the world's production of sugar is estimated to be more than eleven billion pounds less than the 1920 requirement.

This shortage which cannot be remedied for several years, due to the impoverished condition of the beet fields of EUROPE, places AMERICAN sugar stocks in a strong position.

THE MINNESOTA SUGAR COMPANY is one of the most successful of American beet sugar companies. Its stock offers an excellent opportunity to participate in the profits of the sugar industry.

Recent information leads us to believe that the price of this company's stock ought to move to higher figures. Write, wire or phone quick if you care to take advantage of it.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—In keeping with previous days of the week, today's short session of the stock exchange was extremely dull and featureless. The attendance of members was unusually small and commission houses reported an absolute cessation of outside interest. Oils, chemicals and tobaccos represented the prominent issues with such rails as Union Pacific, St. Louis and Southwestern preferred and Delaware and Hudson at gains of 1 to 2 points. Several of the steels and equipments, also figured in the sluggish movement. The closing was firm. Sales approximated 133,000 shares. Exchange on London showed no material alteration, despite further gold arrivals from that center.

Investment Suggestions

By Frank & Lewis

The new offering of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, preferred stock, including one share of common with every two shares of preferred, is proving very popular with Southern California investors.

This is the parent company of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California. The Akron Company owns all of the common stock of both the Pacific Cotton Mills, or Goodyear Textile Mills, as it is now known, and the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California.

Largest in World

The Goodyear is the largest manufacturer of tires in the world, producing at the present time approximately 20 per cent of the total tire production in the country. Net earnings have increased from $7,003,330 in 1916 to $30,000,000 (estimated on the basis of past seven months' operations) in 1920.

Preferred Safeguards

The Company has no bonded or mortgage indebtedness and none may be created without consent of 75 per cent of the preferred stock outstanding. Net quick assets of at least 110 per cent of the par value of preferred outstanding must at all times be maintained. Net tangible assets must be equal to at least 200 per cent of the preferred.

Dividend Record

Earnings for the past twelve years applicable to Common stock after payment of Preferred Stock dividends have exceeded an average of 54 per cent per annum on Common stock outstanding.

Cash dividends of 12 per cent have been paid each year on the Common stock since 1908 and in addition stock dividends of 100 per cent were paid in the years 1909, 1910, 1912 and 1916. A stock dividend of 150 per cent was paid in 1920.

FINANCIAL AND TRADE REVIEW.

the foreign exchange department of the Merchants' National Bank, who discusses "Foreign Exchange as an Investment." Follows an article explanatory of exchange rates by H. E. Davis, who reduces his analysis to such simple terms that he who runs may read. Several pages are devoted to a description of the monies of other nations; the relation they bear to the American standard of value and a description and discussion of current foreign securities.

The Railroad Situation.

The New York Times says: "In spite of the fact that there are a great many serious obstacles in front of railroad executives and the Interstate Commerce Commission before the carriers as a whole can be put back on a safe and sane financial as well as physical basis, sentiment regarding the outlook is steadily improving in conservative banking and operating quarters. Railroad bankers who have analyzed the situation and found that in the next fourteen years the roads will have to meet total maturities amounting to more than $1,630,000,000, and that in the three years which will end with 1922 total maturities of more than $500,000,000, admit that this presents a big problem, but generally believe that it will be solved without unnecessary delay. Bond men who have specialized in the past in railroad securities assert that a market is being slowly but persistently built up again and declare conditions better for the roads than they have been for many years. Lastly, the railroad operators themselves take a better viewpoint and say that while the regeneration of many of the properties will be an uphill job, it stands a better chance of succeeding now than at any time in the last ten or fifteen years."

Gas and Oil Production.

Gas and fuel oil production in the United States in the first quarter of 1920 amounted to 45,099,666 barrels, against 40,910,904 barrels in the same period in 1919, an increase of more than 4,000,000 barrels. Domestic consumption accounted for more than 80 per cent of this output in each of the last three years, the addition of exports to consumption bringing the total in the first quarters of 1918 and 1920 to about 2,000,000 barrels more than production. In 1919, however, consumption and exports were less than production.

In the case of lubricating oils there has been an increase of 25 per cent in production since the first quarter of 1918, while domestic consumption gained only 23 per cent. Combined domestic consumption and exports have exceeded production only in 1920. Stocks show a decline of approximately 330,000 barrels in the last year.

Government Financing.

Although the United States government will enter the new fiscal year, beginning July 1, by being forced to borrow $400,000,000 at unprecedented interest rates, Secretary Houston has issued an optimistic statement in which he says:

"During the coming fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1920, the treasury expects, though it is impossible to speak positively, that there will be a further reduction of both gross debt and floating debt in the first two quarters, and unless additional burdens should be imposed by future legislation, that there will be a very important reduction in the last two quarters."

New Line a Success.

The success of the North Atlantic and Western Steamship Company operating between Philadelphia and Los Angeles via the Panama Canal has been demonstrated. The first vessel to cover the route, the Artigas, completed the voyage in eighteen and three-fourths days, although her schedule called for twenty-four. The Stanley Dollar, the second ship, was held up for a time by the longshoremen's strike. It will be followed by the West Togus and then by a fourth vessel. There is plenty of freight. Every one of the initial cargoes was placed far in advance. The importance of the service, even to so great a port as Philadelphia, is recognized there, the Public Ledger agreeing that "it looks as if Philadelphia has a line to the Pacific that is going to add considerably to the commerce of the port. The business is here. All that has been necessary for success has been ships, competent management and regularity of sailings."

'O STOCK FOR SALE—NO LEASES FOR SALE

—"you, too, have just the same opportunity to have an oil well on your own land"

The Ownership of Land

No Grief—No Drilling—Just Profits

You get an OUTRIGHT DEED to your land—ABSOLUTELY NOTHING RESERVED—not stock, not leases with rental obligations; no Board of Directors, no Trustees to handle your funds. You go on record as the owners, and use your own judgment when to lease or sell. Buy the land, lease it to the other fellow, retain a royalty, and make big profits—sure profits—NO GRIEF—NO DRILLING—JUST PROFITS.

THE WAY BIG MONEY IS MADE IN THE OIL GAME

You know, the first and most important thing in the oil business is OIL LAND, on which the well is drilled. Naturally the people who own the land in a new field are in a strong position. Many of those people you have read of, who are worth a fortune today were poor men only a few months ago, and there are many who are comparatively poor today who are going to be rich in the coming few months, all from OIL LAND. Here is how many of those people got their wealth—simply acquiring a piece of oil land, some two acres, others five, ten or more acres, and some only an acre. They are rich today, but there is nothing mysterious about their success. It simply required courage to make the first small investment. Does that sound difficult to you? How would you like to be drawing a check from a pipe line company twice a month from oil produced from your own land?

Take Advantage of This Offer NOW or NEVER

It's Just for Wideawakers

? THAT MEAN MONEY

ANSWER THEM FOR YOURSELF THEN SHOOT $10

If the big oil companies of the United States will spend a million dollars and upwards developing oil prospects around Tampico-Texas Oil Lands, wouldn't it be a good business policy for you to own 1, 2 or 5 acres in that district?

Isn't it, as a rule, profitable to follow the lead of successful companies?

If companies worth millions can afford to drill fifteen to fifty wells to test a territory, can't you afford to invest a few dollars in that territory?

Isn't it a fact that the biggest fortunes are made by being in on the ground floor? Owning the land?

How can you be in on the ground floor if you won't buy Tampico-Texas Oil Land at $32.50 per acre, when the big oil companies of the country are drilling all around it? Can you hope to bet on the winning horse after the race is over? Can you hope to buy Tampico-Texas Oil Lands at bottom prices after oil shoots over a derrick? Do you know that no less than five wells are expected to be brought in producers in sixty days or sooner? Do you know that one of these wells may come in a gusher in a few days or hours?

IN THE HEART OF ACTIVITY

Situated midway between the great Ranger-Burkburnett oil fields of Texas and the Tampico gusher fields of Mexico there is located a territory in the Rio Grande Embayment fields, in which the mobilized forces of over thirty big operating companies are endeavoring to reach the Tampico gusher sand through deep drilling based upon the advice of some of the world's greatest geologists.

These companies who are looking ahead and preparing for big future production include many of the best known producing oil companies. Millions of acres have been leased by these companies and hundreds of thousands of acres of land purchased in fee simple.

Upon opening the "Second Tampico" in Texas, the possibilities for doubling America's supply of oil is assured.

The Boom is on and promises to be a big one, surpassing anything that has heretofore been seen in Texas. Think what price this land will bring when these wells start rushing in almost on top of each other! This land obtained by us in July, 1918, is your opportunity today.

READ OUR GUARANTEE

In fifteen days, if you don't think this is the best opportunity you or anyone else ever had in the oil business, your payment will be returned immediately.

There are no strings to this agreement—it is simply in the form of a guarantee and gives absolute protection to the wide-awake investor that quickly takes advantage of this special offer—without delay—hurry the coupon along—TODAY—NOW and you will be on the way to make big money—QUICKLY and SAFELY—and it won't temporarily embarrass you either.

Of Special Importance to Oil Operators Only!

Do you need an office assistant or publicity manager who can write advertising copy that brings home the bacon?

Do you want business-getting letters sent out from your office? Do you need to have your mailing campaign managed speedily and smoothly?

Do you need an editor for your oil newspaper who knows the difference between battered type and an imperfect galley proof or when the printer has used the wrong font and a slug that mars the final?

Do you prefer a woman—one who knows the oil language from the bull-wheel to the blind box—one who can either give you efficient assistance unobtrusively or manage a promotion campaign from beginning to end without bothering you, if you wish?

If you do—and if you can make a definite proposition NOW—ring Lincoln 1362 and ask for Mrs Bailey.

How to make a Profit on Stocks

The investor who buys high grade listed securities outright, in well diversified groups, and holds them for permanent gain, is in position to make a liberal profit beyond the dividend yield.

What kind of stocks to buy, also how and when to buy them, is interestingly told in our book, just published, entitled "The Principles of Profitable Investment."

Its 64 pages tell you the vital things about the stock market—how to judge a security—how to make a profit on stocks.

It contains no "tips" on certain issues, and nothing for the man who wants to take a short cut to wealth, but deals with fundamentals. You should read it before investing. Write today. It's free. Dept. 1.

"BARNEY" (W. J.) BARNHART

Nationally recognized for one of the most spectacular and greatest achievements in the history of the oil industry—the bringing in of Lakeview Gusher No. 2. The largest producer California has ever known.

5,000,000 Barrels of Oil in 167 Days

After five strenuous and interesting years in the oil business Barnhart went with the Lake View No. 2 Oil Company in 1912 as Superintendent. On this property was located the now famous Lake View Gusher No. 2. At that time the hole had been "junked" two times. Two companies had gone "broke." It was full of iron at 2640 feet. No oil-bearing sands were expected at any greater depth—that was the general opinion. Barnhart thought differently. First the hole was cleared—a big achievement in itself—drilling was resumed. At 3013 feet the well came in a gusher—the greatest ever produced in the state. It flowed approximately 5,000,000 barrels of oil in 167 days. Barnhart's judgment was vindicated. His courage was rewarded. It wasn't an accident. It was the result of persistence, foresight and a knowledge of what to do and how to do it that brought in a well that will live forever in the annals of oil. Barnhart had accomplished the "impossible." Overnight his fame was national.

General Manager Abilene Petroleum Company

Barnhart next turned his attention to Texas, where the eyes of the world are now focussed. He became general manager of the Abilene Petroleum Company. They own over 4000 acres of oil and gas leases. Located in proven and semi-proven fields of 8 different counties. First test well in Fisher county now down to a depth of 375 feet. He has pledged his energies and vast knowledge to the new enterprise. He brings with him to the Abilene Petroleum Company the results of years of study and real successes. That Barnhart in Texas will even eclipse his brilliant record in California seems assured.

ARIZONA COTTON LAND

We have taken over and are completing arrangements to develop and put under cultivation one of the finest tracts of cotton, alfalfa and fruit land anywhere in the State of Arizona—a wonderfully rich piece of soft loamy soil that will produce bumper crops of almost anything. It should yield a bale of cotton or eight to twelve tons of alfalfa to the acre and we invite the closest investigation by any practical rancher. We expect to have all this tract ready for cultivation, and in long staple cotton and alfalfa the coming season. We have more than we can handle alone and offer part of it for sale in tracts of 10 to 80 acres or more on easy terms—part cash and—WE GUARANTEE THAT THE CROPS RAISED WILL PAY THE BALANCE OF THE PURCHASE PRICE WITHOUT FURTHER EXPENSE TO YOU. The price includes paid up ownership in the water system and the clearing and leveling of the land ready for cultivation—and we will farm the land for you if you do not wish to move on it yourself. Fortunes are being made by Arizona long staple cotton growers and this is your opportunity to share in some of the enormous profits being made. Some Arizona ranchers have made enough on one crop of long staple cotton to pay for their land. This is a SAFE INVESTMENT—land that will rapidly increase in value and earn you a big income. If you have from $2000 to $25,000 to invest where it will make you money—see us at once, as there is only a limited amount of this land and this opportunity will not last long.

Standardization forms, with reviews of situation as it affects leather, lumber and other robin letters have been sent to Michigan workshops in large numbers and have been received with varied emulations and sentiments.

The letters vary in tone, some of them simply counsel careful inventorying of business and reduction in overhead wherever possible, so that future increases in market prices may be avoided. The letters express the belief that the peak of high cost has been relieved, that the consumer will accept no further advances and that the contraction of credit is sufficient warning of impending trouble unless care is exercised. Other letters advise immediate reduction in prices of automobiles, even to the point of curtailing profit for a time.

A partial survey of the automobile and allied industries in Detroit and Michigan indicates a marked division of opinion as to the merits of the round robin.

It had been roundly scored in some cases as a useless scheme not worth consideration. In other places it has been characterized as a dangerous proposition, which will lead to unnecessary fear and a disorganization of business. Against them are arraigned the men who cannot find a healthy prosperity where, regardless of the volume of business done, the final profits continue to shrink as costs steadily increase. There are those in the automobile industry who argue that motor cars are selling today at the top price, that any further increase will stem the tide of buying and that the existing railroad situation limits production, no matter what the demand.

After deducting maintenance of properties, repairs and all other expenses, including interest, but before making allowance for income and excess profit tax, net earnings of the Willys-Overland company for the first four months of 1920 are said to have been approximately $5,600,000. Substantial reduction in interest payments will be made as a result of the new financing recently consummated, together with liquidation of large inventories accumulated in 1919.

Net income for the first four months, after allowing for income and excess profit tax, was more than $3,000,000, or at a rate of approximately $12,000,000 per year, after taxes, more than 100 per cent greater than any previous earnings for a corresponding period. Current earnings after providing for preferred stock are 20 per cent upon the total outstanding and newly-issued common stock.

Through the purchase the past week of the holdings of President F. W. Ruggles in the Republic Motor Truck Company, the Willys interests came into the possession of the largest exclusive motor truck plant in the world. John N. Willys was named president, to succeed Mr. Ruggles. Some months ago Mr. Willys secured a substantial block of Republic stock. Other than to state that manufacturing will continue, no mention of the future policy of the company has been given out.

Distributors representing the Nash Motors Company in various sections of the country gathered at Kenosha last week for a three-day conference. The meeting was in charge of Charles K. Voorhis, vice-president and general sales manager. It was brought out that contracts signed with distributors call for $79,000,000 worth of business for the next twelve months. The conven-

LOOKS LIKE A FRISKY PARTY.

Hilarious Time Guaranteed to Motor Car Dealers.

Entertainment of All Kinds Will be Provided.

All the Way From Tia Juana to Ramona's Home.

If it's love that makes the whole world kin, then the motor car dealers in these parts are getting to be nothing less than blood-brothers.

Every once in a while the good old dealers get together somewhere, and to the stranger, these solemn conclaves look more like a Shriner convention than a tomahawk burial ceremony, among trade interests.

First, this year, it was Catalina, where the Los Angeles dealers entertained in one way or another, and now it is the San Diego dealers who are going to throw a party on July Fourth, for the other motor car dealers of Southern California.

This time the cards indicate that a large dark gentleman may be kind of mixed up in the ceremonies, and also that Tia Juana may be figured. In fact, a telegram received here yesterday by the Auto Club, through which the invitation is extended to local dealers, points out very clearly that a large and juicy time is to be had by all on July 3, 4 and 5.

Entertainment galore is going to be provided, let the chips fall where they may. Frijoles rampant and bulls, perhaps couchant, in the arena, will feature the program "over the line." Also, the fighting ships in the harbor are going to be open. In view of the fact that there are seventy navy vessels riding at anchor there it should be some reception for the poor, tired dealers.

An African golf tourney, without which no dealers' love feast is complete, is scheduled for San Diego. Reservations must be made in advance at the hotels for all who intend to attend. The Grant Hotel, Baron Long's San Diego castle, will be the headquarters from which all personally conducted excursions to Mexico, will depart. It is alleged that they will also return.

Here is what all dealers who plan to go down next Saturday are requested to do:

Write or wire the Automobile Club of Southern California in San Diego, in regard to accommodations. Let the club know how many will be in the party and whether or not a Saturday night bawth is desired with the room. Also the approximate hour of the arrival so that the glad-hand can be hanging out like a ham.

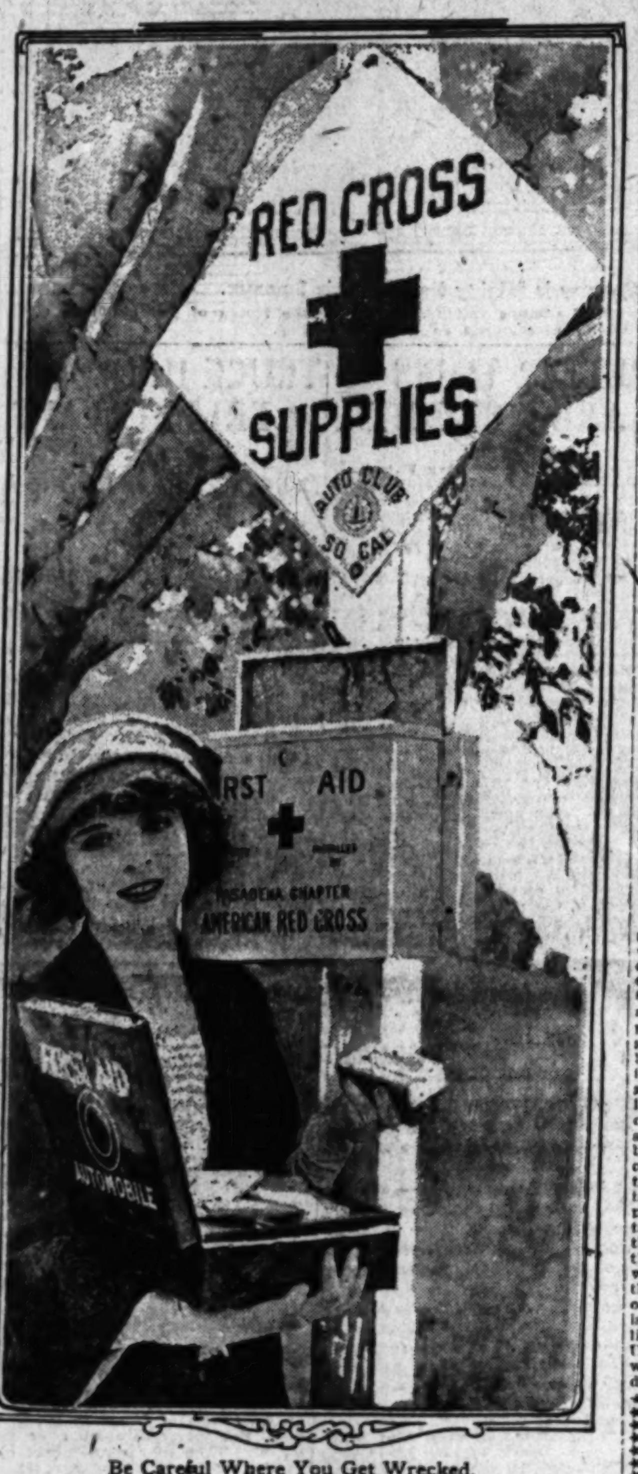
Club representative Bishop, of the San Diego branch, will be on the committee in the southern city, to see that every dealer and his family, if it is a family affair, is happy. Let him know your troubles, say the San Diego Dealers' Association.

WILL MAKE MORE ENCLOSED MODELS.

ONE-QUARTER — OF OUTPUT OF FACTORY WILL BE SEDANS AND COUPES.

Because of the ever-increasing demand for inclosed cars, the Ford Motor Company has informed their dealers that from now on, about 25 per cent of their output will be inclosed cars. To most of the dealers, this is like music, because in reality the demand for Ford coupes and sedans is daily becoming greater and greater. Some of the larger commercial houses are now turning their attention to the coupes where before they used only the Ford roadster for their salesmen. This is largely due to the fact, that they realize that the coupe makes about the best appearance of any small car on the market, excepting those small roadsters and runabouts of other makes that are vastly too high-priced for commercial use.

More and more runabouts are being turned in every year in exchange for the coupe. Nor is this the only popular car, for the Ford sedan is also making many new friends. Some predict that in time our old friend the Ford touring car will give way to the sedan entirely, but that is extremely unlikely, as the touring car has made entirely too many friends for them to ever desert it.



Be Careful Where You Get Wrecked.

The Pasadena Chapter of the American Red Cross, with the assistance of the Automobile Club of Southern California has picked out thirty-five popular crossings and placed first-aid kits where they are handy to use on the victims. Miss Colleen Moore is the young lady you're looking at.

A DANDY PLACE TO GET HIT.

Motorists who are planning to have accidents in Pasadena this summer will do well to look before they crash. Pasadena, through its Red Cross, has gone out and put up scores of neat little white boxes, just as spic and span as a day nurse, at all of the dangerous railway crossings and on every likely corner which looks like a good place for a first-class accident.

These little boxes have everything in them but the kitchen stove. They are the most complete little boxes that ever graced a post. They are "first aid kits" in every sense of the word.

So pleased was the Automobile Club of Southern California with the Pasadena enterprise shown that it has had some special signs made to crown the little boxes. Where you see the white sign of the Auto Club, with its red letters, there you will find a "first aid" kit.

There is one at Huntington Drive and Fremont avenue, for instance. This is an excellent spot for an accident, on account of the many car tracks and the curve. It is the Red Cross box nearest to Los Angeles, so if you have an accident in Los Angeles and don't know what to do about it, you can get help anyway from the box at this point.

Inside the white metal box is a green metal box, and inside the green metal box is liniment, and ammonia and bandages and everything which might be needed right after an auto smash-up.

Not that Pasadena is anticipating any accidents, but that just in case some one should get careless out there they won't have to say they wish they had known it was coming. These "first aiders" are scattered all about the city, in the most accident places.

As the doctor said to the man who was hurled against his front office door by a street car: "Well, as long as you were going to get hurt, it's a good thing you did it here." That's what the little Pasadena auto-aid boxes would say if they had tongues along with everything else.

WATCH SPEEDOMETER MORE CLOSELY NOW.

EVERYBODY WANTS TO KNOW HOW MANY MILES THEY GET ON A GALLON.

The reported gasoline shortage and the inability of motorists to secure the fuel in satisfactory quantities when driving in certain sections of the State have caused them to keep closer tab on their speedometers in their efforts to add to their gas mileage, is the statement of H. R. Curtis, manager of the California Sales Company, State distributor of Stewart products.

"With a double crew—and we have one of the largest service stations of its kind on the Pacific Coast—it has been impossible for us to have our floor cleared at night, because of the number of installations and demand for service. Motorists, who for weeks, have been driving with their speedometers registering incorrectly, have suddenly become aware of this fact in figuring their gas mileage and in trying to improve upon it," he said.

VOTERS TO ACT ON ROAD BONDS.

State-Wide Conference Decides to Submit the Question of Continuing Road Work to the People at the November Election.

The further construction of State highways under the $40,000,000 bond issue will be referred back to the people at the November election, according to the decision of a Statewide conference held in San Francisco June 17.

The voters, who exactly a year ago authorized the completing and augmenting of the State highway system by a vote of 7 to 1, will now be asked through an initiative measure to change the interest rate from 4½ per cent to a rate which will conform to present-day financial conditions, and make the bonds marketable. At the same time the people will be asked to relieve all counties from paying interest on the cost of construction within their confines, which now results in great injustice and oppression, hereafter placing the burden upon the State at large where all may share alike.

In taking these steps the conference, representing practically all California counties, approved the recommendations of Gov. Stephens, who originally suggested that these matters be referred to the electorate, and indorsed the attitude of the California Highway Commission. The commission has suspended all nonessential construction, but proposes to prosecute work on necessary sections where counties purchase bonds to defray cost, and to continue active maintenance program.

VARIABLE INTEREST RATE.

In resolving to place before the people a measure to raise interest rate on State highway bonds, the conference favored adopting the Oregon plan of an indeterminate interest rate, not to exceed a maximum of 6 per cent. Under this plan the rate is fixed at the time of sale, by the bids received for the bonds, the bidder offering to take them at the lowest rate of interest getting the bonds, and thereby fixing the rate on the block purchased at the rate bid. For instance, if a block of $1,000,000 bonds is offered and two banks bid; one to pay par and accrued interest, the bonds to return 5 per cent interest, and the other bank to pay par and accrued interest, the bonds to return 4 3-4 per cent interest, the latter bid would be accepted and the interest rate on this $1,000,000 would be 4 3-4 per cent. This is the plan now effective in the State of Oregon on highway bonds, and is asserted to be the most businesslike and satisfactory ever conceived. Under this plan State bonds are always salable at the market, and no difficulty is encountered in financing State work when needed as has been the almost constant experience of California with a fixed interest rate, generally below the market.

RELIEVING COUNTIES.

At the same time that this change in bond interest is proposed, the people will be asked to relieve the counties of the burden now imposed of paying interest on all construction of State highways within their respective boundaries. When this provision was inserted in the first highway act, it was figured by the Legislature that the principal should be paid by the State at large, while the interest should be paid by the counties where construction tok place, the idea being that they would be most benefited. However, as time went on and we passed the second bond issue, it was seen that in many cases the highways were most essential for through traffic, and that large centers of population got the most benefit out of the roads. Then, too, as the volume of construction grew, and as the cost of heavy mountain construction in the poorer, sparsely settled counties brought to them a heavy interest burden, the injustice of the situation became apparent. A law was passed permitting the Advisory Board of the State Department of Engineering to relieve counties by transferring a portion of their interest payment to the State at large, but it was impossible even then to approximate an equalization of the interest burden.

The following table will show a few of the inequalities. First are listed three counties paying practically the same amount of interest for highway construction, but consider the percentage of total income devoted to this purpose:

County—	Total income.	Highway bond int.	P.c.
Marin	$ 178,122	$33,846	.19
Butte	620,086	33,670	.05
Alameda	3,602,061	33,833	.009

Next are shown several of the mountain counties compared to Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco:

County—	Total income.	Highway bond int.	P.c.
Mono	$ 52,600	$ 8,272	16
Shasta	212,548	32,012	15
Mendocino	451,062	67,940	15
Los Angeles	6,861,179	96,484	.014
Sacramento	1,573,971	4,423	.0021
San Francisco	4,534,467	0 000	.000

Owing to the fact that no State highways have been constructed within the city and county of San Francisco, that community pays no highway bond interest although using the various State roads leading into the city for both pleasure and commercial purposes.

The large cities, however, pay their full proportion of the bond principal, and unquestionably will be willing to meet a fairer proportion of interest than they pay now under present law.

Highway officials believe that the plan of placing all highway bond interest upon the State will so appeal to the people that the vote in favor of raising the interest rate on remaining highway bonds, as coupled with equalization of the interest burden, will carry both provisions almost unanimously. As much of the $40,000,000 will be spent on constructing laterals to the poorer counties, through mountainous country where costs are high, a solution of the interest problem is imperative.

CARS CERTAINLY HAVE IMPROVED.

LONG CROSS-COUNTRY TRIPS ARE COMMON OCCURRENCE THESE DAYS.

"Modern methods of manufacturing and engineering science have developed the present-day motor car to a point where performance is taken by the owner as a matter of course," said Ed C. Engle, distributor for Anderson cars.

"It used to be considered quite a feat to take long-distance tours by automobile, but it is now considered an every-day occurrence. The present-day motor car will make cross-country tours, meeting and overcoming all sorts of roads, and will travel day after day without giving any trouble.

"By comparison, take the railroad locomotive—it is run into the round house and completely cleaned and oiled at the end of every 250 or 300 miles' run. On the other hand, the inspection of a motor car on a long-distance tour is generally confined to a glance at the oil gauge and a look at the gas tank."

TIRE CONCERN HAS NEW HEADQUARTERS.

The Pacific Rubber Company, Coast distributor of Horseshoe tires, will move the first of the week to its new building and general offices, located at 416 East Eighth street, according to Roy R. Meads, president and general manager of the company. This company, the business of which has increased tremendously in the last two years, has long ago outgrown its present quarters on West Pico. The business of all branches and distributing agents is to be directed from this city. Meads apprehends, however,

"LAP PRIZES" AT SPEEDWAY.

The "lap prize" idea as a means of adding jazz to automobile racing made such an instantaneous hit at Indianapolis this year that there is strong prospect that it will be featured here on the Los Angeles Speedway at the Thanksgiving race. Merchants, manufacturers and sportsmen of Indianapolis to the number of 200 each contributed $100 as a reward for the driver who held the lead in the race at the end of each lap. With the sensation of earning one hundred bucks every time they passed the grand stand in the lead, the Indianapolis field this year went out and drove like wild men from the start. Joe Boyer, though he met with an accident, and did not finish, collected more than nine thousand iron men as a reward for showing the field the way for better than ninety laps. The lap-prize idea gives a fair reward to the drivers with heavy feet who are willing to step on it all the way, and returning visitors from Indianapolis say that makes the race a battle royal from the start. Formal indorsement of the idea was given by the Motor Car Dealers' Association last week at their meeting, and unofficial approval of the idea has been voiced by officials of a number of civic organizations. The money would be given over and above the regular prizes of $25,000 from the speedway. Because the laps of the Los Angeles Speedway are just half the distance of Indianapolis, $50 per lap would probably be offered here, and already a large number of Los Angeles business men and sportsmen have pledged themselves to furnish the reward for one or more laps of the big Thanksgiving race.

MARMON-34

THE unusual Marmon frame structure gives the Marmon closed car a very low center of gravity. As a consequence there is less side sway and the car holds the road better and rides more smoothly. With a closed car this is of particular importance, for it counts not only in the pleasure you get out of riding, but likewise in the saving on tires and in gasoline.

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

You will note that relatively few automobile advertisements carry prices.

Perhaps it is due to the fact that the figures have been SKY-ROCKETING since January 1st.

It is indeed suggested that fear of comparison accounts for it.

Dort prices appear in every Dort advertisement and show that whereas other cars have increased in price hundreds of dollars, the difference in the cost of a Dort January 1st and today is just eighty dollars.

And the good quality still goes "clear through." It's the best motor car value on the market.

Special steels and Simplicity

Are Synonymous in the

NEW MAXWELL

Special steels—lighter and stronger make possible unusual simplicity in the NEW MAXWELL—a wonderful tribute to scientific engineering.

After years of metallurgical, laboratory and road tests, Maxwell devised a formula for steels of exceptional strength and lightness.

Incorporated in the NEW MAXWELL, these special steels permit a simplified design, which instantly appeals to the owner who wants maximum service with minimum expense.

These lighter steels mean increased mileage on gas, oil and tires. Greater strength means longer life—less depreciation—and greater freedom from road strain.

Thus the NEW MAXWELL is winning staunch friends the world over. Already there are 400,000 satisfied owners and 100,000 will be added to the Maxwell family a year hence.

Come today and let us show you this new economical Maxwell of which we are so proud.

Morning and Evening are Best Time for Flight.

For the benefit of those who contemplate taking their vacation via airplane, it is interesting to know that there is now a regularly established landing field in Yosemite Valley, which has been used quite frequently of late. It has become so popular that the national park service of the Department of the Interior has had to get up a set of rules and regulations for the use of the field.

The temporary landing field in Yosemite Valley provides a fairway free from trees of approximately 2000 feet in length, something over 900 feet of which can be utilized as actual landing and take-off space. The fairway extends nearly due east and west and the landing space is marked with a fixed "T" painted white. The landing field is at an elevation of approximately 4000 feet above the sea. Low-powered ships will, therefore, have difficulty in rising and pilots are warned in this respect. High-powered, fast-climbing ships only should attempt to use the field.

For the guidance and information of pilots desiring to use the field the following regulations have been promulgated:

(1.) Carrying of passengers—No air passenger-carrying service into or within the park is authorized. Ships carrying passengers who are paying, either directly or indirectly, for transportation thus afforded shall not be permitted the used of the field except in case of forced landings due to operating trouble.

(2.) Landings—Landings may be made at any time, but pilots should bear in mind that the best times to land are before 10 o'clock a.m. and after 5 o'clock p.m. During these periods the air is calm and of uniform density. Between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., on the other hand, a treacherous wind blows from the west, creating cross-currents and causing "pockety" conditions. These winds occur daily and during the same hours, and during this period of the day flying between the precipitous walls of the valley is exceedingly inadvisable, if not actually dangerous.

(3.) Take-offs—As field conditions do not permit taking off against the wind, ships shall not be permitted to take off between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., but only before and after these hours, while calm prevails.

(4.) Stunt flying—Stunt flying, either with or without passengers, shall not be permitted under any condition.

(5.) Violations—Pilots violating any of the above regulations shall forfeit their right to the use of the present field, or of any other landing place that might later be provided within the park, for such period as the superintendent may decide, or may be subjected to penalties as provided in the general regulations governing the park.

(6.) The government assumes no responsibility whatsoever for accidents or damages resulting from the operations of airplanes flying within the park.

SAYS CAR GETS A TOUGH TEST THERE.

The mountainous region of Arkansas, where he has large mining interests, offers the most severe tests for a motor car, in the belief of C. G. Shuman, president of the White River Manganese Company of Gary, Ind., who, with his wife, is in Los Angeles. They intend to establish a residence for the great part of each year in this city. Shuman has three Hupmobiles in service in Arkansas and one here for the use of Mrs. Shuman.

"Where our mines are in Arkansas, the roads are so rough that the company has a standing order for a set of cord tires for each car every thirty days. During the rainy season, which is in the winter, the roads are so terrible that it is necessary to send a tractor over them to make tracks for trucks and cars to follow, and even then cars go through with their rear ends dragging. We have three Hupmobiles there constantly in service, and if you know of any better recommendation for a car I'd like to know what it is," he told Billy Williams, Hupmobile sales manager for the Greer-Robbins Company.

BETTER TIMES ARE PREDICTED.

tion ended with an inspection of the Milwaukee plant of the Nash Motors Company, now in process of construction, and where the Nash four is to be produced.

Ray Harroun, vice-president in charge of engineering, has been developing a new member of the motor car family of the Harroun Motors Corporation of Wayne. The new model known as AA-2 retains all the features of the previous car with a number of refinements in the engine, chassis and body, with one notable improvement. The dead weight of the rear of the body, the gas tanks and spare tires, have always had a tendency to cause the rear of a car with cantilever suspension to drop instead of maintaining an "even keel." Harroun overcomes this by the use of a subframe anchored to the center of the main frame, which supports the rear of the body, the tanks and the spare tires, thus preventing the tendency to sag at the rear. This does not in any way reduce the ease of operation or the comfort which results from cantilever suspension. There are also a number of other refinements.

DORRIS WINS MANY FRIENDS IN SOUTH.

UNUSUAL POWER, SPEED, ECONOMY AND RIDING QUALITIES BRING MANY SALES.

The all-around performance of the Dorris in the hands of California owners has won for it many friends. It has made such an exceptionally fine impression among users of high-grade cars that it has become impossible for Los Angeles and San Francisco distributors to make early deliveries, except on open jobs, according to Albert J. Russell, president of the Boulevard Motors Corporation, Southern California distributor.

"I learned last week that there are four Dorris cars in the family of Charles Baruch of San Francisco. The unusual power, speed, economy and the Pullman-like riding qualities of the first Dorris brought about the sale of the others. When East last spring I was able to have my allotment increased—but that is insufficient. I am leaving this week for the East once more and I shall do my best to get more Dorris cars for this territory," he said.

TRUCK HAULS FREIGHT CARS.

Delivers Them at the Beach in Swift Time.

Ten Carried to Destination in Four Days.

Feat of Transportation is Unique in History.

There are thousands of instances on record wherein a railroad freight car was used to transport motor trucks, but there is only one case known in Los Angeles in which a motor truck was used to transport railroad cars. That transpired recently when Smith Bros. Truck Company moved ten railroad cars by Mack truck and trailer over the highways between this city and Long Beach. The undertaking is said to have been one of the most unusual feats in connection with motor trucking that has been recorded.

The freight cars were needed for use at Long Beach where the big flood control project is under way. An enormous amount of material is being excavated and has to be removed. The freight cars are built of especial design for such work and are narrow guage so that they could not be operated over standard railroad lines. If they had been taken to Long Beach on other railroad cars they would have had to be removed to the site of the excavation by some other method so the Smith Bros. Truck Company agreed to tackle the entire job.

Each of the cars weighed between ten and eleven tons and ten of them were hauled to Long Beach on the Mack truck in four days. The cars are about twenty-two feet long and to load them onto the truck and trailer, it was necessary first to place a section of track on the truck and trailer. The cars were pulled along the spur track on which they stood up the grade of about 10 per cent onto the elevated portion of the track. Then they were forced onto the trucks and trailer. About thirty feet of track remained under the cars while in transit. Upon arriving at the destination, the unloading was accomplished by reversing the loading process.

Smith Bros. Truck Company have accomplished many unusual transportation feats by means of their Mack truck, but this one of carrying freight cars is regarded as the most spectacular.

"FREIGHT CAR, FREIGHT CAR, WHO'S GOT THE FREIGHT CAR?" FREDDY PABST WANTS TO KNOW.

"Freight car, freight car, who's got a freight car?"

That is the one big cry just now in Detroit, according to Fred W. Pabst, advertising manager for Don Lee, who has just returned from the East. The big automobile center is flooded with representatives of dealers from all over the country vainly endeavoring to obtain freight cars in which to ship automobiles. Hundreds of cars are being loaded on flat cars and gondolas, while hundreds more are being driven over land to the various agencies.

STEADY STREAM.

The roads out of Detroit in all directions present an animated picture of cars and trucks which form a continuous procession night and day. Cars are being driven as far west as Denver and east to Boston, New York and southern Atlantic points.

"This year, more than ever," said Pabst, "the East appreciates what good roads would mean. The highways out of Detroit are none too good and not a day passes that half a dozen cars or trucks are not wrecked in the mad drive-away. Roads such as we have in California would save thousands and thousands of dollars, and greatly facilitate the movement of freight. Motor-driven vehicles are doing much to break the freight embargo, but had the Middle West States made the progress in road building that has been made in California, the present condition could have been relieved much quicker.

BELOW NORMAL.

"Production is still below normal in many of the factories and general manufacturing conditions are none too good. One of the greatest obstacles is the obtaining of material and parts that go to make up the various automobiles. The Cadillac company has found it necessary many times to send trucks a thousand miles for supplies that were tied up in the freight yards. Many small accessories, such as speedometers, are being delivered in hundred lots, and often the supply is only a day ahead of production. This is always a serious matter in a plant such as the Cadillac, as no matter how badly a part may be needed, if it does not come up to the highest test it is discarded.

CONSIDERABLE TALK.

There has been considerable talk recently of tightening of automobile credits, but this is not apparent except in isolated cases in the East. The Federal Reserve Bank has made it very plain that the automobile industry is not to be discriminated against. The financial interests of this country recognize the enormous importance of this industry, and bankers are being urged to take no step that would in any way jeopardize the automobile business. In cases where curtailment of credits is necessary the automobile manufacturers and dealers are to be asked to shoulder their share of the burden, but no more than their share. There is no sign of financial troubles in the East, and no troubles are expected. Labor conditions are becoming more settled and the whole industry has a generally healthy look.

Pabst was enthusiastic in his description of the new Cadillac factory, which is rapidly nearing completion. Many of the buildings are already occupied, and the various departments of the Cadillac factory are being gradually moved into new quarters. This new plant is one of the largest and best-equipped automobile plants in the world, and will place the Cadillac company in an enviable position in the matter of production.

LAKE TAHOE ROADS OPEN.

Both Auburn and Placerville routes to Lake Tahoe are now open to motor traffic and a noticeable increase in the number of parties motoring to the high Sierra playground is reported. The snow which blocked the Auburn route for several weeks has entirely disappeared and the road is said to be in excellent condition, assuring the motorist of easy travel.

Conflicting reports have reached Los Angeles regarding a shortage of fuel at the northern resorts but according to authorities at the lake the gasoline shortage has not been felt there and the curtailment of gas sales is not thought to be probable or imminent.

In making the journey to Lake Tahoe the motorist can get the most out of the outing by taking the Placerville route to the lake and returning via the Auburn road, or by reversing this itinerary. In this way the motorist is afforded a greater variety of scenery and avoids the possible monotony of traversing the same route twice within a few days.

Southern visitors to the famous inland sea have informed L. V. Starr, manager of the J. W. Leavitt Company, Oldsmobile distributors, that the streams in the region around the lake are no longer swollen and fishing is now at its best. Some time ago the California Fish and Game Commission stocked Tahoe and near-by lakes with a quantity of steelhead and these are now becoming available angler.

Morelands Make Good in Rough Desert Work

Truck operation in the Coachella Valley is not what the most enthusiastic optimist could term a path of ease.

The truck that operates there has to do so under conditions of extreme hot temperature. It has to dig through roads that are but wheeltracks in the enveloping sand. It has to fight through sand storms, over, into, out of and through chuck holes and washes.

Investigation will show you an extremely large number of Moreland trucks operating in that valley. If you talk with the owners or get a chance to inspect the trucks at their work, you will quickly learn the reason.

Moreland trucks are built with an understanding of the work they must be ready to do in the West, of which that in the Coachella Valley is an example. They stand the gaff.

Pictured below is one of the trucks in a typical desert road which day after day is doing its important work in the valley, dependably and well.

MORELAND SERVICE

The eight Moreland direct factory branches and numerous high-class, efficient agencies scattered about the Coast assure the speediest and best of service. All are supplied with large stocks of parts, including standard units. These service stations are always ready and willing to help owners of other trucks, as well as Morelands, using these units, keep them moving.

MACK PERFORMANCE COUNTS

Features You Get Exclusively in Mack Trucks

Provision for Driver:

Drivers of motor trucks are human and the designers of MACK trucks endeavor to treat the drivers humanely.

This fact accounts for the unusual provisions made for the comfort and safety of those who drive MACK trucks.

MACK trucks are equipped with sheet-steel cabs that are positive protection against weather and a safeguard in case of accident. Lives are known to have been saved, because of the rigid construction of the driver's cab. Statistics prove there have been few casualties to occupants of a steel railway coach and the same will be true of drivers who ride in the steel cab of a MACK truck.

The doors to the cab of a MACK truck are not hinged but slide in grooves. When open the doors are safely out of the way.

The seat cushions supplied with MACK trucks are deep and upholstered to make them comfortable. They are made to resist hard use.

DEALER SNATCHES MORE TERRITORY.

LIKES DISTRIBUTION SO WELL THAT HE TAKES IN THE WHOLE SOUTH.

"If you like the sample, try a man's sized portion," was the way the Metz dealership was presented to R. E. Magee, and he liked the sample so well that he has taken over the distribution of the Metz in all of Southern California. "When we organized the Magee Motor Sales and took on the Metz we didn't know much about the car, except that it was built by a New England factory that had a reputation for doing things in that good old-fashioned way that meant quality.

"After several months at the sample, we have come to the conclusion that the Metz is a pretty good car for a regular diet, and we made a bid for the whole of the Southern California territory, and it has been awarded to us. The car itself has won many friends and the splendid showing it made on the Yosemite economy run also boosted it up to a high point, all of which has been sweet for us, because it is public interest that builds sales, and it is sales that keep the money coming in.

MASTER CARBURETOR MANAGER INJURED.

BADLY SHAKEN UP WHEN SANTA FE TRAIN HITS INTO THE DITCH.

Lyman P. Clark of South Pasadena, sales manager of the Master Carburetor Company of this city, was one of the passengers injured last Tuesday at La Junta, Colo., when Santa Fe train No. 4 was derailed, according to advices received by that company. He received a scalp wound and body injuries described as not serious and is in the company's hospital at that division point.

Clark was to have left for the East on a business trip to visit Master distributors the week previous, but was detained. He left Sunday, June 14. His wife hardly knows whether "13" is a lucky or an unlucky day. "He was unlucky to be injured and be detained in a hospital far from home, but he was also lucky to escape as well as he did," she said over the phone.

Full Production Pretty Quick.

Above, an airplane view of the new Goodyear plant out near old Ascot Park, which will soon be under full production. The lower photograph shows the first tire turned out of the new factory.

BIG PLANT IS UNDER WAY.

Production of Tires is Increasing at the Local Goodyear Factory.

After 328 days in the making, the new $20,000,000 factory of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California, which occupies part of the former Ascot Park tract at Los Angeles, has started manufacture of tires and is gradually approaching its allotted capacity production. In less than eleven months the largest single industrial plant of the West has been erected, equipped with machinery and put into actual production under the direction of master minds, skilled in every step connected with planning, financing, building and equipping a plant of this magnitude. From a cabbage patch has risen the largest tire manufacturing plant west of Ohio.

A group of about thirty Goodyear executives and officials watched Vice-President and General Manager A. F. Osterloh of the California company and Factory Manager P. W. Litchfield of the Akron company start the first plies of fabric of the initial tire. After passing through the various construction stages the tire was put into a steam vulcanizer and ninety minutes later taken steaming from the mold.

Ordinarily the production of but one tire would represent little but the outlay of a few dollars, but this first western Goodyear tire is but the precursor of millions to follow and marks a new industrial era in the West. It is a milepost in the onward march of one of the young pioneers of western industry.

All of the Goodyear factories throughout the country joined Los Angeles in celebrating the advent of this first tire. The big plants at Akron, O., Goodyear, Ct., Toronto, Can., and the cotton plantation at Phoenix, Ariz., announced the event with eight stentorian blasts of the whistle, one for the first California tire and seven for each thousand of daily production of tires to follow.

The Los Angeles plant opens actual production with about 2000 employees, which will be increased to 9000 as the factory gets into full swing, with 7500 in the tire plant and 1500 in the cotton fabric mill.

As announced some time ago, the crude rubber for the western factory comes from the company's extensive crude rubber plantations in Sumatra and the cotton fabric from long staple cotton grown in the Salt River Valley of Arizona and the Imperial Valley of Southern California.

Due to railroad delays all of the equipment for making cord tires has not yet been installed, but it is expected that Goodyear will turn out the first set of cord tires early in July. Douglas Fairbanks, famous screen star, has purchased the first set of "native son" cord tires, which will be delivered to his home by the Goodyear pony blimp upon the actor's return with his bride from their honeymoon in Europe.

A feature that distinguishes this new western project from others is its aviation field. For this purpose 320 acres have been set aside, as the company proposes to give attention to the subject of aviation.

Another feature is the 180-acre housing community containing 800 houses to be sold to employees on easy payments. Company officials have expressed the belief that home owning citizens are good citizens and dependable workers. They assert that even if there were no present shortage of houses the company would build homes for its workers anyway, to make their possession easy.

The new factory will supply tires for the territory west of the eastern boundary of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico and its export trade in the Orient.

The building of the big plant has established a new construction record for the West, the entire project having been completed and put into operation within twelve months—in fact the first tire was turned out thirty-seven days in advance of the time limit set by the Goodyear president, F. A. Seiberling when he broke ground for the new factory on July 21, 1919, remarking, "here's where we start the new factory and we'll finish it in a hurry."

SHIPMENT OF CARS MAKES 'EM HAPPY.

Joy again reigns at the Renstrom house. It was neither a boy nor a girl but a nice big shipment of Grant sixes that arrived just when it was due that caused all the rejoicing. "It has become such a habit with us to be without cars to sell that we scarcely know how to act when we get in a shipment," said Earl V. Abbott, the manager of the Los Angeles and of the Frank O. Renstrom Company. "The demand for light sixes seems to be on the same wave as the Republican party. The public fairly clamors for them. When you stop and think what a light six does for such a little amount of money it is no wonder that the people want them.

DISTILLED WATER IS A MONEY SAVER.

Watch the ammeter and have your battery tested regularly, that's the safest and surest way to avoid battery troubles and inconveniences on the road. "If every driver of a motor car was only one-tenth as careful about the attention he gives the battery in his car as he is about the contents of the gasoline tank he would save himself a lot of money and time as well," says C. H. Kay of Kay & Burbank, Exide battery distributors. "There must be many a battery that thinks the constitutional prohibition amendment forbids the use of every liquid, including distilled water, judging from the total abstinence that is forced upon them by negligent owners."

SIX

Like a Thoroughbred

—its beauty attracts —its speed is ready

WHETHER seen in showroom or on the street, the new Mitchell Six suggests a swift moving object—awaiting the word "go."

Its tilted radiator harmonizes all lines of motion. And its body finish, distinctive touches of individuality and craftsmanship are comparable only with custom built bodies of higher priced cars.

When you sit at the wheel you are again reminded of thoroughbred quality. The silent, effortless purr of its powerful motor as you creep along at two miles on high—and its instant response to the throttle's call as it speeds up to 35 miles per hour inside 100 feet—make the ideal car for men and women drivers—for traffic or country driving.

Compare the new Mitchell with any car in its price class. Ride in it. You will then know why it leads in every way.

VALVE TIMING IS IMPORTANT.

Proper Functioning Depends on Adjustment.

Care in Reassembling the Motor Essential.

How to be Sure That Right Timing is Used.

The subject of valve timing is intimately involved with valve operation and engine efficiency. To begin with, it must be understood that in the four-cycle engine now universally used each valve is opened and closed once for every two revolutions of the crankshaft, the camshaft which actuates the valves turning at just half the speed of the crankshaft. The inlet valve is opened when the piston is at the very top of its suction stroke or just after it has begun to descend. When the piston comes up again on the compression stroke the inlet valve is closed, otherwise some of the fuel would be driven out of the combustion chamber.

Then comes the explosion and the downward power stroke, during both of which both valves remain closed. When the piston has nearly reached the bottom of the power stroke the exhaust valve opens and remains open during the upward scavenging stroke to allow the burned gases to be driven out of the cylinder. All these various openings and closings must be accurate to a degree or the efficiency of the engine is largely lost, and this accuracy depends principally on proper valve timing.

It must be understood that valve timing is not an adjustment; indeed, it is not often necessary, for once the valves are properly timed they remain so until the engine is taken down for some reason. But once the timing is disturbed it is vitally important that it shall be properly assembled again if the engine is to function properly.

Before taking down the engine the gears should be carefully inspected for markings that will enable them to be assembled again as they were before. Usually there are marks on the camshaft and camshaft gears either round indentations or lines stamped on the teeth. By turning the crank these marks are made to come together. In cases where chain drive is used the marks are usually placed on the timing-gear case.

In reassembling an ordinary gear driven valve gear it is only necessary to turn over the crankshaft until the mark on the crankshaft gear gets to the point where the camshaft gear meshes and then slip the camshaft gear into mesh so that the two marks coincide. In the chain driven type the crankshaft is revolved until the mark on the crankshaft gear coincides with that on the gear case next to it. The camshaft is now turned independently until its mark coincides with the corresponding mark on the gear case, when the silent chain is slipped over the gears.

In the rare cases where no marks have been put on the parts the car owner should mark them himself with a punch. But even if some accident should make it necessary to retime the gears without any marks to guide him the owner need not despair. By using the markings on the flywheel he can do the job without much trouble.

The common method of marking the flywheel is to mark the dead center of every cylinder. The only thing necessary to find is the upper dead center of number one cylinder. Having found this, the camshaft may be slipped into mesh, for with the first cylinder properly timed the others will certainly be correctly timed, too.

In cases where the design embodies two camshafts the same procedure of finding number one upper dead center should be followed. This will time the exhaust shaft, which may then be slipped into mesh. Next the degree at which the inlet should open is obtained from the instruction book and laid off on the flywheel. The flywheel is then turned to that position and held stationary until the inlet camshaft is revolved to a position where the inlet valves just begin to open. The inlet camshaft is then slipped into mesh and the timing is complete.

Where the valve gear is chain driven the same procedure is followed, except that at the psychological moment instead of meshing gears, the chain is slipped on.

In V-type engines, such as our eights and twelves, there is generally only one camshaft, which is placed between the cylinder blocks at the base of the V. The procedure in these cases is just the same as with the conventional type of vertical engine.

TIRE REPAIR MEN HAVING FINE TIME.

RETREADING BUSINESS BOOMING WITH TIRE SHORTAGE IN THESE PARTS.

Present conditions are a boon to the tire repair man, according to Frank Price of Nelson & Price, distributors for India and Hartford tires. The scarcity of tires means that the driver of a car now must have his sound old casings retreaded and fixed up instead of buying new tires.

"Our repair department has been working overtime taking care of the great volume of work that has developed out of the present tire shortage. We have put on more men and installed added equipment. We have perfected our process for retreading to a point where we know that a tire going out of that department is going to give the owner more than his money's worth of service. Not everyone can retread a tire just because he has rubber stock and a mold. He must be an experienced tire man and know the proper treatment to accord tires in different stages of wear and condition."

WABBLING WHEELS; HOW TO FIX 'EM.

Criticism of the condition of the wheels of his neighbor's car is a common failing with most motorists, and yet the very man who is finding fault probably has a worse set on his own car. Wabbling wheels are a common ailment in motordom. At least once in two months, and better once every month, the car owner should jack up the wheels of his car, grasp opposite spokes and shake them to see if excessive end play has developed. Rear wheels are particularly liable to looseness and this condition includes rapid tire deterioration. The wabbling may be caused by bearing wear or by a bent shaft.

DEALERS LABOR HARD FOR CARS.

Endeavoring to Keep up With the Huge Orders.

Waterways Being Pressed Into Service Nowadays.

Coast Distributors Send Men East to Help Out.

These are the days that test the resourcefulness of the motor car builders in maintaining production schedules and moving the finished product. Freight conditions are such that the transportation heads of the factories, as well as the large distributors, must use their utmost ingenuity to get the autos by the congested points. With an unprecedented scramble for freight equipment, many of the foremost distributors are maintaining scouts at the stragetic points on the lookout for freight cars, flats or gondolas.

The Pacific Coast being the furthest from the production centers, has felt the present freight situation particularly hard, and it is a tribute to the perseverance and intelligent work of the distributors that they have been able to get so many cars by the various obstacles. Driving cars away from the factory to water points and then shipping by boats to rail connections has been a favorite method employed. Some of the southern dealers have been using the rivers for the transporting of large barges loaded with machines.

The Howard Automobile Company, being the largest distributor of automobiles in the world and the originator of trainload shipments has been keenly alert in the shipping activities. Although the number of cars shipped has been inadequate to meet the demand for Buicks, the Howard representatives in the East and the officials on the Coast have been tireless in keeping some line of freight communication open.

R. F. Thompson, general manager of the Howard organization, went east last week, joining in Chicago Harold W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Los Angeles branch. They will divide their time between Chicago and the Buick factory at Flint, in heroic efforts to increase the shipments to the Howard territory.

According to information from the Howard officials, dealers from the East and Middle West are flocking to the factories and driving away as many cars as possible. Cars are run on their own power as far away from the plants as Kansas, Georgia South Carolina and Maine.

"The almost-forgotten waterways are being revived with all of the activity of the Civil War days," Tuttle wrote last week. "There is a scramble for river boats, and barges are in unprecedented demand. It has been a great opportunity for the advocates of river transportation to prove the value of the inland waterways.

"The railroads have been making headway against obstacles in efforts to relieve the freight situation and the tendency is toward relief, although it will be months before conditions can approach the normal. I never saw such mad scrambling for freight cars. It seems as though the whole country is dashing about after freight equipment."

CAREFUL PILOTS ARE IN DEMAND.

COMMERCIAL AVIATION SHOWS THAT THE AIR IS AS SAFE AS ANYTHING.

"We have realized the importance of competent training in aviation," says C. B. Worship, of the Mercury Aviation Company with headquarters at De Mille Field, Hollywood, "and we have organized a complete course in aeronautics where every phase of flying together with every branch of the ground work can be learned in a short time by anyone with ordinary sense of balance, distance and intelligence. Everybody can fly. Some better than others just as you find good and poor motor car drivers, but the airplane of today is so very near fool proof that the danger of accident is very limited.

"We have always confined our selection of flyers to Army reserve instructors as they are the best flyers and unusually cautious. There is none of the bravado in a good commercial flyer that is usually found in the stunt man. The army taught the men to fly in safety, for what they needed was live flyers and not dead ones. Several big things are projected for Southern California in the aviation field, and you can rest assured that when these plans materialize, this section of the country will experience a boom of development unparalleled in western history."

LIGHTWEIGHT CAR PROVEN SUCCESS.

INDIANAPOLIS RACE BRINGS UP STAMINA AND ECONOMY OF LIGHT MOTOR.

Modern engineering leans towards the development of the lightweight small motored car to secure the utmost in economy and at the same time retain power, speed and reliability. This was proven at the last Indianapolis race.

"Oakland engineers have always contended that the small, high-speed motor was the logical type and they have confined their efforts to the development of the little motor that has proven in actual test and use to develop forty-four horse power, yet had the appetite for gasoline of a motorcycle," says H. E. Franklin of Hawley, King & Co.

"At Indianapolis the first test of the small motor was made and every car in the run was limited to 183 cubic inches displacement. Compare this with the giant racing cars of a few years ago and you can readily see the tendency of the time. The result of the test proved that the small lightweight car was almost as speedy and every bit as reliable as their heavier fathers. The chief difficulty was in steering the cars at speds well over the 100 miles per hour gait.

White Auto Company,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Gentlemen:-

I am enclosing herewith our confirming order for two (2) Model 84 Stephens Salient Six cars. These cars are to be delivered to our Production Department at Taft, California.

At this time it may be interesting for you to know that we are standardising on the Stephens car for the reason that we find that this car requires less attention, is seldom in our repair shops, and consequently is on the road in actual use more days in the year than other cars we have used to date. You realise that the use we put these cars to in the oil field is very strenuous and it is very important that we have a car that is thoroughly reliable and dependable.

Another feature that has been a very important one with us is the service rendered by the White Auto Company. The combination of Stephens cars and the White Auto Company's service has put us in the class of satisfied Stephens owners.

Very truly yours,

MANAGER PURCHASING DEPARTMENT.

ILD RIDE WITH BARNEY.

aulkner Gets a Few Thrills on the Indianapolis Speedway.

a big Marmon dealers' ion at the Indianapolis fac- nd the Republican convention ago, Al G. Faulkner's most the East proved a decidedly ional" affair. But accord- he well-known motor-car here was one feature of his East that held nothing of nal or conventional about was the ride which Faulkner Barney Oldfield when the driver" paced the field at of the Indianapolis 500- As vice-president of the Speedway Association. ancient crony of Oldfield's, Faulkner was accorded the honor of occupying the spare seat of the yellow Marmon speedster in which Barney paced the field at the start of the race.

"If you think the race fans have forgotten Barney, you should have heard the ovation the crowd gave him when we started around the track," said Faulkner last week. "I don't believe that any other driver ever has or ever will hold the peculiar esteem of the race fans that Barney does.

"Well, the way we started out on that first lap was not at all slow. We went into the first turn plenty fast enough to suit me, something over sixty, if I remember rightly. On the back stretch, we were doing better than eighty, and as we came into the second turn I began to think riding the initial lap was something of a doubtful honor. As we came into the home stretch, I could feel Barney bending the floor boards with his good right foot, and we crossed the line at 91 miles an hour. Right there I heaved a long sigh of relief and expected Barney to head for the pits. But Barney had caught the fever, or had seen a well-known Italian driver just behind him, and he yelled to me, "Let's stay in. I think we've got a good show to win some money," and he went into the turn at eighty-seven miles an hour for the start of another lap.

"I heard a good many speeches at Chicago, but for real compelling oratory, I think I outdid them all in Mr. Oldfield's ear for the rest of that lap. Anyhow it worked. We retired from the race at the end of the second lap.

"The race was a tremendous triumph for the little cars, and for the genius of American designers. The small cars are even more pleasing to the eye than the larger machines. They are trimmer, more compact and hug the track closer. The outcome of the race indicated they are safer to handle on the track, and they are to all intents as fast as the bigger machines. They crowded the track record at Indianapolis very close, and Milton set a new record for the 250-mile distance at Uniontown. When they appear on the Los Angeles Speedway this Thanksgiving for the championship finals of the season the cars will be in better condition, and it would not surprise me at all to see them set a new speed mark despite their tiny motors.

"The Marmon sales convention was a wonderful affair. I have attended many of them, but have never seen quite as much pep, enthusiasm and interest before. There is certainly no slackening up in Marmon production. Like the other big, well-financed companies, Marmon is well supplied with materials, and production is in full stride. A big Indianapolis banker was one of the convention speakers, and he assured us that there had been no discrimination against the automobile industry by the banks as a whole, and that the country's financial position was completely sound."

After a brief stay in Los Angeles, Faulkner left for San Francisco to be present at the formal opening of his splendid new building at Post and Hyde streets. The big growth of the Marmon business in San Francisco since Faulkner took over the State-wide sales made necessary the construction of big three-story structure to house the Marmon organization there, and the formal opening of the new building was held last week.

DON'T FORGET INSPECTION.

Regardless of the number of vehicles a man may have in use, systematic, thorough inspection is essential to economical truck operation. It cuts maintenance costs and operating expenses, reduces depreciation, increases operating efficiency and tones up the driver. An operator of a fleet of nearly 800 trucks recently declared that inspection actually decreased operating expenses by 20 per cent.

Some of the larger motor fleet operators have their own inspection service, highly organized. The inspectors have the authority to send a truck to the service station if they deem it necessary. They are responsible to the fleet manager only, thereby furnishing him with a check upon his maintenance and operating divisions.

"Whether an owner operates one truck or a large fleet, he should have an expert inspect his truck or trucks at least once every month," declares Freeman A. McKenzie, Southern California distributor for the Commerce truck. "A thorough inspection requires at least two hours' time. The inspector should check a printed form report, or typewritten list, noting after actual test the condition of the various parts of the motor, governor, carburetor, radiator, ignition system, clutch, grease cups, in fact, every unit of the car and its component parts."

"This monthly report constitutes the eyes of truck owner or fleet operator. It tells him whether the driver is competent, whether the truck is overloaded or otherwise abused. It gives him a check upon his repair service, showing whether it is up to standard, and, important of all, it is the best insurance against possible breakdowns or troubles."

LOCAL CAR GETS NEW DISTRIBUTOR.

Rumor has it that a well-known concern is to take over the Southern California distributorship for the Leach car. Just who it is or who it might be is only a matter of conjecture, but according to gossip it is to be a financially strong concern with an organization and sufficient enthusiasm to put the Leach in the place where it rightly belongs.

The Leach is a car of individual design, embodying all the features that make for custom-built types as well as the many accessories which the owner ultimately buys and puts on a car. It has the Leach patented top with sliding plate-glass windows and sliding curtains, which make it either a closed or open car as occasion demands.

TRANSMISSION IS QUITE DIFFERENT.

GOING DOWN HILL WITH CAR IN REVERSE IS THE WAY TO SAVE BRAKES.

"Though of course the advantages of the magnetic transmission of the Owen are most appreciated because of the flexibility it gives to the flow of power from the motor to the rear wheels, it nevertheless permits as well a very unusual braking system," declares J. W. Gaffney of the Gaffney Motor Sales Company, distributors of the Owen Magnetic.

"In addition to the customary foot and hand brake which the average car possesses, the Owen has an electric braking system. Four different degrees of intensity are permitted in the application of the electric brake, and its application is so easy that experienced Owen drivers make almost exclusive use of it except for emergency stops. It is applied through the magnetic transmission, so that its braking effect is equally distributed to the rear wheels, greatly minimizing the possibility of skidding.

"The use of the motor as a brake is achieved in the Owen by putting the car in reverse gear and setting the hand-lever on the wheel in 'high.' This gives you the full effect of the motor as a brake. The idea of coming down hill in reverse may seem rather odd to anyone who has not made a study of the magnetic transmission of the Owen, but it is the customary method of employing the motor as a brake in operating the car."

DESCRIBES ACTION OF LUBRICATION SYSTEM.

THIN FILM OF OIL IS THE PROTECTION FROM HEAT GENERATED BY FRICTION.

Ralph Hamlin, the local distributor of Quaker State Oil, gives a clear, concise definition of the use of oil.

"Machinery of any kind," he says, "transmits power by movable members. These parts must slide in guides or bearings, and they work most efficiently when their motion excites the least frictional resistance. Their finely ground surfaces appear perfectly smooth to touch and sight, but under the microscope show marked ridges and irregularities. When two such surfaces come into direct contact at high speeds and under heavy pressure, they grind and abrade each other like two pieces of sand paper.

"No machinery can long survive such wear and tear. To protect the finished surfaces, it is necessary to insert between them a film of oil. This oil cushion keeps apart the opposing minute ridges. When the parts move, they split the film into "tangential" layers which slip or flow upon each other with little resistance. Thus the basic purpose of lubrication is accomplished by substituting the easy internal friction of oil for the destructive sliding friction of metal. It is more important to maintain this oil film between the bearing surfaces than to keep fuel in the gasoline tank. But if the oil is of uneven or incorrect quality, contains impurities, or evaporates quickly, the delicate film is easily destroyed."

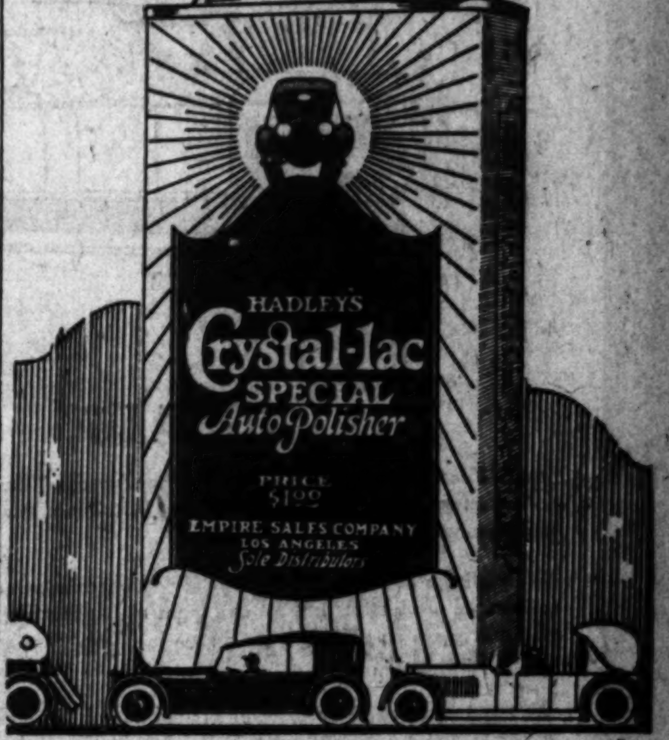
Builds Up, Preserves and Polishes Motor Car Finish



Crystal-lac, the new auto polisher, accomplishes three things—

It builds up and revitalizes a motor car finish.

It forms a film-like, instant-drying transparent lacquer, which easily rubs to a mirror-like brilliance.

It acts as a varnish preservative.

Leading dealers and automobile distributors carry Crystal-lac in handy pint cans at $1.00 and quarts at $1.50.

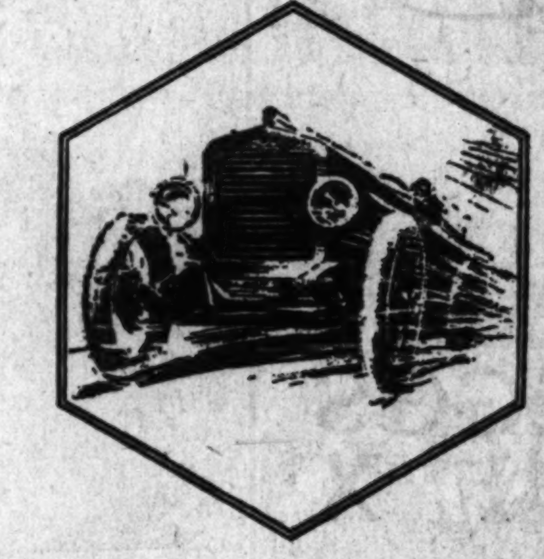
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



Proving Essex Reliability
A Fact Not to be Disregarded

One cannot ignore the Essex performance of 3037 miles in 50 hours when considering light car endurance.

In fact no car ever was driven at top speed for such a distance or for so long a period of time.

But if any doubt remained after that official proof made with a stock Essex, the 40,000 cars in service each shows the degree of Essex reliability.

Thousands of Essex cars show in excess of 25,000 miles service each.

And owners by their testimony are daily establishing the Essex not only as the most amazing light car from the standpoint of performance, but also as the equal of the costly large cars in the question of endurance and freedom from mechanical attention and expense.

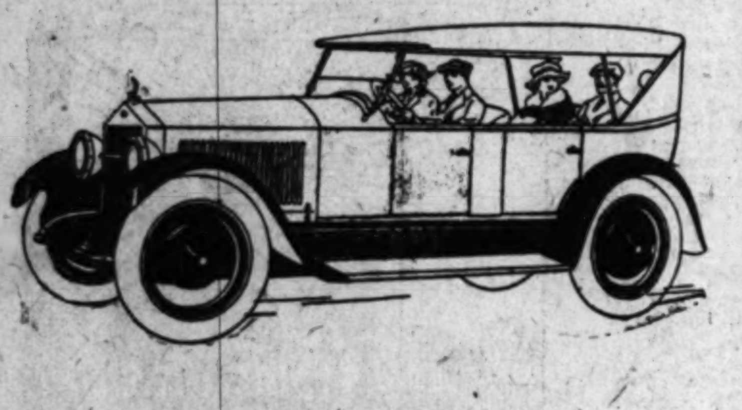
MOON



IDEALS

AT this time, when the demand of the hour is "More Production," we feel sure a word about the ideals of the Moon Motor Car Co. will be well received.

While all the energies of the entire Moon organization are being put forth to increase production, not for one moment has that big dominant factor—one that plays an all important part—in Moon Cars been lost sight of—that is QUALITY.

We are one of the pioneers in the great automobile industry, and enjoy that enviable position of leadership that is attained only by those who deal in Quality, and during these momentous times when the cry from all sides is "More Production" we will not sacrifice those ideals, but will continue the exceedingly pleasant task of making the best automobile we know how, one that truly lives up to its name—"The Success of the Year."

Some territory still open for live dealers.

Lighting Troubles Have No Terror for Him.

H. J. Rose of the Western Auto Electric simply hooks up the lighting system of his mountain cottage with the Titan battery in his Buick by means of an extension cord and succeeds in having sufficient illumination to keep from peeling his shins on the chairs and sofas. The generator easily takes care of the juice used up in this manner, according to Bro. Rose.

SOLVES LIGHTING PROBLEM.

Any motorist owning a cottage in the mountains or at the shore not connected with an electric light line need not depend on the old-fashioned, and, more or less dangerous kerosene lamp method of illumination for the summer nights if he has a good husky storage battery in his car.

Mr. H. J. Rose of the Western Electric Company has a very simple method of lighting his mountain cottage from the Titan storage battery in his car. This battery did not come as equipment on Mr. Rose's car, but as Titan batteries are part of Mr. Rose's business he has naturally replaced the car's regular equipment with one of the Western Electric Company batteries.

When going up to spend a few days at his cottage he carries along a suitable length of ordinary extension light cord which has been fitted at one end with a plug that fits the socket of his dash light and at the other with a two way socket for the purpose of serving two rooms if necessary. Into these sockets go further extensions which are run into the rooms desired and by using the proper voltage lamps ample, convenient electric light is furnished by the automobile battery.

One doesn't need much light on a summer evening and the current that is consumed by a few hours of lighting in this way is easily taken care of by the generator on the trip to and from the mountains.

ORDER AUTO FREIGHT CARS.

Railroad companies in placing orders for new equipment are not overlooking the large-size freight cars which are devoted to the transportation of automobiles. Orders for thousands of these have been placed and their entry into service will cause manufacturers, distributors and the motoring public to give vent to satisfaction, in the opinion of Stanley S. Smith of Smith Bros., Southern California distributors of the Peerless eight.

"We here in Southern California have absolutely no conception of the constant struggle that is ever going on in the East for freight cars to move any kind of merchandise. It is nerve-racking for everyone concerned. I had a very good taste of it last month when I worked overtime for a week to get enough cars together to transport a trainload of Peerless eights to Los Angeles. The mere mention of freight cars back there is enough to get a rise out of a sales manager or almost any official connected with the factory," declared Smith.

The receipt of that trainload of Peerless cars, said to be the most valuable shipment of high-grade automobiles ever received at one time by any one distributor on the Pacific Coast, has resulted in Smith receiving a number of letters asking him, "How did you do it?" One dealer, who had been waiting several weeks for them so he could make deliveries, said: "After all, it's not so much 'How did you do it,' but the fact that you did do it that counts."

NEW MACHINERY TO JUMP PRODUCTION.

SCRAMBLE IN EASTERN FOUNDRIES IS ALMOST MADDENING, WRITES CLARK.

Production of the Clark-Turner Company, makers of De Luxe lightweight gray iron pistons, received considerable impetus last week by the installation in the foundry of a carload of machinery just received from the East. In the absence of W. A. Clark, now in the East on a several weeks' trip, Stanley S. Turner has been superintending the installation of the machinery in the foundry and keeping an eye between whiles on two factory shifts.

"The scramble for all kinds of machinery to speed up production and start new industries is described by Mr. Clark, writing from Chicago, as almost maddening. Some foundries and makers of machinery are sold for more than one year ahead. Add to this the freight jam, strikes and a few more things and one has some idea how difficult it is to keep pace with demands for goods," said Turner.

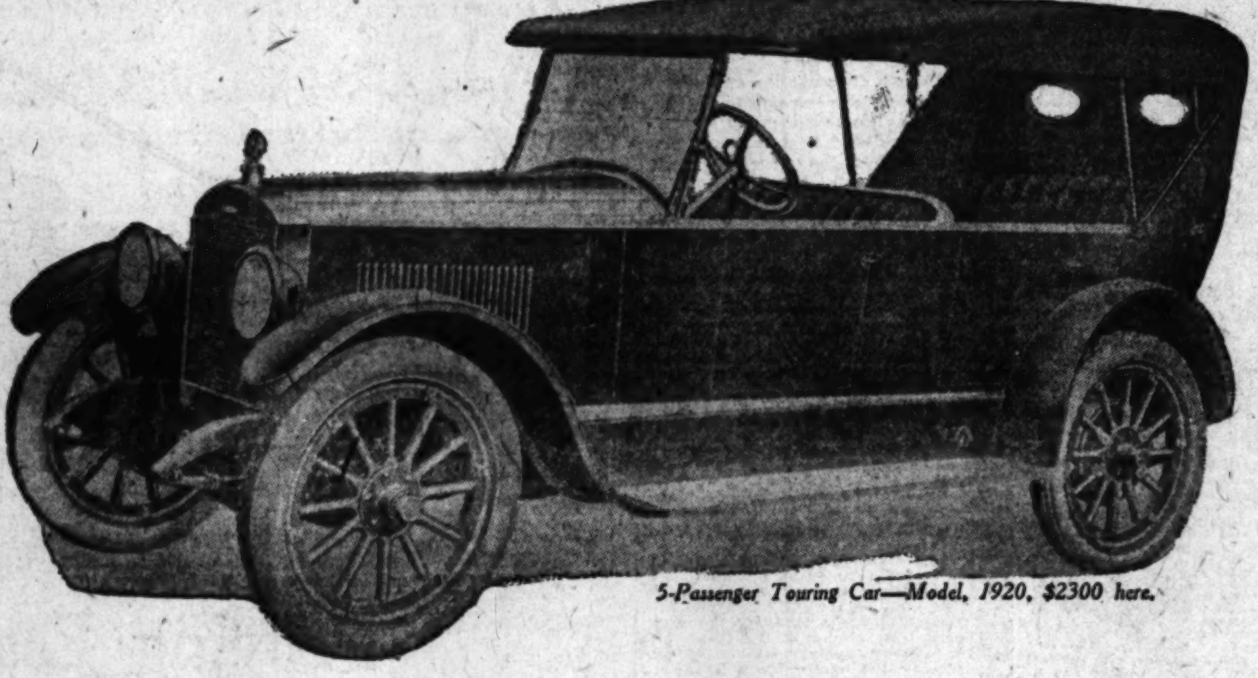
The BEGGS SIX



5-Passenger Touring Car—Model, 1920, $2300 here.

BEGGS SIX
KANSAS CITY, MO.

Upon its successful performance under every type of condition, depends the value of a motor car to its owner. A car that will throttle down to the snail's pace of city traffic, that will pick up instantaneously at the slightest impulse, that will climb hills with ease, that will stand the stress of transcontinental travel—such a car inspires and justifies confidence.

And such a car is the BEGGS SIX. Its sturdy construction—a product of conscientious endeavor and skilled workmanship—warrants this kind of reliance. Performance in the past has guaranteed its dependability.

REAL PROPOSITION FOR LIVE DEALERS

"BEGGS"

Throughout the Middle West this name has been known for a period of more than forty years. Always has it stood for dependable products—as a guarantee of quality. In the BEGGS SIX, everything this name has represented in the past, is embodied.

In the 1920 model, BEGGS SIX, special body construction provides a roominess that is unusual. At the same time its graceful straight lines mark it as a thing of beauty.

Easy riding qualities, always an important feature of a car, are insured to an exceptional degree. The light weight of the car itself, combined with its long wheel base and extra length spring suspension makes this possible.

Among babies, mortality is apt to be very high be- of ignorance on the part of parents, lack of proper care and of expert advice. So it is with battery. The car owner is apt ignorant about his battery does not give it the proper care, if he does not call in the expert of the service man, he is apt have a dead battery on his hands. its maturity the battery is the best of condition, its first months of good care have it in proper health, but it still be watched and taken of by the expert, the service It must be guarded from working, it must not be allow- to do anything that may tend shorten its life.

"Then comes the old age of the battery. Like the human, the way that a battery acts in its old age depends upon the life that it has led before or during its youth. If it has had regular care and attention during its life the battery may still remain young in service though old in years. It need not necessarily imply that it has not sufficient vigor to continue its work, but it does mean that its tenure on life is becoming more and more uncertain each day. This is the time to pension it off, for if you do not you will have a dead battery on your hands and no motorist wants that."

Fred S. Albertson of the Albertson Motor Company, distributors for Dodge Brothers motor cars, left on Friday for an extended eastern trip which will probably occupy a month. Mr. Albertson, who was accompanied by his family, will include avisit to the Dodge Brothers' plant in his eastern itinerary, and plans to return to the Coast by the Canadian Pacific, vacationing for a time at Lake Louise and other resorts of the Canadian Rockies.

Franklin Touring Car

THIS is the car that gives to owners the following evidence of economy, reliability and comfort:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation
(National Averages)

And this is the car that has also established these unchallenged records of road performance—one driver continuously at the wheel on each run:

Portland, Me., to Top of Mount Washington, N. H. (98.2 miles) non-stop, low-gear run—
New York to Boston and return (458.8 miles) in 12 hours, 5 min.—
Indianapolis to Syracuse and beyond (832.6 miles) in 22½ hours—
Boston to Syracuse and return (693 miles) in 24 hours, 20 min., with a Woman driving—
New York to Montreal (398 miles) in 9 hours, 59 minutes—
Waterloo, Ia., non-stop, dirt-road record, (865.4 miles) in 24 hours—
Cincinnati to Cleveland and return (553 miles) in 15 hours, 45 min.—

The Franklin is not handicapped by heavy weight and rigidity nor hampered by cooling troubles at any season. It is light, flexible and direct air cooled. We like to give demonstrations of what it can do.

Not Only Here But Abroad As Well

"Travelled to the Barrage on the Vaal River and back last Sunday, 129.5 miles, on 4½ gallons of petrol. A fine average which certainly proves the makers' claims for the Franklin.

"The roads were for the most part under water, and counting gates, about 13 stops were made. Yet we maintained an average of 28 miles per hour throughout, including stops."

The "MIDCO" enters the tire field

THE first step in the creation of this tire was a thorough investigation to determine just what was required to make the most perfect tire that ingenuity could devise.

Certain well defined preferences were found among tire users, such as

1 They demanded results obtainable only through quality in every detail.

2 They wanted appearance as well as quality.

3 They desired liberal protection against defects.

4 They must have confidence in the organization behind the tire.

These facts definitely established, the "Midco" tire was designed and perfected.

This is how users' requirements were met:

1 "MIDCO" Tires are of highest quality material, hand-made by experts in the most modern equipped factory in America.

2 "MIDCO" black tread, with well-balanced anti-skid design, is in keeping with its high quality.

3 "MIDCO" guarantee protects the user at all times against defective workmanship or material.

4 "MIDCO" Tires are produced by the Mid-Continent Tire Manufacturing Co., Wichita, Kansas, and placed on the California market by Bradford-Fuller, Inc., who, together with the manufacturers, stand back of every transaction.

To the Dealer

—who understands the tire situation on the Coast today

—who knows the advantage of handling the best—

—who realizes the value of a stated dealer's policy guaranteeing his protection——who is looking toward the future in deciding questions of today—

Shows 'Em How to Keep Nice and Cool.

This is the Franklin which was driven up the long, steep twisting Mt. Wilson trail in low gear on a warm day last week without overheating, demonstrating the cooling qualities of the air-cooled engine.

CAR DOESN'T OVERHEAT.

It is a well-known fact among baseball fans that Frank Chance, the Perless Leader of the old Chicago Cubs and later of our own Angels is a hard driver of men—but he gets results, as witnessed by the four National League penants and two world's series which he won. It seems to run in the Chance family to demand and expect a great deal from their henchmen and automobiles.

The "P. L." as Frank is called by his admirers has a brother, A. D. Chance, who was recently in the market for an automobile, and thereby hangs a tale. It seems that Chance had his own ideas of a fitting test for a car's ability and that no ordinary demonstration would "sell" him. His theory was, that any car that could climb the steep and tortuous Mt. Wilson grade to the very top in low gear without overheating the engine was the car he was going to buy.

After trying several with unsuccessful results, he called at the salesroom of Ralph Hamlin, local agent for the Franklin, in a decidely skeptical frame of mind. He was met by W. A. Hoblit, a member of the Hamlin sales force who immediately offered to make good on Chance's offer. He filled the gas tank of his car and away they started. The Franklin's gear shift lever was placed in low at the foot of the grade and remained there until the air-cooled car reached the summit of the mountain, a mile in the air over about as stiff a climb as can be found anywhere.

Mr. Chance got out of the car at the half-way point and felt the hood of the car with his bare hand without noticing any undue heat and repeated his performance at the top with the same gratifying result. Needless to say he bought the car and is highly pleased with his selection.

BUYERS CHOOSE CAREFULLY.

Manufacturers of motor cars generally are predicting that the present great buying interest in automobiles is only the beginning of a vast and steady increase in the industry. At first it was feared that the boom might be only temporary. Foremost among the manufacturers who have steadfastly held that the great increase in automobile sales is but the forerunner of permanent prosperity is George Seidel, president of the Pilot Motor Car Company of Richmond, Ind. Mr. Seidel is one of the pioneer automobile men.

"In my belief," said Mr. Seidel, "the tremendous interest in automobiles is due to two factors—first, that we have a new and more satisfactory type of buyer to deal with, and, second, that manufacturers are going to the very limit to meet the buyer on his own solid ground. Mutual confidence and understanding is being established, and this can lead only to the best prospects in the future.

"The new public attitude toward motor cars is an outgrowth of former conditions. For the past two or three years prices of commodities of all sorts advanced so much in price that people were forced to become highly discriminating buyers in order to make ends meet. It became second nature to all of us to make every dollar purchase the most possible value. America entered into this new mode of living with characteristic determination to push it to the limit, and we succeeded. Fortunately, with the reversion to a peace basis of life when people began again to take greater interest in automobiles, this spirit of discrimination entered into their buying. Now motor car buyers no longer pay fancy prices simply for the name of a car, its reputation for speed, etc. They are buying cars as they bought food and clothing during the war—with a determination to get the utmost in motor car value for their money."

MIXES SPEED WITH BEAUTY.

The proof of the pudding is the eating, but as long as you cannot eat a motor car it is the performance of the car upon which you must be content to feast your brain. "Performance is the dope by which the publis decides the car best suited to the purchaser's requirements," says George Franklin, manager of Warner Motors, Inc., Southern California distributors for Mitchell six.

"Just to show the doubting ones that the Mitchell was built for speed along with a lot of other things that you hope to find in the car you buy, we went out and broke the stock car record from San Diego to Los Angeles, covering the 137 miles in only 3hrs and 26m.

"The most remarkable thing about this record is that it was made in the very middle of the day, when traffic is at the heaviest, and the car traveled from San Diego right through the downtown streets of Los Angeles to the corner of Broadway and First.

"There was no racing from city limits to city limits and calling it a record. It was a heartbreaking race to deliver pictures of the fleet to a Los Angeles newspaper ahead of all others that necessitated the dash, and the lowering of the record was only an incident.

"And now comes the new Mitchell, with all the sterling qualities and mechanical excellence of the car that made such a wonderful record last summer, but with a body that is away ahead of the times and marks a new milestone in ideas. The harmony expressed in the tilted lines of the car will win you as it has every other person who has looked the car over carefully and weighed the symmetry of design that is offered.

TRIP IS A REVELATION.

That "Touch of Tomorrow" with which a good many motorists are familiar was impressed in an unusually forceful manner upon a pair of Angelenos during a trip East from which they returned the past week.

A visit to Indianapolis and a trip of painstaking inspection through the plant of the Cole Motor Company, embracing a tour of the addition to the plant under construction, accomplished this and more for E. M. House, member of the Cole distributing firm of House and Meyer, and the concern's sales manager, H. L. Perkins.

"We never entertained any idea before our visit of the vast facilities, constructive talent and efficient manufacturing methods called for in such a concern as the plant behind the Cole motor car," Mr. House remarked.

The Cole was the first car to have the demountable rim as standard equipment. The one-man top was introduced in this country by the makers of this car. When Webb Jay conceived the idea of developing a vacuum gasoline feed for motor cars he turned for assistance to the Cole people.

"Not only was the Cole one of the first two American eight-cylinder cars, but in the very beginning embodied such advanced features of design as removable cylinder heads, counter-balanced crank shaft, shaft with integral counterweights, fork and blade rod construction and aluminum pistons.

"Another Cole innovation was the superheated manifold, from which has been developed the hot blast manifold of today. Then along came the Aero Eight with its manifold improvements and advantages, a motor car that gives a vital meaning to the slogan of its makers that "there's a touch of tomorrow in all Cole does today.'"

Messrs. House and Perkins were able on their trip to Indianapolis to accomplish a great deal along practical lines, evidence of which will be given in the increased number of cars shipped to the Coast for distribution through the parent house and its branches at Hollywood and in Phoenix, Ariz.

MAKE LONG TOUR TO BOOST MUSIC.

Just last month Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Wright of the Wright Music Publishing Company started eastward over the National Old Trails to travel over the entire United States with a new song just out. They are making every city of any importance and all stops between, and just the other day Harold L. Arnold, distributor of Hudson automobiles in Southern California, received word that the trip is coming along finely with their Hudson 6-40.

On a Hot Day the CHALMERS R[illegible] Cool with Hot Spot and Ram's-horn

THE reason the Chalmers runs cool on a hot day is the very same reason a Chalmers starts quickly and runs smoothly on a cold day. Service records show no complaints of over-heating in summer.

Such trouble in other cars comes from unevenness or the charges, "improperly digested fuel," and other matters often attributed to the raw, heavy, inferior gasoline you buy today.

Hot Spot transforms such "gas" into a "fine vapor cloud," just right for quick combustion.

Ram's-horn hurries it at a velocity of 100 miles an hour through "easy air bends" to the cylinders.

Thus follow power results that are smooth and even; and notably absent are those troubles that cause an engine to overheat, or burned bearings, or scored cylinders, or frequently fouled spark plugs and the like.

Engage a Chalmers owner in conversation about his car. He will tell you Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

Nothing Displeasing to the Artistic Eye Here.

This is the most recent arrival in the way of a Columbia Six sporty roadster and the blond lady who seems to be so happy is none other than Miss Alice Terry, Metro star. The combination is extremely easy to gaze upon.

SOLVE ARTISTIC PROBLEM.

A novel solution of the problem of carrying the spare tire on a roadster model has been reached by the makers of the Columbia six in their new two-passenger car. It consists of carrying the tire flat upon the slanting surface of the turtle back behind the seat of the roadster.

"In the touring car the natural way to carry the spare tire is vertically behind the rear seat," said Baldwin yesterday. "In the roadster, however, with the customary slanting turtle back the spare tire cannot be carried in this way without completely spoiling the lines of the car. This was so well recognized by many makers that in their roadster models they carried their spares in a flat compartment in the turtle back.

"Unfortunately, this solution virtually destroyed the luggage-carrying capacity of the car. This is something that cannot be well spared in the roadster, for it is a car that is used extensively by salesmen on long trips, by professional men and others who need the extra carrying capacity for luggage.

"The Columbia makers reached a happy solution when they placed the spare tire for the Columbia roadster flat upon the top of the turtle back. In this way the graceful lines of the car were not interfered with nor was the carrying capacity for luggage destroyed. There is ample room in the rear of the Columbia roadster for suit cases, grips or golf clubs. It is a model that has proved extremely popular since its recent appearance and our only difficulty has been to secure enough to meet the Southern California demand."

LIFE OF ENGINE DEPENDS ON OIL.

PROPER LUBRICATION WILL PUT YEARS ONTO AVERAGE POWER PLANT.

Having spent most of his life in the automobile business, Ralph Hamlin, who acts as local distributor for the famous Quaker State Certified Motor Oil is in a position to know the ways and wherefores of correct motor lubrication, with the result that he always wins the attention of his friends when he talks on this vital subject. In a recent discussion of the source of "motor ills" he spoke as follows:

"The life and efficiency of a gasoline engine depend on oil. But it is not enough to have perfect lubrication under normal conditions only. The engine needs an oil which protects it from damaging wear in all emergencies. An efficient scientifically refined oil will prevent breakdowns and costly repairs, resulting from hard driving, heavy roads, overheating and faulty engine adjustments. Why it takes the best oil to perform this service is clearly seen when the principles of lubrication are understood.

"A delicate oil film no thicker than paper must carry the moving parts which deliver the motor's energy. If this film gives way, the engine's effective power is dissipated in the heat and wear of destructive friction.

"The partial and temporary breaks in the oil film pass unnoticed, but they induce a surprising number of seemingly unrelated troubles and disorders. Experts have found that 75 per cent of the causes for lay-ups come from faulty lubrication. Scientific researches in this field support their conclusion. The statement, however, is not clearly explained to the car owner by his own experience. To the motorist breakdowns result from tangible and obvious causes—causes removed bodily by repairs or replacements. When the car takes the road again, no evidence of a hidden or uncorrected source of engine trouble is apparent to the satisfied owner. Yet experience has taught him to consider future lay-ups, or 'bad luck,' inevitable. He takes depreciation for granted, and hopes big replacements will make the engine new again."

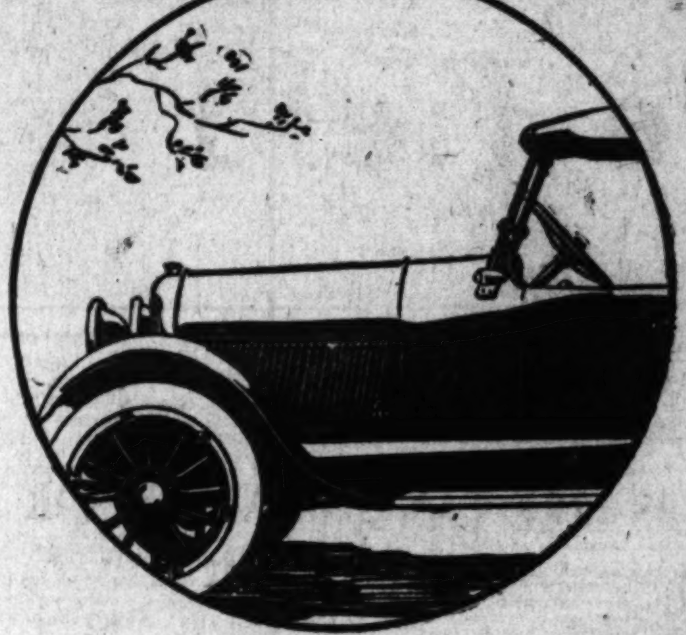
PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



THE automobile is doing much of the nation's work—and doing it better than any other form of transportation.

It brings men to their offices pleasantly and quickly. It enables them to keep appointments on the minute. It increases their efficiency—multiplies their usefulness and makes them broader, bigger, healthier citizens.

Business nowadays is traveling in high gear. Much of it is travelling in a smart, five-passenger PAIGE Glenbrook. Why not join the wide-awake, aggressive procession?

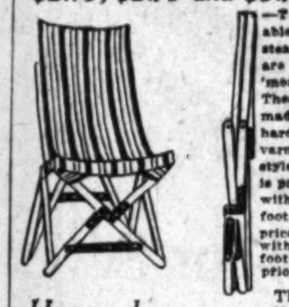
A REMARKABLE SALE OF NEW CAMP FURNITURE

Being a long-looked-for delayed shipment, just in time for filling your needs for summer camping and outing, and at most surprising prices.

Many new devices for convenience and comfort are to be found in this assemblage of camping supplies. Among those of particular interest, we mention:

Steamer Chairs, $2.15, $2.75 and $3.75



—The comfortable qualities of steamer chairs are known to most everyone. These chairs are made of selected hardwood, nicely varnished. The style illustrated is priced at $2.95; without arm or foot rests the price is $2.15; with arm and foot rests the price is $3.75.

Hammock Chairs, $2.50

—These chairs adjust themselves to the body and are therefore very restful. The seats are made of fancy ticking of an excellent quality. This style of chair may be had in two sizes; the larger size is 6 inches higher in the back and is priced at $3.00.

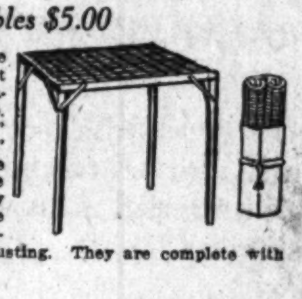
Porch Chairs $3.50

—These chairs are of the comfortable, inviting sort that adds an air of welcome to your porch. They are made of selected hardwood and are well varnished.

Telescope Folding Tables, $4.50

—These tables are of a style that is well adapted for camping purposes. In packing, the tops fold around the legs, making a very compact package. Opened, these tables are 26" wide x 39" long, with a height of 28"; folded, they measure 39"x5"x27".

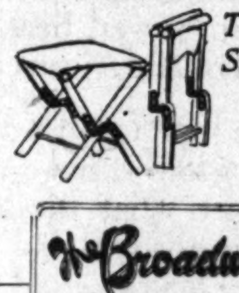
Telescope Roll Top Tables $5.00



These are among the lightest and most compact one-piece tables that are made. Opened they are 27" wide x 34" long x 27" high; folded, they are but 27"x9"x5". The woodwork is nicely varnished and the metal parts are galvanized to prevent rusting. They are complete with khaki carrying bags.

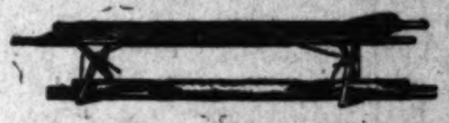
Camp Stools 80c

—The legs of these stools are braced with metal supports. The seats are of 10 oz. duck and are 15 inches square. The same style with the addition of back rests is priced at $1.15.



Tripod Stools 50c

—The seats are made of heavy brown duck and are large enough to be comfortable. They're well reinforced and are tucked at the corners.



Standard O.D. Army Cots $4.50

—These cots are covered with 12 oz. double filled O. D. duck and their weight is 18 lbs. Open, they are 78 inches long, 27 inches wide and 18 inches high; folded, they make a package 39"x7"x5".

Standard Telescope Cots $4.50

—When opened these cots are 72 inches long, 30 inches wide and 20 inches high; folded they make a package 34"x7"x5".

Giant Telescope Cots $7.50

—These cots are wonderfully comfortable for camping; they are in the same style as the standard cots, but made on a larger scale. When they are set up they are 76 inches long, 3 feet wide and 20 inches high. Weight 21 lbs.

Camp Blankets $4.95

—These blankets are of a generous size and contain a high percentage of wool. They're attractive, too, being of steel gray with borders of blue. They are of an excellent quality, that should outlast many camping seasons. The price is much less for this event.

Camp Wash Basins $1.50

—They're made of water proof duck on hardwood frames. These basins collapse accommodatingly to a size 2 inches square by 3 ft. long.

"Rotogravure"—A Costly Process

Both the equipment and the process for publishing a Rotogravure section are costly. THE TIMES is the only newspaper on the Pacific Coast which gives its readers one of these beautiful art supplements. And yet this is only one of many exclusive features in the SUNDAY TIMES.

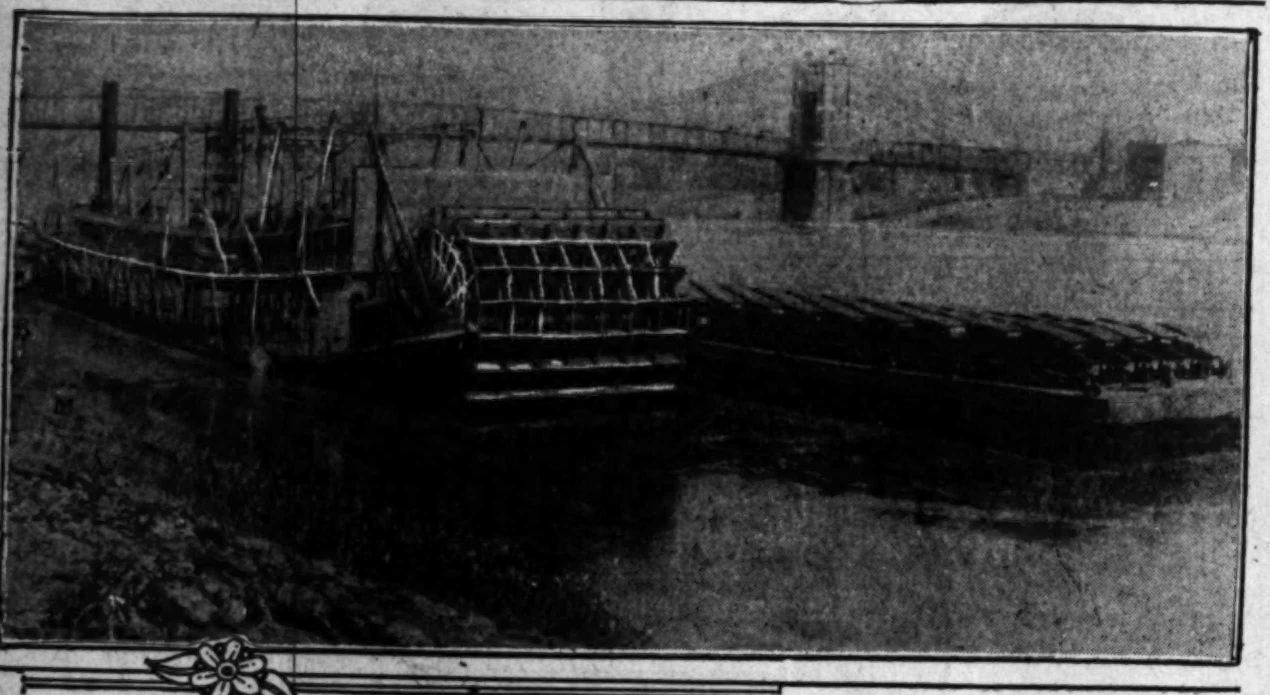
"When I Consider that people travel thousands of miles to view the scenes you print in your Rotogravure, I feel as though the SUNDAY TIMES took me on a journey each week."

—from a subscriber's letter.



Avoiding Traffic Troubles by the "Floataway" System.

This shows a barge full of new Maxwells, 150 of 'em, ready to be shoved down the Mississippi River from Cincinnati to Memphis. Only three days were required for the 500-mile trip, the giant stern-wheeler Sprague doing noble work, ably assisted by the downstream current. Harold L. Arnold suggests that with good-sized boats to trans-ship the cars at New Orleans, Southern California dealers could get deliveries via the Panama Canal.

TRUCK CLIMBS LIKE TANK.

While motion picture operators furiously cranked their cameras and hundreds of spectators looked on with interest and admiration, a huge Nash quad truck recently ploughed over an eight-foot wall of bricks and dirt with an ease that would put an army tank to shame.

The unique demonstration of climbing ability took place a few days ago at Columbus, O., where the Nash truck was forced to climb out of a deep excavation made for the basement of the new Y.M.C.A. Building in that city. As the immense four-wheeled-drive truck slowly, but unfalteringly made its way over the great pile of debris, its all-weather Goodyear tires giving splendid traction as they gripped the uncertain terrain, even unemotional movie and press photographers were moved to expression.

Moving ponderously over jagged rocks and through hub-deep mud, listing heavily to one side, with but three wheels giving traction and the other whirling impotently a foot off the ground, the quad conquered all obstacles and made its triumphant way to the upper street level, duplicating in performance, the feat of an army caterpillar tank.

"Never saw an army tank beat that stunt and I've snapped many in the A.E.F.," admiringly ejaculated one of the photographers. His pal nodded assent as he turned his cap around and folded the tripod of his camera, ready for his next assignment.

The Younger Generation.

"The main difference 'twixt me an' my boy Jim," explained a Kansas farmer, "is that when I put in a day at work I don't feel like runnin' 'round nights, and when Jim puts in a night runnin' 'round he don't feel much like workin' days."—[Boston Transcript.

LABELS FOR NEW DRIVERS.

"Some genius in New York City recently proposed a plan to make the highways safe for the motorists during the period of heavy summer traffic. It was his suggestion that drivers just learning to operate their cars should fasten a plain green placard, about eight to ten inches square to the front and rear of their cars, so that experienced motorists might be warned that they were meeting or passing an inexperienced man, and thereby give him a wider berth," says C. W. McKelvey of the McKelvey Motor Sales Company, Southern California and Arizona distributors for the Liberty six.

"It is only natural that the man or woman who is just learning to drive should be much more apt to do the wrong thing at the wrong time, forget to signal when confronted with the responsibility of making a turn, and perform various other violations of the rules of the road. I'm inclined to think that the idea might prove a relief to the experienced drivers, should it ever come into general use. Its sponsor argued that the new drivers would be so eager to get the green placard off their cars that they would exert every possible effort to learn to drive skilfully in the shortest possible time.

"I'm very much afraid, though, that such a plan would never be adopted voluntarily by the new drivers. When a man is first learning to drive he feels as though everybody on the street was staring at him anyhow, and the idea of advertising his inexperience with a green placard I know would never make a hit with the green driver, even though it might make the period of his learning somewhat safer."

EXPLAINS HOW GAS OPERATES.

Why You Pull Out the Choker in the Morning.

Modern Fuel is Complicated Stuff to Handle.

Like a Mixture of Kindling, Cordwood and Coal.

Did you ever stop to figure out just why you have to pull out the choke button on the dash when you start your motor in the morning? You know, of course, that it is to give a richer mixture to the carburetor during the first few moments of operation, but perhaps you never considered the matter any further than that.

"The richer mixture helps your motor start because our modern fuel may be likened to a mixture of kindling, cord wood and lump coal," says Gilbert Woodill, manager of the Western Motors Company, Kissel distributors for California. "It is composed of a small portion which is highly volatile, which is the equivalent of the kindling, that of medium explosiveness, or the cord wood, and the heavy particles which in our comparison equal the coal lumps.

"When you start your motor in the morning when it is cold a normal mixture will not ignite because there is not a sufficient quantity of the kindling, or volatile portion drawn in with the normal mixture to mix with the air and burn when the motor is cold. To get enough kindling you have to enrich the mixture with a far greater proportion of gasoline than you normally need after the motor is once warmed up.

"Once the motor reaches a temperature of 170 deg. or thereabouts the heat of the motor makes the heavier portions of the fuel ignite and burn readily. It is, to carry our analogy further, like having a bed of coals established in the fireplace. Kindling is no longer needed—the heavy fuel burns readily.

"Too many motorists are careless about leaving their choke button out longer than is necessary. Not only do they waste fuel by this practice, but work harm to their motors. The unburned fuel is apt to foul spark plugs, or collect on the cylinder walls and work past the pistons.

"The Kissel designers took great pains to create a motor that should quickly reach the most efficient operating temperature. The thermostatic device governing the water circulation is the surest, quickest means of attaining that end, and as a consequence this feature is a part of Kissel design. It reduces to a minimum the time necessary to warm up the motor, and makes it necessary to use a rich mixture in starting for the briefest permissible time."

SIMPLE TESTS FOR GASOLINE PURITY.

The motorist who wants to test his gasoline for purity may find the following suggestion useful. Put some gasoline in a bottle and add a little concentrated sulphuric acid. Shake the bottle well at intervals for three or four hours. The acid will form a distinct layer or stratum, drawing into itself all the impurities in the fuel, so that the degree of discoloration found in the acid will be a measure of the purity of the gasoline. A useful test to determine whether gasoline has corrosive properties is to drop in the fluid a bit of copper. If the copper turns blue or green the assumption is that the gasoline contains corrosive elements.

GREAT EVENT IS PROMISED.

Pike's Peak Hill Climb Will be Staged Again.

Three Different Classes of Machines Entered.

Penrose Trophy for Best Time by Any Entrant.

BY BRENT T. HARDING.

What promises to be the most thrilling automobile event ever staged in the United States is the race to be held by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce, a rivival of the Pike's Peak hill climb dated for September 6. Not only will some of the world's greatest drivers compete for the priceless Penrose trophy but a race will be staged for amateur drivers which should furnish some sensational spills for the sport loving fans who never seem satisfied unless some driver or car ends with a wreck.

The race will be staged on the Pike's Peak highway starting at Crystal Creek bridge, climbing to an altitude of 14,109 feet. From the beginning to the end, death will ride with each driver as he negotiates many torturous curves of the hairpin, jack-knife variety with a yawning chasm thousands of feet deep at his side. Forests of clouds must be penetrated which call for every bit of nerve that the speed demon may possess.

ward Newport where they are trying to divert the Santa Ana River and make the darn thing behave by building a couple of jetties to it out into the ocean, a White two-ton truck has been pressed into service to switch the 100,000-pound cars of rock out and dump them the sea. The truck does the work much more efficiently than a full-sized switch engine.

DOES WORK OF A LOCOMOTIVE.

Two-Ton Truck Scores Well as Pinch-Hitter.

Switches Tremendous Loads of Rock Around.

Big Engineering Job is Now Well Under Way.

The diversion of a river from its original course is a large-sized job. In the case of the Santa Ana River it was found that because of the frequency of the flooding of the country adjacent to its banks it was necessary to overcome in some manner the periodical outpouring of silt into the Orange County Harbor, in order that proper harbor facilities might not be impeded. So the needed solution to the problem was worked through the co-operation of the United States government, the Orange County Harbor Commission and other bodies interested in the development of the harbor. This solution took the form of the diversion of the river at Santiago, located between Huntington and Newport beaches.

In diverting this river into the Pacific Ocean one of the first essentials was the building of a breakwater where the new course of the river is to be located. The contract for the building of the necessary breakwater was placed with the W. M. Ledbetter Company of Los Angeles and operations began some months ago. Upon taking over the contract the Ledbetter company found it necessary to transport large quantities of heavy stone with which to make the breakwater and then to arrange to transfer the loads from the railroad siding out to the jetty construction. These loads involved the movement of 100,000-pound freight cars, which on the average carry stone loads of from 80,000 to 90,000 pounds each.

It was determined that the most economical means of accomplishing this latter object was the employment of a White two-ton truck fitted with flanged wheels to operate upon regular standard gauge track, so that the cars could be handled off the railroad siding onto the spur tracks leading out to the jetty. This was done and a ready solution to a somewhat knotty transport problem was effected. In regular daily service in this work this two-ton White has moved the entire material for the construction of this breakwater.

The truck performs every item of service required of any means of transport, handling the heavy loads around an 18 deg. curve in the track, which has a constant grade rising at the rate of one inch for every sixteen feet. The total movement from the railroad siding to the jetty derrick is about 300 yards.

With the truck functioning as a switch engine, it is but a matter of opening the throttle and the cars are in movement; there is no necessity for keeping up steam and at the completion of the job, it is but a matter of changing the flanged wheel equipment for the regular type and the truck is ready to take up its duties as an every-day hauling proposition.

Japan's Man-Faced Crab.

One of the most singular looking creatures that ever walked the earth or "swam the waters under the earth" is the man-faced crab of Japan. Its body is scarcely an inch in length, yet the head is filled with a face which is the counterpart of a Chinese coolie—a veritable missing link, with eyes, nose and mouth all clearly defined.—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

TAXICABS SET RECORDS.

Remarkable Figures Rolled Up by Fleet Operated by Local Concern.

While one of the things that makes this world a pleasant place to live in is the automobile, another that makes it equally unpleasant is a bill for automobile repairs. Yet, if the individual motor car owner would follow the example set by firms who operate large fleets of motor cars and trucks, he would find the unwelcome statements arriving with much less frequency, if at all. What one Los Angeles firm has accomplished by employing an "efficiency system" in the operation of its motor fleet affords an excellent illustration.

The Los Angeles Transfer Company maintains, besides its motor vans, a fleet of taxicabs. Fifteen of these are Dodges, purchased over a year ago from the Albertson Motor Company, and, although they have already rolled up an average mileage of 35,000 miles, not one of them has been torn down for repairs; decarbonization and grinding of valves excepted. Nothwithstanding the fact that the Dodge taxis are driven continually in the congested downtown district, their average gasoline consumption is better than fifteen miles to the gallon.

Now, while the sturdy quality of the car is undoubtedly greatly responsible for this unusual record of the Dodge fleet, the methods employed by the Los Angeles Transfer Company in the care of its cars are not to be overlooked. Should you want it, you could go into the company's garage and get a complete history of any car in its service. Its mileage, consumption of gasoline and oil, the service given by its tires, and its characteristics in general. In this manner the company knows exactly what each car can do, and when it begins to fall behind its mark, sets about to remedy the trouble before anything serious develops.

How about you? Do you check your car's fuel consumption? Do you recall when you last inspected its grease cups. In short, have you put your car on an efficency basis? A well-built mechanism in the first place, together with conscientious care, explains the consistent record of the Dodge fleet in staying out of the repair shop.

EQUIPMENT ON CAR IS MOST COMPLETE.

Since the arrival of the new Ferris six it has been the center of an admiring throng of motor fans at the Pico Motors Company, where this beautiful car is on display. The new Ferris six is very completely equipped. Included among the accessories which are not usually found on other motor cars, are: a high-grade eight-day clock, motor driven horn, tool kit with special wrenches, a jack, a power driven air compressor with air hose and gauge, a high class speedometer, oil pressure gauge, gasoline gauge, motometer, cigar lighter, wheel carrier and extra wheel, volt-ammeter, ignition lock, cutout switch, foot rail and robe rail, license tag holder, windshield cleaner, tire repair kit, carburetor dash adjustor, magnetic starting switch, cowl lamp, starting crank, non-rattling front and rear bumpers built integral with frame, rear vision mirror on fender, and luggage carrier in rear of body.

BARNEY OLDFIELD TIRES

Will Win For You

"Here is a tire you can trust—a better tire than any other manufacturer has ever built," Barney Oldfield told Gaston Chevrolet before the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Gaston Chevrolet trusted Barney Oldfield.

So he chose Oldfield Tires, and became the first driver in history to win this, the world's greatest race, without a tire change.

In his 500-mile flight over the rough bricks at 88.55 miles an hour, Gaston Chevrolet's tires resisted a degree of wear fully equal to that of 20,000 miles of ordinary running. Yet they finished in condition for many more miles of cruel competition.

A man whom his friends really trust, deserves your faith, too.

Trust Barney Oldfield!

Trust Oldfield Tires to banish tire troubles for you as they did for Gaston Chevrolet.

A Tribute

There is a group of enviable men who, through years of honest devotion to the highest ideals of our great industry, have acquired for the cars which they produce a profound respect which is shared by thousands of good people who discern in these cars something of the character and ideals of the men who make them.

This respect and appreciation for work honestly done goes far beyond all considerations of price or mechanical design, and acquires deeper significance when we witness the loyalty and pride of ownership which gives certain cars unquestioned leadership in the fields they occupy.

It is our earnest hope that the men of the Jordan organization will be guided for all time by the admirable example of these intelligent and sincere men.

SIMPLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SAVING GASOLINE.

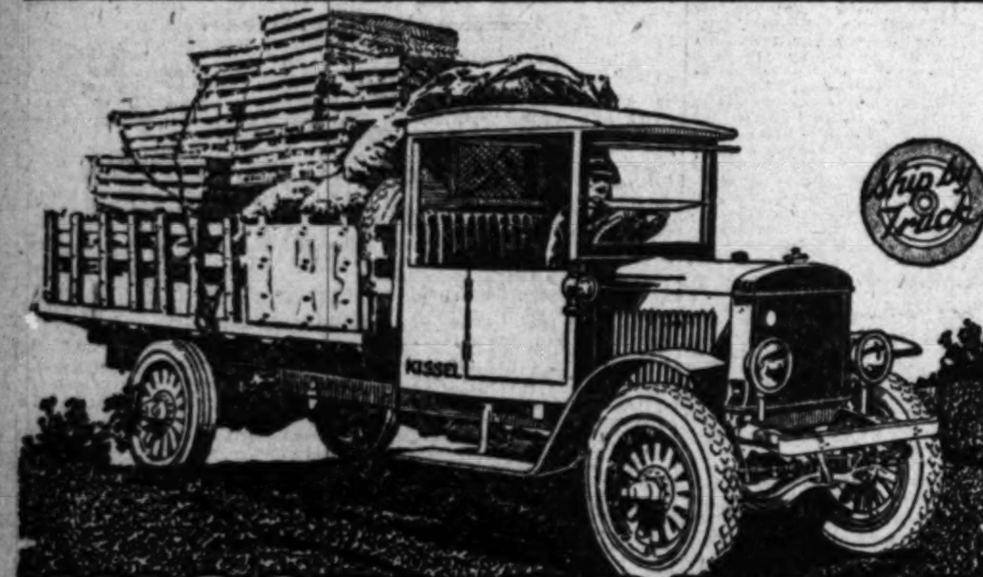
POINTS WHICH MOTORISTS CAN BENEFIT BY IN CUTTING DOWN COSTS.

Having considered the matter from all angles, R. T. Mesker of the General Service Company, distributors for Float-a-Ford shock absorbers, is of the opinion that the only remedy for the present acute shortage of gasoline is for every motorist to use his car as little as possible, to shut off the throttle when the car is not in motion and to equip his cars with accessories that tend to make the work of the car less laborious.

By a strict adherence to these simple suggestions, Mesker believes that a large amount of the precious fluid can be saved and release a corresponding amount for essential industries.

WASHING SODA WILL CLEAR OUT RADIATOR.

One of the simplest and most efficient methods of cleansing the radiator of the scale which forms in it is to fill the water system with a strong solution of washing soda and hot water, running the engine for about fifteen minutes. The soda solution is then drained out of the system and the scale will come with it. Do not race the engine while carrying out this process.



KISSEL TRUCKS

WITH today's transportation era presenting new obstacles, far sighted business-men are investing in the right sized and most adaptable motor trucks for their business requirements.

Being designed in five different sizes to answer every transportation demand, Kissel Trucks with the Kissel-built motor and other Kissel-built units, meet the most exacting requirements in a highly efficient manner.

The business of our organization is to apply motor truck engineering principles to your business. Our policy in performing these functions is to meet problems with confidence.

MOTOR VEHICLE CREDITS.

No Disposition to Discriminate Against Paper on Trucks or Cars.

The subject of the financial credit as relating to motor vehicles is at this time one of the most important confronting the entire industry. Because of the complex situation taht exists throughout the country, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has conducted quite an extensive investigation to ascertain the position taken by banking interests.

CONFUSION EXISTS.

It is said that in banking circles some confusion exists as to the proper interpretation of statements issued by the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, D. C. Each motor car distributor and dealer knows that the trade is vitally affected by any banking restrictions, and as a consequence there is general interest in the statement issued by F. W. Fenn, secretary of the Motor Truck Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Fenn's statement follows:

"(1.) At the general meeting of the motor truck manufacturers in New York, June 3, it was shown that in the present credit situation, there exists no disposition on the part of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, nor the Federal reserve banks in various parts of the country, nor banking houses generally, to discriminate against paper taken in part payment of motor trucks. It must be understood, however, that wherever the credit situation is strained, resulting in general curtailment of credit, the motor truck business, in common with other equally essential industries, must be prepared to submit to its share of such credit restriction.

"(2.) The only point raised by banks in connection with the truck business, is the time given for purchase. There is an apparent disposition by banks, exercising through discount companies and through the dealers, to insist that deferred payments on trucks do not run beyond ten or twelve months, and that if possible, the first payment be at least one-third of the purchase price.

PRIME ESSENTIAL.

"(3.) The motor truck is now generally looked upon by the banking interests of the country, perhaps especially so since the advent of the present railroad demoralization, as a prime essential in the distribution of goods, and at no previous time in its history has the value of the motor truck been so generally recognized and never before has so important a place been awarded it in the transportation scheme of the country as at present.

"(4.) The continued production of motor trucks would seem to rank equally in importance with the building of railroad cars—the railroad caring for the longer, and the motor truck for the shorter haul, each handling the traffic for which it is best adapted.

OFFICIAL ATTITUDE.

"(5.) The attitude of official Washington toward the motor truck appears to be especially favorable. Secretary of War Baker, recently conferred with the Council of National Defense with a view of ascertaining in what manner the motor trucks owned by the government could be of service in the present transportation crisis.

"(6.) The Interstate Commerce Commission, recognizing the importance of the motor truck, has recommended that the railroads supplement their activities by the use of trucks."

GRAPHITE CAN BE USED IN MOTORS.

There seems to be a general belief among motor-car owners that graphite has its application only as a lubricant for gears, joints, etc., and not at all for the motor. This idea is absolutely erroneous; graphite is an excellent lubricant for use in the motor, when the flake form, the proper one, is used in conjunction with the regular lubricant. There are certain forms of lubricant which employ graphite in various combinations with oils and these often are excellent for the motor, the graphite tending to fill minute depressions in the metal.

Chess and Checker Headquarters, 212-214 Higgins Building. All chess and checker players invited to join. For further information, see or write the secretary, D. H. Bowes, at the clubrooms.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

AMONG THE FANS.

Peter H. Feagon, a well-known checkerist of St. Louis, Mo., was in the city the first part of the week and was a welcome visitor at the clubrooms. He thought the Los Angeles "bunch" a tough proposition, and the boys here who had the pleasure of playing with Mr. Feagon, have the same to say of him.

The boys have been showing considerable interest at the clubrooms lately, but none have yet announced definite plans of attending the fourth American tourney, which is to be held August 8 to 15 at Cedar Point, Ohio.

The numbers to games last week were omitted. Mark them 912 and 913.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 914.
"Laird and Lady."

The following game, contributed by J. Jack, was originally published in the Tribune Farmer by Louis Ginsberg of Brooklyn, to correct a game played between the late Dr. Schaefer and Andrew Lowry. The game was receiving considerable attention by Messrs. Ginsberg, Wheeler and J. Jack in the Tribune column at the time of its suspension. The play published, along with some additional analysis by J. Jack, is given below. The play from note "g" to the end should all be credited to Mr. Jack.

MOTOR HEADS ALARMED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, June 18.—Detroit automobile plant heads are worrying over the exodus of thousands of workingmen to other towns.

MANY ON MOVE.

According to reports which every moving van and storage house operator must file with the police department, families have been leaving Detroit in March, April and May at the rate of 500 a month. These people moved directly out of the city. During the same period 1746 families moved from their homes into storage. According to the storage companies, who ask all persons storing furniture to leave their future address, fully 80 per cent of those storing their furniture have left the city, the remaining 20 per cent have stored their goods in order to "double up" with another family and thus split the high rental or have been obliged to leave their homes and store their goods until another home is available.

Eighty per cent of 1746 is 1396, which added to the 1300 who have moved out makes a total of approximately 2896 families who have left since March. Combining these figures with the single workers who have gone to other cities in the same length of time, it is estimated that approximately 26,480 persons, or 8826 families have left the city since March 1. A total influx of 11,808 persons is recorded, as compared with the exodus of 26,480, or a direct loss of 14,672.

SERIOUS PROBLEM.

It is apparent that conditions in Detroit have reached the point which is forcing workingmen out of the city, and unless there is a decided relief from the high rental charges and an increase in the erection of new homes for the workers, the situation will become a problem that will take months to solve. Also curtailment of output has deprived 25,000 workers of their jobs and there are approximately 10,000 building trades employees on strike. With 30,000 men idle in addition to the 15,000 floaters who never work steadily, there is more unemployment in Detroit today than at any time in two years.

COMPANY REORGANIZED.

An announcement of interest to the automotive industry of Los Angeles and Southern California, is the reorganization of the Boulevard Motors, Southern California and Arizona distributors of the Dorris and Templar cars, which was effected last week.

The concern's new business title is the Boulevard Motors Corporation, with the following officers: Albert J. Russell, president; Leland S. Foulke, vice-president and general manager, and Lewis M. Foulke, secretary and treasurer. Under this arrangement the company will distribute exclusively the Templar in its designated territory. The Dorris will be distributed in the same territory under the name of A. J. Russell.

A lease of the property at 1246-48 South Flower street has been consummated, where the concern will have its offices, salesroom and service department. The present location, 1242-44 South Flower street will be retained by Russell for his offices, salesroom and service department.

"The excellent record made by Mr. Foulke as the Pasadena agent for the Templar and Dorris had a great deal to do with the change. He is aggressive, knows automobiles mechanically and is a very capable business man. His brother, now associated with us, recently came to Southern California from the northern part of the State where the Foulke family has very extensive interests. He resigned as chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Siskiyou county to enter this business. He is also very capable and a hard worker. Other business interests made it necessary that I divide some of this responsibility which has been steadily increasing with the growing popularity of the Dorris and Templar cars," stated Russell.

Russell left last Friday for an extended trip through the East, and while away he will visit both the Dorris and Templar factories, and it is his hope that he will be able to secure a substantial increase in the allotments from both factories.

COMING BACK FROM LONG EASTERN STAY.

J. V. Baldwin, president of the local distributing agency for the Saxon and Columbia lines, is expected home from Detroit today. Mr. Baldwin has spent the past few months in Detroit in the effort to hasten shipments of cars to the Pacific Coast. He has virtually recovered from the effects of the operation he recently underwent in Detroit.

GYPSY TOUR IS A SUCCESS.

The Los Angeles Motorcycle Club has been receiving congratulations and expressions of appreciation from motorcyclists and friends of the industry, this week on the success of last Sunday's Gypsy Tour to Glenn Ranch, in which sixty-six riders competed and won medals for completing the run. Eighty-three persons, including side-car passengers, went on the outing.

The strength of Los Angeles's first participation in this annual national event of the motorcycle world, is accounted for by the strong spirit of co-operation shown by club members, dealers and tire companies in preparing for the event. Goodyear representatives, including P. A. Moulton and G. S. Sooy of the local factory branch and C. J. Ernst of the factory motorcycle tire department, were active in assisting Tourmaster Otis E. Hackett, who was in charge of the run.

The program of sports staged at Glenn ranch in the afternoon, not only entertained the riders and their passengers, but provided amusement for guests of the ranch, including a reunion gathering of Southern California Masonic Past Masters, who were impressed by the spirited contests of the local sportsmen.

Wells Bennett was the victor in the slow race, winning the third heat from Victor Dresser. The latter came back, however, in the next event, the plank riding contest, which he won handily. Hank Gatitan and Glen Copeland were the winners in the watermelon and pie-eating contests, respectively, while Maynard Thompson carried off first honors in the egg-picking contest, by picking up three eggs from the ground in rapid succession without spilling his motorcycle. Gene Robinson, Frank Whelan and Glen Copeland duplicated Thompson's record, but the latter won on the toss.

The prizes included Goodyear motorcycle tubes, tire putty outfit, rim cut patches, tire plasters, tube repair kits, locks, spotlights and candy.

Katie's Answer Ready.

A Eureka girl was putting on some decorations in a church when the minister happened to look in, relates the Herald. Seeing some tacks lying about the pulpit, he said: "You should not leave the tacks there, Katie. Now what would happen if I were to step on one in the middle of the sermon next Sunday?" "Oh, well," said Katie, "there would be one point you wouldn't linger on long, anyway."—[Kansas City Star.

TELLS HOW TO STAY OUT OF THE BASTILE.

SOME TIMELY ADVICE ON AVOIDING TROUBLE BY A VETERAN CAR DRIVER.

If you want to make all motor rides a complete success and avoid all accidents, or at least any that might be caused by your negligence, all you have to do is to follow the set of dont's laid down by Hal Baker of the Western Auto Supply Agency of this city. Hal says that these rules are the result of long and careful study on his part, and he is passing them on to others in the hope that they may do something to help motoring and all conditions pertaining to it:

Don't fail to give all other vehicles their share of the road under all conditions.

Don't fail to give the proper signals when you are stopping, turning or changing the course of your machine.

Don't drive at night without lights.

Don't pass any vehicle at an intersection.

Don't pass any vehicle at an intersection unless the road ahead is clear for at least a hundred yards.

Don't pass street cars at a speed exceeding ten miles per hour.

Don't exceed speed limits.

Don't ever operate a car unless the registration certificate, properly signed, is displayed in the driver's compartment.

Don't ever operate a car unless you have a driver's license in your possession.

Don't carry luggage so that it extends more than twelve inches to the left side.

Don't fail to have your headlights properly adjusted according to the law.

Don't fail to have a tail light lamp at night.

Don't use a spotlight that violates the law.

Don't fail to give aid in case of accident.

Don't violate the law and you won't get into trouble.

TRACTOR IS ADDED TO THEIR LINE NOW.

Fahy-Atterbury Company, Ford dealers, have just received the word from the Ford Motor Company that they have been appointed agents for the Fordson tractor. This new appointment will make it possible for this Ford agency to deliver any product Henry Ford produces, which is a fitting culmination for a concern that have made such a remarkable sales record and have such an enviable reputation for maintaining one of the most completely equipped Ford service stations.

CADILLAC

THE TRUTH THAT EMBODIES ALL TRUTH

People are still going about with their eyes eagerly alight, hunting for the honest man and the honest product.

When that search is rewarded, nothing but betrayal can break or lessen their allegiance.

It has been pathetically true from the beginning of time, that men admire honor in others even when they have smirched it in themselves.

Humanity may be a million years old in point of time, but it is as young as this morning's sun in its pursuit of the ideal.

After two thousand years of disappointment and disillusion, the eternal verities and the eternal values still prevail.

The elemental truths are still true; the man whose word is good is still the secret hero of our inmost hearts.

We smile, perhaps, at the spectacular triumph of the trickster; but while we smile, we hate the trick by which he filched that sham success.

Even in an era of unbridled extravagance, when, on the surface, men appear to have lost all sense of proportion, that which is sound, and good, and true, is more admired, and more desired, than ever.

In such feverish times, the mediocre and the meretricious only seem to be admitted to equality with that which is worthy, because they fall heir to the overflow which excellence is unable to supply.

The process of discrimination between the sham and the solid, the superficial and the substantial, goes on, just as before, without interruption.

That which is unworthy carries its own punishment, and its own penalty—its true character is inevitably disclosed in due time, even though a temporary prosperity comes to it from the caprice of the unthinking.

When 'the tumult and the shouting' dies down, the strong man, the strong institution, the true artist, and the true workman, in any and every vocation, is more solidly entrenched than ever.

Even though it be surrounded, and seemingly obscured by sham and pretense, nothing in this world is discovered so surely as solid merit.

Nothing stands out so strikingly, by way of contrast, as genuineness and genius.

No special and painstaking effort of hand or heart, or brain or brawn, that goes to the building of something superior, is ever wasted.

Cheapness and compromise, substitution and surrender—these, in the long run, are the real sources of waste.'

The unceasing search of the mass of mankind for that which is good and enduring—this is the only law of supply and demand with which the superior craftsman need concern himself.

Let him dedicate his life to the satisfaction of this restless hunger of the human heart, and he can, if he will, remove himself beyond the reach of rivalry.

This is the truth that embodies all truth; this is the truth that makes men free.

TRAP GUN AND ROD

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the thirty-seventh of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

The jungles of the tropics! For several weeks I had been residing in a bamboo village near Zapaquera, Colombia, South America, a primitive section, based upon Nature's environments. The natives were timid, shy and diffident, having the minds of children, remaining aloof from strangers (especially whites) until confidence has been established, after which they become most loyal and faithful. Upon my arrival, I organized a hunting party of seven well-posted native hunters, who were boat experts, trail finders, gun-carriers and all-around outdoor guides and luggage toters. This cavalcade, once organized, remained in my employ during my sojourn. Handling their badly depreciated currency in payment for services removed me from any accusation of being a spendthrift.

English traders came into that section, exchanging bright flashy articles—mirrors, beads, cheap ammunition and obsolete guns for hides, alligator skins, tobacco, reed-woven articles, cocoanuts and minerals. My modern guns and automatic pistols were a continuous source of wonder. Wing shooting they had never seen attempted and my prowess in that direction was a revelation. My bushmen recounted the shots they had seen me make afield on moving objects, and many were the applications from outsiders to accompany us, as it was their desire to see and confirm the stories of wonderful shooting. One fact I noticed, when a stray native was permitted to join my outfit, he immediately became, by native assignment, the "hewer of wood and carrier of water" for our party. It soon became evident to me, they had "joined out" not as a matter of curiosity, but to industriously participate in our culinary department. We had two canoes about twenty-five feet long—hewn from logs—called by the natives ulas. The boat I occupied was fitted with a comfortable chair, located well forward in the canoe, that I might miss no opportunity to shoot. They were most expert boatmen, either with paddle or punt pole, never grew weary or irritable, priding themselves upon the noiseless manner in which they could propel a ula through the water, with scarcely a ripple. When headed for home, the game question sidetracked, they would break into a chant in their native tongue, which had the same effect as stepping on the accelerator, paddles were plied much more rapidly; the louder they sang and wailed, the faster our canoe was driven. This uncanny chant imbued me with the "Willies." My boatmen were of a Colorado Maduro shade, with muscles like steel standing out in knots as paddles were applied. Rather short of stature, loyal, with happy dispositions, they were always industrious in my behalf. Married by the common law and consent route, they were never expected home until their wives saw them coming. With consorts, children and dogs, they travel from State to State without giving the Mann Act passing consideration.

Much of my time was devoted to hunting alligators and crocodiles, many being found in adjacent bayous. It is impossible to roam in the jungles without meeting up with funny incidents. We entered a bayou, I was seated in the bow of our ula, boat was skirting the shore, and we were on the lookout for saurians who were out taking a sun bath. As we turned a point I located an especially large one nestling in the overhanging moss at the foot of a tree, with just the point of his nose exposed. It was impossible to get a favorable position for a finishing shot. When directly in front of his lair, it was up to me to get busy and guess out a vulnerable point of his anatomy. When my rifle cracked, it only served to stir up the animal, as did the additional shots fired. He rushed toward the water, heading directly toward our canoe. I landed another bullet into his system which failed to even slow him up. On he came; was it an attack or an escape? He was swimming high in the water. Ducking under our canoe, he turned us turtle in the bat of on eye. Would he return to finish a well-started job or continue into deeper water? Coming to the surface, I immediately headed for the shore, ignoring my companions who were a close second in the race. We then gathered for conference. The alligator had escaped, guns and ammunition were resting on the bottom, soon to be rescued by my boatmen, who were all expert "water rats," diving with eyes wide open. It is amusing to tell at this writing, but occasioned a "cold sweat" at the happening. The following day the alligator came to the surface, dead. He was skinned, teeth extracted, his carcass then dedicated to the awaiting vultures, who soon properly polished his bones. The end of a perfect day.

Question: Do you advise women to learn to shoot a gun? If so, why and where would I go to be taught? What would a course in shooting cost?

(Indianapolis, Ind.)

MRS. D. T. R.

Answer: Emphatically yes. Every woman should know how to handle firearms. It is to their advantage from many angles. To know how to handle a gun allays fear and establishes a personal confidence. It is frequently the case that a woman, without firing a shot, could intimidate marauders, if she knew how to accurately shoot a gun or even handle one gracefully, convincing her assailants of their danger. There will be no expense attached to instruction in shooting. If you will visit any gun club you will find members who will be willing to devote the time and give you the benefit of their experience. At the same time, you will be accorded a most cordial welcome from members of both sexes. When you have learned how to load and handle a gun, you will then be taught to shoot with accuracy. You are then a candidate for the great outdoors, afield and astream. In this line of sport you will meet only those who have graduated into the postgraduate class of good fellowship. Try it and become convinced.

Q.: Do you think two sights on a shotgun are of value in shooting at the trap? I see a great many good shots have adopted them and would like to know your opinion. All shooters here read your articles.

(Canton, O.)

A.: The only possible utility of a second or rear sight is for aligning purposes and to keep the shooter from firing when his gun is in a twist. As a matter of fact, if both sights were removed from your gun without your knowledge, you would go on shooting accurately. It is the flying object you watch, not the sights on your gun, a fact which has been frequently demonstrated in the past.

TOM DONOHUE SELLS CARS.

Introducing a brand new automobile to Southern California, Tom Donohue, a well-known athlete and clubman has taken the distribution of the Beggs Six and Lorraine motor cars. These cars are handled in California and Nevada by the Northern California Motor Car Company, of which V. J. Cox is president. The Beggs Six is built by the Beggs factory at Kansas City, an established manufacturing concern, and the Beggs Arrow has been soaring up and down the California roads for the past few weeks making a number of fine records for speed and economy. The low fuel consumption is one of the biggest talking points of the Beggs, according to Mr. Donohue although as a hill-climber the car has made an enviable reputation in the Middle West. Mr. Donohue's new headquarters are at 1701 West Seventh street. He has been affiliated with the Hubbard Auto Sales Company for the past fourteen months.

LIGHT FOUR WILL BE PUT ON MARKET.

SLEEVE VALVE PRODUCT PROMISES TO OUTSELL ITS BIG BROTHER.

Though production of the four-cylinder R. & V. Knight models has been delayed somewhat by the big demand for the six-cylinder cars, the first of the smaller machines will leave the factory within a few weeks, according to H. Conley, assistant superintendent of service of the Root & Van Dervoort Engineering Company, who was a recent visitor at the headquarters of the W. B. Conditt Company, local R. & V. Knight distributors. Conley, who assisted in the engineering work on the new Knight fours, told Conditt that he was highly enthusiastic over their performance in the hands of the engineering department.

"In appearance, they are decidedly similar to the six-cylinder models, but are of course, smaller," Conley told Conditt. "The unusually long-stroke motor that has been developed for them, and the big clearance provided by their sleeve-valve ports, makes them a really remarkable performer for a four-cylinder car. Delay in getting bodies has been one of the factors that has held up production, but that had been overcome about the time I left the factory, and I think that the first shipment should reach California within sixty days."

Out of the Church Zone.

In Piscataquis County, Me., out of 4734 families there are 2705 who are nonchurch-going. Of these, 225 live in places where there is no church. There are 1487 children between 4 and 18 years of age who attend no Sunday-school, and ninety-two Protestant families confessed to have no Bible.—[Indianapolis News.

FINDING POSITIVE WIRE OF SYSTEM.

When charging terminals are not marked plus and minus to indicate the positive and negative sides the following method may be used to determine the polarity. Attach both sides of the circuit to small lead plates and place these plates in a tumbler nearly filled with battery solution or electrolyte. Turn on the current and after three minutes remove the plates. The one which shows brown discoloration is attached to the positive side.

BELIEVE MOST OF THE RUSH IS OVER.

It is predicted that the unprecedented rush to the Yosemite that has been on since the Wawona Road was opened to automobile travel early in May, is about over and that normal conditions will prevail at the resorts there in the way of accommodations for the remainder of the season. The number of people who entered the park during May and June by auto placed all existing records in the discard by a big margin. Had it not been for the lack of gas that prevailed for a short time, which undoubtedly deterred many from making the trip, the number would have been much greater.

Here's Why I Sell the O. K. Truck

I selected the O.K. over scores of other trucks.

1st. Because its ability has been demonstrated. Throughout the great Central and Western oil fields, where trucks receive the hardest usage, the greatest strain, I have watched the O. K. endure above other trucks.

2nd. Because of its superior points of construction—the Worm Drive; the extra thick frame, several inches thicker than that found in any other truck.

3rd. Because of its quality specifications. Each unit in the O. K. bears a name which LEADS in its particular field.

4th. Because of the SERVICE we are able to render by selling the O. K. We are in a position to make immediate delivery on O. K. Trucks; we can also supply all parts promptly.

These are the points that clinched the business. There are any number of reasons why I believe the O. K. is the finest truck I could find, but I believe my customers will appreciate these four points.

SHIPS NEW CAR TO JAVA.

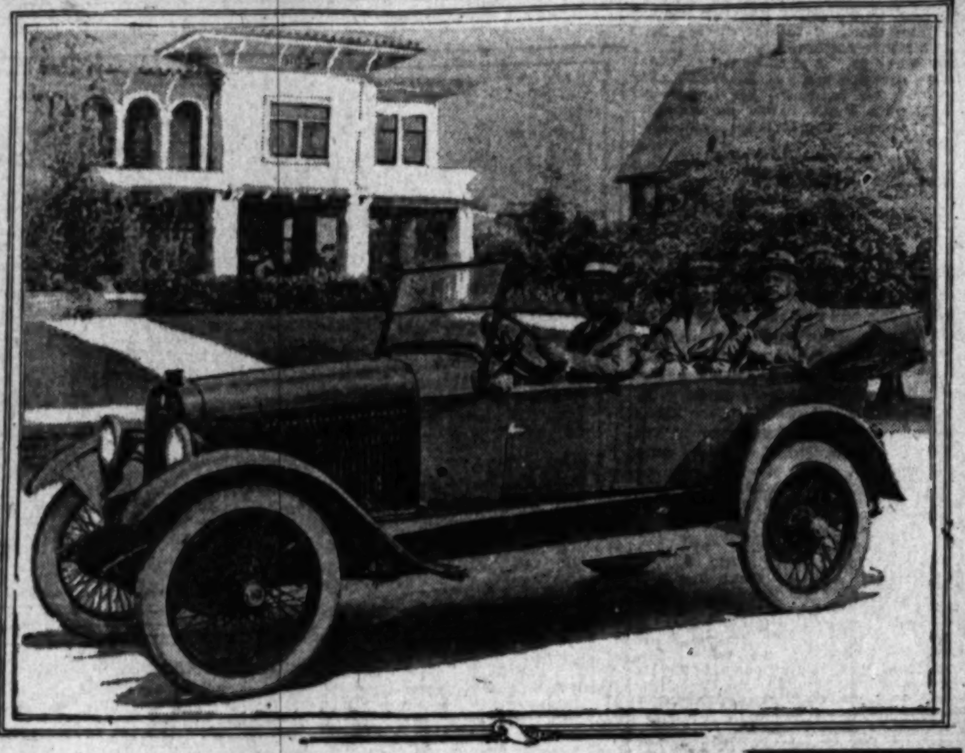
Purchased from the salesroom floor of the Greer-Robbins Company, Chalmers distributors, a sport-type Chalmers touring car is now on its way to Halt Plered, state of Goenoeng Anaga, Java. The purchaser is A. A. Van Rossem, a tea and rubber planter of Java and a native of Rotterdam, Holland, who was in Los Angeles for two weeks en route to the far-off island after a visit to the place of his nativity. He is accompanied by his father, C. Van Rossem, a prominent business man of Rotterdam, and his mother who will visit with him in Java and incidentally girdle the globe before returning home.

The Chalmers car, he explained to R. O. Gould, Chalmers retail sales manager, is imported in considerable numbers to Java, and it was on the strength of its record there as well as in his own country that he purchased that car. But a few minutes were required in which to close the necessary details. The party will drive via the Coast route to San Francisco and after its members have toured that section the car will be crated and shipped direct to its destination. Rossem and his parents will travel there, however, by leisurely stages, visiting en route Hawaiia, Japan, China and the Philippines.

He was unapprised of the growing importance of the post of Los Angeles, but during his stay here and through the courtesy of the Dutch Consul he gathered much of importance on the subject, which he will carry with him. "I went to Java nine years ago, intending to stay one year and then return home to go into business with my father. I stayed nine before I visited my home and parents. When I first went out I came via your country. Returning, I went through the Suez Canal. My parents are going over the same route that I followed. There have been a great many changes in this country since nine years ago," he remarked. The demand in the United States and in Europe for rubber, he declared, has increased in a tremendous way over ten years ago. A great deal of the Java rubber goes to the United States, he asserted.

Commenting on the difference in customs in continental Europe and the United States, the elder Rossem, who uses very fine English, remarked on the absence of cafes here such as are so popular abroad. When told that many cafes where entertainment was afforded had been compelled to discontinue business on account of national prohibition, Rossem, junior, broke in with, "And that is bad. I mean prohibition. You deny the individual his just rights. That is not freedom, in my opinion." A smile and a nod from his elder showed plainly that both were of the same mind.

Although the lines of the new Chalmers pleased young Rossem, he showed his practical side by talking about the Chalmers engine. He knows what it does in the tropics—it was service he was after. Parts, he said, were obtained there as readily as they are here, he thought, or in Rotterdam, where the Chalmers is also well known.



Going to Give the Natives of Java Something of a Thrill.

This is Mr. A. H. Van Rossem of Rotterdam, Holland, and his parents who last week purchased a new sport-type Chalmers for use on his plantation in Java. He raises tea and rubber, not to mention a large and juicy bank account.

STILL USING ALUMINUM.

"Many people think that the use of aluminum in the construction of the motor has been abandoned in the new Premier, but this impression is entirely erroneous, says Earl V. Abbott, manager of Frank O. Renstrom Company, California distributors for the Premier. "The Premier was the first American-made car to adopt the foreign tendencies of aluminum motor construction and it has proven so highly successful that there is not the slightest thought of turning back to iron castings for cylinder blocks.

"It is only necessary to sit at the wheel and drive a Premier to appreciate what an aluminum motor means. The lighfootedness and steering ease will win you immediately.

"There recently came to my notice, a case that one of our salesmen run across. It was that of man who had owned a Premier and had driven it for over 25,000 miles. He then sold it or traded it in on another make of car on the advice of a friend of his. He drove his new car about 500 miles and then brought it over to us and stated that he wanted a Premier. He said he was satisfied that the car he had just bought was perfect and it ran fine, but that it wasn't a Premier and that he would drive no other car. This is true of many people who are driving Premiers that are two and three years old. They are so well pleased that the thought of a new car never enters their heads."

KEEP UP TIRE INFLATION.

It is a well-known fact that during the summer months more tire troubles occur than at any other season of the year, not because automobiles get a maximum of use during the summer months, for the statisticians claim that tire troubles come oftener then, per mile, than during the remainder of the year.

Much of the trouble is caused by heat. The average driver usually increases his speed in warm weather and often they become careless in keeping up the inflation of their tires. It is especially important during the summer months for the motorist to keep the correct amount of air in his tires, to keep them free from cuts and to keep them mounted so that they run true.

Inattention to inflation is probably one of the chief causes of tire trouble. If properly inflated every two weeks your tires will render you maximum mileage. There is no need to use a pressure beyond that specified because it only makes the car ride hard. On the other hand, there is no need of underinflating to compensate for changes in temperature.

"Keep the treads as though new. Keep them free from small cuts; these should be plugged. Go over your tires weekly and check the wheel alignment whenever the treads indicate that an abrasive might have been used. Rapid wear," says R. C. Barr, manager of Chanslor & Lyon's Lee tire department, "should not be taken for granted if inflation is correct."

WINS IN LAKE TAHOE RUN.

Following up its record of winnings in the Yosemite economy runs and this year's Rim-of-the-World economy run victory, the Stephens salient six is announced as still continuing to win. The information comes from Sacramento that this winner of so many other economy runs has captured the sweepstakes in the dealers' economy-reliability run between Sacramento and Lake Tahoe and return, covering itself with honors in economy of gas and oil and the perfect score it rolled up for itself.

The distance traveled by the Stephens in this keen contest was 261 miles, in which some of the most severe of mountain roads had to be combated. Thirteen and one-half gallons of gasoline were consumed during the entire trip, making an average of nineteen and one-third miles to the gallon. Less than two pints of oil were required to keep the Stephens running true to its high form over these roads, and with the low gas consumption this is a very creditable record.

For the total of its excellent performance the Stephens received a perfect score heading the list as the sweepstake car of the day. There were twenty-four cars in the contest, and interest was at its height during the entire run, for with the representative entries, results were eagerly waited for, not only by the contestants, but by the numerous followers

THE NEW SAVAGE TYPE D

CONSIDERED BY MANY MOTORISTS THE BEST FABRIC TIRE ON THE AMERICAN MARKET

BONUS AND PREMIUM PAY TO WORKMEN

For many moons were the workmen who build our tires trained so that they might excel in this one branch of industrial art. Competent and experienced, even as the seasoned warriors of my ancestral tribes, they have been taught to build tires the "Savage" Way—the way modern science has shown to be the best.

My words are true words when I say that our builders of tires are master craftsmen whose hearts are filled with pride because they are producing a superior article; their pride is second only to that of the squaw in her first-born son. The best that is in these mighty men of the tire world is expressed in our big, handsome "D" Type tire. And to encourage them in their great effort to produce but the finest we have loosened our purse-string and pay a bonus and premium for merit, and impose a penalty for carelessness. The battle for perfection is fought with a two-edged sword.

Thus, O Motorists, through every stage of construction, the skilled hands and eagle eyes of specialists are ever on the watch for even the most minute flaw. And besides, there are lynx-eyed inspectors, as alert as an elk at mating time, who make sure that nothing is allowed to pass that is not absolutely right.

In our "D" Type we are expressing the determination that fills the hearts of the Great Chiefs of my people to build the best fabric tire on the American market; and the hearts of the men of my people are likewise filled with this determination.

I SALUTE YOU, O MOTORISTS! LITTLE HEAP HAS SPOKEN.

CAMP SITES TO BE EASILY HAD.

Angeles National Forest is Just Full of 'Em.

Few People Seem to Know of the Possibilities.

Veteran Scout Car Looks up Facts of the Case.

A Velie scout car, sent out by the Lord Motor Car Company last week to get first-hand information regarding the various summer camps to be found in the Angeles National Forest, brought back the news that desirable sites for camp homes can be had for all the remaining months of 1920 for a rental of only $7.50, and Uncle Sam stands behind every motorist who sets out to get one of these remaining sites, offering him every practical assistance.

The Velie party inspected camp sites in the Little Bear Lake district, along the Mill Creek road, along the Santa Ana River, in the Barton Flats district, and in various other districts, covering a route laid out by S. W. Allen, Forest Supervisor.

Already there have been about 1000 of the permits taken, yet there remain in the Angeles National Forest more untaken camp sites than are to be found in any of the 150 other national forests of the United States.

The permits carry only those restrictions necessary to keep down the risk from forest fires. The annual ground rent is $15, prorated so that the motorist may now pay $7.50 for the six remaining months of 1920, which will enable him to have an entire summer's camping and a fall hunting trip, and still be near enough to Los Angeles to keep in touch with business affairs. If he has a good car he may even motor to Los Angeles each week, as one Velie owner, a Los Angeles attorney, is doing.

The scout car used on this trip was the same Velie that busted into Yosemite ahead of all other cars, plowed through the deep snow and won the coveted Dyas trophy, and Harry Lord stated that this is the first of a series of scouting trips planned for the peppery little Velie.

"We have investigated and found that very few motorists know they can go up into Uncle Sam's big national forest and build a summer cottage, living in it for only $15 per year," said Lord, "and on our trip in the Velie we found good roads, an abundance of clear water and every other item all ready for the motorist to put up his little summer cottage, pay up his $7,50 and move in. It is to be hoped that these scouting trips of the Velie will be but the vanguard for hundreds to go into Uncle Sam's playground and build comfortable summer homes."

LUCKY NUMBERS TELL THE TALE.

Nine minus two leaves seven, and if the good folk who have been puzzled by these three figures during the past week will remember their fairy tale books, they will recall that seven is a very lucky number—any way it is considered. People speak of the seventh heaven, seven days in the week and certain other kinds of sevens, but nine twenty-seven has roused a good deal of curiosity during the past week. Some wise people have concluded that since "927 (7")" was painted on a number of Maxwell motor cars they had seen lately, and that Mr. Arnold is distributor for Maxwell, that "927 (7")" had something to do with Harold L. Arnold. And so it has, for it is the number of his temporary salesroom on West Seventh street, (another seven) and that is lucky indeed, for now he can keep in close touch with operations at his big new building now being constructed at the corner of Seventh and Figueroa.

MORELAND MOTOR TRUCK COMPANY

Looking Over the Motor Truck Situation.

Executives and representatives of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, who toured the State last week, looking things over. They are, back row, left to right, Theodore Hobgood, director export sales; R. L. Faulkner, advertising manager; Watt L. Moreland, general manager; J. L. Armer, treasurer; A. C. Scales, manager San Francisco branch; Charles Farnsworth, manager Sacramento branch; R. L. Warner, manager Fresno branch. Front row, left to right, R. Van Houten, manager El Centro branch; W. R. Forker, service manager; P. H. Mallory, general sales manager; W. A. Daley, manager Oakland branch; G. E. Jones, manager Bakersfield branch; Russel Sage, manager Stockton branch, and G. W. Mosher, manager San Diego branch.

TOUR STATE IN MACHINES.

Executives of Local Truck Factory Make Thorough Investigation.

The party of Moreland Motor Truck Company officials and branch managers who have been on an automobile tour of the State returned to this city Thursday evening after a very successful trip, also after experiencing a wide and interesting variety of weather conditions from the chill winds of the north to the crisp heat of the inland valley districts. The tour was made as a part of the schedule of the convention of branch managers who were called in to inspect the new $2,000,000 manufacturing plant of the company at Burbank. The remainder of the week was spent in a discussion of the various points noticed on the trip and other business matters.

The party covered over 1300 miles and visited every one of the eight direct factory branches as well as all of the large number of agencies from San Diego to San Francisco. The company has recently built a number of new buildings in which to house its branches and contemplates more. New systems of handling parts and service have been installed and new methods are being employed in various ways. The managers and executives had an opportunity to see the actual working out of the new systems in each section. They also had an opportunity to study the conditions in each section, and to familiarize themselves with the variety of work Moreland trucks are called upon to do and what the special needs and requirements of the owners in the widely distributed sections actually are. As a result, it is believed that better service will be possible as an owner from one section will find his conditions understood at every factory branch should he go outside of his own district and will feel perfectly at home there and sure of the same quality of service.

Aside from a greater enthusiasm for their own organization and its product, and a greater mutual understanding, the party returned with a better knowledge of the State in which they are doing business and with it more firmly intrenched than ever before, in its collective mind that this State has only begun to recognize its future possibilities or to develop its resources agriculturally or industrially.

"It would be a difficult proposition," says P. H. Mallory, general sales manager, "to convince any of this party that this State is not on the threshhold of a greater advancement in the next ten years than it has made in the past thirty. The evidence is everywhere. Every once in a while you hear a lot of talk about the point of saturation. There may be such a point, somewhere, sometime, but it isn't in sight in the truck industry in this section at the present time. The splendid roads, which are such a tremendous asset to the State, and which will do so much for it in the way of making it possible with the aid of the truck to be independent of and free from transportation troubles, aren't beginning to be used as they should in this way. For the best interests of the people many times the present number of trucks should be running over them—and they will speedily as time goes on. Conditions seem to be very prosperous under the circumstances, and to be gradually and calmly getting back to normal conditions without any fuss, panics or other more or less visionary troubles predicted by some pessimistical folks."

The party included General Manager Watt L. Moreland, Assistant General Manager W. R. Forker, General Sales Manager P. H. Mallory, Export Director of Sales Ted Hobgood, Advertising Manager H. A. Faulkner, Branch Managers A. C. Scales of San Francisco, W. A. Daley of Oakland, Charles Farnsworth of Sacramento, Russell Sage of Stockton, R. L. Warner of Fresno, G. E. Jones of Bakersfield, G. W. Mosher of San Diego and R. G. Van Houten of El Centro.

TEST OF TIME IS IMPORTANT THING.

"Among the many makes of tires that have made their appearances within the last six or seven years there are but few that have stood the test of time and made good with the motoring public," says Reeves Gartzmann, maager of Hawley, King & Company, distributuors for Globe tires.

"The Globe has made good in every sense of the word. Pick out the man with one Globe tire on his car and in a few months you will see him wearing another one to replace some other make of tire that has gone the way of travel. It is this repeat sale that has proven to us the real merit of the Globe tire. No man ever expects to get stung twice in the same place, so it is logical to believe that when he buys one tire, and then goes back and buys another of the same make on purpose, he must have been perfectly satisfied with the first one he bought."

OUR APPROVAL IS MOST NECESSARY.

When California accepts an article and puts it to use the rest of the country follows suit. This is the declaration of E. M. House, a member of the firm of Guasti, House & Giulii, Inc., upon his return to Los Angeles from a trip to the factory of the Perfection Tire and Rubber Company at Fort Madison, Iowa.

"The Perfection people are leaving nothing undone to produce a tire that measures up in every way to the California standard," Mr. House said. "This, of course, is to say that the factory is turning out the finest tires it is possible to produce. Incidentally, the factory is getting into real production on cord tires, and there is a source of considerable satisfaction in this for Guasti, House and Giulii, because we have contracted with the makers for 70 per cent of their entire cord output."

CARBURETORS HIGH ACROSS THE BORDER.

PERMISSION GIVEN CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS TO SELL 40 PER CENT HIGHER.

The Master Carburetor Company has recently given permission to its Canadian distributors to sell the Master at a figure that is 40 per cent higher than the list price in this country, according to L. E. Hardie, secretary and treasurer of the company.

"This change was made necessary because of the rate of exchange, import duty and Canadian war taxes. Although the Master under those conditions must be sold there for a higher prices than other caruretors if the distributors are to make a fair profit, the demand continues to grow, is the information we receive from all our distributors in Canada," he said.

"General business conditions in Western Canada, we are told, have never been so good as now. The western States will harvest a tremendous grain crop and there is a record rush of tourists. It may be that wet spots across the line have something to do with drawing tourists in that direction."

FUEL SCARCITY IS NOT EVEN NOTICED.

THIS CAR BURNS SO LITTLE ANYHOW THAT THE SHORTAGE MATTERS NOT.

With the cost of gasoline steadily mounting and gas itself actually getting less and less daily, some of the motorists are beginning to get worried as to what they will eventually do. Alcohol has been suggested as a possible fuel, but with the demand for home brew so steady even that is getting to be a scarce article. However, Frank Nelson of the Nelson Auto Company, local and Southern California distributors for the Nelson automobile, claims that Nelson owners are not worrying about lack of gas.

"Some of our car owners claim that all you have to do is to let a Nelson car smell gas and it will run," said Mr. Nelson. "It really is amazing the mileage that some of the owners are getting out of their machines. Mr. Brackett, one of our owners, and a Los Angeles business man, has just returned from a trip into the Yosemite Valley. He was gone over a week, and traveled a total distance of 1000 miles. During the trip there were many grades, and some severe ones, too, but the total amount of gas used was forty-five gallons, giving an average of twenty-one and a half miles to the gallon, a record that few other cars could hope to make."

TIRE CONCERN BUYS UP ENTIRE VILLAGE.

MORE THAN 56,000 ACRES NOW BEING CULTIVATED BY ONE COMPANY.

Purchase of the town of Marinette, Ariz., fourteen miles northwest of Phoenix, and 7800 acres of land adjacent, for cotton growing, has just been made by the Southwest Cotton Company, a subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

By the completion of this deal the total amount of land owned by the company for raising long staple cotton to be used in fabric for automobile tires has been increased to 36,000 acres. More than 20,000 acres additional have been leased for future needs. Of the 56,000 acres controlled, about 30,000 are under cultivation and producing many thousands of bales of cotton annually. Homes similar to those built by the company for its 2000 employees in the towns of Litchfield and Goodyear in the Salt River Valley will be erected in Marinette for employees on the new plantation.

We drove over there, and found distillate also a scarce quantity, but they offered to sell us a half and half mixture of distillate and kerosene. We were decidedly anxious to get to Browley, so we took a chance on it. To our immense surprise, though the motor was not half warmed up, the Standard eight motor apparently did not know that any substitution had been practiced upon it. It climbed the long grades to Potrero summit without a particle of fuss, and I think exhibited even a little more than ordinary power.

"Before we reached Brawley, my friend was completely convinced of the ability of the Standard eight to burn anything. 'A car that can get away with that sort of a fuel combination is the sort to buy nowadays,' he told me, and as a consequence he put in his order on his return for a Standard eight."

HARD TO PROCURE PROPER MATERIAL.

PACIFIC COAST FACTORY HAS A TOUGH JOB GETTING THE RIGHT STUFF.

A. C. Lester, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Spreckels Savage Tire Company, says that the conditions in the markets today make it difficult to procure the highest grade rubbers and fabrics without deviation of quality, and those monufacturers who are determined to use none but the best materials have found it necessary to pay increased prices and to exercise great vigilance in order to secure uniformly superior raw materials.

Many tire manufacturers have felt very acutely the existing shortage of high grade cotton fabric, and only those with great financial resources are able at all times to demand and secure fabrics of uniform quality. As in every other field, the rubber manufacturer who is able to pay the highest price secures the most select materials that the markets of the world provide. For instance, the house of Spreckels, with its unlimited resources, pays a special premium over and above the regular purchase price in order to to insure its securing the best grade rubbers and cotton fabrics.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR C. A. ROESCH.

WINNING RACING CARS ARE NEARLY ALL EQUIPPED WITH ALEMITE SYSTEM.

It is a source of no little satisfaction to know that the Monroe which won the recent Indianapolis race was an American product, the first American-built winner since the historic victory of Joe Dawson in a National in 1912. The Monroe was designed and built by the veteran race driver, Louis Chevrolet, an American citizen, and driven by his brother, Gaston.

But if we take pride in this American victory, C. A. Roesch of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, finds even more satisfaction in the fact that the Monroe was equipped with the Bassick Alemite lubricating system. In fact, seventeen of the cars entered in the race were fitted with this method of lubrication, which has been adopted as standard equipment by 105 factories.

"It will be remembered, too," said Roesch, "that the Duesenberg in which Tommy Milton hung up the world's record for from one to five miles, was equipped with the Alemite system."

Using More Trained Nurses.

That trained nurses are being employed in increasing numbers shows that employers generally are recognizing their services. Previous to 1919, only sixty-six industrial firms employed trained nurses. Today more than 871 industries have nursing services. The industrial nurse has proved to be a good investment. She is a teacher of hygiene, and health education means prevention of accidents, which in years gone by have cost industry many thousands of dollars.—[Indianapolis News.

BROADWAY SPECIALS

By HARRY A. WILLIAMS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 26.—It was my good fortune to step into the hottest part of the National League melee soon after arriving here. That is, the three clubs which are engaged in a deadly grapple for the leadership of the league, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Brooklyn, happened to be bunched in greater New York.

First-hand impressions of these clubs may be of interest in the West, especially as former Coast League players are playing a prominent role on each of the aggregations.

About all I can say of Cincinnati is that the Reds are up there. The Dodgers are proving the real surprise of the season, and the Cardinals on their form displayed here are the class of the lot.

GO ALL TO PIECES.

The champions practically went to pieces against the Giants, dropping three out of four. They gave forth the impression of a club practically unbeatable with the breaks coming their way, but overstocked with temperament, and inclined to fall apart in the face of adversity. Eddie Rousch talked himself into a suspension early in the series, while Slim Sallee appeared deliberately to get himself put out of the box in the fourth game of the series. Repeatedly he put his hand in his pocket, presumably to drag forth rosin. After repeated warnings, Umpire Harrison ejected him just as he was in the act of delivering the ball in the eighth, and President Heydler supplemented this with a ten-day suspension.

The new rules have played havoc with the Red hurling staff. The aging Sallee finds it difficult to get by without rosin, while Hod Eller's shine ball, his big ace in the world series, has gone into the discard. Sallee and Eller made a personal appeal to Heydler to be permitted to use their former deliveries, but the head of the league, of course, could make no exemptions. Slim and Hod have threatened the league with a damage suit. They maintain that the new rules are in restraint of bringing home the bacon, and therefore, unconstitutional.

SUSPENSION RAISED.

Rousch threatened to pack up his earthly belongings, including the extra collar, and quit the league unless his suspension was raised in three days. It was raised, but not because of this threat. In fact, the general demeanor of the Reds suggested a ball team with badly frayed nerves. At that time they looked to be in a state of demoralization. However, they managed to pull themselves together against Brooklyn when the Dodger pitchers went into a sudden slump.

George Reuther, erstwhile Coast Leaguer, showed the only first-class pitching unfurled by any of the Reds here. Right now he sticks out as the best southpaw in the circuit. Morris Rath, formerly with Salt Lake, was playing a bang-up game around second base, and seemed little affected by the general unsteadiness of the champions.

Moran for some mysterious reason, but probably acting under orders from the club owners, has practically reduced the champions to a minor league basis in the number of players. The Reds are carrying only two catchers, an extra infielder and one utility outfielder, neither of whom appears to be of major league caliber. In one of the games he was forced to use this extra outfielder and his utility infielder in the outer garden. Injuries and suspensions have reduced his pitching staff to three effectives. With all their regulars in the field, the Reds are still a good ball club, but they are wholly lacking in real reserve strength. And once the first line is pierced it may mean the finish of the present world champions.

MORAN AFTER HOOD.

Pat Moran apparently is beginning to realize this, and made an effort to secure Wallace Hood, young outfielder, who once tried out with the Vernon club. Hood looked good in the few games he appeared with Brooklyn, but Robinson is overstocked with players. Ebbets had promised Hood to Chattanooga, but he refused to go there. He did, however, consent to play with Salt Lake.

Superlative pitching is the one apparent reason for Brooklyn's unexpected success. At least, this would seem to be the underlying cause. Premonitions of this were felt last spring, when Robinson's heavers tamed the heavy-hitting Yankees. Critics as a rule limited Robinson's pennant assets to his hurling corps and Zack Wheat. But the club rambled right along with Wheat on the injured list. Stellar heaving seems to have imbued the whole club with confidence, with the result that it showed a splash of championship form.

Robinson was so hard pressed for infielders that he was forced to play Jimmy Johnston at third, and be it known that he has made more than a passable third sacker out of the former Coast League gardener. At Johnson's left is Ivan Olson, who once helped to win a pennant for Portland, and Chuck Ward, who also shortstopped for the Beavers, is serving as sub-shortstop for the Dodgers.

CARDINALS GOING SOME.

But, oh boy! if you would hear the sound of heavy firing all along the line, place your ear to the ground when the Cardinals are in town. Led by Rodgers Hornsby, they have one of the most savage attacks ever seen in the majors. It may not be quite as heavy as that of the Yankees, but seems more consistent. Whether this is due to the inspiration of the great Hornsby, or some of the men are simply playing over their head, remains for the months of July and August to prove. Several of the men are hitting as they have never hit before. And even their weakest men with the stick, are temperamentally suited to a crisis, and therefore most dangerous in a pinch. They almost killed off the Brooklyn staff, and the latter was still staggering from the attack when the Reds hit that town.

And the heavyweight Giant pitchers, who had trimmed the champions, were dispersed like chaff before the cyclonic clouting of the Cardinals.

This tremendous driving power of the Cardinals has covered up the weak pitching of the club. Jeff Haines, a recruit from Kansas City, unfurled the only really high-class pitching which Branch Rickey was able to unfurl here. But this bird apparently had nothing to learn when he came to this league. He has speed, a change of pace, better control than the Chicago convention and the temperament of a shark. Give the Cards the Brooklyn pitching staff and they would win the pennant in August.

Jack Fournier, who went from the Angels to the Cards, was badly off his stride among the tall buildings. He landed just three solid blows during the series here, one of which was a home run with two on.

IS SOMEWHAT PUZZLED.

Fournier is rather puzzled with himself. "I'm in the .300 class, as you will see by the averages," he said to me. "But I hardly know how it is that I'm there, because I haven't really started to hit in my regular form. I expect to get going soon." It is true that Jack isn't meeting the ball with his accustomed solidity. Fournier told me that he had lost rather heavily in his Seattle oil venture. He admits a longing for the flesh pots of the Coast League, and hopes to land there next season.

I was considerably jarred to find Joe Schultz starring in right field for the Cards. He is fielding in an unbelievable manner, and hitting tremendously in the pinches. When Frank Chance had Schultz on the Coast he looked to be only a mediocre player. One reason for this is that he was played at third, whereas he is a natural outfielder. Also, his arm at that time appeared to be on the wane. Now he has one of the best whips in any outfield. This was shown when he started the first triple play made in the National this season. It was against the Giants. George Burns, a very fast man was on third, and Young at first. Schultz made a shoestring catch of Fletcher's line drive, and although out of position to throw, nailed the fleet Burns at the plate. The ball was relayed to Kelly at first before Young could return to that base.

Schultz, like Schupp, has selected St. Louis as a place to come back in, although Schupp, while winning, has not fully recovered the fast break on his curve ball.

MOTORISTS SHOULD CARE FOR BATTERY.

The nation-wide battery service of the Prest-O-Lite Company has been the direct cause of a great diminishing of battery troubles. This statement is based upon reliable information culled from any of Southern California's service stations. R. T. Mesker, of the General Service Company, the local authorized Prest-O-Lite representative says: "It is our intention to get every motorist into the regular habit of having his battery examined tested and filled with distilled water on a stated day, at least twice a month. The average motorists is apt to become careless or negligent concerning his battery. As long as it turns his motor over and lights his lamps satisfactorily he seems satisfied that all is well."

A battery requires constant attention for it to render the maximum of service and live a long useful life.

WATCH GREASE CUPS ON SPRING SHACKLES.

Many car owners habitually neglect the grease cups that are ordinarily fitted to the spring shackles for the lubrication of the shackle bolts. Unless these cups are regularly turned down the grease in the passages becomes caked and hardened, preventing the passage of fresh grease to the surfraces needing it. If at any time difficulty is noticed in turning down these cups they should be removed and the obstructing matter should be carefully cleaned out, and then they should be filled with fresh grease.

PRODUCTION ON INCREASE.

Labor Situation in Detroit Takes a Very Decided Turn for the Better at Last.

"Labor conditions are better in Detroit than they have been for three years. By that I mean that the average factory worker is producing much nearer what he did before the war than at any time since America entered into the conflict. As for materials, the Liberty factory is well supplied and we are producing at least 25 per cent more cars than ever before in the history of the plant."

This was the declaration here last week of J. P. Scearce, western district sales representative for the Liberty Motor Car Company, who visited the McKelvey Motor Sales Company on a wide swing around his western territory.

"The truth of the matter is that there is once more a little competition in the labor market in Detroit. On my visit to Detroit a week ago, there was a knot of men every morning outside the employment office of the company. That is something that I had not seen for three years. Good men can still obtain work easily in Detroit, but the poor workmen and the shirkers are being weeded out. Two factories in Detroit recently made marked reductions in their working force, with the surprising result that their output was somewhat increased.

"As everyone knows, there has been recently a decided tightening of the money market all over the country. The Liberty factory officials believe that this condition is purely temporary, and that sixty to ninety days will see it relieved. After the period of the crop movement is over they believe money will be easier. I know that their plans call for full speed ahead in manufacturing.

"The country is fundamentally prosperous. There is plenty of money in almost every community I have visited recently. Take Kentucky, for example, where I was raised. I remember when I was a boy there, that 5 cents a pound for tobacco was a good price. This year they got 79 cents a pound for their tobacco. I came from the blue grass country, but I looked in vain for blue grass on this last trip. Everything was in tobacco.

"Crops are wonderful this year, everywhere I have gone, south and west. There is every indication of an unslackened demand for motor cars from all over the country. And the foreign demand is simply unbelievable. While I was at the Liberty factory a man from Australia arrived and did his best to buy 3000 Liberty chassis. I honestly believe that the foreign orders would keep Detroit running for a year at full blast if they chose to concentrate on foreign business.

"I look for price reductions in the near future in certain lines of manufacture, but not in automobiles. In the Utah and Idaho sections of my territory, money is tight because there is no demand for the wool crop this year. The eastern factories are loaded with raw wool. That presages a reduction in woolens in my opinion. Automobiles are in a different case. Their production is allied in a way with house building, with hardware production, with farm machinery production. There is a tremendous scarcity of materials in all these three lines, which affects the production of automobiles. Until supply has somewhere near caught up with supply in the production of glass, steel, castings, etc., I do not see how there can be a reduction in the price of automobiles. Nor has there been any reduction in the labor costs as yet, and that certainly must come before a price reduction is in order."

HUSKY FRAME BIG ASSET.

One of the latest innovations that has been installed in light cars is a bridge girder constructed frame which is found on the Allen cars. This new system of building frames makes them so substantial that it is possible for a lightweight frame to withstand road abuse, and prevent the body from weaving, which eliminates body creaks, rattles or sticking doors. This method of building frames is a step forward in the construction of a steady frame for light motor cars.

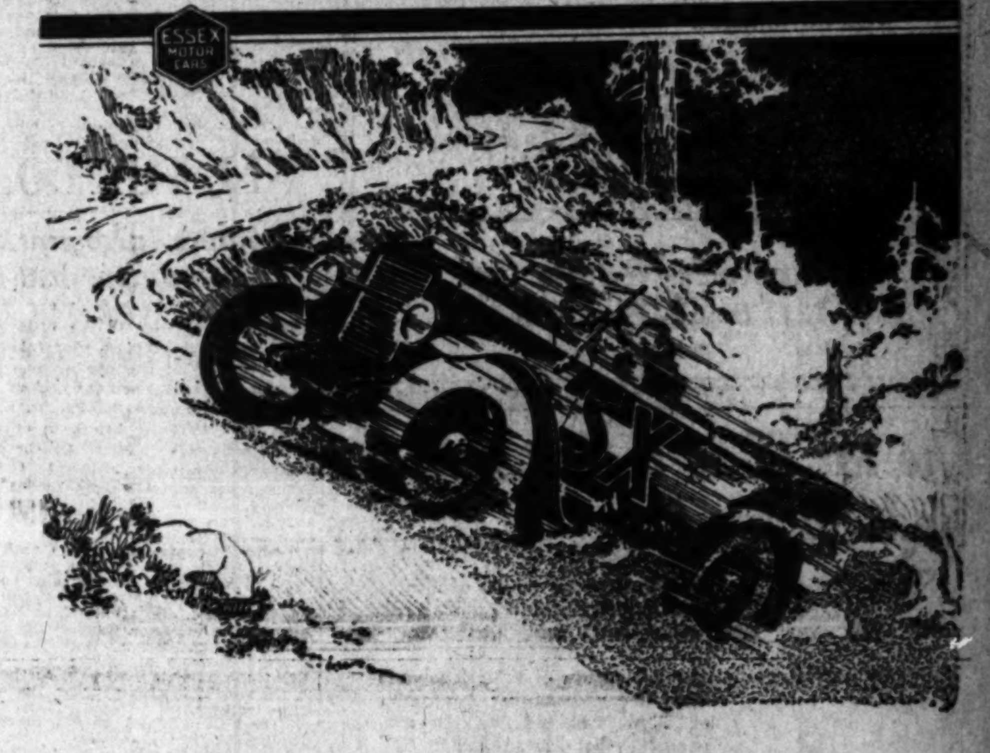
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



Lowers the Record on "RIM O' THE WORLD" Hill Climb

IN PRACTICE during the past week a stock Essex touring car made seven runs over the famous "Rim o' the World" Hill Climb up Waterman Canyon Switchbacks in less time than its record over the same course last year when it won first place over all other cars in its class.

On three out of seven of these trial runs it made better time than ANY car which has ever climbed to the summit of that course.

By thus lowering the best previous record in three instances during the practice of the last week the Essex now claims the San Bernardino Hill Climb record.

We have applied to the American Automobile Association for sanction to make an Official Run over the course. As soon as this sanction is obtained we will ask San Bernardino to patrol the course and conduct an official test to establish the Essex record over this course.

Every Californian knows what it means, in reliability and power, to win and hold the San Bernardino Hill Climb Record.

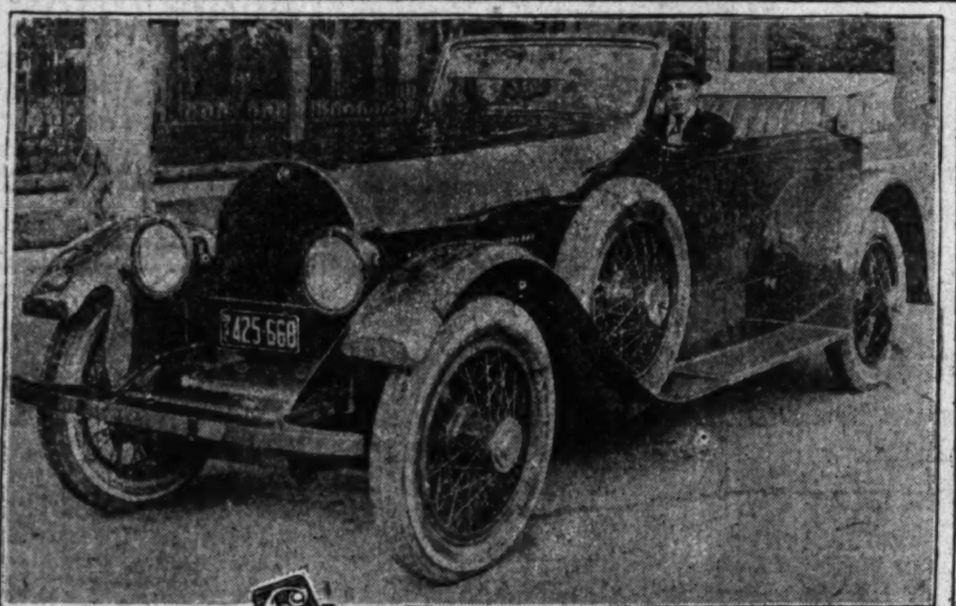
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



Lines that Would Attract Notice Even in a Bathing Girl Parade.

This is the latest product of the Don Lee Coach and Body Works, a foxy Cadillac sport model belonging to Adrian Cameron. Note particularly the spiffy windshield.

EAST LIKES OUR BODIES.

That California sets the fashion in motor car styles and equipment is generally recognized in the East. The statinary top with its attractive lines and plate glass windows is known and advertised as the California top. Another new California product has now become known and talked of in all the motor centers of the East.

"It was a great surprise to me to find that everywhere I visited in the East I was regarding the Don Lee custom built bodies," said Fred W. Pabst, advertising manager for Don Lee, who recently returned from a trip to the factory. "Many of the bodies we designed here and many cars that have been remodeled and equipped have been taken East. These with the pictures of Don Lee bodies that have been published broadcast by the motor magazines and the comment of easterners who have been on the Coast have resulted in a nation-wide reputation for these California built bodies."

A job that is certain to attract much attention is going through the plant of Cliff Durant. On a Pierce-Arrow chassis is being built a four passenger sport model which, instead of the customary seats, will have four mahogany chairs unholstered in the finest Morocco leather. This car will have no top, being equipped with a dust shield. It will be low and rakish in appearance and many new ideas will be incorporated in its building equipment.

Another distinctive body is being built for Cecil De Mille on a Locomobile chassis. This is a roadster body with a deck that opens up, making a comfortable, roomy seat. A small door opens from the side and makes this extra seat easily accessible. This car will be finished in Locomobile gray with a fine red stripe and red leather upholstery.

ALL THE DOPE ON ROADS.

Complete Information on the Coast and Transcontinental Highways on Hand.

For the first time in the history of motoring, a complete report has been provided of the conditions on any one transcontinental highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

An inspection car has been sent by the Automobile Club of Southern California over the National Old Trails route for this very purpose because of the flood of inquiries pouring into the local offices in regard to travel westward.

Transcontinental travel has never been so heavy, says the club, and because of its central location and because it leads so directly to Southern California, the trail, which has been signposted from Kansas City to this part of the country is getting an unusual amount of attention.

But the Lincoln highway, further to the north, is also pouring in a huge volume of business. This is also true of the southern routes through Texas and Arizona.

Taking it by and large, and squinting at it with a bird's eye, the National Old Trails from New York City to Los Angeles is in very good shape, according to the Auto Club's report. "Dusty" Doug Rhodes and Ollie Lewis are the two gents who have made the trip for the Southern California organization, and despite a little detour trouble in Illinois, where the road is being paved and bridges put in, they say that motoring across America's tummy is a pleasure now, and not a task.

In fact, this route is paved practically all the way from Columbus, O., to New York, Baltimore or Washington, with the exception of a few short stretches. It is from St. Louis to the Indiana State line that a little difficulty will be found on account of this portion in the east being under construction.

However, from Los Angeles to St. Louis no one, even the most captious, could complain. East from Indiana the route is also good. There is no gasoline shortage outside of California.

For the benefit of those who are planning to trek east the club has placed its full and detailed report on file, and accurate information may be secured at any of the branch offices or at the local headquarters.

Visiting motorists and local car owners, who are leaving this week for parts more or less unknown will find some valuable information on road conditions in the following report issued to The Times yesterday by the club routing bureau:

SAN FRANCISCO COAST: Paved from Los Angeles via Hollywood, Lankershim, Van Nuys, Chatsworth to the foot of the Santa Susana Pass. Two miles of dirt road then paved the remaining distance through Ventura, Santa Barbara and Gaviota to a short distance north of Los Cruces store. Then fourteen miles of excellent graded road to Zaca Station. Paved from that point through Santa Maria to the city limits of Arroyo Grande. Dirt road through town, then paved to the city limits of San Luis Obispo. A trifle rough through the city, then paved to Paso Robles city limits. Dirt road through town, and pavement to King City city limits. Then dirt again to the west side of river; paved the remaining distance to San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO INLAND: Paved from Los Angeles via Hollywood or Avenue 20 through the San Fernando Valley to Saugus; then left via the Ridge Route to the Kern county line. Old oiled road which is rapidly going to pieces and is extremely rough, from there for seven miles. Then pavement the remaining distance through Bakersfield to Delano. Here a choice of two routes is had, both paved. One via Porterville to Visalia; the other or shorter route through Tulare and Goshen to Fresno. North of Fresno, pavement is complete the remaining distance through Modesto to Oakland.

OWENS VALLEY: No gasoline shortage at any point in the Owens Valley. Pavement is complete from Los Angeles via the San Fernando Valley through Saugus and up Mint Canyon to within one mile of Acton. Then fair dirt road to Vincent. Detours from that point along construction work to within two and a half miles of Palmdale. Detours rather rough and dusty. Pavement north of Palmdale through the city to the city limits of Lancaster. Fair dirt road from there and through Rosamond to Mohave. Advisable to take right-hand road at Cinco via Red Rock Canyon, which is in very fair shape. Good road north of Dove Springs Junction through Indian Wells to Lone Pine. Lone Pine to Independence, good. Four miles north of Independence pavement will be encountered and had for twelve miles. Due to the fact that this new paved road is but eight feet wide, extreme care should be used in passing oncoming cars. The remaining distance through Big Pine to Bishop is excellent for a dirt road. Bishop over Sherwin Hill to Rock Creek, good. North through Long Valley to Casa Diablo Hot Springs, many cross-washes will be encountered. Mud Flat north of Casa Diablo Hot Springs passable and a few miles north of Flat new highway grade will be encountered which misses the Devil's Punch Bowl. Fair time can be made via Mono Lake to the [illegible] Ranch. A short distance north of that point, rather heavy sand will be encountered and had for four miles. The road improves before reaching Bridgeport, and excellent time can be made from there along the Walker River past Inter-State Lake and Minden to Carson City.

TAHOE VIA PLACERVILLE: Leaving Sacramento, pavement is complete to Placerville, thence excellent grader road north by way of Strawberry to the lake. No difficulty is encountered at any point between Placerville and Al Tahoe.

TAHOE VIA COLFAX: Paved road is had from Sacramento to Auburn, then excellent dirt road through the mountains to the summit of Donner lake Grade. Due to the recent opening of the road, a quantity of snow will still be encountered in many places, but no difficulty will be had. Truckee to Al Tahoe, the road is open up the Truckee River past Tahoe Tavern and around Emerald Bay to the south end of the lake.

HUNTINGTON LAKE: The road is open and in very fair shape. The last four and one-half miles from Cascad to the lake is the steepest portion of the entire trip, as the grades will range from 8 to 19 per cent in many places necessitating the use of second and low gear on the majority of cars. But there is absolutely no danger, as the road is wide and gives ample room in passing all machines.

YOSEMITE VALLEY: Glacier point road will be open to automobiles on June 21, weather conditions permitting. The road is in excellent shape from Madera via Raymond and Coarse Gold to Wawona and Yosemite Valley. It is also possible to drive from Raymond via Grub Gulch and Miami Lodge to Wawona. The road to Yosemite Valley from Merced via Chowchilla grade, is open and in fair shape, although many steep grades are encountered which will necessitate gear work. Big Oak Flat road is open and greatly improved. Tioga road will not be open until July 15.

SAN DIEGO COAST: Pavement from Los Angeles out East Seventh street to Stephenson avenue, to the eastern end of the San Gabriel River bridge. Here, due to the fact that they are excavating for a large water drain, it is necessary for both outbound and incoming travel to use the west or left-hand side of the road, which is extremely rough and dusty. Care should be taken in driving this quarter of a mile. Pavement the remaining distance through Whittier, Fullerton, Anaheim, Santa Ana, Capistrano and Oceanside to the foot of the La Jolla grade. Thence dirt road into town. It is necessary to detour to the right of the main road the last mile into the city, through an extremely dusty field.

SAN DIEGO INLAND: Paved from Los Angeles via El Monte, Pomona, Ontario and Riverside to the city limits of Perris. Dirt road through town; then highway again to Elsinore. Dirt road through the city. Then pavement the remaining distance to the county line of San Diego. From here excellent graded road will be had through Escondido and over the Poway grade to Camp Kearny Junction, where pavement will again be encountered and is had the remaining distance into San Diego.

BIG AND LITTLE BEAR VALLEYS—RIM OF THE WORLD: Waterman Canyon from San Bernardino is in excellent shape to Pinecrest and Little Bear Lake. It is reported that Skyland and Thousand Pines will not be open this season. While the Rim of the World is extremely rough in places, the majority of the going is good. Snowslide grade is extremely rough and necessitates use of both gear and brakes. All resorts in Big Bear Valley are open and going full blast. Mill Creek road from Redlands to Big Bear Valley, open and in excellent shape. Control hours for upbound travel 2:05, 8 and 11 a.m. and p.m. Control station is located at Harvey's, a short distance from the junction of the Forest Home road. Pavement is complete from Los Angeles through Redlands to the power house at the first crossing of the Mountain Home Creek. The upper control is located at Seven Oaks Junction; and down travel must pass at that point at 12:30, 3:30, 6:30 or 9:30 a.m. and p.m. The distance through the control is ten and a fraction miles. Time allowed, one hour and a half.

IDYLLWILD: The hotel is open and the road will be found in excellent shape from Hemet to Idyllwild, as well as from Banning.

GENERAL GRANT NATIONAL PARK: A choice of two roads will be had from Visalia to General Grant. One, over what is known as the Orosi-Sand Creek Road, which can be made in high gear practically the entire distance. The other via Badger and Neffs Mill. The road is in very fair shape at the present time, although a few soft spots will be encountered before reaching the entrance of the park.

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK: Paved from Los Angeles to the Kaweah River bridge with the exception of seven and one-half miles rough road north of the Kern county line. The grade is exceedingly rough and steep, as well as narrow, from Kaweah River bridge to the entrance of the park. From here, good roads will be had the entire distance through the park grounds.

CALIFORNIA HOT SPRINGS: Pavement will be found from Los Angeles via Bakersfield and Delano through Richgrove and Ducor, with the exception of seven and one-half miles of old oiled road which is located north of the Kern county line. Leaving the pavement at Ducor, continue due east, following the signs for California Hot Springs. Excellent road, easy grades, beautiful scenery and good accommodations will be found.

KERNVILLE, FAIRVIEW, KERN RIVER COUNTRY: Leaving Los Angeles for the Kern River country, a choice of two routes will be had. One via the San Fernando Valley to Saugus; then left and over the Ridge Route to Bakersfield, or the other from Saugus up Mint Cayon through Acton, Vincent, Palmdale and Lancaster to Mohave. Then back over the Tehachapi Mountains to Caliente. The former route is paved the entire distance from Los Angeles through Bakersfield to a point 1½ miles just east of Severt Station. Then excellent graded dirt road from there through Caliente and up the Walker Basin district and over the mountains through Havilah and Bodfish to Isabella and Kernville. While those wishing the drive through Mohave will find pavement by way of Saugus and the canyon to within one mile of Acton. Here dirt road will be found in excellent shape to Vincent. Then a number of detours are necessary, due to construction work to within two miles and a fraction to Palmdale, where pavement will be found north through the city limits of Lancaster. From there through Rosamond and Mohave, excellent road will be had with the exception of one or two places. Mohave to Tehachapi and over the mountains, roads will be found in wonderful shape and allows the making of fast time. At the present time of year, Kernville is considered by the majority of people, to be the best fishing country in the southern part of the State.

FOREST HOME: Paved road will be found from Los Angeles through El Monte, Ontario, Colton and Redlands to the first crossing of the Mill Creek east of Redlands. From there, excellent dirt road will be found to Forest Home. Total mileage from Seventh and Broadway to the resort, 87 miles.

CAMP BALDY: Paved from Los Angeles via the Foothill Boulevard to San Antonio avenue and north to the Pacific Electric station at the entrance of the canyon. Excellent dirt road the remaining distance with one or two grades which will reach 15 per cent. Toll at entrance of the canyon, 50 cents per car, 10 cents per person.

NEEDLES VIA PARKER: Very fair road will be found from Needles to Parker. Welsh's Well, 12 miles south of Needles, has been recently cleaned out and has, at the present time, plenty of water. Chambers Well, 20 miles this side of Parker, has also been cleaned and is ready for use. Upon crossing the ferry, a little rough road will be had but the majority will be found in excellent shape through the town. The next ten miles out of town is quite sandy, but the remaining distance to Bouse is over a new highway grade which allows the making of very fair time. Bouse to Vicksburg is in fair shape, and Vicksburg up the canyon to Salome allows the making of good time. Swing right at Salome, and continue through the Harrisburg Ranch to Palo Verde; then east into Phoenix. This route is really the best of the two, although a few high centers, ruts and some volcanic rock will be encountered which will, to some extent, slow travel.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY: Paved Riverside to the San Diego county line with the exception of through the city limits of Perris and into Elsinore, a little detour is encountered due to paving. Paved from Riverside to Corona, also to Glen Ivy Hot Springs. Then excellent dirt road through Temescal Canyon to Elsinore. Paved road from Beaumont to Banning. Then old oiled road to Cabazon. Dirt road from Cabazon to Whitewater Wash to Palm Springs. Good dirt road from Palm Springs to within ten miles of Indio. Then paved through Indio to Thermal. South from Thermal, extremely poor along Salton Sea. Paved from Riverside to the foot of the Moreno Grade. Excellent dirt road to the railroad crossing west of Beaumont. Junction of the Moreno Grade past Relief Hot Springs to San Jacinto, good dirt road. South through San Timoteo Canyon to the San Bernardino county line, excellent. Corona through Santa Ana Canyon to Anaheim, paved with the exception of 100 feet.

SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY: Newly graded road will be found from Atascadero to Morro. San Luis Obispo to Cayucos, good. Cayucos to Cambria, rough in places. Poor dirt road from Cambria to San Simeon. And fair dirt road from Paso Robles to Adelade. Poor dirt road from Adelade to Cambria. Fair dirt road from Santa Margarita to Pozo. Pozo to the county line, very rough and cut up in places. Gasoline is more plentiful in San Luis Obispo county but supply is still limited in some cities.

KERN COUNTY: Paved Bakersfield to Taft, Maricopa and Fellows. Undergoing construction Fellows to McKittrick; detour not good. Paved Bakersfield to Lo Kern then good dirt road to McKittrick. Famosa to Wasco, good dirt. Then paved to Lost Hills; fair from that point to the county line. Paved Bakersfield to a point six miles beyond Cooper Station; thence good to Maricopa.

GREENHORN MOUNTAIN: Road open Glenville to Kernville.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY: Paved San Bernardino to the junction of the Arrowhead Hot Springs road. Excellent dirt from there to Pinecrest and Little Bear Lake. San Bernardino to Redlands and Yucaipa, paved. Dirt from there to Pinecrest and Little Bear Lake. City Creek road in excellent shape. No difficulty whatever. The Crest is in fair shape, a little rough in places, particularly on Snowslide. Cushenberry Grade good entire distance.

TULARE COUNTY: The gasoline situation in Tulare county is beginning to become very acute, and gas is extremely hard to get in greater quantities than from two to three gallons. Advise everybody to fill their tanks in Bakersfield where they can procure gas at 28½ cents. In Tulare county the prices are ranging from 24 to 35 cents, and in Sequoia National Park and in Gen. Grant, the price is still 55 cents. Should any of our members come to Visalia, and have difficulty in obtaining sufficient gas to carry them to at least Bakersfield, would suggest that they call at the branch office of the Club in Visalia, for instructions as they will be able to help them secure the necessary amount.

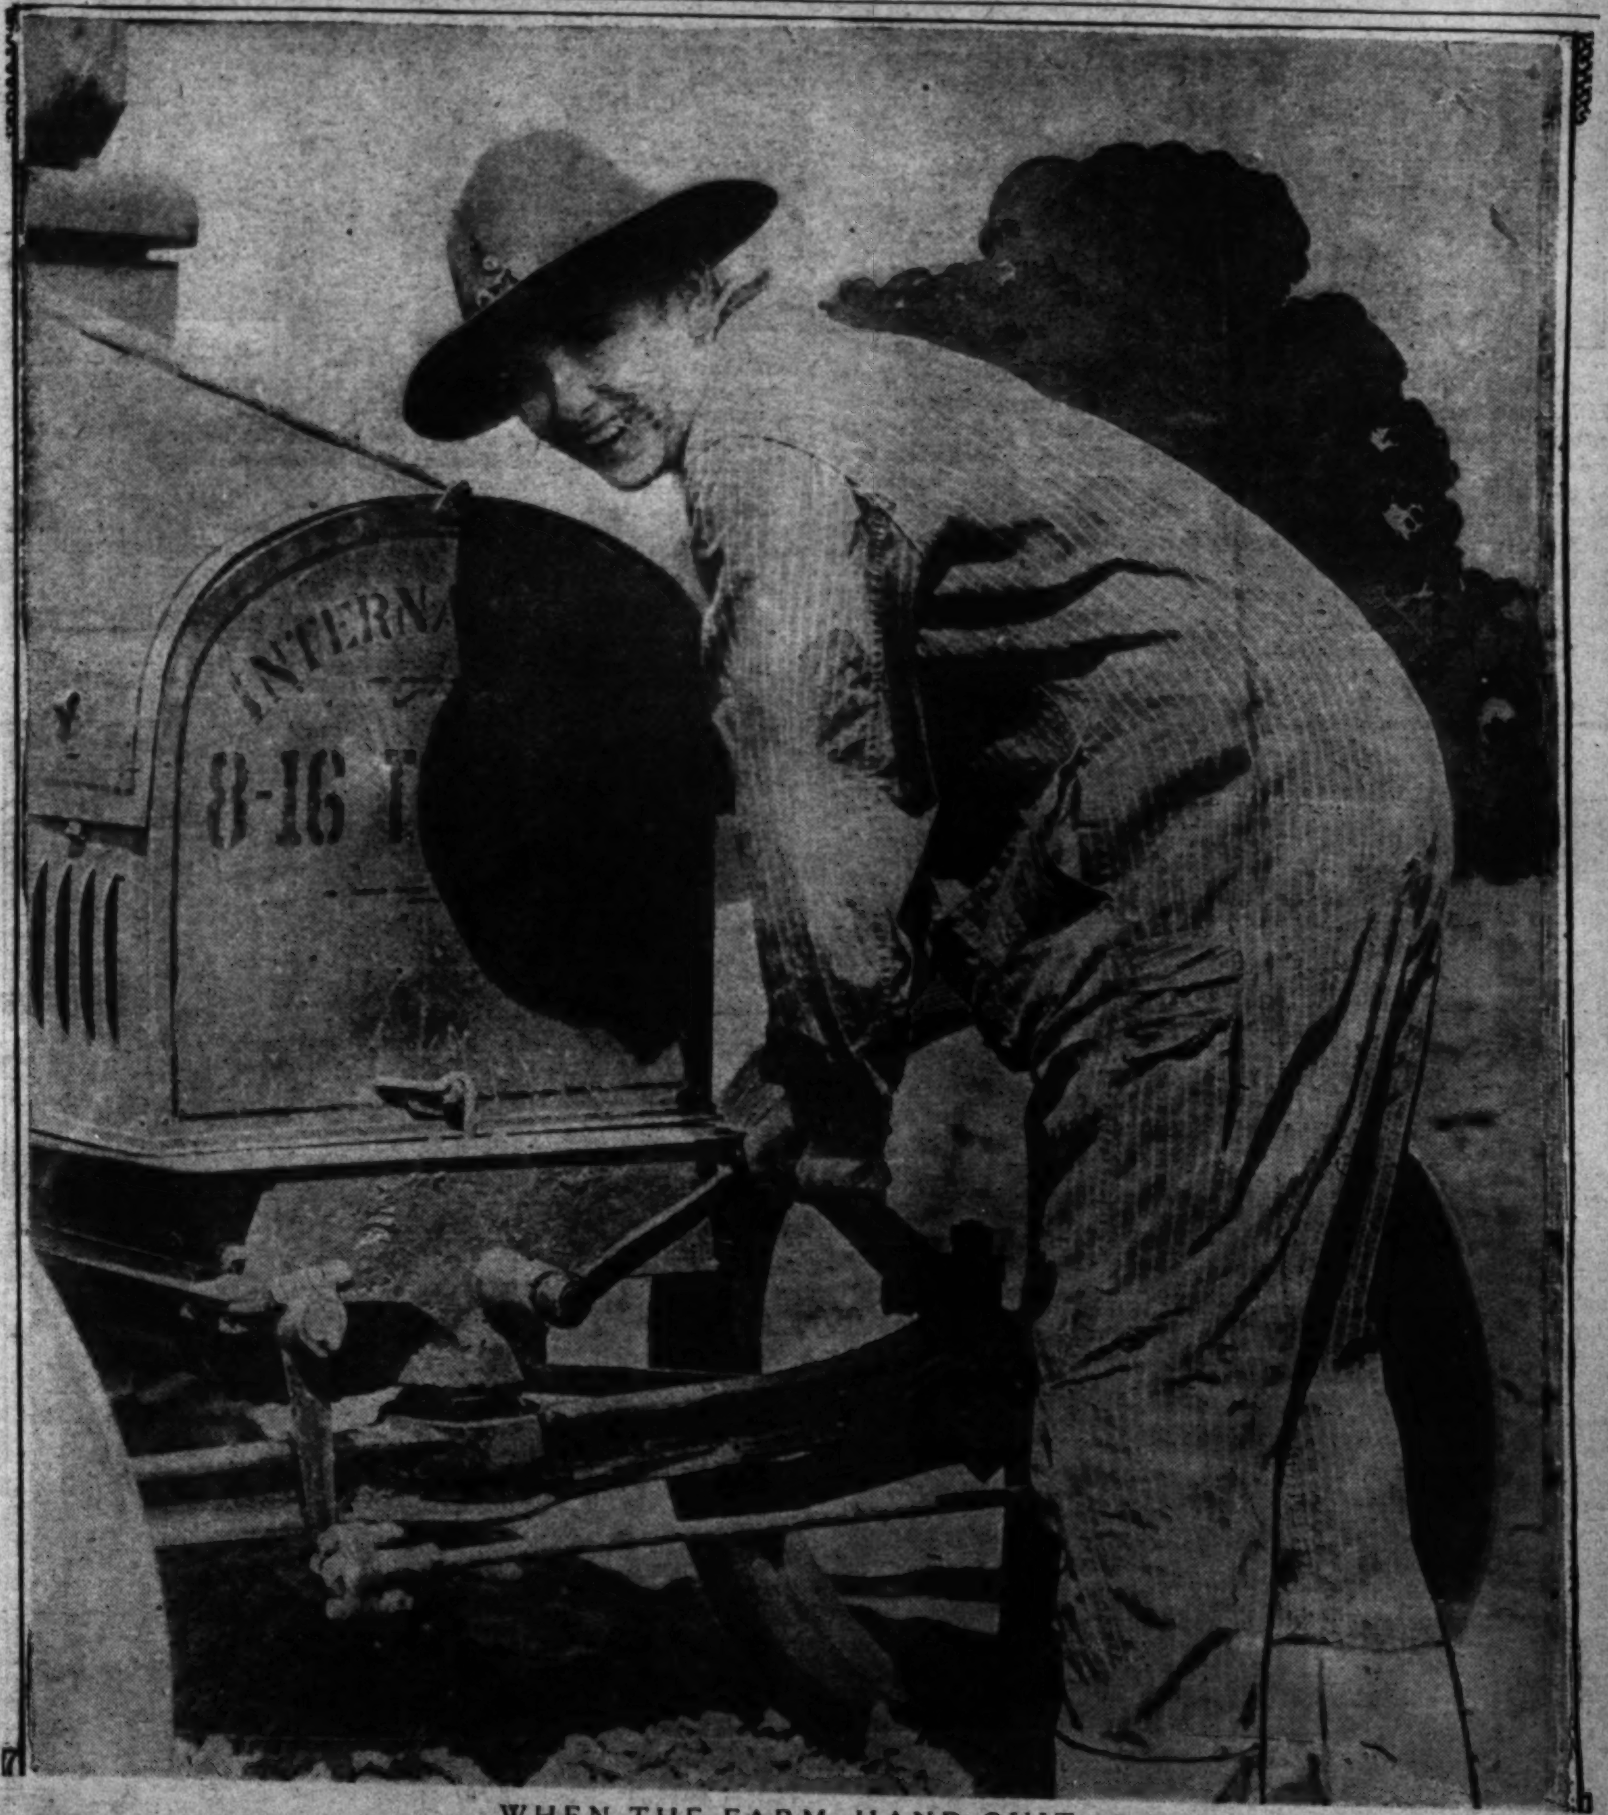
PROGRESS AND PRODUCTION

SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 27, 1920.

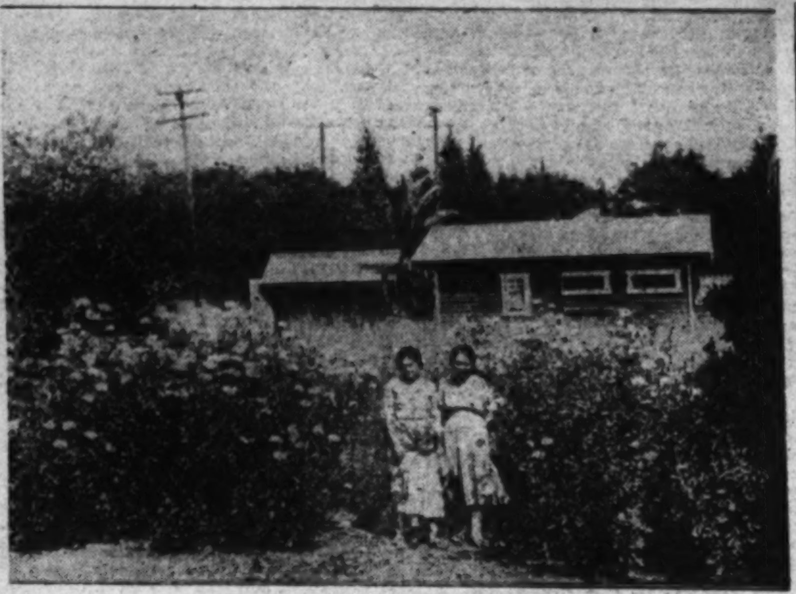


WHEN THE FARM HAND QUIT.

THE TASK OF FILLING THE SWEET TOOTH

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.



The Matilija Poppy. Rightfully the State's Flower.

WHY is it that some persons will spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on a residence, and almost no thousands on the grounds? Does one's home begin at the front gate, or at the front door? The best architect and the best builder are chosen for the house, but the grounds are turned over for arrangement and planting to a gardener who is paid but $100 a month.

Occasionally the owner arranges the grounds to please himself, yet he is generally less competent to design the grounds than the house. He has had some experience with houses; with gardens, none. House design is more or less exact; every garden presents a new problem. Yet there are not wanting both owners and gardeners who rush into garden design without the slightest conception of what should be. A common gardener knows no more of garden design than does a common carpenter of house design, and is as impotent in planning aright. Both deal with materials alone; both need plans and specifications to build with, and many do not even understand these.

All main features of home grounds bear a definite relation to the house, and all drives, walks and other utility features must be carefully planned, with this relation within mental grasp. Every feature of embellishment must then be studied, for they are all secondary to the utilitarian features. The garden plan and planting should be made to accentuate the style of architecture in the house, whether the latter be a rustic bungalow or a stately castle. It is well that the owner express his taste and personality in the garden, as he did when he chose the style of dwelling he wished to build. And he should express it in the same way—tell a garden designer what he wishes, that the latter may incorporate all into a harmonious whole. Then, and not until then, will the grounds be worthy of the residence.

The Duck Flower.

The Garden Background.

Every house should have a background, and trees alone will accomplish this. As a rule, only round-topped and umbrageous trees are necessary, but occasionally spire-like tops are needed, or the oriental reflection that only tall and stately palms can give. Except in cases of low, one-story houses, the background must be of large trees, or those of rapid growth. Bungalows of mission or oriental architecture should have one or more lofty palms at side or rear, to place the erection, in fancy at least, a century or more ago.

Wild Gardens.

William Robinson, of England, is the leading apostle of the wild garden. The wild garden does not consist of a piece of untamed wildwood. Those best carried out have a few native trees for a foundation. It should be of informal outline and design, and all planting so placed and subjects so chosen that all will appear in natural environment and largely thrive uncared for. Evidences of man's handiwork should not appear, or if they do must be made to blend with the natural, a treatment requiring some skill. Nothing so lends itself to wild gardening as a hollow, a wash, or a canyon.

Nitrogen From the Air.

A reader wishes to know if plants of the pea or bean family really add nitrogen to the soil, or if they use up all they collect. "When they die has any nitrogen been added to the soil?" he asks.

Be it understood that leguminous plants of themselves add nothing more to the soil than other plants. The nitrogen is collected by bacteria which works only on roots of this order of plants. The bacteria not only furnishes enough nitrogen for the host plant, but when the roots of these plants decay, the nitrogen present in the nodules is distributed within the soil. Every leguminous crop with nitrogen nodules on the roots, therefore, adds nitrogen to the soil. This may range in amount up to a hundred or more pounds per acre.

Forms of Nitrogen.

Nitrogen seems to be little understood, judging from questions asked this department. Aside from nitrogen gathered from the air by bacteria, it is found in commercial fertilizers in three forms: ammonium salts, nitrates, and organic nitrogen. The latter is divided into two classes: available and unavailable. Peat is often rich in nitrogen, but in an insoluble form. Fermentation must first take place. Lime and rich stable manure, when mixed with peat, soon start fermentation and the whole mass is then a valuable fertilizer. Undecomposed peat has little value.

Big Families.

The sunflower or composite family, known to botanists as Natural Order Compositae, embraces 10,000 members. It includes artichokes and lettuce among many edibles, and chrysanthemums, dahlias and daisies among the posies. The potato-tomato family contains 1500 species, including eggplant, chili and other peppers, tobacco and nightshades. The mint family has at least 2500 species; even the cactus family has a thousand. The rose family, of a thousand species, is an important one, for it contains all the berries, apples, cherries and all such fruits. Beans, peas, acacias and clovers all belong to one big family of 6500 members. The grass family runs from lawn grass to bamboos and contains all our wheat, oats, corn and other grains, in all, 3000. One other family, which deeply concerns us, includes the mustards, cabbage, cauliflower, radish, turnips, garden stocks and other flowers.

The Duck Flower.

The aristochias are "queer ducks," especially the one which bears a blossom variously known as duck-flower, goose-flower, swan-flower or pelican-flower. It is a variety of Aristolochia grandiflora, seeds of which were sent to E. D. Sturtevant, now of Los Angeles, and by him first flowered, so Watson, of Kew Gardens, England, named it: variety Sturtevantii, after our good friend of the water lily gardens, Hollywood. It more closely resembles a duck than any other flower, and the resemblance is a striking one. Our photo is from a flower grown in Lincoln Park Conservatory, Los Angeles. Another striking species of this tribe is A. macrophylla, known as the "Dutchman's Pipe," a flower equally as curious as the duck-flower.

Ancient Plants.

The following well-known plants have been cultivated more than 4000 years: Almond, apple, apricot, banana, bean, cabbage, cucumber, date palm, eggplant, fig, grape, olive, onion, peach, pear, quince, rice, turnip, watermelon and wheat. The blackberry and cranberry are much less than a hundred years in cultivation, and the following have been known but a few hundred years: Lima bean, pepper, pineapple, potato, pumpkin, squash, strawberry and tomato.

Randall's Thorns.

Congressman Randall has been sending to "dear friends"(?) collections of "rare trees, etc., including the hardy three-leaved orange, grown from seed in the Botanic Garden." Evidently someone at said botanic garden has been "stringing" the gullible M.C. for California. Nurserymen have for many years been growing "the hardy three-leaved orange" by hundreds of thousands, for stock upon which to bud, though it is now almost entirely discarded. It makes an ugly, thorny, scrawny little bush, with fruits smaller than golf balls and nearly as non-edible. Local inspectors have "seized" the hedge thorns, because they were infested with insects injurious to citrus trees, and now the inspectors are threatened with prosecution "for destroying United States property," clearly within legal rights, conceded by the Federal government. Moreover, the greenhouses at Washington, according to recent visitors from our State, contain more insect pests than all those in the State of California combined. Huh!

The Broad Lawn, Garvanza Park, Los Angeles.

"Association Approved" Citrus trees!

Every tree in our splendid stock of hardy Lemons, Limes, Oranges and Grapefruit has received the stamp of approval of the Fruit Growers' Association. This means that they are A No. 1 in every particular. All choice two-year-old budded trees. Order early, as our stock is limited and citrus trees very scarce.

The Dairy Herd as an Aid in Avocado Culture.

Looking out over the Arroyo Seco towards the beautiful Sierra Madre El Mirador Ranch, north of Pasadena, combines the homely dairy with the esthetic avocado grove, the first as an aid to the other, the valuable fertilizer being spread over a five-acre orchard of young avocados. The excellent herd of Holsteins, too, return a profit to help along the young trees against the time when they will produce fruits. El Mirador is one of the many ranches in Southern Californita that is preparing, by extensive planting to the best varities of avocados, to supply an inordinate demand for the highest priced horticultural product known. Eventually the avocado grove is to extend over the hills back of the dairy. Each a year a few acres of Fuerte or Puebla avocados are set out and nurtured under the supervision of an experienced horticulturist who has made a study of them for many years. Most of the trees were set out two years ago, but some of them are four years old. It is the endeavor of the ranch superintendent to provide natural conditions for the avocados. Thus a deep mulch of straw and leaves and an overhead spray system imitate the climatic conditions and the environment of the tree in its native heath, Guatemala and Central Mexico.

Continuous culling out of unprofitable cows has built the El Mirador Holstein herd up to a point of unusual milk production. The milking barns, having concrete floors and plenty of light and air, are proudly shown by the owners of the ranch. A corps of six men keep the barns clean and do the milking in the most sanitary way, with milking machines. The foreman of the dairy states that, by using the machines, he is able to do without the services of two men. His experience has been that milking machines, if used continuously, are an aid to greater production of milk. Cows which have been milked by hand for some time, he has learned, will not produce quite as much milk when milked by machines as they would when milked by hand, but heifers, milked with machines as soon as they are fresh, do better when they are used continuously. The milk from the El Mirador Ranch supplies homes in the exclusive Orange Grove avenue section of Pasadena.

Day-Old Chicks, Culling and Selection.

THE ADVICE OF A VETERAN. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

Dark Cornish Cock.
Owned by Percival E. Edouart, Los Angeles.

NO LESS an authority on poultry culture than Lyman C. Byce the father of the chicken business in the Petaluma district writes to the Farm and Tractor Section of The Times, on the importance of culling, as follows:

"Just received a copy of your article under the caption of 'Culling Cuts Cost and Increases Profits,' and it is a timely topic. Another one that will stand quite a bit of elaboration is the fact that poultrymen cannot ever expect to build up a heavy laying strain of fowls by taking their chicks year after year at random from the hatcheries; they never know what they are getting; can never tell from whose stock the chicks are coming, and this may undo all they have tried to accomplish.

"Oregon and Washington are ahead of California in selecting, which is just another way of putting it. Many Petaluma poultrymen have been patronizing northern poultrymen who have been trapnesting. One man went to Oregon, purchased 100 cockerels, and farmed them out among the Petaluma poultrymen whose eggs he had been taking for hatching purposes, and there is no doubt that the stock from these matings will give good chicks with an improvement on the flocks generally. Now if those who get such chicks would cull or select, they will be on the right track for good work in the future. Many of the Petaluma poultrymen are just waking up to the necessity of selection. Mr. Walls, whose hens have been in the lead at the Santa Cruz egg laying contest, is doing fine with his attempt at selection, and it will mean much to him. He is having a demand for cockerels that will bring him good money.

"Selection, or culling, is something that all cannot handle because of the lack of that great quality, discrimination. If all could see a fowl as it is, equally well, then we would all be good judges, instead of a few hold the monopoly of judging at the big shows. If one is selecting for egg type, he must get into his head the characteristics which make up the type of bird he wants, and work to that end. One man will succeed admirably, while another will only do fairly well, and still others make a miserable failure of it."

An Advertising Awakening.

In an address before a recent poultry institute held at Van Nuys, M. A. Schofield, of the Poultrymen's Co-operative Association, called special attention to the fact that the price of eggs has not kept pace this spring and summer with the increased cost of production: that the number of eggs in storage this year is about three-quarters of a million cases short of the holdings last year; that ordinarily this would indicate a condition favorable to the poultrymen this fall and winter; that poultrymen have the hostility of the consumer as regards high prices of eggs and dairy products to overcome, and that this comes from misinformation. Agitators have, for some reason, chosen eggs and dairy products as a point of attack. This opens up the question of an advertising campaign, as a means of acquainting the public, not only with the quality of the eggs marketed by the poultry producers of Southern California, but also the difficulties surrounding the poultry industry at present, and explaining to the public why eggs must be high, present circumstances considered.

All of which furnishes food for thought. The economic results that are sure to follow an intelligent advertising campaign are indeed momentous, and of wide application. Limiting its influence alone to a single town, say with half a million population, if it resulted in the consumption of only one additional egg per day for every two persons of its population, we would have an additional sale of not less than 250,000 eggs per day, approximately 20,800 dozen, nearly 700 cases. Cut this estimate in half, and allow only one additional egg for every four persons, and you still have increased the consumption to an extent that will warrant a profitable market to the producer. Good advertising will help sustain the poultry industry and insure its future on a living basis. The wider use of eggs appeals as forcibly to the consumer as to the producer, and is as acute in Illinois as it is in California and Maine. Since costs of poultry feeds affect chiefly the poultry farmer, he is placed in a position where self-preservation demands that he increase the consumption of his product, by exploiting its food values in an intelligent appeal to the consumer. Effective publicity is nothing more nor less than good salesmanship, and that is what the egg farmers must have for their product.

If it is feasible to place other breakfast foods in the public mind and on the dining tables of a nation, the use of eggs can be doubled by intelligent advertising. Their food values must cease to be a novelty, and become a recognized economic fact in every household—and it's up to the poultry breeders to make them so. But will they do it?

Elements in Fowl Nutrition.

Since most living things are of the earth earthy, it stands to reason that the mineral elements in food are by no means insignificant. Is it not the mineral element in green foods that lends to their importance? Touching on this phase of animal feeds and feeding, F. B. Forbes has an interesting article in the International Review, entitled the 'Mineral Elements in Animal Nutrition" in which it is stated that "Cereals are little suited to the formation of bones." Also that "the question of the mineral contents of food has at the present day become of special importance as a result of the forced feeding of selected animals, in view of the rate at which they mature, and their high degree of production. The mineral requirement for maintenance alone is limited in comparison with requirement for the production of meat, eggs and milk. The ash content of fowls must be greater in proportion as the production is more intense."

All of which has a bearing on stamina and virile breeding qualities. In this country, corn has been the great staple grain in animal feeding, to which poultry is no exception, and though it may be desirable for egg production, it is not, according to Mr. Forbes, suitable during the growing period. As a result of his experiments where corn was fed almost exclusively, "the bones, muscle, liver, kidneys, lungs, heart and spleen contribute to an abnormally small extent to increase in weight, and fat content. The bones are lacking as much in density, as is shown by their low ash content, as to resistance to breakage."

Does this not afford a suggestion for the proper handling of breeding stock? If we are to have robust strains of fowl, each and every division of the fowl's anatomy must typify the perfect machine. If we have great fecundity, it will bring on defects in other directions; the same is true if all effort is made for meat purposes. Verily, every excess produces a defect, and every defect an excess.

California Egg to the Fore.

According to New York market reports, Pacific Coast eggs reaching that market come chiefly from two sources, viz., the Oregon Poultrymen's Co-operative Association, and the two co-operative organizations in California. For the most part our eggs are recognized as "Golden Gate Pacific Coast Specials." "Pacific Coast," "California and Petaluma," and "Pacific Coast Whites." The factors that give them precedence over those coming from other localities are (1) accurate grading as to size and color, (2) careful packing which insures against breakage, and (3) freshness and quality. These are only possible under organized effort where the entire product constituting a carload comes under the supervision of experts, and where the crop can be harvested simultaneously from many poultry farms, thus insuring freshness and an even quality. Possibly no other State has made more rapid advancement in the co-operative method of marketing farm products than California, in which her poultry interests promise to occupy a position of equal importance with her fruit growers and shippers.

Caught on the Wing.

•The Framingham (England) Egg Society assembled and sold 15,000,000 eggs during the past twelve months, realizing $1,220,000.

The 1920 Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show at the California State Fair will take place September 4-12. Increased awards and alluring sweepstake prizes are announced.

The second egg-laying test, now under way at Santa Cruz, is attracting much attention, hence plans are being arranged for a contest to succeed the second one which, from all appearances, will be on a larger scale and more complete in detail.

What about the regular winter poultry shows? But few dates have so far been announced on this Coast, while in California the interest seems wanting in interest and vitality.

The May 1, warehouse report of the government shows 2,131,275 cases of eggs, against 3,278,247 cases at same time last year, a decrease of 1,146,972 cases. Holdings April 1, were 121,733 cases, against 319,508 last year.

Two eggs a day on six different days, fifty-two eggs for forty-nine days, such is said to be the remarkable record of a White Orpington pullet owned by the poultry department of the University of Idaho.

The Farm Bureau of Sonoma county is to feature poultry culture in its educational campaign for 1920-21, giving particular attention to disease, its cause and cure.

The Canadian Department of Agriculture is considering a publicity campaign exploiting the food value of eggs in the human dietary; this with a view to widening the market for poultry products by a larger consumption.

Petaluma reports an unusually heavy demand for day-old chicks this season. Some of the commercial hatcheries were unable to fill all their orders.

G. B. Coon, proprietor of the Crestview poultry farm at Corvallis, Or., writes that one of his hens laid an egg on each of eighty-one consecutive days. Certainly some chicken.

Times do change. It was not so very long ago that California was a heavy importer of poultry products from the Eastern States, but not now. Last month our poultrymen exported approximately forty-four carloads of hen fruit.

It is claimed that about $10,000,000 are lost annually to the poultry farmers of Uncle Samuel's farms by neglecting to put their poultry in market condition before selling. In this case we presume poor stock also contributes its influence in an additional annual loss, which is in no way relieved by the present cost of feed.

Riverside Fall Fair Show dates are October 13 to 19, and those for the regular Oakland event November 22 to 28; the latter will be an exhibition of poultry alone, pigeons and rabbits being eliminated this year.

Midsummer Don'ts.

Don't go into the growing of fowl, even in a small way, with mongrels or mixed breeds. It costs no more to feed a blue blood than it does a scrub—at the present price of feed that surely is worth remembering.

Don't imagine that you are in the commercial chicken business as a means of support for the family with 200 hens in a backyard. As a source of a monthly reward for time and labor six to seven hundred would be nearer the mark.

Don't disturb the birds any more than you can help, and never talk in their presence in a loud tone of voice, nor introduce children and dogs into the runs. It is the quiet and contented hens that are the laying and paying ones.

Don't monkey with several varieties or breeds. One breed intelligently handled, will yield better results than several indifferently cared for. Besides one breed properly handled will be quite enough to keep you interested and busy.

Don't wait until the listless bird becomes droopy and sick before pou segregate it from the healthy and give it proper attention. Be on guard for disease and lice and mites before they become a menace to your profits.

Don't overcrowd. There is nothing more inimical to a robust growth and good health. Overcrowded quarters are breeding places for colds and more serious complications; besides a thinning out of the undesirables is also more economical.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Machinery's Advance.

L. J. FLETCHER of Davis, Cal., head of the farm mechanics department of the University of California, has made a survey of machines on farms of the State, the results of which have surprised many who have doubted the strong advance of farm power machines in the Golden State. He finds that there are 13,000 tractors on farms in the southern part of the State and 7000 in Central and Northern California. Last year there were but 9000 tractors in California. He found that there were 27,000,000 acres in farm lands in the State and 12,000,000 acres of improved lands. There are 23,000 farms of less than 160 acres and 66,000 farms of more than 160 acres, 4000 farm managers, 20,000 farm tenants and 65,000 farm owners. The greater number of farms of less than 160 acres lie south of the Tehachepi and the number of these is constantly growing, as the large acreage is being cut up and new lands are being put into cultivation. This accounts in a great measure for the larger number of tractors in use in the southern part of the State. Mr. Fletcher's vision extends to the time in the not very distant future when all farms will be supplied with tractors, and the yearly reorders for tractors will number in the neighborhood of 16,000.

Movies on Farms?

UNQUESTIONABLY there will be a return to food production by a normal number of people. But when? How long will this exodus of both farm laborers, farm owners and farm lessees to cities continue? Upon the answer to this question depends the length of the famine in certain foods which is surely approaching, if exports of foodstuffs keep to their present level.

The effect of the movement from the farm to the city has resulted in decreased acreage in the Middle West and in Atlantic States. Farmers felt that they could not take care of crops if they tilled their entire acreage. They are short-handed, and food production suffers. This situation, unless an embargo is placed on the export of certain foodstuffs, will result in much higher prices, following the operation of the law of supply and demand.

The United States is primarily an agricultural nation. The principal business of this country is to raise and ship foodstuffs and cotton to foreign countries. This country can hardly give up its chief income. Business paralysis would result.

Means must be found to keep the boy on the farm; to so interest the farm laborer that he will stay where he is wanted most; to make the farm home more pleasant both for those who toil for wages and those who have a share in the profits of the fields.

Farm drudgery has been the chief cause for the going of the farm worker to the easier and more pleasant city life. When the farm hand can leave his plow in the field and go to the city, get up at 7 o'clock, ride on the street car to his eight-hour toil in the factory or office and go to the movies at night he will hardly stay on some farm, where he is provided with indifferent sleeping quarters, gets up at 5 o'clock, works until 6 and goes to bed at 8 o'clock for want of anything else to do.

Move the city's conveniences and pleasures to the farm and you have solved the farm-labor problem. It can be done. Tractors, farm machines, good houses, lights, entertainment will help. An Imperial Valley farmer bought a fine projector and a screen and is subscribing to a film exchange. He throws a different picture on the screen almost every night of his large farm. He is in a fair way to solve his labor problem, for he has also provided good houses, clean beds and wholesome food for his men. His example could be imitated in effect on smaller places.

The owner of a piece of land is willing to put up with a few inconveniences in order to pay off the mortgage on the farm and to "get ahead." His wife does her ironing with an old-fashioned sad iron for the good of the family. But the man who is hired by the day or month on these farms cannot be expected to make the same sacrifices and put up with the same conditions as the man who has a stake in the land. The farm owner should remember this fact, and make living conditions equal to the average in his district, if not make them a little better. Get the electric company to extend a line to your farm and buy an electric washer and iron for the women folks. A milking machine would help keep the men in the dairy. Give the tractor a tryout. The boy is anxious to learn to drive it, and the machine will keep him interested. Talk with your neighbors regarding community social affairs and entertainment to keep the men interested. Bring the city conveniences and pleasures to the farm.

SUGAR-HUNGRY AMERICANS LOOK TO GOLDEN STATE FOR RELIEF.

SUGAR! The word means more than it used to. It is sought after more than any other food and has risen above mere money in the things to be desired. More powerful than governments which seek to control its output and price, it has even been credited with the rise and fall of princes and the winning of battles in the late war.

The lack of sugar and its high price is now working a revolution in canning methods and the output of canned goods and has an effect on the amount of fruit housewives are canning. As a result of this situation and owing to the reluctance of canning companies to buy fruit, the market for fresh apricots, peaches and other fruits has been more or less demoralized. The prohibition amendment has been a powerful factor in increasing the demand for sweets.

California is Doing Her Part in Filling the Nation's Sugar Bowl.

Above, loading sorghum for the syrup mil l, shown in the insert picture. Below, loading sugar beets near Anaheim, O range county.

Whether it is true that there is a world shortage of sugar, it is at least certain that the output of sugar from California beet sugar refineries has been lower every year for the last four years, and the acreage planted in sugar beets has shown a corresponding slump. This year is no exception, but the present sugar situation promises to almost double the 1920 acreage of sugar beets next year. The farmer who has a good yield of sugar beets is the envy of his less fortunate neighbors, for the price of beets may be twice that paid in 1919.

The average price paid to sugar-beet raisers last year, when the price of sugar was 15 cents, was $16 per ton.

If the price of sugar stays at 25 cents per pound until next September, and there are strong indications that it will, the farmer who has sugar beets of 17 per cent sugar content will be paid $38 per ton. The average yield of sugar beets in Southern California was 11 tons last year. This yield in 1920 will mean $418 gross per acre for the sugar-beet farmer under above conditions.

SWEETS FROM OTHER SOURCES.

Now that the sugar-beet planting season is past, farmers and capitalists of California are making a great effort to supply the craving of the sweet tooth in other ways than by raising sugar beets.

Fields are being planted to sweet sorghums in every county south of the Tehachepi and in many San Joaquin counties. Sorghum mills, some of which require the expenditure of comparatively small sums, are going up at many crossroads in Los Angeles, Orange, Imperial, Riverside and San Diego counties. The output of sorghum syrup promises to be many times what it ever was before in this State. Even sugar cane culture is being tried in Imperial and Riverside counties. The fact that sweet or sugar sorghums have a heavier yield in Southern California than in the Southern States was proven last year by small growers, and the syrup plant promises to loom large in the list of leading agricultural products in the Golden State in the future.

ALL EYES ON CALIFORNIA.

California produced nearly one-sixth of the beet sugar refined in the United States last year, and reports that sugar-beet acreages in Eastern States have dwindled this year because of the universal shortage of farm labor seem to be well founded. Last year there were 113,000 acres of sugar beets in California and the production was 842,000 tons. South of the Tehachepi this year the acreage planted to beets is greater, and the yield per acre will probably be heavier than average. The eyes of sugar-loving Americans are on California as the greatest source of supply of beet sugar this year.

ORANGE COUNTY OUTPUT.

From present indications the sugar-beet crop of Southern California will not be quite up to the normal, which means a yield of ten tons to the acre, according to Orange county sugar refiners. It will be better than last year, however, and with the increase in prices, the grower will reap a good reward for his labor.

It is evident that the best crop will be in the Artesia section, which was one of the first sections to be devoted to this crop and which has soil admirably adapted to this sort of ranching. It is probable that the yield will run close to fifteen tons per acre. This section is growing about 15,000 acres, which will be handled by the Los Alamitos factory.

The Huntington Beach factory will handle beets from about 10,000 acres and will slice about 100,000 tons of beets. It will take about eighty days to handle the crop. The factory gets beets from the southern part of Los Angeles county and from Orange county.

It is stated that the crop conditions in the territory tributary to the Oxnard factory are not quite as favorable as in Orange county. In the latter locality the outlook is very good and in many fields the crop will run far above the average. It is understood that the Chino factory will not be operated this season.

From every indication the prices paid for beets under the prevailing contract will be high. A factory man who knows conditions and is familiar with the contracts under which the producers are operating estimates that the grower will receive an average of $30 per ton for 15 per cent beets and as high as $44 for 20 per cent beets. The prices are based on two chief factors. One is the percentage of sugar in the beets, the other the prevailing price of sugar in the market. The sliding scale of prices increases at the rate of 80 cents for each 1 per cent additional sugar content in the beets, and $1.33 cents for each additional ton above the minimum. It takes some careful figuring to get at the actual value of any man's crop in advance. But it is very evident that the growers will receive more than double the prices of last season.

The latest estimates from the Anaheim factory are that it will handle 13,000 acres of beets from Orange county, while the Santa Ana Sugar Company at Santa Ana will handle its full share of the abundant crop of that section.

The factories will all begin their work about August 1 and continue from eighty to ninety days. Just now the beet fields are good to look upon and many of the growers will have a heavy crop of high-grade beets and reap a big return.

Reports from Kern county are to the effect that sorghum is making history for itself in these days of high sugar. The Symonds brothers ranch, in the Weed Patch section, near Bakersfield, was the first place in the county to start raising sorghum as a commercial commodity, and many other farmers are taking up the crop. According to the Symonds boys conditions in various parts of the county are admirable for the raising of sweet sorghum. They have recently added the proper machinery to handle a large crop and will turn the syrup out to the grocers of the county.

RAISING MUSTARD.

SANTA BARBARA.—Because the mustard crop in the Lompoc Valley has not been showing up well in the immediate vicinity of the town of Lompoc, and in other sections is flourishing, reports on the prospects for the 1920 crop have been conflicting. Some reports have described the crop as a failure, others that it would go above the average. A careful investigation, in a tour through the valley, brings the statement that the crop well be at least normal, and may go above the average. Because of the losses the bean growers have sustained on account of the influx of Oriental beans, many of Lompoc ranchers this year planted their fields to mustard. The lack of rains has seriously affected some of the fields in the immediate vicinity of Lompoc, but outlying districts report good prospects. Over 75 per cent of the world's commercial mustard is grown in Lompoc Valley.

ALFALFA MAN SATISFIED.

MESA.—That all the profit in agriculture within the Salt River Valley is not coming from cotton has been demonstrated by W. J. Longmore, who, from two cuttings of alfalfa on a forty-acre field, already has received a net profit of $2100, this from 112 tons of hay. He expects his profits for the season from the field to be $6000, or about $150 an acre. Prime hay now is selling at from $25 to $32 a ton, eagerly taken by speculators and feeders.

POULTRY RAISER MUST DETERMNIE THE "BEST RATION" FOR HIMSELF.

BY JAMES A. ROGERS.

AMONG both commercial poultrymen and keepers of back-yard flocks there are as many different feeding methods, almost, as there are flocks. There is really no best poultry ration. There are many excellent, satisfactory rations, and the mixtures which are suitable to one poultryman, keeping one breed in a certain part of the State, may not be suitable for another keeping the same breed in another section. And different breeds may require dissimilar foods and quantities.

A well-balanced poultry ration contains the proper proportion of protein and carbohydrates to satisfy the needs and desires of the poultry flock, while it also carries the mineral matter, bulk and palatibility necessary to accomplish good feeding results. The aim of poultry raisers is to learn what mixture of poultry feed gives best results under his conditions, and then to use this relative proportion in making rations, or in substituting different feeds according to their price and availability.

In Southern California, where poultry raising is carried on in intensive fashion, rations are given more study than any other angle of the game. Here, perhaps as nowhere else in the country, not even excepting the Petaluma district—is this factor given more study, and the results have shown grave deliberation and much experimentation, for the poultry business of this particular section has greatly advanced in recent years.

Many excellent poultry rations, suitable for Southern California conditions, have been developed by feed houses from formulas used by the best poultrymen. It is a good plan for those not engaged in raising eggs or carcasses for a living to trust in rations advised by well-known houses, and put up under their own name. However, too many raisers of small poultry flocks depend on the corner feed store when buying grain mixtures, mashes, etc. There is absolute profiteering in mixtures among some of these conscienceless feed sellers, who have no reputation to keep up, and therefore do not consider their reputations in selling their neighbors chaff, dirt and ground straw as bran.

KEEP HUNGER AWAY.

Provide the hens with ample nourishment. One of the greatest feeding crimes is to let them get real hungry. Hens raise the "No Food, No Eggs" sign whenever they are neglected in this respect and it is hard to get them to abandon their "laying strike" when they begin it.

The successful poultryman is he who recognizes the indications of hunger in his flock, and changes his ration so as to provide the hens with the menu they desire for egg production. The hen must not only get fuel enough for her own body, but get enough for the eggs she is laying.

The flock may get hungry not only from lack of food, but because of the use of "unbalanced rations, or from feeding mixtures deficient in lime, grit, oyster shell, or other elements highly essential to flock welfare.

There are ten vital elements in the poultry ration: cracked corn, wheat, barley and oats, meat scrap, middlings, bran, green feed, grit and oyster shell.

The most important feed for the hens is the grain mixture. The next most important is the mash. Then green feeds, grit and oyster shell positively must be supplied if the poultry are to be kept in complete health and at maximum egg production.

MAKE-UP OF THE MASH.

Hens love mash. Usually, ground feeds, such as corn meal, corn chop, corn and cob meal, gluten meal and alfalfa meal are used ground barley, cottonseed meal, linseed meal gluten meal and alfalfa meal are used in the mash. Sometimes charcoal is added to guard against digestive troubles. Where the hens have access to table scraps or a good range it is not necessary to feed so much animal protein, such as beef scraps, fish meal, etc. Skim milk or buttermilk contains a large percentage of water, and will not entirely replace the meat feed unless fed as cottage cheese. Ten pounds of skim milk are equal to one pound of meat scrap in feeding value. From three-quarters of an ounce to one ounce of green cut bone to the hen may be used daily in place of the beef scrap. Small table scraps or garbage must be in good condition, as moldy and sour feeds and solty meat are injurious. If much salt has been used in the preparation of the meat it should be washed off before being fed to the poultry. Green feeds, such as lettuce, cabbage, beets, chopped alfalfa, alfalfa meal, or sprouted barley should be supplied to hens that are confined, or to poultry on range during the dry season. Oyster shells and grit should be supplied to the fowls at all times. All the ground grains mentioned above, except the cottonseed or linseed meals, may be combined with meat scrap or skimmed milk by providing ten to twenty-five pounds of meat meal or its equivalent to a 100-pound mixture of mash. Because cottonseed and linseed meals are rich protein feeds, they should be used in limited quantities. The poultry keeper should regulate the proportion of scratch grains and mash so that the fowls will consume about equal parts of each.

Scaly Leg Can Be Cured.

RATIONS FOR LAYING HENS.

The following rations may be used for small poultry flocks, in addition to table scraps, or where little meat is contained in the scraps. Ration No. 3 contains no wheat products, thereby reducing the cost of this scratch feed materially:

NUMBER ONE.

Mash—16 pounds corn meal, 6½ pounds beef scrap, 1 pound bran, 1 pound middlings. Scratch mixture—1 pound cracked corn, 1 pound wheat or barley, 1 pound oats.

NUMBER TWO.

Mash—2 pounds corn meal, 1 pound bron, 1 pound middlings, 1 pound beef scrap. Scratch mixture—2 pounds cracked corn, 1 pound wheat or barley, 1 pound oats.

NUMBER THREE.

Mash—3 pounds corn meal, 1 pound beef scrap.

Scratch mixture—2 pounds cracked corn, one pound oats.

NUMBER FOUR.

Mash—2 pounds cottonseed meal, 2 pounds beef scrap, 4 pounds bran, 5 pounds middlings, 9 pounds corn meal.

Scratch mixture—1 pound cracked corn, 1 pound wheat, 1 pound oats.

Can the Garden Crops.

Seal the jars tightly, and invert on the drainboard to test for tightness and to cool.

CANS ARE LESS EXPENSIVE.

When tin cans are used, home canning is less expensive, and the danger of breakage is not so great. But greater care must be taken in sealing by this method. Cans are now sold which have solder-hemmed tops. Other cans have a strip of waxed twine which is placed around the aperture. Another method of canning in tin, and perhaps the best, is to use a regular home canning outfit, including as oldering capper.

The processing or boiling of the jars in the container may be done on the kitchen stove or on a furnace built out of doors.

Several types of canners, by which the work can be done more easily than with a home-made outfit, are on the market. The hot-water bath canner is the least expensive commercial type. There are two kinds, one, which may be placed on the kitchen stove, and another, which has a firebox and pipe attached for use out of doors. Each has a sterilizing vat, lifting trays, tongs for handling hot jars, false bottoms, and tools necessary in sealing tin cans. Tin cans or glass jars may be used with any outfit.

There are also steam-pressure outfits for home use. They develop a higher temperature than the water-bath canners mentioned. Steam-pressure outfits are made to carry from five to thirty pounds of steam pressure and are regulated easily.

BETTER TO CAN THAN BE SORRY.

Many a family that is fond of strawberry preserves or raspberry shortcake during the winter months finds itself in the fall without any of these delicious small fruits on its canned fruit shelves. The fruit ripens so rapidly that the housewife, often times, is caught unprepared—without jars, tops, rubbers or some other canning necessity—and the crop is gone before she can procure them.

The season of any of the small fruits is very short, and full preparation for the canning should be made before vacation season.

If you are going to get a new canner this year—and one certainly simplifies the work—the time to get it is now. If a lard can or a wash boiler is to be used for processing the cans, see that the false bottom used last year is in perfect condition or make a new one.

All cans and their tops should be washed carefully as they are emptied and before they are stored. If they were not, now is the time to put them into immaculate condition. Every particle of foreign matter inside or outside should be removed and the flanges around the top scrubbed with a brush. Then the whole can and its top should be boiled in soda water. If pickles haveb een in the jar, extra care must be taken. After boiling, the open jar should be placed in the sunshine out of doors for several days. A large part of the losses in canning is caused by the jars and tops not being absolutely clean.

PRIZES FOR BEST PIGS.

GOLETA.—Mrs. Viola Renwick, C. W. Dabney and M. R. Potter have offered cash prizes to the winners of the boys' and girls' pig club pig-raising contest which has already started. Thoroughbred pigs have been secured from Los Angeles county clubs, and are now at the Bishop ranch. The farm adviser insists on clean quarters for the porkers. The banks want none but the signatures of the boys. The following boys and one girl have signed application blanks: Lewis Sherrill, Joe Palmatto, John Troy, Jr., Norval Fast, George Williams, J. G. Williams, David Richards, Philip Jones, Philip Davis, Ellen Lineswith, Ralph Larsen and James Henry.

The Little Type Tractor.

to capacity in day and night shifts to fill orders.

Some of the later types of these machines are made so that the operator may ride. These are chiefly designed for lawn cutting. One of the machines has four wheels, with the castor wheels in front. But the types made may be divided generally into two classes: those which plow and those which do not. The classes which plow are invariably of larger size than those which merely cultivate or cut lawns. The machines which plow are designed to draw single and double mouldboard plows, disc plows, chisel cultivators, weed cutters, etc. This equipment is carried by the dealers handling the machines, and some of the small tractors come equipped with the small tools. Unquestionably these little tractors will be developed to such a point in the near future that they will come equipped with implements for special work in crops, such as sugar-beet culture, cotton and seed raising.

One of the strongest points of the little one-horse tractor is its usefulness in preparing a seed bed and seeding. It may be fitted to a seeder which seeds four rows at a time with dexterity and greater speed than if a horse was used.

POTATO MEN ORGANIZE.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Potato growers of the San Bernardino Valley recently perfected a marketing organization which is affiliated with the California Vegetable Union. A. E. Davis was elected permanent chairman and thirty-three farmers joined the association. T. H. Lambert and A. E. Thomas, of the El Monte Potato Growers' Association were present and told of the workings of that body. Many problems of culture and marketing were discussed. More than 100 acres were represented in the signatures to the membership contract.

RICE A SUCCESS.

WESTMINSTER.—This section will see twenty acres in rice this year. For some years the experiment in rice growing has been going on here until the crop is now called by many an assured success. On the lands of the Lomita Gun Club there are fifteen acres and on the Samamac Club holding four acres. Last year there was a good crop on the lands devoted to rice and the probabilities seem to be that the future will see this section a successful rice producer.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

LOMA LINDA.—It pays to raise ducks. Mrs. S. Wood, living between Redlands and San Bernardino, says so, and she has the figures to prove it. She made her first experiment several years ago, when she had about 500 little ducklings. She kept them for eight weeks, fattening them on mash and grain, and at that time they weighed from five to six pounds. She sold them at her ranch for 20 cents a pound, realizing more than $500 from the entire lot, the net profit being almost half of that. They were the mammoth Peking breed. Mrs. Wood has again gone into the business on a smaller scale. She hatched all her ducks that year under hens, and it takes four weeks to hatch duck eggs, so Mrs. Wood says that it was hard work, harder work for the hens than for her. Mrs. Wood says that most people will say "but I can't raise ducks, you know, we have no place for them to get to water." That always gets a laugh out of Mrs. Wood, for the thing she worked hardest for was to keep them out of water. A duck can swim, but it must not be allowed to get to water too early, or it will catch cold and die, as sure as can be. Mrs. Wood has one of the finest chicken yards in this section, and she had mostly thoroughbreds. "I like all kinds," she says, "for I have pure-bred Rocks, Anconas, Wyandottes and Reds. I must confess that I do love the Red, it is an all around hen."

FRUIT LOOKS GOOD.

BAKERSFIELD.—That the fruit growers of Kern county, and other counties in the San Joaquin Valley, will receive higher prices for their product this year than last, is indicated by the attractive prices paid so far this season, according to Kent S. Knowlton, horticulturist. Canneries are in the field offering $90 and $100 a ton for clingstone peaches, while freestones are contracted for at $60. The grape industry in Kern county is most promising this year, says Knowlton. Approximately half a million vines were set out this year.

GROWERS FROWN AT PRICES.

REDLANDS.—The apricot growers of the South got a surprise when the prices to be paid for apricots by the canneries were announced. The canneries were offering only about $80 a ton, when by all the laws of a short crop and a heavy demand for the fruit, the price should have been better, the growers believe. Most of them are holding their fruit for $90 a ton and it is probable that the best will bring that price. The growers of peaches also have not been satisfied with the advance prices as set by the canneries, and they are holding out for a $20 differential between the cling and the freestone peaches. Peaches are bringing a good price where they are being bought on the trees. The apricot crop is not nearly as large as last year, and not an average crop, but the high price of sugar is said to be the reason for not paying more for the fruit. Canning men say that apricots take more sugar than do other fruits, and that for this reason they cannot pay as much for the fruit as for others. L. O. Yount of West Redlands says that the growers of the Redlands district have no worry coming to them, for they can sell all their fruit at a good figure to the dryers. The drying houses will soon be in operation, and it is probable that a large part of the local fruit will go to them. It is predicted that, because of the sugar price, there will be more fruit dried this year than ever before.

HAY INSTEAD OF BEANS.

SANTA BARBARA.—This county is harvesting the heaviest hay and grain crop in many years. Failure of the small white bean to find a market during the past two or three years caused farmers to turn to other agricultural activities, and the acreage sowed to hay and grain was therefore greater than for possibly ten years past. There has been sufficient rain in many of the mountain districts of the county to mature heavy crops, and for this reason the yield is greater than in a long time. Prices are also ruling high, with the result that farmers are receiving good returns for their year's work.

SHIPS POTATOES NORTH.

ONTARIO.—All high price records for potatoes were declared broken this week when S. J. Ulrey, prominent Ontario rancher received a check for $4752 for 613 sacks of spuds grown on his Iowa Meadows ranch to the southeast of Ontario. The potatoes, of the White Rose variety, were shipped in two pre-iced cars of 303 and 310-sack capacity, respectively. The first car brought the [illegible] average of better than $7.75 a sack. The potatoes are said to have gone from Ontario to Stockton, from which point they will be distributed to eastern markets. Questioned regarding the phenomenal price received for his tubers, Mr. Ulrey declared the spuds worth every cent received for them. The fame of the Ulrey potato "patch" has spread far and wide, and many experts, including several horticulturists from Oregon, who examined the potatoes, declared them the finest they had ever seen. Mr. Ulrey attributes his success in potato raising in no small degree to great care used in the selection of his seed and to careful cultivation.

STUDENTS VISIT GROVES.

MONROVIA. — Sixteen students of the citriculture class of the University of California, under direction of Dr. J. Eliot Coit, professor of citriculture, this week visited Monrovia in the course of a six weeks' summer travel practice trip they are making. The journey covered the entire fruit-growing district of California, and the travelers were all advanced students in agriculture and fruit-growing courses. About half the number are native Californians, the rest being students who have come here from foreign countries, including England, Japan, China, the Argentine, Australia, India and Brazil. During their Monrovia visit the students were shown over the Williams's persimmon ranch, and later attended a demonstration of scaly bark control and gum disease, made by the county farm adviser.

FIRST PRUNES SHIPPED.

EXETER.—Made up of plums and apricots, the first green fruit to leave Exeter this season was shipped seven days earlier than last year. The first car left June 19 last season. The fruit was shipped from the E. Y. Foley packing plant. This company expects a large run of fruit this summer and has doubled the capacity of the plant.

MORENO AFTER WATER.

MORENO.—The trouble of the lately organized Moreno Mutual Water Company were not by any means ended when they compromised with many of the owners of the lands in the San Timoteo Canyon some time ago. Ranchers near Redlands and some who own land in the Yucaipa district are protesting against taking water out of the San Timoteo Canyon as an invasion of their water rights. Though the Moreno people made a purchase of the El Casco Land Company's ranch in the San Timoteo Canyon, others outside of the canyon claim that the proposed step will take the underground water, to which they have a prior right. The case will be contested vigorously by the Moreno people.

HEAVY PRODUCE SHIPMENTS.

NILAND.—During this time of the year, because of the immense cantaloupe crop, Niland is one of the busiest spots in the valley. Several hundred extra railroad men are here handling cantaloupe trains. One day this week nine trains were made up besides the fast freights that come from Los Angeles with the engines carrying less than their tonnage allotments. On one day $1,000,000 worth of cantaloupes, grain, vegetables and live stock passed through here.

INVESTIGATE PRICES.

HEMET.—In order to stabilize the prices of their fruit, growers met here recently and organized a co-operative marketing association, which will aim to prevent unfair and unjust variations in selling figures. It was pointed out at the meeting that a wide range of prices are received by ranchers who do not belong to either the California Growers' Association or the California Prune and Apricot Association. In one block the price of green apricots varied from $50 to $125. The meeting appointed a committee which will make investigation of market conditions and keep the growers belonging to the new organization apprised of prevailing prices. The committee will also receive bids from fruit buyers, and, when advisable, supply buyers with carload lots.

WEATHER HELPS APRICOTS.

LINDSAY.—With the packing of apricots, the green fruit season has opened in this section. Apricots are bringing from $80 to $90 per ton delivered. All fruit is being shipped fancy pack in the San Joaquin Valley. The fruit is in excellent condition, due to the cool weather in the early spring. Apricots are of good size and color.

FIGHTING PESTS, ARIZONA.

PHOENIX.—The biological survey and the county farm agents are co-operating in efforts to save crops from all manner of insect and animal depredations. Near Tucson a plague of grasshoppers was met by feeding the intruders bran and syrup with which had been mixed arsenic. It is estimated that fully 75 per cent of the hoppers were killed, where a 250-acre field of alfalfa was found thickly covered by them. Near [illegible] Chandler, [illegible] are used arsenic and alfalfa leaves as protection against rabbits that had started depredations upon their young cotton and killed 2000 rabbits in a single night. One farmer testified that he had lost at least $2000 last year through the destruction of young cotton plants by rabbits. His part of the animal destruction for the night was a pile of 200 rabbits, found dead on his land.

TOMATOES FOR CANNING.

TERRA BELLA.—Tomatoes were ripe June 21 on the George B. Roop property, in the Grand View Height tract, Terra Bella irrigation district. There are sixty-five acres in tomatoes on the Roop property, and a large acreage on the Kraner-Ware tract, a short distance south. The crop is being grown for the Terra Bella cannery.

FAIR WALNUT CROP.

SANTA BARBARA.—The walnut crop in Santa Barbara is now shaping up, and gives every expectation of being well up to the average, though in some sections the trees are not bearing well. It is said the larger number of groves in both Carpinteria and Goleta valleys are heavy with walnuts, and the crop is said to be at least two weeks in advance of the ordinary season. Though not all the 1919 crop has been disposed of growers are confident that the market will absorb the walnuts on hand before the 1920 crop is ready for the harvest. Horticultural Commissioner Eugene S. Kellogg has made a careful inspection of walnut groves in this county, and reports that blight or other troubles that might militate against a perfect walnut have not shown up.

PATHOLOGICAL REPORTS.

PORTERVILLE.—Dr. P. A. Bonquet, county plant pathologist, submitted his first report to the Tulare county Board of Supervisors at Visalia recently, explaining some of the work which he is doing. He told of the manner in which the growers and ranchers had responded to his advice covering fall plowing, his warning against winter cover crops, and of his recommendations as to the use of sulphuric acid on alkali soils. He dwelt briefly on his recent investigations as to the dieback of Emperor grapes, the souring of figs and the "June-drop." The conclusion was an appeal for modern equipment for his laboratory.

BLACK CURRANTS.

VISALIA.—Of more than ordinary interest is the sample display of black currants at the Tulare county Board of Trade rooms. These were raised at the Frank Hill ranch, two miles east of Tulare. Black currants are something of a rarity in this section and are attracting attention.

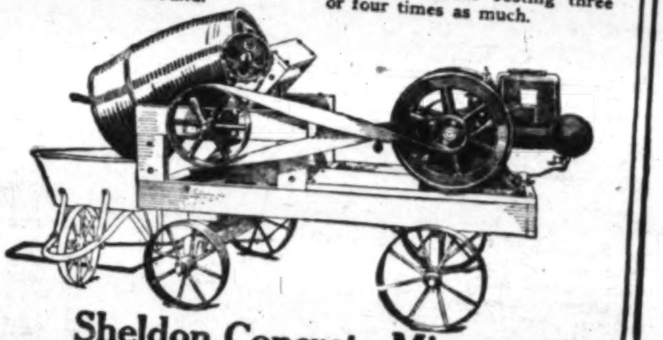
IRRIGATION'S SPREAD.

PHOENIX.—The spread of irrigation on the Arizona plains is to advance into northeastern Yuma county, now the State's most arid section. State Water Commissioner W. S. Norwell has granted the Harrisburg Water Users' Association permission to impound the waters of Centennial wash, in the western Harqua Hala foothills, for the uprpose of irrigating 6753 acres of land lying to the southward.

A Concrete Mixer At Every Man's Price

We consider ourselves very fortunate in securing the exclusive agency in this part of the country for the Sheldon Concrete Mixer. It fills an old need of the contractor and farmer; that of a reliable low-priced mixer that will give perfect results the year around.

The price of the Sheldon Concrete Mixer puts it within reach of every man. In fact, it costs so little that it soon saves its cost in labor saved alone. And the work it turns out would do credit to mixers costing three or four times as much.



Sheldon Concrete Mixers

In this day every farmer and contractor is looking for an economical, labor-saving method of putting in concrete. The Sheldon fills the bill. Farmers and contractors all over the United States—thousands of them—are using the Sheldon and getting perfect results.

The Sheldon is a sturdy machine, built exclusively for the man who does not want to invest a lot of money in a mixer.

However, when a big job comes along, the Sheldon will handle it. It will mix a batch of concrete in from one to two minutes—some users have written us that they have mixed as high as five yards an hour. That is enough concrete to take care of almost any job.

But on small jobs one man can run it and turn out just as satisfactory work as when he is using a whole crew.

Call on us and let us show you the Sheldon—or write us and we will send you a catalog describing every detail of the different models.

MAKE A DRIER AND SAVE THE FRUIT IN THE HOME ORCHARD.

EARLY apricots are now on the market and it will not be long before the fruit season is with us again in earnest. Just as with many a cannery operator today, the high price of sugar is a pertinent cause for insomnia to many a Southern California housewife, who is wondering how she is to save the fruit from the few trees in her back yard, or whether she should make her usual fruit purchases from her country friends.

"Already a considerable number of inquiries regarding ways and means of getting around the necessity for purchasing sugar for canning and preserving purposes have come to the office of the Farm Bureau," said Farm Advisor Robert W. Hodgson of the Los Angeles county office in a recent interview regarding this question. "It is true that fruit can be preserved in several ways with the use of a minimum amount of sugar, and in fact ripe fruits may be satisfactorily put up by the housewife without the use of sugar. Sorghum syrup may be substituted to advantage in the preserving of fruits, and can also be used for various cooking purposes. The outlook is for a considerable increase in the acreage planted to sweet sorghums this year. Several new syrup manufacturing plants are now being erected in various parts of the county. But the greatest number of inquiries have to do with requests for information regarding small home evaporators, outfits of small cost, which require no special skill in construction.

"In the San Fernando Valley and to a certain extent in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys housewives may preserve the crops from home orchard trees by ordinary sun drying. But in other parts of the county recourse must be had to some form of drier, where artificial heat is supplied. We are now gathering together information regarding solar driers, in which the heat is supplied by the sun, but is confined under glass which shuts out undesirable atmospheric moisture as well as keeping out insects.

"Artificially dried fruit is a more sanitary product, as well as considerably superior in quality as a general thing, so we are urging the general use of artificial evaporation for preserving home supplies of fruit. Undoubtedly the best outfit we have yet run across is that designed by Prof. W. V. Cruess of the food products laboratory of the University of California. This drier is extremely simple in construction, inexpensive in operation, and is very cheaply made, costing in the neighborhood of $15. It can be put together in a day by any person with ordinary ability in the use of a hammer and saw, and in addition has given splendid results."

HOW THE DRIER IS MADE.

Following are the plans and specifications for the drier:

Size: The drier stands 42 inches high; of this height 36 inches is made up of the walls and top, while 6 inches represents the legs. It is 32⅝ inches long by 18 inches wide over all, and of 14 1-4x30 inches inside dimensions. It carries seven tray runways, spaced 4 inches apart. Each tray is 24x13¾ inches over all. The bottom of the drier is open except for a piece of sheet metal 11x18 inches, hung in this opening to act as a heat distributor. The top is closed except for an open 14 1-4x4 inches near the door end. One end of the drier is formed by a door, and one end is closed. Thoroughly dried nonresinous wood should be used. Redwood is very good for the purpose.

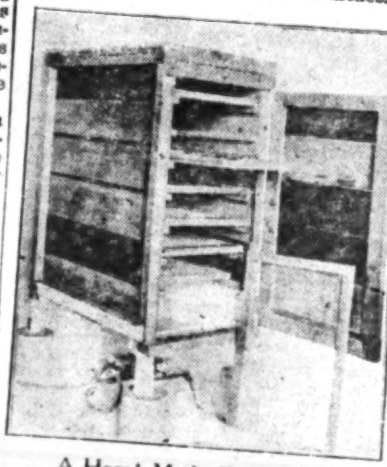
Sides: Each side consists of the following materials: Two pieces 1 1-2x1 1-2x30 inches for top of frame; two pieces, 1 1-2x 1½x31½ inches for sides of frame; two pieces, 1 1-2x1 1-2x27 inches, placed 6 inches from bottom; six pieces 3-8x6x30 inches, seven pieces 1x1x29 1-2 inches for tray runways.

Assemble the frame. Cover with the ⅜x6-inch material, and space it four inches apart on center. The first runway is placed six inches above the bottom of the lowermost ⅜x6-inch piece.

Door: The door is made up of the following materials: Two pieces, 1x1 7-8x 14 1-4 inches; two pieces, 1x1 7-8x32 inches; five pieces, 3-8x6x18 inches; one piece, 3-8x 2x18 inches; three small hinges, and one small hook clasp. Above the door is nailed a piece 1x4x18 inches to brace the frame, and a piece 1x2x18 inches below the door for the same purpose.

End: The end opposite the door is made up of two pieces, 1x1 7-8x14 1-4 inches; two pieces, 1x1 7-8x36 inches; six pieces, 3-8x6x 18 inches; one piece, 1x1 7-8x18 inches placed below the last ⅜x6-inch piece to brace the legs. The 3-8x6-inch material of sides, end and door form the inside walls of the drier; the frame is to the outside. See photographs.

Top: The top is made with an opening equal to the inside width of the drier and with a 4-inch opening, which is located 4 inches from the door end of top. The following pieces are used for the top: Two pieces, 1 7-8x1x14 1-4 inches; two pieces, 1 7-8x1x30 inches; three pieces, 3-8x6x18 inches, and two pieces, 3-8x4x18 inches.



A Home Made Fruit Drier.

Legs: The four pieces of 1 1-2x1 1-2x40 material forming the frame of the sides project six inches below the bottom of the drier and form the legs.

THE METAL RADIATOR.

Radiator: A piece of sheet metal about 11x16 inches, or 11x18 inches, is hung from its four corners by wires looped over nails driven to the frame. This sheet metal should rest about one inch below the bottom of the lowermost 3-8x6-inch pieces forming the sides of the drier. It is used to distribute the heat evenly.

Heater: A small gas plate or a Perfection or similar style of coal oil heater, a very small "airtight" wood or coal-burning style of heating stove, or a small ordinary heating stove or large kitchen range may be used as a source of heat. It will be necessary in most cases to place the drier on bricks or boxes to raise it above the level of the stove used.

Asbestos: The legs, the lower parts of the frame and door, and the lower six inches of the inside walls must be covered with heavy asbestos to prevent the drier taking fire during use. This precaution is necessary. See photograph, figure 1.

Trays: The trays are made up as follows: Size, 13 3-4x24 inches over all; two pieces, 1x3-8x24 inches; two pieces, 1x3-8x11 3-4 inches; two pieces, 1x3-8x13 3-4 inches; two pieces, 1x3-8x22 inches; one piece of ordinary door screen, 13 3-4x24 inches. Eight trays should be made. First cut the screen to the size indicated above. Place two pieces 1x3-8x24 inches on a work table and the screen over them. Across the ends over the screen nail the two pieces 1x3-8x13 3-4 inches. Between these end pieces and over the side pieces nail the two pieces 1x3-8x22 inches. Turn the tray over and nail to the ends the two pieces 1x3-8x11 3-4 inches. See photograph for appearance of finished tray. This makes a reversible tray 3-8-inch deep and 24x13 3-4 inches over all.

Thermometer: Purchase a small dairy thermometer at the nearest drug store. Use it on the lowermost tray at all times to keep the operator informed of temperature conditions.

The drier is a little too large to be conveniently used over the kitchen stove, and is designed to be operated by a small gas plate or ordinary coal oil heater. It has been found best in practice to operate the dries independently of the kitchen range, because for most fruits the drier must be operated twelve to twenty-four hours at one time, and the use of the range as a heater interferes with the preparation of [illegible] fuel. Only a small amount of heat is needed for the drier.

HOW DRIER IS OPERATED.

Operation: Apricots and peaches are pitted; pears peeled, cored and cut in quarters lengthwise, and apples peeled, cored and sliced about one-fourth inch thick. To preserve the natural color fairly well dip the prepared fruit in a dilute salt solution containing three tablespoons of salt (level) for each gallon of water, leaving the fruit in the brine one minute. Do not rinse it. If a bleached color is desired, spread the fruit on the trays and stack the trays in the drier, placed on the ground in the open. Cover the top of the drier opening and temporarily the openings around bottom of the drier with boards or burlap. Place a small pan of burning sulphur on the ground and close the door. Leave one hour. Dry as directed below.

Prunes, and Thompson seedless and Tokay grapes are dipped in a boiling lye solution contained in an agate or graniteware (not aluminum) pot. This solution contains one level teaspoon of lye per gallon. The time of dipping for prunes is about thirty seconds, and for the above grapes about five seconds, or long enough to crack the skins. Rinse in water and spread on trays. Muscat grapes are similarly dipped, but a lye solution containing five level tablespoons of lye per gallon of water is used at the boiling point about twenty to thirty seconds, and the grapes rinsed in water.

Potatoes, carrots, beets and turnips are peeled, sliced and dipped in boiling water one minute. String beans are prepared as for the table, and are dipped ten min-[illegible] from the cob. Dried corn is a pleasing product.

Place the loaded trays in the drier with the end of the topmost tray placed against the door, the second tray against the rear wall of drier, the third against the door, and so on down to the lowermost tray, which is against the door. This leaves a six-inch space between each tray and wall or door, making it necessary for the rising hot air to travel across each tray, or a total distance of over fifteen feet, to reach the outlet of the drier. Start a fire, and so regulate it that the heat in the lower tray is maintained from 140 deg. to 165 deg., Fahr.

When the lower tray is dry remove it; shift the other six trays down one tray, and insert a fresh tray on the topmost runway (that is if there is still more product to dry.) When the lowermost tray is dry proceed again as just directed.

RAISING RICE FOR DUCKS.

WINTERSBURG.—Approximately twenty acres are planted to rice in this vicinity this year, the planting being made on low, gun club lands, where plenty of water for flooding is available. The rice is not grown for commercial purposes, and the product is used only for duck feed. There are upwards of fifteen acres on the Lomita club, which have been planted for several weeks, and nearly five acres more on the Saamac Duck Club, planted less than six weeks ago.

Pima cotton is almost certain to be grown in the Imperial Valley next year to the practical exclusion of every other variety, at least in the California section of the valley.

FEED Germain's PREMIUM Intestinal cleanser

Hens LAZY?

More than fifty per cent of the non-productiveness in hens is caused by intestinal worms. If your hens are not laying—feed Germain's Intestinal Cleanser. It tones up the system, increases egg production and kills worms.

By this method worms are not expelled, but are killed in the intestinal tract and turned back into health and flesh building elements.

A highly beneficial tonic for all ages of fowls. Buy Germain's Premium Intestinal Cleanser from your local dealer, or order direct from us.

NO LONGER ANY EXCUSE FOR WINTER INJURY TO WALNUT TREES.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

THE illustrations accompanying this article depict very strikingly a characteristic form of winter injury from which many walnut orchards in Southern California have suffered during the past two or three years. The orchard shown in these pictures, however, has been much worse injured than the average, many of the trees having died back so far as to practically necessitate reheading the tree. Such injury represents a serious loss to the walnut grower, as even under the most favorable of conditions, reheading the tree entails a nonbearing period of from three to five years.

There is little excuse for such injury in Southern California walnut orchards. Practically every walnut orchard in this part of the State is under irrigation, and can thus be given water whenever desired, and this makes it possible to absolutely prevent such injury, for it is occasioned by winter drought. The unusual prevalence of this form of winter injury in the walnut, (for there are others) during the past three or four years, is connected with the fact that during these years the rainfall has either been deficient in amount or else has come late in the season, resulting in abnormally dry soils in walnut orchards during the fall, in the latter case, or during the whole of the winter, in the former instance.

Growers of walnuts, particularly in the older sections, have learned by experience that irrigating walnuts late in the season is apt to keep them growing vigorously, and to delay dormancy too long, so that they are occasionally, if not frequently injured by fall frosts. Withholding water after July 15 has come to be the rule in some sections. And this is good practice, for it results in the ripening up of the wood, and throwing the trees into dormancy before there is much danger from fall frosts.

But it is a mistake for growers to stop here. In seasons of deficient or delayed rainfall, soil moisture stores soon reach a very low ebb, and for the best interest of the trees should be replenished. In the 1917 season for instance, the trees became dormant under ordinary irrigation practice in October and November, when the soil had dried out practically to the wilting point. Rains did not come until the latter part of February. The trees had been standing for nearly four months in soil dried out below the wilting point. The result was a greater prevalence of die-back than had occurred since the famous dry season of 1911. This same condition, only not quite so extreme, occurred during the past season.

Studies conducted by Dr. L. D. Batchelor of the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside, in co-operation with the California Walnut Growers' Association, have clearly shown that die-back of this sort may be effectively prevented, and also cured by the intelligent practice of winter irrigation. Plots of trees badly affected with winter drought injury have shown a marked improvement following winter applications of irrigation water.

Once the trees are dormant, and therefore secure from liability to frost injury, careful attention should be paid to soil moisture conditions. The use of a soil auger to ascertain moisture conditions in the lower soil depths is advised. When the wilting point has been reached, irrigation is advised, sufficient water being applied to wet the soil down to the full feeding area of eight feet or more. This generally works out in practice to mean that a heavy irrigation should be given some time in November or December.

In certain instances well meaning growers have accentuated drought injury through improper management in the handling of intercrops and cover crops. Beans furnish the most popular intercrop for walnuts, the harvesting period coinciding with the time when water should be withheld to throw the trees into dormancy. The average grower, who raises beans as an intercrop, however, is apt to consider the trees safe for the winter when the leaves have fallen, regardless of the fact that the beans have already pumped much of the soil moisture out. The practice of intercropping usually demands closer attention to soil moisture conditions, else injury is apt to occur. The same holds true with cover crops. Unless adequately irrigated harm may be occasioned to the trees from the loss of valuable soil water used up by the cover crop.

Failure to Irrigate in the Winter Caused This Injury to Walnuts.

POTATO AND BEAN CROP ACREAGE LESS.

Reductions of 5 per cent in the acreage planted to potatoes last year and of 29 per cent in areas devoted to beans are indicated for this season, according to Department of Agriculture reports. High prices for potato seed and the farm labor shortage are the principal reasons given for the reduction in potato plantings. The unsatisfactory market for beans is given as the reason for the smaller acreage planned for that crop. The reports show that for the States covered the potato acreage will be 95 per cent as large as last year, while the bean acreage will be 71 per cent of last year.

New York reports the intention to plant 97 per cent of last year's acreage in potatoes; Michigan, 90; Wisconsin, 95; Minnesota, 89; Colorado, 94; Idaho, 95, and California, 110. Aroostook county, Me., which produces 60 per cent of the potato crop of New England, intended to plant as much or more, but deep snows, strikes and embargoes have delayed receipt of fertilizer, and plantings will depend upon the amount received in time.

New York reports an intended acreage in beans 90 per cent as large as last year; Michigan, 75; Wisconsin, 70; Colorado, 65; New Mexico, 80; Idaho, 100. California will plant 60 per cent of all varieties, limas being 90 per cent and other varieties 45 per cent of last year, although a poor barley crop in Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys may increase plantings of the latter.

The potato crop last year was 358,000,000 bushels—54,000,000 bushels less than in 1918, and 83,000,000 less than in 1917, but 70,000,000 more than in 1916.

It was about 3 per cent smaller than the average crop of the preceding ten years, and 6 per cent smaller than the average crop of the preceding five years. The plantings last year were large enough to have produced with an average yield a crop of 390,000,000 bushels.

The bean crop of the United States last year was about 12,000,000 bushels. While only about three-fifths as large as the crops grown on the exceptionally large acreages of 1918 and 1917, the 1919 crop was almost equal to the crops of 1914 to 1916, which averaged between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 bushels. The planting as now indicated—about 800,000 acres—with a yield equal to the average of the last five years would produce a crop of 8,250,000 bushels.

HAY WAREHOUSED.

REDLANDS.—The warehouses of Redlands are beginning to bulge with the largest hay and grain crop the farmers of this section have harvested in several years. Each of the big hay and grain dealers is buying all that he can get, some of them having stored now more than 3000 tons of best hay. The dealers all say that there will surely be a reduction in the price of hay and grain.

LABOR SITUATION WORRIES RANCHERS.

PERRIS.—The scarcity of farm labor in this locality is assuming serious proportions. Though wages are higher than have ever been known before, ranging from 40 cents per hour for boys who are engaged in chopping cotton, to $6 per day for men to work in the grain fields with harvesting machinery, still the supply of help is far from ample. This valley has urgent need of at least 200 men who would be employed within an hour after they reached here.

R. W. Farrell, owner of an alfalfa baler, last week found himself unable to operate it for lack of men though he is offering $5 per eight-hour day. As a result a good deal of alfalfa is still lying in the fields and is liable to remain there. In certain sections of the valley the barley is beginning to shed its grain as it is over-ready for reaping. As a result of the lack of labor, considerable grain, it is feared, will go to waste this year. That they will reduce their grain area next year if conditions do not change is prophesied by a number of the largest ranchers about here.

One rancher whose grain is dropping drove to Riverside and finding a number of men on the street offered them at first $5, then $6 and finally $7 per day which was met by a counter offer that they would come to work at $8 a day and board. The rancher returned home declaring that it would pay him better to let the grain remain in the fields.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO KEEPERS OF POULTRY IN THE SOUTHWEST.

BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

SOME Orpington records at government egg-laying contests in Australia are indeed remarkable, and again emphasize that high fecundity is not limited to either breed nor variety. We have had phenomenal egg records in Wyandottes, Rocks and Reds, in Brahmas and Orpingtons, in Minorcas and Leghorns. With this information and experience, but little has been accomplished in establishing a race of high-laying fowls where the run of a flock will duplicate the performance of these record-laying hens, though improvement is perceptible in that direction. Experience seems to show that high layers are only possible by selection; that every flock has a large percentage of drones and light producers that must be eliminated because they are unprofitable. But to return to our mutton.

According to our Australian information, the Black Orpington holds the world's record for egg-production. At the Geelong Egg-laying competition, which extended over a period of twelve months and closed on the 21st of March, all world's records were broken by a team of six Black Orpingtons bred by R. R. Christie of Bentleigh. One of the hens made the phenomenal record of 339 eggs in the year, which tops the former best record by four eggs. The team of six laid 1733 eggs in the year, and as the best previous records was 1699 eggs, laid by a team of six White Leghorns, these figures were beaten by thirty-four eggs. The average per bird was just 289, and the average weight of eggs was two and one-quarter ounce each. Taking the value of eggs for the period mentioned at 36 5-10 cents per dozen, the six birds earned $8.78 per bird. The cost of feeding the six pullets for twelve months was $9.49 cents, so that a profit of $43.21 is shown as a net result of the test.

We further learn that the price of poultry feeds in Australia is much below that prevailing in this country. During April, wheat hovered around $2 per bushel, corn $2.25 and oats $1.50. Evidently economic conditions are much more favorable for profitable poultry farming there than they are just at present in this country. In the meantime, our Orpington men ought to get some of this Australian blood in their flocks.

The annual premium list for the Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show at the Sacramento State fair September 4 to 12 is now in the hands of breeders and fanciers throughout the State. The classification is along the usual lines, but the prizes are better than last year. In the poultry classes they range as follows:

To each of the winners of the variety having the largest entry in the show: Cock, cockerel, hen and pullet, first $10, second $8, third $5; pens, first $12, second $10, third $7.

To each of the winners of the variety having the second largest entry: Cocks, cockerels, hens and pullets, first $9, second $7, third $4.50; pens, first $11, second $9, third $6.50.

The third largest entry: cocks, cockerels, hens and pullets: first $8, second $6, third $4; pens, first $10, second $7, third $6.

The fourth largest entry: Cocks, cockerels, hens and pullets, first $7, second $5, third $3.50; pens, first $9, second $6, third $5.

The fifth largest entry: Cocks, cockerels, hens and pullets; first $6, second $4.50, third $3.25; pens, first $8, second $5.50, third $4.50.

Sweepstakes in all classes of standard poultry, first $15, second $10, third $5; in bantams first male $10, second $8; first female $7.50, second $5; first pen $15, second $12.50. In the single bantam classes the awards run from $5 to $15. Ducks, geese and turkeys are covered with handsome cash awards, while the pigeon and rabbit interests command equal recognition. The entries open August 30. Those who may have an interest in showing and have not received entry blanks and premium list, can be accommodated by addressing the secretary, Charles W. Paine, Sacramento, Cal.

In addition to eggs, broiler chickens are also finding their way to New York from Southern California, the business proving profitable, while the quantity going forth is also substantial. The sale of hens, however, is more serious. In a late address, Mr. Schofield is quoted as saying that "some growers believe that there must be marketed south of the Tehachepi this fall in the neighborhood of 800,000 hens. Probably one-third of these will not reach the ordinary channels of trade, but the marketing of the remainder seems a tremendous problem. If California continues to increase in the production of eggs, Leghorn hens will also naturally increase, and the problem of the sale of these hens is one of the things that organized poultrymen must consider a part of the service to their stockholders."

Why not create a market by exploiting the food value of table poultry and its economic uses in the human diet? We advertise ham and bacon, beef and mutton, why not poultry meat?

Don't allow the droppings to accumulate until "you have a load." Clean the house and yards at regular intervals and so render them sanitary. Compost the manure: it has a money value that can be made quite an income where fowl are kept in any numbers.

Don't give cheap and sloppy foods, as they are apt to make trouble. Wholesome feeding means good production in the way of hen fruit and robust fowl. Tainted grain and animal foods are particularly objectionable.

Don't allow your houses and yards to "go it alone." See to it that they are in proper repair. Environment and condition have much to do with profitable poultry culture. By all means avoid draughts and poor ventilation.

Don't forget the prosperity of your birds during the moult. It is a trying period, when a little extra feeding and provision for their physical comfort will be rewarded by an early return to productive laying at the old stand.

Don't forget the triumverate side lines in the balanced ration, viz., charcoal, grit and oyster shell, to which must be added a constant supply of pure water especially during the hot dry days of summer.

Don't misrepresent in making sales. A simple and truthful statement will win more business than exaggeration, of which, we regret to say, there is already as Artimus Ward would say, "two mutch."

Don't expect to win at the fall fairs by picking up a few birds off the range the day before the opening day. "Size up" your good birds now; give them extra feed and attention; accustom them to show room conditions so that they will be reasonably docile when placed in exhibition coops. These little precautions will greatly help to capture prizes.

Don't put white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in the same shipment; nor large and small specimens. Grade to color of shell and size, and the chances are you will find a buyer more readily and make a sale at a better price.

Don't fail to watch your trial balance. With hen fruit ruling low as compared to other food products and poultry feeds ruling high, the average breeder will have to keep an eye on his profit and loss account.

Don't imagine that your breed is really the best, for all breeds are good in the hands of good breeders; but have faith that yours is as good as the best, and by intelligent handling you can certainly make it so.

Don't allow the surplus cockerels to "eat their heads off." Better get them into market condition and realize on them as table poultry.

A WORD TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Many correspondents who send in their inquiries to this department are not aware of the fact that the exigencies in publishing so large a paper as the Farm and Tractor Section of the Sunday Times make it imperative that the matter for the magazine be furnished from two to three weeks in advance of date of publication. For this reason, where inquiries demand immediate attention, a stamped addressed return envelope should be inclosed, and the editor will, in so far as lies in his power, send a reply by return mail; later on, if the inquiry is of more than local or personal interest, it may also appear in this department. Needless to add, we solicit inquiries from beginners and the inexperienced, as well as from the practical people in the business, and always feel grateful for any suggestions calculated to be of interest and value to our readers. Photographs of fine birds, of yards and houses, and general poultry appliances will also be appreciated, and if found available, given space in these columns.

Farm Advertising.

fered for sale in slipshod bundles, with no attention paid to preserving and enhancing the appearance of the thing shipped. Accordingly, instead of getting repeat orders, such as the success of a city merchant is based on, the farmers got only new customers, and in time these dwindled until the whole plan for parcel post marketing was abandoned. Now it is just as true today as it was the day that parcel post delivery became effective, that the man in the country who has something of quality to sell, and will take the pains to see that his product reaches the purchaser in good condition and under attractive circumstances, can dispose of all he can grow or make, and the demand for his product can be created through proper advertising. But he cannot expect to build a permanent business except on the same principles that have led to the remarkable success of the orange and raisin and prune industries of this State. Every orange or raisin or prune that is marketed is kept up to a certain standard of excellence to conform to the brand under which it is made known through advertising, and the demand that is created by advertising is fostered and sustained by the uniform excellence of the products sold.

There is a use for everything in the world, and the farmer can find a market for his goods as well through advertising as the manufacturer who turns out thousands of an identical article in the city.

FEED MILKOLINE
2¢ A Gal.

Jas. E. Keyes, Petaluma, California, writes: "Milkoline prevents worms, lowers death rate, increases egg production and keeps a flock in splendid health, thereby preventing disease." The biggest poultry raisers and feeders like Armour & Company, Grant Brothers, etc., use Milkoline constantly. Many say it reduces feeding costs materially.

Guaranteed Trial Offer: Milkoline is sold in convenient size kegs and barrels. Your money will be refunded in full if after using half of amount purchased in 30 days you are not satisfied.

2c A Gallon: When fed according to directions Milkoline costs but 2c a gallon or less. Milkoline is pure modified buttermilk—keeps indefinitely in any climate, will not mould or rot and does not draw flies. Regarded by users as being far superior to buttermilk as it is always uniform in quality and acidity.

BIG BOOK FREE! Simply send name and address—a card will do, and we'll send an interesting booklet telling how Milkoline will increase your poultry and hog profits. Write us or our nearest distributors today.

VARIOUS METHODS FOR STEMMING
THE ANNUAL GRASSHOPPER RAID.

BY B. H. ORMAND, Assistant Farm Adviser, San Bernardino County.

AS THE season for one sort of pest affecting the farmer's crop passes along, another one takes its place. Now that the favorable conditions for wire worm and cut worm have passed, along comes our old enemy the grasshopper, who thrives and grows with the warm weather so detrimental to the cut worm.

In some districts this pest is accepted as a matter-of-fact every-year occurrence, and each year upon its appearance combative measures are used, which to a fair degree hold him in check. These districts are usually the ones where the grasshoppers regularly appear.

Grasshoppers are found distributed fairly well throughout the State and in some Eastern districts and have caused great injury. Stories have been told of where they have become so numerous as to actually eat the clothes off clothes lines. This the writer does not know to be a fact. It is a known fact, however, that they have become so numerous in some places as to actually eat rail fences and telephone poles which happened to be in their path. The Middle Western States have at times suffered considerable damage from large bands of these pests sweeping over the ground and not many years ago they became so numerous as to completely destroy all vegetation and crops in some sections.

There are a great many varieties of grasshoppers and often one will find more than one species in the same locality. The writer has noticed three such varieties in a part of San Bernardino county which he has studied, and no doubt there may be more.

The shorthorn grasshopper, or locust, is by far the most destructive and when migrating will leave a path practically devoid of any or all vegetation. This species is recognized by the short antennae, which are very much shorter than the body.

The devastating grasshopper, which is about one inch long, occurs very frequently throughout the State, doing damage to grain crops, fruit trees, and vineyards. The hind wings of this species are transparent and usually the young are much lighter in color than the adult.

The, valley grasshopper is very widely distributed, being found most abundantly in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys. This species is of small size, being about one inch long and robust. They are of an amber color having a little red around the eyes. The body is dark, the legs being black. Unlike some other species, the young resemble the adult very closely. This species become most abundant along about June, depending on the weather.

One will almost always discover a few large grasshoppers mixed in with the more abundant species. These, while destructive, are not numerous and therefore when they occur alone, control measures are not needed because of the little damage done.

CONTROL METHODS.

There are many means of control and a grower must use the method conforming to his own requirements, such as the location of the place to be treated, the time for application and always, of course, figuring the cheapest method in the long run.

Where it is possible to catch large numbers on a field that will burn, fire can be used. If fire is to be used it is best to secure ample help for any emergency that may occur if the fire gets out of control. Especially is this true where the location [illegible] this occurs the district forester should be informed of the burning. If possible, have him present during the burning period. In most cases the ranchers are more than willing to lend their co-operation as it affords a means of getting rid of the harmful brush lying at the base of the hills. There is more than one way of fighting with fire and in some instances where improper methods were used the results were not as great as could be expected.

It is best to start firing when a fairly gentle breeze is blowing in a constant direction. If located near a mountain, start the fire near the mountain and work back away from the hill, thereby establishing a break and thus reducing the chance of the fire spreading to the hills. When this is completed, start the fire in circle fashion which means the hemming in of the hoppers between fires and reduces the chances of their escaping. It may be necessary to make several such circles, the idea always being to be sure to have fire on all sides.

Wherever it is possible to resort to burning it is suggested that this method be used, as it is not only cheap but very effective and quick. Of course, when this feed is gone and grasshoppers still remain, that is to say, come in from some other place, naturally they will go direct to any crop that may be near.

In one instance, under observation, the grasshoppers showed a lack of tendency to cross a burnt area, but it is not known whether this is characteristic, as only the one case is known where this seemed to have happened.

POISONED MASH.

When the grasshoppers are in fields or crops it is impossible to burn or use devices such as hopper dozer because it would injure the crop. For this reason poison is used. Poison may be used upon large areas of open land, regardless of whether a crop is growing.

The standard formula for poison mash is as follows:

[illegible] (lemons), [illegible] water, [illegible] gals.; bran, [illegible] lbs.

The above will cover about five acres and according to present prices, cost about 50 cents per acre. Other substitutes can be used and have been successfully used. In place of the Paris green, white arsenate can be used; alfalfa meal may be substituted for bran and sour honey for molasses. Horse manure and sawdust have been substituted for the bran and the results obtained were satisfactory, but not so effective as with the standard formula. Paris green, molasses and water were sprayed upon the plant and while effective, the grasshopper had to eat the plant before getting the poison.

When poisoning an alfalfa piece for grasshoppers it is best to poison before cutting. Starting on the outside of the field, cut one swath, cut two more and again leave a swath. In the swaths left poison heavily as the hoppers will always go to the green stuff. When the field has been cut, the grasshoppers will then be checked and the problem from then on will be to keep them out of the field. This can be done by placing a poisoned border around the entire field.

The question arises as to whether this poison will affect stock. On one field where the writer placed out poison at 9 o'clock in the morning, 250 head of cattle were turned in at noon. No harm was noticed in the cattle although they grazed over the poisoned portion. Care should be taken when mixing the bran to see that none of the material is left around, as chickens will eat enough to kill themselves.

Where a field is comparatively level and there is no crop upon it the hopper dozer can be used. This consists of a long pan having a back about eighteen inches high and turned up in front three inches. Oil is placed in the bottom and as it is dragged along by means of horses hooked on each end the hoppers jump into the pan and are killed by the oil, which consists of kerosene and crude oil.

Turkeys are very fond of grasshoppers, and where the hoppers are not too abundant the turkey can be used to keep them in control. However, this is not effective enough or practical where the hopper is very serious.

Anyone who has this grasshopper problem would do well to start control methods for protecting his own place before serious damage is done or the hoppers become numerous. Community co-operation is a good thing and works fine where all people in a locality turn out and do the killing at one time. As the hoppers have breeding places where the eggs have wintered it is suggested that such places be located and plowed so as to destroy the eggs before they have time to hatch. This is not always possible for the hoppers often lay eggs in places that are impossible to plow.

DECREASED ACREAGE MAKES ALFALFA HIGH.

The market for alfalfa hay continues strong in all parts of the State, according to a statement made by the alfalfa growers of California. Receipts of hay in the principal markets still continue remarkably light for this time of the year. One of the causes is that just now dealers and consumers in the smaller centers in the interior of the State are free buyers at prices which net the grower more than present Los Angeles and San Francisco prices.

The deeper-lying cause is probably the fact that the alfalfa acreage is not keeping step with the increasing consumption, the result of growing population. On the contrary, the acreage as a whole is decreasing in the State. The result is not alone that there is relatively less hay available for shipment to the big city districts, but this amount is further lessened by the fact that former growers of alfalfa, who changed to what they consider better paying crops, having become buyers of hay instead of sellers, and increase the local consumption by that much.

Prices as low as $12 and $13 a ton to the grower during the principal selling season in the last few years discouraged the producer of hay for marketing purposes, he was losing money, and it did not do him much good that in the following winters the price went up to $35 and even higher, as he then had little or nothing to sell.

"After all is said, the only way to bring about increased production of alfalfa, or, for that matter, any other crop, are attractive prices," stated an official of the alfalfa growers. "Everything considered, together with some assurance of a fairly stable market, extremely high prices are almost as detrimental to the grower in the final result as are extremely low prices."

Prices in California at present are as follows: Choice alfalfa, $40 per ton; No. 1 dairy, $36 per ton; standard dairy, $32 per ton, and stock alfalfa, $29 per ton.

LIVE STOCK BULLETIN.

BY R. T. LYANS.

Duroc-Jersey breeders are going to have a glad surprise when they see the class of stock that Winsor ranch of Bonita is getting ready for their public sale on July 28. This sale will attract buyers from all over the country, for it has become quite generally recognized that Bob Walker knows how to breed good Durocs, and if they come to the sale expecting to see quality stuff, they will not be disappointed in the type of the Winsor ranch offering.

After a recent visit to the ranch, the writer has come to the conclusion that he never saw a more uniform group of young sows fitted for a public sale. The forty individuals which are to be sold are long, deep, wide, typy sows with great blood lines behind them to back up their individuality. But perhaps the most striking impression gained by the observer is the wonderful uniformity of length, width, height and type they show. There is not a second-rater in the bunch. Most of the sows are spring yearlings and sired by leading boars of the breed, such as Great Orion Sensation, Orion Sensation, Pathfinder, Orion Fancy King, Great Pathfinder and Great Model. These sows will be bred to Winsor's Giant Orion, and Great Sensation, 3rd. Mr. Walker says Winsor's Giant Orion is the largest Duroc boar on the Coast, and the largest Orion Cherry King boar in the world. He stands forty inches high and eighty-two inches long, and weighs 965 pounds. The way the sows bred to him sold in the Winsor ranch sale last January indicates that he is one of the most popular boars in the country. About two-thirds of the sows in this sale will be bred to this boar. Besides having the popular show type, this wonderful boar still retains exceptional vigor at the age of 4 years, and after being fitted so many times, he still retains his wonderful form. His sire, Orion Cherry King, Jr., was the world's grand champion at the National Swine Show at Omaha in 1916.

Mules on Merritt & Bowers Ranch, Tulare.

Edgemoor farm, Santee, Cal., will hold [illegible] containing the best blood in the herd, to the high bidder. This sale should be a great attraction to Guernsey breeders of the East, as Walter Dupee, owner of Edgemoor farm, has some of the finest Guernseys in the world, and is going to offer nothing but the very best in this sale. In fact, every individual offered is an outstanding fine animal, and the blood lines speak for themselves.

The Italian Vineyard Company has developed a good hog department on its large holdings at Guasti. Alex M. Wilson, the superintendent of this department, has gathered together some excellent individuals of the Berkshire breed and by careful mating has brought out some fine litters. The herd is headed by Winona Leader Champion, a full brother to Laurel Champion's Grand Leader, the $5000 under-year boar. He is a combination of the blood of Rival's Champion Best and Grand Leader 2nd, and has fine type and good quality, and is very vigorous. The sows on this place are lengthy, high-backed and heavy-boned types. Such prolific sows as these, mated with this prepotent boar, make a combination that is hard to beat for strong litters with quick-maturing qualities. Mr. Wilson recently purchased several fine sows at the Inglewood High School Pig Club auction to add to the herd. Scientific breeding methods have been observed on this plant and in a practical way this herd has been developed to a high degree of success.

At the National Guaranty Sale of Holsteins held at St. Paul on June 3, 4 and 5, Ruby Pieterje of Forest Hill, a cow belonging to W. J. Higdon of Tulare, sold for $10,500. Mr. Higdon has in his Tulare herd about twenty half-sisters of King Korndyke Pontiac Acme, the $41,000 fifteen-months-old bull consigned to the same sale by the A. W. Morris herd of Woodland, Cal. This young bull is a son of the $12,000 bull. King Korndyke Pontiac 20th, recently purchased by Burr Farm of Los Angeles from Mr. Higdon.

SOW OF SENSATION BLOOD SELLS HIGH.

Bob Walker reports that the Winsor ranch of Bonita recently broke all Pacific Coast records for price when the owners sold their senior yearling boar, Great Sensation 3rd, for $8000.

This is believed by Mr. Walker to be the highest-priced hog of any breed ever sold by a western breeder. Of course, it is a great feather in the Winsor ranch hat, but it is also significant of the rapid advancement of the Duroc breed. Competent authorities say that the red hogs have improved in size, type and quality more in the last eighteen months than they have in the preceding tree years. There are more really big type Duroc boars being turned out all the time, making a great change in the size and type of the whole breed.

Great Sensation 3rd is the son of that king of big-type sires, Great Sensation, and out of the highest-priced sow of her day, Uneeda Lady, a sow that Jess Golden of Uheling, Neb., now refuses to price at less than $15,000. Great Sensation 3rd is a half-brother to the world's grand champion, Great Orion Sensation.

The Winsor ranch, operated by Morris C. Allen and Bob Walker, now has the distinction of having sold the highest-priced sow and the highest-priced boar ever sold by a western breeder. The sow was High Lady Sensation and sold for $2000. She was bred to Great Sensation 3rd and farrowed fifteen pigs, of which she raised thirteen, with the help of a nurse sow for two of them. She is a littermate to the Cummins sow of Visalia, that topped the Winsor ranch sale last winter, and, with the help of a nurse sow, she is raising fourteen out of her fifteen pigs.

[illegible] moor farm, Santee, Cal., who also was the purchaser of High Sensation Lady. Mr. Dupee's Guernseys swept the boards in the last national dairy show, winning 70 per cent of the premiums offered for Guernseys. This included grand champion bull, the most coveted honor of all. The Edgemoor farm has started out to put the Duroc herd in the same class as the Guernseys. The Winsor ranch has a large number of sows bred to Great Sensation 3rd and will have ten or more in their sale at Los Angeles on July 28.

Cotton plants should be thinned to eighteen to twenty-four inches apart when the plants are eight to ten inches high, for short staple, and ten to fifteen inches apart for Pima.

LEMON ROOTS ABOVE BUD UNION RESULT IN WEAKENED GROVES.

BY V. F. BLANCHARD.

SEVERAL days ago the writer was called out to a lemon grove at San Fernando to try to find out why it does not produce profitable crops. The owner had given it excellent care, and did not know what caused the unprofitable condition of the grove. He had put on over 200 tons of manure on ten acres within two years which should have given the trees excellent color and result in satisfactory fruit production if other conditions were favorable. But the fertilizer apparently had little effect on most of the trees. They have yellow leaves and a generally unhealthful appearance. The production of fruit is exceedingly small, and individual fruits undersized and poor in flavor. The writer noticed that on one side of the trees this unhealthy condition prevailed, while the other side seemed normal. This represented a symptom of a trouble which is more common than many citrus growers realize.

An examination of the soil beneath the trees showed that the soil was above the bud-unions in every instance where the trees were yellow. After pulling the soil away from the trunk, it was found that lemon roots were growing from above the bud union. Also, wherever just one side of the tree was in a sickly condition, there was a lemon root on that side and none on the other side. Wherever the trees were entirely chlorotic or yellow, there were lemon roots on all sides of the trunk above the bud union.

Lemon roots above the bud union may have two different effects on the tree. It sometimes happens that the first effect of the lemon roots is to stimulate vigorous growth. In fact, the tree will take on the characteristic of the "shade tree" type, which is a vigorous growing lemon tree, with dense foliage, that produces small crops of fruit. It would be well for every citrus grower who has a vigorous growing type of lemon tree to examine it for lemon roots. Such trees might remain in this vigorous growing condition for many years, but producing unprofitable crops. Then they will reach a stage where they cease to be vigorous. The leaves lose the rich, dark green color, and become mottled or yellow. The growth becomes stunted, and what fruit is produced is under-sized and poor. If the lemon roots are just on one side, only that side may have this mottled condition.

The second effect that lemon roots sometimes have it to cause the mottled condition of the leaves without going through the vigorous or "shade-tree" stage. The writer has noticed this on trees of all ages. When this happens with a young tree, it becomes dwarfed much below the size of the average tree in the orchard.

It has been known for many years that a lemon root growing from above the bud lemon root above the bud and was yellow union has a detrimental effect on the tree. In 1909 the attention of Dr. J. Eliot Coit, head of the citriculture department of the University of California, was called to a lemon tree in Hollywood which had a on thats ide. The root was cut off and the tree recovered. While visiting the Limoneira Ranch at Santa Paula in 1910, Dr. Coit saw many lemon trees that were affected this way. These trees recovered when the roots were sawed off. Dr. Coit also described this effect of lemon rooas in his book called "Citrus Fruits," which was published in 1914. The writer saw a tree affected this way in 1914, which was nonproductive, and after cutting the lemon root off, it became exceedingly productive.

Though many citrus growers do not know this trouble, it has been present a long while. However, there has not been any logical reason presented in regard to why a lemon root above a bud union should cause such a detrimental effect. Seedling lemons have been used for stocks for both oranges and lemons, but they have been used for stocks for both oranges and lemons, but they have been discarded as stocks because they are susceptible to many diseases. They produce trees which are exceedingly vigorous, and do not show the same effect as a root coming out above the bud union. One would think that a lemon root would be an asset to a tree, provided that it does not become affected with a fungus disease. It draws water and plant food from the soil just as the orange root of the stock does. But the fact remains that there is a different reaction somewhere, for the branches on that side are affected.

Lemon Roots, Above Bud Union.

Photograph shows lemon root cut from a lemon tree on sour stock. The foliage on the side where root grew shows Chlorosis.

TREATMENT FOR THE TROUBLE.

Experience has shown that it is a bad policy to plant citrus trees too deeply. Besides the danger from gum diseases entering the bud union, there is the added danger of roots starting out from above the bud union. The latter is more true with the lemon than the orange. It is not difficult to grow roots on a lemon cutting, while it is very difficult to grow them on an orange cutting.

When trees are planted too deeply, the soil should be pulled back so that the bud union is exposed. This becomes quite an expensive operation when the soil is far above the bud. It is necessary to do this from year to year, because the soil works toward the trunk. If it is seen that there are roots starting from above the bud, they should be cut off. If they are not noticed until they get large, it is necessary to use either a saw or a chisel, or both. Every lemon root should be cut off regardless of size. If most of the root system of an old tree is made of lemon roots having only a dwarfed root from the old stock, it might not be possible to make a good tree, because the root system would not be large enough for the top. In such a case, the tree should be dug up and a reset put in. The question is sometimes raised whether it would not be better to cut off a few roots and cut off the remainder later on, so that the tree would not undergo such a shock. That does not seem to be advisable, for it merely delays the normal functioning of the tree. The roots seem to be parasitic on the tree, because they cause the yellow condition in the leaves, which prevents the elaboration of plant food. It is well to thin out the branches of the tree to make up for the loss of root system. The amount to be cut out depends upon just how many lemon roots there are, and how large they are.

In order to prevent the entrance of heart rot fungi through the wounds, they should be painted over with a wound paint. A paint such as one with an asphaltum base, which will contract and expand with varying weather conditions, is more preferable. The length of time that it will take for a tree to recover depends upon how severely it had been affected. Usually where there is just one root, the portion of the tree not affected will fruit heavily, and the sick leaves will become dark green within a few months. But when the whole tree is affected, it might take two years for complete recovery.

GROWERS DIFFER ON PRUNING SYSTEMS.

WHITTIER.—The ranchers of the Whittier district, not unlike those of other lemon-producing districts, differ greatly in their opinions as to the best methods of pruning lemons. The majority of them in the past have believed firmly in the "stubbing back" method. The principal point in their creed is that all good lemon trees should be cut back vigorously several times during the year. This method still seems to have the greatest number of adherents.

Another school of more recent development prunes with the idea firmly in mind that there are at least two distinct kinds of shoots growing in lemon trees, one kind being "fruit wood," and the other "plain wood." The fruit wood is left, the other cut out. Yet another sect has been adopting the method introduced by certain Italian pruners, who never cut back anything, but merely thin out the growth, claiming that this method does not encourage sucker growth, but rather produces slow growing fruit wood. They point to the new "long system" of pruning which is being adopted with success by many growers of deciduous fruits, and claim that the same physiological principles upon which this system is based should hold for citrus trees.

After a few years of consistent pruning along these different lines, together with careful observation, we shall be much better able to tell which is the best way to prune.

BIG YIELDS OF HAY AROUND BEAUMONT.

BEAUMONT.—The hay making in this district is about over, most of it having been cut and shocked ready for the bal'rs by the first of the month. All that is left standing will be cut and threshed for the grain.

Starting a month ago on the Matthews Ranch with the Stewarts, Harrison, Roberts and Covington people quickly following, the mowing machines were pushed to the limit with what help the ranchers could get.

The crop reports from all of the above-named places are for an exceptionally large tonnage per acre. The Covington people claim an average of three tons to the acre on about 200 acres.

the SUN will give you plenty of HOT WATER

MORE than 4000 homes in Southern California depend upon DAY & NIGHT Solar Heaters for their hot water supply. In these homes, where gas is available, householders save over three-fourths of their hot water heating expense. Where there is no gas supply, a DAY & NIGHT offers the only convenient and practical solution of the hot water problem.

No expense after installation, nothing to get out of order; no danger of fire or explosion. The sun's heat is concentrated on water and the heated water stored and kept hot; just turn the faucet day or night, and the hot water comes. KEEP A FEW HOGS ON THE CATTLE RANCH.

To the Editor of Farm and Tractor Section:

The cattlemen of California could in a hundred instances lower their expense and increase their profit through the lowly hog.

We can crab and kick about cattle conditions and do our individual best to better them, but in a survival of the fit, it's a question at the present time of low prices to producers for expensive beef; of cutting that little margin which means actual loss. In a thousand places with very little trouble and with small expense, a few hogs can be raised which will furnish the bulk of the ranch meat used, and nothing tastes quite as good as a sweet home-cured ham. Thousands of men in California are feeding part or all of their cattle during the period between fall and spring feed. On many of these ranches a few hogs can follow the cattle at no expense whatever and will fatten to supply ranch meat. When spring and grass come the hog rustles its way. On other places where oaks grow there is plentiful feed and no great expense is required to put in enough grain to carry quite a number of hogs during the interim between seasons, leaving a margin for furnishing half fat animals.

County Farms' Herd Sire.

W. R. Harriman, superintendent of the Los Angeles County Farm, is holding the fine young bull King Korndyke Pontiac Mead.

I am aware of the fact that on the present margin of difference between the price of pork at abattoirs and the price of grain one cannot feed hogs in droves and break even. At the present time conditions do not admit of it and there is much discouragement among farmers in many localities for this reason but even those farmers can raise a few and make it pay where they cannot raise large numbers. And it pays to buy good ones.

During the last winter the writer was put to it to beat old man Drouth, and fed some cattle, adding a bunch of pigs to keep the cattle company. These supplied the ranch meat and those left are worth double what the lot cost. My hog experience is limited and in the formative period; but it has been so pleasant so far that I am going to extend it.

In the early spring I bought a registered young sow, a Duroc-Jersey of the Taxpayer strain, from a neighbor for $125. This sow had eight youngsters and they are crackerjacks. There are four boars that I can sell locally for $25 each, very soon, and the other four are foundation stock. Hog inexperience is plain to see by the term "youngsters." To digress, its like the expression of a well-known California cattleman visiting Arizona to buy cattle. He called anything he saw "that critter," as from a distance he was not sure whether it was a yearling steer or heifer.

The name of my sow was Josephine, and the foreman, after his meat hog experience and his Josephine experience was so impressed with the possibilities that he talked me out of a half interest in Josephine and progeny at cost.

Now, I do not know anything about hogs but I am told that a great portion of our hams and bacon are imported from the Middle West. I am told that we have some of the greatest blood lines in the world right here in Southern California, on these great model ranches, and that our hog quality is rapidly getting to be the best of this little U.S.A.

All this turmoil in economic conditions will not last in either cattle or hogs. It is bound to settle down to a profitable basis. Without peddling advice the time to prepare to supply a food product the people must have is while prices are down.

WOULD GROW GROVE "FROM THE SEED UP."

WHITTIER.—A young progressive grower who puts into practice some of the theory gleaned from agriculture college halls, and who can show how he took $2700 worth of lemons from ninety trees in one year, has conceived the plan of growing, from the seed up, an ideal citrus ranch. He has procured fifteen acres of "ideal soil" in a new tract east of Whittier, paying $1500 per acre for the bare land. His plan is to secure vigorous selected sour seedlings and plant them in place in the orchard, letting them grow until large enough to bud where the head of the tree is to be formed, or about thirty-six inches from the ground.

This idea, which is entirely new in California, is the result of a study of Italian methods. Italian orchards are in full production at eighty years of age, while California groves have gone into a decline before they have reached half that age. Possibly by copying their methods, the cause of the longevity of the Italian groves may be ascertained. It is only by the efforts of courageous pioneers of this type that new and better cultural methods are introduced.

WOMAN GARDENER SETS GOOD EXAMPLE.

Living up to her repeated admonition to her women friends to get out in their yards and put in some time gardening, Mrs. Earle Remington, 1436 Crenshaw Boulevard, has just harvested an acre of potatoes on lots adjoining her home. She also is raising corn, beans and other vegetables and is setting an example for women and girls desirous of helping keep down the cost of living.

The profits secured by Mrs. Remington from her "man's-size" garden go to the Assistance League of Southern California, an organization formed to aid the worthy poor. The woman-gardener says she wanted to do something to aid in the work—something of her very own—so took up farming. She has found it "lots of fun," she says, and will do it again next year.

Mrs. Remington has done all the work in her vegetable plot with the exception of plowing. She says more women should take up gardening for the sake of their health if for no other reason.

Mrs. Earle Remington and Her Home-grown "Spuds."

"fish scrap," a coarser by-product much used for fertilizer; the meal is made from clean, sound material and is intended to be used for cattle and hogs. Formerly, the cannery waste was all made into "scrap" for fertilizer purposes. Now this material is converted into a high-grade protein feed. The cleaned, selected portion is ground to a fine, palatable meal which may be used to replace tankage in hog, poultry or dairy rations.

Fish meal has been recommended as a supplementary ration before now, but popular prejudice against a badly prepared product has discouraged its use. It has been proved by feeding experiments that fish meal equals the high-priced tankage as a ration ingredient, and better methods of

TOO MANY CALVES KILLED FOR VEAL.

Nature has her own percentage rules which are as infallible, in the long run, as the dealer's margin at a Monte Carlo gambling resort. According to this inflexible law of averages, there are about as many bull calves born each year as there are heifer calves.

Every good dairyman knows the value of a pure-bred sire of good record and what such an animal may accomplish in the way of improving a grade or scrub herd. Despite their acknowledged value, it appears that 73,000 pure-bred bull calves of dairy breeds were killed for veal or were fattened for beef in 1918.

Pure-bred Holstein-Friesian cows registered in 1918 number 80,000. Bulls of this breed registered during the same year extend only to 30,000. The difference, 50,000, represents the approximate number of bull calves not registered. Presumably most of them were either vealed or fattened as steers.

The Jersey breed in 1918 registered 30,000 cows and about 12,000 bulls—a loss of 18,000 pure-bred sires, many of which might be more profitably employed in the work of improving scrub herds.

Guernsey and Ayrshire totals are less, but the percentage of loss is heavy there also.

In the face of this waste it is estimated that five grade or scrub bulls are in use for every pure-bred bull. The replacement of scrub and grade bulls with good pure-breds would quickly and materially raise the average production of dairy herds. One of the reasons for the surprising situation outlined is probably an underdeveloped system of distribution.

It is desirable to withhold the first irrigation of cotton until six or eight weeks after the seed is planted.

BEAUTIFUL PARK, JEWELED WITH OAKS, CHOSEN FOR TRACTOR SHOW.

CAN it be done, even in Southern California?

From the North, the East, the Middle West questions of this ilk are pouring in on officials of the Tractor and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California. These men are going to stage an "indoor" tractor, implement and farm power exhibition beneath the oaks of Verdugo Park, Glendale.

California was awarded the national tractor show in 1920. Portland, Tacoma, Salt Lake, Kansas City, Chicago and other cities wanted this show, and men of these cities who were pulling for it wonder whether the blue California sky will serve as a waterproof canopy for what is expected to be the greatest exposition of farm machinery ever held in the United States. But Southern Californians, who chafe at walls and roofs, know that it can be done. The Southern California September knows J. Pluvius more by reputation than by personal acquaintance. That month is one of the most beautiful in the Southland's calendar.

Guy H. Hall, manager of the last three national tractor shows, after signing his name to a contract to take charge of the great California exposition of power farming equipment at Glendale, September 13 to 19, left for Kansas City on June 19 to further interest the exhibitors of States beyond the Rockies in this exposition. He will return in a short time to open offices in Los Angeles and make preparations for handling exhibits and 125,000 visitors daily.

Mr. Hall, President W. W. Rainey of the Tractor Dealers' Association and members of the Tractor Site Committee of the organization visited beautiful Verdugo Canyon and the wooded park, which lies between rolling foothills, and all expressed admiring approval of the selection of the site. A tract of 300 acres, covered with oaks and willows, was offered by F. P. Newport, owner of the park, for the use of the association. Probably but fifty acres, however, will be needed for the exposition.

At Glendale, on June 18, officials of that city met with the tractor dealers and assured them of full co-operation in making the show a complete success. Officials of the Pacific Electric Company also assured the show promoters that arrangements would be made to adequately handle the crowds. The city of Glendale lighting department will see to it that the grove is completely lighted for night visitors. A "Farm Power City" will be laid out among the oaks in the park.

Another meeting of the advisory board of the four Pacific Coast Tractor and Implement Dealers' Associations was held in San Francisco and the Southern California men were assured that the entire Coast was interested in making the show here a success.

WHY THE CITY GETS THE FARMER'S HELP.

[The following communication to the Farm and Tractor Section is from a Coachella Valley grower who has suffered from the universal farm-labor shortage. His suggested solution for both this and the high cost of living problems is drastic and perhaps impractical, as are most attempts to force economic changes by law, but existing conditions are calculated to turn the thoughts of the grower to legislative action as a way out of his difficulties.—Ed.]

The farm-labor problem has reached a point where something must be done. We cannot produce and harvest our crops with the present shortage of labor; and, worst of all, the class of labor that the farmer must put up with will drive many a good farmer to farm just what he can take care of himself. Why is it that the farmer must take this poor, inferior labor? Simply because every other line of labor is paid more than the farmer can pay.

The farmer should get such returns from his crop that he can pay the top wage, so he can get the best help available. Why should the farm help get less wages than the railroad man, the carpenter or the mechanic? It has been said that the farmers should go on a strike, and I think they would be more justified today in doing so than any other class of men in the United States. The railroad men did not have one-tenth the reason to go on a strike that the farmers have. The farmer works sixteen hours a day because he cannot get efficient help, and when harvest time comes his crops go to waste because he cannot handle them.

A year ago I tried the plan of hiring my regular help for a share of the crop, and it worked fairly satisfactorily till the time came when we needed extra help, and then we were up against it just like the wheat farmers in Kansas, where it is said 25 per cent of the wheat crop will be wasted because sufficient help cannot be obtained to harvest it

There is no other conclusion but that the wages that have been paid in every other line of industry have been greater than the farmer could pay, and have drawn the help from the farm. Better pay and less hours work in the cities leaves no help on the farm except such as other industries don't want.

The farmer must be placed on an equality with other industries so that he can pay just as high wages as any other industry can pay; and the only way this can be brought about is by giving him more for his produce or bringing down the high cost of living so wages will come down with it.

There is just one solution and that is to make laws to control the profit between the producer and the consumer. There are too many profits and too large a profit between the producer and the consumer. For example, when we began shipping onions from the Coachella Valley the farmer received $2 per crate or 4 cents per pound. Freight to Los Angeles would not exceed 50 cents per crate, or 1 cent per pound, or a total delivered in Los Angeles of 5 cents per pound. The retailer retailed them for 12 cents, a profit of 7 cents for the middlemen. Two cents ought to be enough, and the retailer should have that. And if we had a law not allowing a greater profit than the amount paid the producer these onions would have been sold for 9 cents retail instead of 12 cents.

If we had such a law all the retailers would have to do would be to organize and have a buying agency to buy all produce, which would be distributed to them at cost, and then the only profit there would need to be would be the retailers' profit. The retailer can certainly handle the goods for half what the farmer can produce them for and prepare them for market, for the onions, crates and preparing for market cost the farmer 75 cents per crate. What did the producer have for his profit when recent shipments sold for 85 cents f.o.b. cars, many acres more not harvested?

Is it any wonder the farmers cannot pay the wages paid in other lines of industry? The high cost of living will continue to soar unless the cost between the producer and the consumer is reduced by making laws to control the amount of profit allowed. And while the high cost of living was being reduced to the consumer, the farmer would receive more than he now receives, so that he could get and pay for efficient help and plenty of it. Then he could produce greater crops, and supply and demand would soon bring all things back to a normal condition.

Can we not get action in some way—make laws to control the profits between the producer and the consumer?—[William H. Overholtzer.

AMMUNITION FOR USE IN WAR ON HOPPERS.

Entomologists agree that the poison bran mash method is the best means of controlling grasshoppers. The formula for this poison bait as recommended by H. C. Severin, State Entomologist, is as follows:

Wheat bran		25 pounds
Arsenic or paris green		1 pound
Black-strap feeding molasses ..		2 quarts
Lemons or oranges		6 fruits
Water	About	4 gallons

Thoroughly mix the bran and poison dry, care being taken to distribute the poison as uniformly through the bran as possible. Pour the molasses and grind the fruit into about three gallons of water. After stirring well, sprinkle this liquid over the dry bran and poison which should be mixed vigorously with a hoe or rake during the process. If too dry after all of this solution is used, add water slowly, but not enough to prevent the mash from breaking into flakes when thrown from the hand.

The bait should be broadcasted in the late afternoon or early morning, very thinly, over the infested fields. Never put it out on a dark, cool day. The formula given above should make enough mash to cover six or seven acres of land.

The best results can be obtained only when the community is on the lookout for the pest. It takes considerable time to obtain molasses and poison in large quantities. Because of this it is hoped that every farmer in every community in the State will keep a close watch for young hoppers and report their findings immediately to the county agent. By so doing it will be possible to have poison and molasses available for use in the infested districts before the crops are badly damaged.

For winter production the Sharpless, Puebla and Fuerte avocadoes are recommended by planters.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS FORM ORGANIZATION.

BY R. T. LYANS.

The Holstein breeders of Southern California met on June 16 and formed a permanent organization. George M. Brown, manager of Burr farm, Los Angeles, was elected president by unanimous vote. Mr. Brown has accomplished much in this section of the country in bringing the Holstein into its own and the breeders have wisely chosen one who will work towards making California, and especially Southern California, a great producing center for the very best in Holsteins.

On the evening of June 16, a banquet was given by the State Holstein Breeders' Association, to all those interested in Holsteins. The banquet was held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and was very largely attended by Holstein breeders and their wives. R. A. Condee, acted as chairman and during the announcement of speakers gave some very timely and helpful remarks about the Holstein outlook. George M. Brown responded with a few well-chosen words of appreciation for his election as president of the association, and in his generous manner gave full credit to Holstein breeders throughout the country for having brought the black and white cattle to the fore. Charles Hughes, when introduced by Chairman Condee, jokingly said he had never had the privilege of attending a Holstein banquet in the South, so had decided the only way he could attend one here would be to give one himself. He said the Southern California breeders were a very able lot of men, and surely knew how to breed good cattle. He said he had lately been converted to the idea that a registered Holstein Friesian cow will pay for herself in Southern California on $1000 land, and as proof of the fact that Southern California breeders are raising cattle of the right type, he referred to the sale of Holsteins at St. Paul, where California made the highest average over all States. Clinton Miller of Los Angeles, a director of the Los Angeles Live Stock Show then delivered his famous real estate speech which made such a hit at the St. Louis convention last year. This was followed by an able speech from Judge Willis I. Morrison, in which he emphasized the fact that co-operation was needed between the dairymen and the public. He said production reports should be more specific, and that dairymen must give more publicity and boost dairy products, and focus the attention of the general public on quality offered at a reasonable price. In this way, he said, a square deal to all will be the ultimate outcome.

Earl Sturgis, herdsman at Santa Anita ranch, then followed with a report of the National Guaranty Sale at St. Paul, and the clinching argument of his speech—and the part most vital to the Holstein breeder—was the fact that the cows with yearly records brought the high prices in the sale over the seven-day record animals. Breeders with deep foresight will recognize this fact and profit by it no doubt.

W. J. Higdon gave a report of the sale of the $41,000, bull purchase by Mr. Sturgis for Santa Anita rancho. He said the bull started at $3000, and hung for awhile before Mr. Sturgis bid $8000 and a New York syndicate advanced it rapidly to $25,000 and it was carried from here up to $30,000, where it stuck for quite a while, until Mr. Pabst stepped in and bid $40,000, making it a three-cornered fight. However, the other two bidders, had gone their limit, and Sturgis bid $41,000 and got the bull.

Dr. J. P. Iverson, chief of the State Bureau of Animal Industry, gave the closing speech, in which he stated that there had been a wonderful growth in the pure-bred industry in California, and he predicted a rapid progress in Holstein production.

VIGILANCE PRICE OF CHOLERA-FREE HOGS.

By co-operation of producers in the cleaning and disinfecting of infected premises and in the proper disposal of diseased carcasses, the use of antihog-cholera serum would be reduced to a minimum, or better still, made unnecessary at all, livestock experts say. As an instance of what this legitimate expenditure cost the farmers of the country in 1918, it may be cited that approximately $5,280,000 worth of the serum was produced. This, plus the cost of administering it, was borne by the farmers. So large an amount of money, not to mention the $60,000,000 estimated as the value of the 2,000,000 hogs stricken by cholera that year, could very profitably be turned to increasing production, which in turn would mean a healthier economic condition for the whole country.

"Farmers generally have been called the land army," said a Department of Agriculture specialist recently. "The comparison is good, concerning hog breeders. It is particularly so if the hog breeders are likened to a company of soldiers at drill. Each man has his position in the squad and each squad its position in the company. The success of all depends upon the way each individual performs his part. If Bill takes four paces instead of the required five in executing a movement, he will keep Jim from taking his proper three paces or worse still trip him up and send him sprawling and thus put the whole squad into confusion. In turn the whole company would feel the effect.

"Each hog breeder has a very definite responsibility to his community, directly to his neighbors and indirectly to every hog breeder in the country. If he fails to care properly for his hogs and is not alert in guarding his stock against infection, he may be responsible for the introduction of cholera and its spread among the hogs of his neighbors. An infected area would be created and if not properly quarantined, might easily prove a menace to producers many miles distant.

"The eradication of hog-cholera is largely a matter of education and depends to a great extent upon the co-operation given by State agencies, livestock producers and dealers, and practicing veterinarians. A great deal of value has already been accomplished and prejudice against the use of serum has been largely overcome.

"There remain other problems, though, to be completely solved and which need special attention. Among them are: The neglect on the part of owners to clean and disinfect infected premises; the promiscuous use of hog-cholera virus in the treatment of the diseaes by irresponsible or incompetent individuals; the failure of some farmers an officials to observe closely prescribed methods to prevent the introduction and spread of infection; the lack of restrictions in the traffic in infected animals; the improper disposal of hogs that die of cholera; and the sale, purchase and transportation of cholera hogs by unscrupulous dealers.

"All that is required of the producer is the observance of a few simple rules of precaution. Infected premises should be quarantined, sick hogs and newly purchased stock isolated, cholera-stricken ones burned and swine quarters thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. A few days each year of scraping, cleaning and disinfecting will accomplish a great deal; and use of serum in time may save a whole herd. Constant vigilance is the price of cholera-free hogs."

FIG PRICES DOWN.

LINDSAY.—According to recent reports, importations of figs from Smyrna are selling at auction at 8½ cents per pound in New York. This news has demoralized the California fig market. The outlook for fig prices this coming year are anything but promising. An effort is being made to amalgamate the fig acreage in the State of California with the California Peach Growers, Inc. Unless such an organization is perfected, the growing of figs, it is said, will be precarious.

SELECTING A SIRE FOR THE DAIRY HERD.

A bull is "more than half the herd." Hence the necessity of buying a sire of merit, and not just a bull.

Select a bull of good individuality. A bull should be equal to, or better in every regard, than the cows he is bred to, or his offspring will be bred down and not up.

A sire should be selected to improve the dairy qualities of the herd he is to head, and should, therefore, be descended from animals that have proved their dairy qualities.

Find out, if possible, the production records of his dam, two grand dams and four great grand dams. Learn if his sire and two grand sides have gotten high producing daughters.

See the offspring and dam, if possible, and find out whether they indicate that the sire in question comes from stock with proved transmitting ability.

Remember that 50 per cent of the inheritance of an animal comes from his sire and dam; that 25 per cent is divided between his four ancestors in the second generation, and 12½ per cent is divided between eight ancestors in the third generation back. The remaining 12½ per cent in his inheritance is divided among all the ancestors.

Remember also that many ancestors may not have had a chance to prove themselves, and that a pedigree may therefore not tell all the truth about the animal in question.

Don't select a poor individual, however long and astounding be his pedigree.

THE USE OF SULPHUR AS A FERTILIZER.

Much evidence has been accumulated during the past five years to show that sulphur in many cases constitutes a valuable fertilizer agent and in many other cases gives remarkable results when applied in the presence of lime. In particular, remarkable results have attended its use on alfalfa. Amounts of 100 pounds to the acre have in many cases given several hundred-fold increase in crop.

To date sulphur has been used but little as a fertilizer in Southern California. One or two plots are listed in the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau office. Sulphur, Farm Adviser Hodgson says, should be given a thorough trial under local conditions, both alone and in various combinations and with various crops. A project on the use of this element is contemplated. All those interested are requested to get in touch with the farm adviser.

HOG DEMANDS FISH IN HIS DAILY DIET.

The common domestic pig will never be able to write a book on table manners, but he knows how to order a meal as well as anyone. He is in a fair way to demand a fish course to supplement his salad and vegetable diet. He will take his fish in the form of fish meal, the refined by-product made from sound, wholesome raw material at the sardine and tuna canneries of Southern California or from the menhaden.

The fish meal is not to be confused with selecting and milling have removed the causes of prejudice.

The oil content of the meal adds materially to its feeding value. So far the experiments have shown that the meal does not taint the animal product, whether it be pork, butter, eggs or milk. Moreover, by diverting the fish meals to his animals instead of supplying it directly to his land as fertilizer, the farmer loses but a trifle of its fertilizing value and gains its entire feeding value—thus making the material yield two profits in the place of one.

BOOST HOG SALES.

PORTERVILLE.—The Chamber of Commerce through its secretary, H. L. Morrison, has conferred with the Poplar farm center regarding the installation of scales and adequate facilities at the Southern Pacific stockyards in Porterville for the prompt handling of the hog sales which are held each month. The cost of the equipment necessary will amount to approximately $800. It has been proposed that the Chamber of Commerce take over this work and finance it, with the understanding that the farm bureau will reimburse that body from the proceeds of the sales on a basis of the gross receipts.

FARM BUREAU PIONEER.

EAST HIGHLANDS.—Mrs. S. U. Stewart of Del Rosa at a recent meeting of the farm bureau directors of the south made the assertion that the women of the south started the farm bureau movement in this State. When pinned down, Mrs. Stewart, one of the leaders of the movement in San Bernardino county, admitted that she was largely responsible for it.

CAN OR DRY THE SURPLUS GARDEN VEGETABLES AND BEAT PROFITEERS.

BY ARTHUR E. HENDERLEY.

HAVING fortified himself and family against increasing food costs by planting a variety of vegetables, the home gardener must take advantage of his enviable position and save the surplus products from his food-growing patch by canning, drying and storing for use in following months.

Help is hard to get on the farm. Growers are decreasing their acreage of food crops because of this scarcity of labor, and the cost of food is bound to mount higher during the next year or two. This is the opportune time to start saving the extra beans, corn, root crops and other vegetables in the garden. Canned vegetables bought at the store are certain to be higher in price because of the higher price of the raw products, of labor in the canneries, and of cans. Do your own canning and get the tinned vegetables for less than half. Very little skill is required to do home canning and drying.

Look over your canning materials and take stock of what you have. Save the glass jars for fruit as far as possible, and get out the cans which held cooking compound, coffee and syrup, which are fitted with removable lids. They make excellent cans for home us

COMMENCE CANNING NOW.

If the gardener planted in season, there are several crops which can now be canned, after the table is supplied. String beans, sweet corn, spinach and white onions are ready, and soon cucumber pickles, tomatoes, okra, peas, peppers, etc., will come along. Asparagus should be canned now, while there is plenty of it in the local markets, and this is an expensive luxury to buy in cans at the corner grocery. A cellar or pantry stocked with canned vegetables in these times is a gold mine.

If the home gardener has the time and the inclination, he can raise the root crops, except potatoes, besides spinach, lettuce, onions and cabbage all the year around in Southern California, except in the desert valleys, where it gets too warm in summer for the growth of most vegetables without artificial shade. Thus the canning of beets, radishes, turnips, cabbage, etc., is not necessary, except when there is a large surplus which would ordinarily go to waste or be sacrificed at the market. These products can also be dried or stored to advantage.

Cabbages may be kept in an outdoor trench, or in barely moist sand, or in boxes or barrels in the cellar.

Peas and beans that get too ripe for canning should be dried in the shade, out of doors, and hung up in sacks in the cellar or screen porch. Even though there be only a quart or two, they will help out a lot in reducing living costs.

STORING IN SAWDUST.

Turnips, beets, carrots, radishes and parsnips may be kept in moist sawdust or sand in a cool, darkened place if they are not dried, as above.

Sweet potatoes can be stored. Cucumbers, beets, cauliflower, snap beans, green tomatoes, small white onions and melon rinds may be pickled. Pumpkins or squashes may be kept for awhile in a warm, dry part of the house, or may be cut up and canned, or dried. Potatoes can be kept in a pit outdoors, or stored in a dry bin, where it is not warm enough to cause them to sprout, or cold enough to freeze them. Blackberries, raspberries, loganberries, currants and cherries may be dried by speading them on a piece of canvas, fastened to a lath, and suspended above the kitchen stove, a piece of mosquito netting being used to protect them from flies, or the berries and cherries may be made into jelly or jam. Can, store, dry, pickle, preserve or bury every particle of food from the garden that is not eaten. Save everything. Let nothing go to waste.

THE COLD PACK METHOD.

Probably the best and easiest method of saving surplus vegetables is by canning them with the "cold pack" method. By this means, cans with removable lids may be used for the canning, or ordinary glass fruit jars may be utilized.

The steps in canning by this method are as follows:

(1.) Select sound garden vegetables.

(2.) Grade them according to size or condition; wash and trim.

(3.) Scald or blanch the vegetables.

(4.) Pack them carefully and closely in the jars or cans.

(5.) Add hot water or syrup to the cans or jars; fill nearly to top.

(6.) Place good rubbers and covers on the jars; do not seal tight.

(7.) Cook the product according to time table.

This is not so difficult as it seems, and canning one batch of vegetables will so familiarize the home canner with the method that she will not need to refer to the set of instructions the second time.

Can the different sizes of vegetables, and the different shades of tomatoes together, and insure a high-class product. Wash them clean, and trim them, stringing the beans, silking the corn, etc. They will cook better and be more attractive in appearance. In the case of tomatoes, remove the skin and stem end after scalding.

When the vegetables have been thus prepared, scald or blanch them in boiling water. This reduces the bulk and drives out objectionable acids. Tomatoes need to be scalded only enough to loosen the skin.

THEY MUST BE BLANCHED.

Have ready a kettle of boiling water. Put the tomatoes in a wire basket, or lay them an a piece of cheese cloth, or a towel; twist the ends together to form a sack, and lower into the kettle. Have the water boiling hard. One to two minutes will be sufficient time to blanch. Take out and plunge into cold water. Tomatoes, if they are ripe, will not require so long a time. Do not allow the vegetables to stand in cold water long.

The next step is to pack the vegetables closely together, without bruising, into jars or cans. In the case of tomatoes, they must be peeled at this stage. Glass jars should be heated, to lessen the danger of breakage. When the vegetables have been packed in the can or jar, add hot water for vegetables, and syrup for fruits. In canning tomatoes, add a half teaspoonful of salt. Use the thumb and little finger in screwing the cover on the jar after the rubber has been placed in position. In this way the canner will be sure that the lid is not screwed down too tight, for the steam must be allowed to escape in cooking. Set the jars in a wash boiler or other vessel which is at least ten inches deep. Put two or three short pieces of lath under the jars or cans, so that they will not come into contact with the bottom of the cooker. The water must cover the jars or cans completely, with a little to spare. Cook as per time table below:

Tomatoes, 22 minutes; egg plant, 1 hour; pumpkin, 1½ hours; corn on cob, or cut off, 3 hours; spinach, 2 hours; asparagus, 1½ hours; lima or string beans, 2 hours; okra, 2 hours; peas, 1½ hours; cabbage or sauerkraut, 1½ hours; beets, 1½ hours; carrots, sweet potatoes, parsnips and turnips the same length of time.

Remove the jars or cans from the cooker, being careful not to expose to cold drafts, and by all means do not set in an open window. See to it that the rubbers are whole and in place, in case of jars.

Don't Give Away Your Garden Produce—Can the Surplus.

The home gardener may can, dry or store what is not used immediately, thus cheapening living costs.

RED SPIDER CONTROL IN ALMOND ORCHARD.

The season is now at hand when careful consideration must be given to the control of red spider. This is the most serious pest the almond and prune grower has to contend with. There are two methods of control:

First, by the use of a contact spray which kills the spider immediately upon application. It is difficult to find a spray which is strong enough to kill the adult spider without causing injury to the foliage from burning. Even though we do succeed in killing all the spiders, we still have the eggs to contend with, and they will hatch out another brood within a short time.

The second method is smothering the insects. The sulphur spread on the foliage continues to give off fumes for from five days to two weeks, depending upon the materials used. These fumes smother the spiders, and if the application is thorough enough and sufficient sulphur is left on the foliage to be effective ten days after the application, the young brood is also killed as it emerges from the eggs.

Too much cannot be said about thorough application of all sprays and dusts. It has very frequently been observed that one orchardist, making a hurried and careless application, secures very poor results with any material he may use. Despite the fact that the red spider is very hard to control in this section, cases where one thorough application secured a successful control throughout the whole season have been known.

STRAWBERRY AREA LESS, PRICE HIGHER.

The value of the commercial strawberry crop is not far below $25,000,000 yearly at shipping points. Production has decreased about one-half during the past five years, but valuation has been maintained, owing to the upward trend of prices in recent seasons. Of 4,097,214 crates of twenty-four quarts each, produced in the commercial strawberry shipping area last season, 3,432,817 crates were grown in the early and mid-season shipping sections, comprising sixteen States south of New Jersey and west to Missouri and Texas, and including California. About three-quarters of a million crates were used commercially for juice, preserves, canning and other manufacturing purposes.

The Deglet Noor is still the best commercial date variety in Coachella Valley.

RANGE CATTLEMAN TELLS HIS METHODS.

Range cattlemen will be interested in the following interview with a range cattle man of southern Arizona.

"Of course I wean calves. It is the only way. In September I take the calves away from the cows, or gather up the weak cows and give them special feed. It is not long before these thin cows pick up on good feed when the calves are weaned, and they are sure to get with calf. It is important to wean in September, for I take away the bulls shortly after that and the cows should get with calf that fall. Any cows that fail to get with calf get fat and I sell them for they are poor breeders.

"I also have a special breeding season. From June 1 to September 30 the bulls are left with the cows, but after this time they are separated. The fat cows will breed soon after turning them together after June 1 and these cows calve in early March. The thin cows that are good milkers may calve as late as the end of June but most of the calves come in April and May and are ready to wean in September. If the feed is good I wean the strong calves from thin cows as early as four and one-half months old. It is better for the cows and it does not hurt the calves to be weaned then. I get a late calf from that cow next year and she will get fat and strong. I do not believe in allowing the calf to injure the calf that is coming by keeping the cow thin up to calving time. Weaning the calf will increase the calf crop 50 per cent in any outfit. It will reduce the number of bulls required, cut loss in old cows in half and make cows last two years longer.

"The range cow that has been properly cared for until ten years old and not allowed to nurse big yearlings, but put on a good range, will make as much money as a three or four year old. I believe I make just as much money from my cows when they are eight to twelve years old as from the younger ones from four to eight years old. A thin cow that has developed good habits of calf raising will breed, when young cows in the same condition would fail to bring a calf. Of course cows begin to go down when ten years old; some of them younger, but if they have been maintained on a brush range it is time to begin to get rid of them when they are ten years old. Cows that have been compelled to eat browse will usually play out two years sooner than those that have been on a good grass range.

"Speaking of pastures, I believe in having as many of them as possible. Every outfit should have at least four pastures. One of these should be allowed to go to seed every year and if possible two of them to go to seed. This will greatly improve the quality of the range and a fellow needs the pasture in the winter time and early spring. It does not hurt one bit to pasture these fields after they have gone to seed, because after this time the roots are strong and contain an abundance of reserve to force growth for a year or two.

"A pasture should also be available, for keeping heifers in, for weaning calves, maintaining horses, gathering beef, etc. Breeding pastures are mighty useful. It is also necessary to have a separate pasture for the bulls from October 1 to June to keep them away from the cows.

"I have been watching this cattle business for a good many years and the more I know about it the more convinced am I that we have got to adopt new methods of management. The old way of rounding up cattle, roping them and injuring the stock won't do any more. Three years ago I was at the stockyards where an outfit of about 300 head was sold. In counting them the cowboys were so rough that they injured fifteen cows. This is surely a great mistake. Not only were fifteen cows injured, worth say $750 or $50 a cow, when not one of them should have been injured in any way, but quite a number of the cows were not much better off. Salting cows abundantly, supplying them with feed during the short range period and managing the business in a thorough, up-to-date way will do much to make the business a success."

FRUIT CANNERIES OF ONTARIO ARE READY.

ONTARIO.—Four of the largest fruit canneries in California—those of the California Growers' Association, the Golden State Canneries Company, the United Canneries Company and the big plant of Charles Stern & Sons, Inc., are displaying marked activity in preparation for the apricot canning campaign, which is expected to open the last of this month or the first of July, depending largely on weather conditions affecting the ripening of the fruit.

In addition to the "big four," there are a number of smaller canning concerns and numerous drying plants in the Ontario section, all of which are now busy with preparations for the annual run.

This year's apricot crop is declared to be one of the lightest in years, but prices are exceptionally high, first-class fruit now being contracted for at $75 to $90 a ton. Fruit men express the belief that good prices have come to stay, for the growers are now so well organized that any serious drop in prices in the future is highly improbable.

The coming peach crop, the run on which will follow the handling of the "cots," is also expected to be light, being about half of the normal production. Peaches are now being contracted for at from $50 to $90 per ton, depending on the size, quality and variety of the fruit.

At several of the Ontario plants there have been brief preliminary runs on cherries and berries and there will be short campaigns on pears, plums and other fruits followed by runs on tomatoes.

Owing to the shortness of the crop, the Ontario canneries are anticipating no serious difficulty this year in securing sufficient labor. Housing accommodations present a problem which is being met to some extent by the erection of cottages for employees.

The California Growers' Association has purchased considerable additional acreage adjoining its plant at Campus avenue and State street and has plans for the erection of a group of sixteen three-room bungalows for use of employees. These are to be rushed to completion, and will be modern and sanitary in every respect. One or two of the other canneries are making preparations for the establishment of small tent cities near their plants during the fruit season. About 2500 men and women are expected to be given employment in the fruit during the height of the season.

The most notable addition at the Ontario plant of the Golden State company is a label warehouse 36 by 60 feet, with a storage capacity of 75,000,000 labels. The building is of reinforced concrete construction, and is fireproof. It was built at a cost of $5000, and will be used as the central distribution point for labels for all of the plants in the chain of the Golden State company. The old wooden floor of the entire operating portion of the Golden State cannery has been replaced by a cement floor, which will not only be more easily cleaned, making for improved sanitation, but will greatly facilitate the movement of trucks bearing fruit about the big plant. More than $25,000 has been spent at the Golden State plant this year in preparation for the coming campaign.

On account of the uncertain conditions regarding the movement of freight, most of the Ontario canneries are now taking steps to anticipate a possible shortage of cans by storing considerable quantities of empties ready for use. Most of the canned products of last year have now been moved to Eastern markets and a portion of the space formerly occupied by them is now being used for the empty cans. Heretofore, it has been unnecessary to do any extensive storing of cans, the canneries simply using them from the freight cars as they were shipped in.

All of the Ontario canneries are equipped with modern rest rooms, emergency hospital rooms, where trained nurses are constantly in attendance and several of the big plants have their own cafeterias, where employees may secure hot meals. Cutting and packing tables and graders have been newly installed in several of the local plants to conform with the latest recommendations of the State Welfare Commission, and nothing has been left undone which might add to the comfort and convenience of the employee.

The acreage of cantaloupes in the Imperial Valley this year is 70 per cent greater than ever before, and is twice that of any other section of the United States.

You Can Reduce Your Feed Cost

Per Gallon of Milk by Making It Easy for Your Cows To Produce Milk

Hoard Says:

Here are the factors to consider to make it easy for your cows to produce milk.

1. Palatability.

Supply feeds that appeal to the cow's taste, so that she will eat a maximum amount.

2. Correctly balanced.

Supply the right amount of protein carbo-hydrates and fats, so that the cow can convert them from the vegetable form to milk form with the smallest amount of effort and the minimum of loss.

3. Easily digested.

Supply feeds that are low in fiber and easily digested, so as to throw the least possible strain on the digestive organs.

MOTOR CULTIVATOR IDEAL FOR TILLAGE OF ROW CROPS IN WEST.

THE trend of power farming is toward making the farmers less dependent upon work animals for carrying on all of the field operations. Although there are very few ranches or forms that depend solely upon tractor power, there are many farmers who find they cannot do entirely without horses, but as power machinery is simplified and made more adaptable for a variety of jobs, more and more horses will be displaced in the country.

When tractors were first used for general work on the farm, it was said that, in spite of their versatility, they would never be used successfully for cultivating. This prediction has not been borne out by experience, for today, many owners of tractors are using them successfully for cultivating, although in many instances the troctor is too heavy or powerful to do this work economically, even if it does it efficiently.

To meet the needs of the farmers of Southeastern California and Arizona, where cotton is the principal crop grown, there has been developed by tractor manufacturers, a motor cultivator that is ideally adopted to a wide range of work, not only in the desert cotton belt, but elsewhere in California, where power is needed for the doing of light field jobs. Even where a tractor is already a part of the farm equipment, it will pay, in many cases, to add a motor cultivator, because of the work it will do, and the economy with which light field jobs can be performed. Because there is not the power requirement necessary in an all-around tractor, the motor cultivator is lighter in construction, easily operated by man or boy, and the fuel consumption is small.

Motor Cultivators Versatillity.

It plants, cultivates and helps harvest cotton and beans, and is fine for cultivating corn, tomatoes and other row crops. The views are of two different types of motor cultivators, above a Toro in a cotton field; below on Avery in a Ventura bean field.

With a motor cultivator on the place, it will be possible to perform many of the smaller or lighter jobs ordinarily left to the tractor, including belt work, for these machines are equipped with pulleys for utilizing the motor power for stationery jobs. For cultivating, the machine will ordinarily cover from sixteen to eighteen acres per day, or double the area to be handled with horses. The machine will cultivate cotton, corn, beans, potatoes, or other crops planted in rows. Special attachments can be procured for cultivating beans, listed corn and other crops, and by the use of special planter attachments made to fit the machine, one can plant crops with the outfit.

SPECIAL COTTON PLANTERS.

The motor cultivator can be successfully used in the cotton fields, either for planting, for which special cotton-planting attachments have been devised, or for cultivating the growing crop. All of the usual shovel attachments, furrow openers, etc., used with horses can be successfully attached to the motor cultivator.

In all row crops where the motor cultivator is to be used throughout the season, it is best to perform all of the planting operations with the motor in order that the rows may be spaced properly to permit of machine cultivating later. The standard bean and pea attachment has been adopted to the motor cultivator and makes possible the cultivation of beans, peas, beets and other small row crops. The same two, three or four rows which are planted at one time should, of coruse, be cultivated together, as only parallel rows can be successfully cultivated. The cultivator teeth, sweeps, shovels, etc., are adjustable longititudinally on the bar to meet any condition of rows.

In California, where large areas are devoted to the growing of tomatoes for the canneries, the motor cultivator can be successfully used in the field. To meet the condition under which these crops are planted in extremely wide rows, a two-wheel front truck is provided in place of the regular single front wheels found on the ordinary machine.

For supplying power for doing the lighter kinds of belt work, the motor cultivator is superior to the larger tractor because of the economy in fuel and the wear and tear on the big machine. By attaching a short belt, four or five inches in width, to the belt pulley with which the motor cultivator comes equipped, one can furnish power quickly for grinding feed, pumping water, sawing wood, or similar kinds of work.

In the harvesting of hay, it has been found, from a study of hay-making crews, that the larger the implement used in any power unit, the greater will be the saving of man labor. For instance, in mowing, the adding of a foot in width to the cut of the mower, will result in greatly increasing the amount of hay cut with the same amount of supervision. With animal power, however, the implements used must be adjusted to the strength of the team. The motor cultivator has ample power to pull the larger sized mowers, hay rakes, etc., and with its use a farmer who has a large acreage of hay can harvest his crop with less assistance than where animal power is used.

USED ALSO FOR DISCING.

The motor cultivator will likewise furnish ample power and is well adapted to use with disc harrows, spike-tooth harrows, grain drills, potato diggers, and other implements requiring considerable power, but not so difficult to operate as a plow. Aside from heavy plowing, the motor cultivator will successfully pull any ordinary field implement used in planting and cultivating crops, and in conjunction with a larger tractor for doing the heavy work, will enable many farmers to virtually do away entirely with horses.

The motor cultivator is light in construction, for it is not built to withstand the heavy requirements of plowing and other heavy-duty work on the farm. Lacking the heavy weight and strength of the tractor, it even fairly small boys can run them when once they have gotten the hang of it. The machine can be attached to any tool it is desired to pull, by simply using a clevis, and it is not necessary to spend a lot of time making adjustments or connecting attachments.

Just as the tractor will do better and more work in plowing or other field operation than horses, so the motor cultivator will accomplish as much work, or more work in a day, with less fatigue on the part of the operator. In addition, there will be the saving of time required to look after and feed the work stock which it replaces. The fuel consumption of the machine is considerably less than the feed consumption of work stock, and the motor cultivator consumes fuel only when it works.

In California, where it gets pretty hot in our fertile valleys during the growing season, many farmers would like to do more cultivating of fields than they do, but the work stock cannot stand the hot sun and dusty fields, and their efficiency is below normal. Under these conditions, the motor cultivator will do as much work and for as long a period as the owner wishes, and many power farmers have gone over their fields several times with machines for every time they would have gone with animal power. The increased tillage, in conserving ground moisture, has more than paid for the extra cultivation, and this work did not consume any more time than the slower methods with animal power would.

While the motor cultivator is too new a thing to have been extensively used in California, yet it would seem to be ideal for keeping the soil in our orchards in good condition. The machine is small, low, and can be turned within a small radius, and for cultivating, discing, harrowing or other working of orchard soils, the motor cultivator will prove more satisfactory than horses. Almost any implement that is used in orchard practice can be operated in conjunction with the motor, and as the merits of this newest addition to the tractor family are made known to the horticulturists and ranchers in the Golden State, it will undoubtedly come in for a large degree of popularity and use.

LITTLE GARDEN TYPE TRACTOR HAS ENLARGED SCOPE ON FARM.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

IN THE development of tractor types in order to meet specific requirements of farm tillage, the "walking tractor," or "garden tractor," a machine designed to replace one horse, has been prominent. This small tractor, which is driven by an operator who guides it while walking behind it, is a comparatively recent addition to farm power equipment, the first of the many types of walking tractors being put on the market four years ago. Now there are many excellent types of garden tractors, or "one-horse tractors," on the market, and they all have some special claim to economy and utility. Thousands are in use on American farms today. They are merrily-chug-chugging their way across fields and in orchards from Maine to Florida, and from Vancouver to San Diego and across the Mexican line.

When this small type of tractor was first evolved, it was designed for garden work and the raising of truck crops. The advance agents of these little aids to the farmer with small acreage found their best sales argument in the facility with which the garden tractors cultivated garden crops. But now these tractors of two to four-horse power fill almost every farm need, and the excellent belt work of recent designs is one of the most spectacular developments of this type of farm machine. There is hardly a limit to the number of operations for which this small type of tractor can be used. They are becoming more and more popular, and the future for them is roseate.

Southern California has been called the garden of America. From the irrigated desert valleys and the fertile lands within twenty miles of Los Angeles are shipped to every State in the Union thousands of carloads of truck crops each year. Cabbage, canteloupes, watermelons, cauliflower, celery, lettuce and the root crops are raised, not only for local consumption, but for the denizens of that part of the United States where these crops cannot be harvested until summer. It is in these truck districts that the little garden tractor finds its greatest use. But the orchardist with five or ten acres, too, has found that this type of tractor fills his every need, and there are scores of them in the citrus and deciduous groves of Southern California

NOT LIMITED TO GARDENS.

As the first of these tractors was designed for garden use, a general impression has prevailed that they are limited to truck crop raising. This is one of the things which handicap the sales agents for these small tractors, and this impression also handicaps the man with a general farm or orchard, because the little tractor is probably adapted for his use, and he is unwilling to give it a try-out because he thinks it is only good for gardens. On the contrary, the little tractors probably has a far greater range of use than any other class of tractor. It is a dependable source of power on the dairy farm, in the orchard, in raising vegetables, and in row crop work, besides being useful in many other farm operations.

The small walking tractor was not built in a day. It is the result of years of study on the part of agricultural and mechanical experts. The first types turned out were not found responsive to the needs of the man who uses one horse in his farm operations. The power was increased in the case of most of these machines. One feature of the first of these little tractors, however, has prevailed, and that is the manner of driving, which is with handles similar to those on plows. With these admirable driving handles the operator keeps the tractor straight along the rows, and he may use less or more power without stopping or taking his hands from the driving handles.

Unquestionably these tractors will find their greatest use in the future as supplements to the big tractors, those of from thirty to seventy-five horse power. They offer great possibilities in the finishing up of those portions of fields which cannot be worked by the large tractors because of their great size. All of these small tractors are designed to pull plows of five to seven inches, and get around trees in the orchard or in corners of the field with facility, finishing up unplowed areas left by the larger machines.

GOOD IN BELT WORK.

In belt work, these little machines are admirable helps to the farmer. They are now operating cream separtors, milking machines, lighting plants, churns, sawmills, pumps, etc. The women of the farm are delighted with them, as they may be devised to turn the washing machines, and otherwise eliminate much of the drudgery of farm housework.

In the southern part of the State, it is the general practice to grow truck or other field crops between the rows of small trees set in orchard form. The little tractors come in very useful in this work. The versatile little tractor is made to straddle the rows of truck crops and other row crops, and gets up close to the trees in cultivation. The number of rows which may be cultivated with a garden tractor, too, can be increased because of the small size of this machine, and the yield of the farm may thus be increased.

The Hardy Little Field Tractor.

These versatile aids to farming, are the "Walking Tractor" type, as above, or are provided with a seat for the driver, as in the second illustration.

These tractors are economical in the use of fuel, and work for less than half the cost of a horse outfit. Most of them will work for ten hours on a gallon of fuel, and the upkeep of these machines is in proportion. One Van Nuys farmer reports the cost of a day's work with the one-horse tractor as 56 cents, not adding depreciation. The cost of feeding a horse, which eats all the time, Sundays, holidays and every day, whether he works or not, is found to be twice this figure.

The little tractor is popular with the farmer who feels that he is not justified in investing in a tractor which costs $2000 or more, and therefore, the garden tractors have been found the easiest selling machines. Farmers who have been prejudiced against any type of tractors have bought these little machines, and have been so pleased with their work that they have become interested in larger machines, and have bought them to do the major work on the farm, using the little tractors in supplementary work.

[illegible] The California cotton raiser is progressive, unlike his southern neighbor, who still clings to his sole mule for cultivation work. The cotton plants must be assiduously cultivated, and cultivated, lightly, especially during the latter stages of the growth of the plants, in order to avoid nipping off any of the bolls, or to cut the surface roots. The little tractor gets in between the spreading cotton rows and does this work with a minimum of damage to the bolls or roots.

The so-called garden tractor presents a great opportunity for the motorization of [illegible] it presents to the farmer a real substitute for the horse.

ENORMOUS OUTPUT OF MIDGETS.

At least fourteen companies are now putting out these small walking tractors, and the combined capacity of these plants has reached the enormous total of 35,000 machines, valued at about $11,000,000. There has been a very great demand for these machines, and some of the plants are working

BY ARTHUR L. DAHL

EMERSON is supposed to have said that if a man could do something better than his neighbor, even though he lived in the woods, the world would beat a path to his door. It may be true about a "mouse-trap," but there are thousands of farmers and fruit growers in the remote places of our producing districts who grow the finest apples, or berries, or other food supplies, but about whom and whose products the world never hears. Like the modest violet that offers up its fragrance and beauty to an unappreciative world, such producers need a press agent. Not the wordy, gushing, buncombe of Barnum, but the quiet and efficient voice of advertising. There is always a demand for things of quality and the market for such products is never glutted, but the man who has the quality goods for sale, whether he be farmer or horticulturist or poultryman, must make known to the world, or a small part of it, that he has superior things to sell.

California grows some wonderful fruits and vegetables, and the excellence of the products of the Golden State is known around the world. Perhaps, in time, the Emersonian doctrine might have brought the world into beating a path to the California orchards and vineyards, but the Californians didn't wait to see. Instead, the orange growers and the prune growers, the raisin growers and the rest of the small army of producers of superior fruits, used advertising to tell the world that they had the finest things to eat found anywhere. They backed up, of course, by marketing goods of the highest standard, but the remarkable expansion of the fresh and dried-fruit industry of California is primarily due to the co-operative advertising of the growers.

Modest Bulletins Placed at the Entrance to This Walnut Ranch Attract Buyers From the Highway.

Now there are many small farms or ranches tucked away in quiet corners of our rural districts, where a surplus production of small fruits, berries, eggs, butter, vegetables and other food supplies is had. There is practically no market for these surplus supplies in the nearest hamlet, because there are many neighbors who likewise have a surplus of those things, and the local market will not absorb all of the supply. In such a case, advertising will aid in turning this surplus into coin of the realm.

There are dozens of ways to advertise. The printed word in a farm paper, newspaper or magazine is perhaps the most common and often most effective, but there are many others that can be adopted by the man in the country as well as the man in the city. A sign tacked on a post alongside the nearest highway might contain a few words for the man who passes to read. In this age of the auto, a highway sign is very effective. If the right appeal is made, many an autoist will stop, or even go out of his way, to buy some fresh eggs or butter, or some juicy apples or succulent vegetables.

The development of the auto industry has been so remarkable that today people of all classes and stations in life own cars. A very large proportion of such owners are of the kind who are not unwilling to save a few dimes by purchasing their family food supplies direct from the producers, rather than pay a middleman a profit. Others, too, prefer to get their supplies from a source they know to be fresh, and these autoists will go out of their way to find farmers who have supplies to sell. A book-keeper, who had a large family and whose earnings were not large, bought an auto, much to the surprise of his friends, who thought he could not afford it. The man, however, had an idea of his own about its cost, and it worked out, too, just as he figured. On each Saturday afternoon this family would go for a long ride into the country, and on the way back they would stop at various small orchards and truck gardens and buy sufficient eggs, potatoes and other vegetables and fruits to last them all week, and a sufficient amount would be saved on these purchases to pay the up-keep of the machine. The farmer, too, received as much for his goods as he would if he had sold them to a produce merchant, so everybody was happy.

The county agent, or farm adviser, has become a permanent institution in a great many of our communities, and in the reports made by these agents to the Department of Agriculture, the fact is repeatedly brought out that a certain farmer in one locality will complain that there is no market for his surplus bull calves, while in another district, not very far distant, a similar agent will be told that the reason a certain farmer has not improved his dairy herd by breeding up is because he could not locate a desirable sire at the price he could afford to pay. Now the chances are that both of these farmers, one having something to sell the other needed, read the same agricultural paper, and if either had inserted a small ad therein a sale would have resulted that would be satisfactory to both concerned.

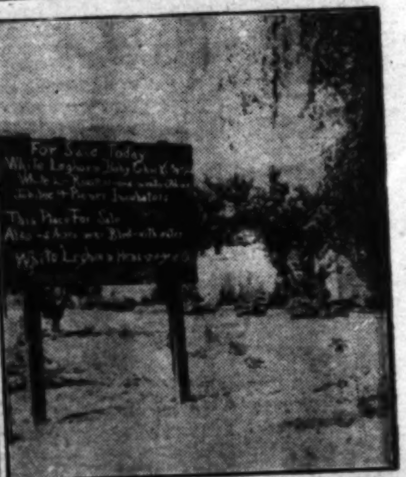
WHITE LEGHORNS

An Attractive Entrance to a Large Poultry Farm in the San Fernando Valley.



Even the Ranch, Itself, is Included in This List of Things Which the Farmer Has to Sell.

When the parcel post law first went into effect, there were great things predicted for it on behalf of the farmer. It was thought that an extensive system of buying and selling would spring up between the consumers of the city and the producers in the country, but for many reasons, these hopes were not fully realized. Many farmers did try to dispose of their products through parcel post sales, and a few of them succeeded while others failed. If we traced all of the causes for failure we would find that in practically every case the fault was more or less that of the farmer. In these days of modern merchandising, when every housewife expects to, and does, receive her purchases done up in sanitary cartons or packages, too many farmers thought they could ship the things they of-

Eggs and Walnuts a Profitable Combination.

BY R. T. LYANS.

TO THAT person contemplating a career in poultry raising there is one best bet that should never be overlooked, and that is, the selection of a suitable location. Too many people go far out from the big cities and select land which is not particularly adaptable to the successful raising and marketing of poultry. Sometimes people do this to avoid a heavy initial investment, as land is generally cheaper far removed from town. Poultry and eggs generally go to city markets, so it is of prime importance to locate plants near large cities, to avoid transportation costs as much as possible. Another thing which should be borne in mind is to get a location where an abundance of shade and good drainage can be procured at a minimum cost.

When E. F. Bogardus of Hollywood began searching for a suitable place to start his wonderful chicken plant, breeding and egg producing, he must have had just such ideas in his mind, for he seems to have combined these prerequisites in his ideal poultry farm, which he finally located near Lankershim just beyond Universal City and only a few miles from Los Angeles. He selected twenty acres covered with full-bearing walnut trees on a natural slope which furnishes splendid drainage. His twenty-two colony houses each has a spacious pen, and a giant walnut tree. On a warm summer day the chickens seek this fine natural shade and are comfortable and contented in spite of the rising thermometer.

The large, roomy laying and breeding houses, some of them housing over 1000 hens, have large runs with deciduous trees to afford the much-needed shade. Everywhere one may go on this immense poultry farm one will find a picture of contentment which is very pleasing to the eye. The entire scheme is both practical and scientific. In the winter time, when the hens want the sunshine, they can have it, because the giant walnuts, having dropped their foliage, present only skeletons which allows the sun to penetrate to all parts of the run.

Mr. Bogardus, on this model ranch, has made great strides towards combining the exhibition type hen with the egg-producing type, and the results he has obtained along this line have been very gratifying. Many of his birds are of wonderful exhibition type, and none of them are allowed to go into the breeding pens unless they lay at least 175 eggs per year. In spite of the fact that many a skeptical breeder says this combination will not work out in practical operation, this ranch seems to have accomplished the impossible. While the high-tailed, non-exhibition type bird seems to hold the boards when it comes to high egg production, there is no doubt that great layers can be produced among the exhibition or long, sweeping-tailed types, if rigid selection is followed. It is to be hoped that, in the near future, some means will be employed whereby the qualifications of fancy birds will be so modified that real egg-producing hens can enter the show. Such action will, of course, bar the extremely high-tailed as well as the extremely long curved-tail specimen, but there is no doubt in the writer's mind but what such action would be very beneficial to the poultry world. The egg-producing hen is here to stay in ever increasing numbers, and if the strictly fancy hen expects to gain popular approval, she must make some radical changes or go down and out. The very fact that breeders of the Leghorn do not show in large numbers is proof positive of their disapproval of the present standards as laid down in show qualifications.

The Valley Grove Farm is breeding good birds, but the owner will not tolerate show type, unless it is accompanied by high egg production, for the backbone of the whole industry depends upon production, just like the dairy cow industry depends upon the heavy milker.

To meet the demand for high egg-producing stock, Mr. Bogardus has installed a mammoth incubator, the only one of its kind in the State, with a capacity of 5000 eggs. The eggs are never removed from the machine for cooling, as plenty of oxygen is supplied in a special intake, which does away with this costly operation, thus reducing labor to a minimum. The eggs are all turned at once by a crank attached to the trays, again reducing the cost of labor. It is so arranged that a single unit can be turned if desired. These units hold about 200 eggs each, and can be operated so that eggs can be placed in the machine at different dates and chicks can be hatched whenever desired, regardless of other sections in the incubator. According to R. L. Leitch, the superintendent of the Valley Grove Farm, this mammoth incubator gives wonderful results, both in economy of production and in vitality of chicks hatched. The stove which supplies fuel to the incubator will burn hard coal, distillate, oil, tops or other fuel equally well.

The demand for chicks has been so great this year that Mr. Bogardus has had to run his hatches up to June to supply the trade, and the day the writer visited this ranch on May 27, the incubator was still running. In the brooder house, which has a capacity of 5000 chicks, were to be seen 3000 strong and lusty youngsters, 2000 having recently been placed in the colony houses at the age of four weeks. The brooder house is divided into units of 130 chicks each, and each individual brooder is heated by pipes running the entire length of house, and so arranged that any unit can be heated without heating the others. The units are so arranged that the tops can be removed, and lath placed across, affording them a roost at an early age. Buttermilk is purchased by the barrel and fed to both young and old chickens alike, and plenty greens are supplied at all times. For variety of feeds, sprouted oats are used with great success.

In the large feed house are bins arranged in a neat and orderly manner, containing many kinds of feed that can be mixed economically. The scratch used on this farm consist of equal parts of Indian corn, wheat and Egyptian corn, while mashes used are mixed and ground according to the season. Special machines are in use for grading, mixing, grinding and cutting the feeds, and there seems to be nothing lacking to make this plant one of the most complete and up-to-date poultry plants to be found in the country.

The colony houses are constructed so as to hold three dozen hens, and, of course, a great many more young chickens. Mr. Bogardus trap-nested 1100 pullets the past year, and 450 of these were placed in the breeding pens, along with his 2-year-old hens, to make up the 1020 birds in this pen. The day the writer visited the place the birds in this pen were laying 55 per cent, but from the number of eggs in the long row of nests, it seemed like 100 per cent. Not an egg is sold from this pen under 10 cents per egg, in 1000 lots. And then folks wonder does the poultry business pay!

The floors are all of cement, and covered in winter with straw and in summer with pure sand. Mr. Leitch says the straw is not necessary in summer, as the birds do not need to exercise so much. The dropping boards are, of course, cleaned every day, and running water is kept before the birds at all time. About 100 hens are kept on yearly trapnest tests for the purpose of selecting special matings. Mr. Leitch is a licensed poultry judge, and he has developed a fine small flock of Rhode Island Reds, of which he is very proud.

SPECIAL OFFER

New Perpetual Hardy Flowering Pinks

There have been but few novelties produced in recent years more useful or beautiful than these superb new hardy Pinks from England. They are the result of crosses between the ordinary hothouse Carnation and the small border Pink. The flowers are intermediate in size between the Carnation and the ordinary border variety. They have a delicious and intense clove fragrance. The plants are dwarf growers, and blossom freely through the year. A bunch of the flowers will scent a whole room, the fragrance being far stronger than that of any Carnation. You will find them a splendid value for cut-flower purposes. We offer you four of the best sorts, strong plants from two-inch pots:

HAROLD: Perfectly double, deeply fringed, pure white, intensely fragrant. Splendid for cutting.

PHYLLIS: Pale pink with maroon colored center.

ROBERT: Extra large flower. Ground color old rose, center deep maroon.

JEAN: A dainty, deeply fringed, double variety. Center rich crimson, exterior of the petals zoned white. Superb sort for cutting purposes.

Price of any of the above, 20c each. $2.00 per dozen.

NOTE: If wanted by parcel post, add 10c per dozen extra.

SUNDAY, JUNE 27.

The Wanderer.

ONE evening, just at dusk, when we were all down at the little gray house in the hollow that has three big rocks behind it and a lilac bush in front, a stranger came through the brown trail and asked if we knew a place where he could put up for the night.

And the neighbor who owns the little gray house said that if the little gray house would do, why, the stranger was welcome to stay there for the night, and as long as he pleased; and it was very welcome, indeed, that he would be.

And the stranger did not seem surprised at all. He slipped his roll of blankets from his shoulder, took out his briar pipe and filled it from the tobacco can that the man of the wee gray house passed over to him.

He sat down contentedly among us, clasped his knees in his hands and looked out across the valley to the Ventura Mountains, where the slanting sun was turning the whole world into golden mists.

Now, somehow, you can judge a man just by a little action like that—just by the way he sits down among strangers, and the look that comes into his eyes. But, there was another thing that happened which also made it easy for us to feel that here was a man safe to be welcomed anywhere that a welcome exists. And God forbid that there be a place where it does not exist.

The other thing that happened was that our yellow cat, who had come over to the wee gray house to listen to our talk, went straight to the stranger and climbed on his knees. It is only one man out of ten that could ever hope to receive this supreme compliment from our yellow cat.

Of course, it would have been unthinkable that anyone among us would try to pry into the identity of the stranger or seek to know his business in life. But, it was not necessary. Our neighbor who has the phonograph is a keen man at drawing people out, as the saying is. And so, what does he do but start to talk about the new tunes of the bagpipes that he has.

Well, sir, you would be surprised to see how suddenly interested the stranger became then. And he said that the years were long since he had heard a tune of the bagpipes, but that he had heard many a tune of them in Kerry and the Galway hills and among the Macleods in the Hebrides, and in many another place. And he said that he had heard pipes not unlike them among Bedouins and in Patagonia.

It was then that we knew the stranger for what he was. The man was a wanderer. And it is true, that though a man who is a merchant or an inventor or a clothespin maker may not interest you, a wanderer is always a sure card. At once, the stranger became a source of the most intense interest and fascination to us.

He had great tales to tell, and we listened to him, like men in dreams, for three nights and toward one gray dawn. And then the wanderer said he must be on his way. The years were flying fast, he said, and that there was still a thousand corners of the world that he had not yet set foot in—

"Countries not seen, where people do strange things,
Eat fish alive, and mimic in the sun
The solemn gestures of their stone-gray king.

Vodka and kvas, and bitter mountain wines
He had not drunk, nor snatched at bursting grapes
To pelt slim girls among Sicilian vines
Who'd flicker through the leaves, elusive shapes."

And so he left us, giving the man of the wee gray house a silver ring to remember him by. And, dear and lovely though they be—our green Verdugo hills—the wanderer, with his tales, had put the wanderlust in our hearts, too. And it took us a long time to get over it.

Rodeo Proposed.

IT WAS two weeks ago last Thursday, we think, or maybe it was three weeks ago last Tuesday. We can't just quite fix the date, but, anyway, it doesn't matter. The point is that it happened.

It was a grand morning, and our Henry was feeling fine as he toted us down from the hills to the roaring town. His carburetor, or whatever it is that makes him go, was working like magic, and we were talking to him about a lot of things that are just between us two, ourselves, and that we never talk to anyone else about.

When, suddenly, we were interrupted. Along the road we came upon a vast throng of men and women at a movie-picture studio. There were all sorts and conditions of men, and the same of women, although the women were mostly young and they were all trying to look like Bessie Love and Mary Miles Minter. And, in that crowd, there were at least 700 as husky-looking men as you could find in a day's walk.

As it happened, also, we knew the movie man whose business it is to make the pictures, and when we expressed astonishment at the crowd he had assembled, what do you think he told us?

He told us that he had a list of 8000 persons in his office who were waiting to get jobs in the movies.

Nombre de Dios! Think of it. Eight thousand persons hanging around movie-picture plants, and none of them getting a chance to work more than three or four times a month and the farmers of California and Oregon and Utah and Washington and forty-five other States tearing their hair because they can't get men to put in the hay or hoe the rutabeggas or do one darn thing on a ranch.

What we need is a rodeo—a round-up that shall corral this bunch of perfectly useless hangers-on at the movies. A round-up that shall catch every last one of them and hustle them out to the ranches to help get in the crops.

The Iconoclasts.

THE way it came about that we all got to talkin' about iconoclasts was that we had all just returned from a trip across the canyon to the place where one of the neighbors said he saw signs of a habitation of cliff dwellers. In other words, we had

EACH IN HIS OWN TONGUE.

A fire-mist and a planet,—
A crystal and a cell,—
A jellyfish and a saurian,
And caves where the cave-men dwell;
Then a sense of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod,—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tints of the cornfields,
And the wild geese sailing high,—
And all over the upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod,—
Some of us call it it Autumn,
And others call it God.

Like tides on a crescent sea-beach,
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings
Come welling and surging in,—
Come from the mystic ocean,
Whose rim no foot has trod,—
Some of us call it Longing,
And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,—
A mother starved for her brood,—
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway plod,—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.

WILLIAM HERBERT CARRUTH.

lieve that maybe long ago, long, long ago, centuries before the time of Frà Junipero, even, a wandering band of Aztecs had made their home in the green Verdugo hills.

And it was the man who used to be a statistician that said—after we had returned, and the pipes were going in the little gray house in the hollow—"Well, let us believe that they were here; let us not be iconoclasts."

Now, we have a neighbor who has a very small acquaintance with big words. He has never been much to school. Big words dismay him. But, he makes up for that, and more, by deeds. He is, almost, the best beloved neighbor in our hills. And the little words that he does know say more than big words could ever begin to say. His "good morning," his "good night" and his "God bless you" are like benedictions when he says them.

And it was that our neighbor of the little words wanted to know what an "iconoclast" is. been on what Elbert Hubbard used to call "a little journey from home."

The place is only an hour's walk, or less, from the house of the man who plays the flute.

And we did see signs that would lead one to be-

So, we told him that Noah Webster says that an iconoclast is a person who is "an image breaker; one who attacks superstitions," and who pooh-poohs at fairies and the like of that. And the neighbor who has the phonograph said then that Noah Webster was well named because he had written a book that is a deluge of words.

Well, the road was wide open again for talk after that. And certainly we did whale the iconoclasts, good and plenty, before we got through. They are a useless and a low-minded set from beginning to end, we said; and that it would be a good thing if they could all be dumped into the sea.

In one way and another we were able to recall a thousand instances of the pettinesses and the meannesses of iconoclasts. How they tried their best to kill off Santa Claus; that they are saying that Cleopatra was not beautiful, but that she had a flat nose and bad teeth and a foul breath; that George Washington did not chop down his father's cherry tree, and that he told lies lots of times and even swore when he was angry; and many other instances like that were quoted.

And then the neighbor who used to be a statistician, but who is now leading a good life, recalled what Froude, the historian, had done to Queen Elizabeth. After all the trouble and pains and patience that had been expended to put a halo on the "good Queen Bess," and after Virginia had been named for her, and after all the romance that had been so carefully built up around the "Elizabethan age," here comes along this old crab Froude and says this about her:

"Elizabeth was a liar, a murderess, a miser, only wanting courage to be a harlot, who left the sailors of her fleet, when the Armada was in the channel, without clothes and without pay, and gave them colic by forcing them to drink the sour beer of a Dartford brewery in which she was a shareholder."

Alas, "good Queen Bess." It was so that she went "glimmering" under the lash of Froude's bitter tongue. But, are not the iconoclasts telling us also that there never was a man Abraham that we read of in the Bible?

And so, do you wonder that we all came to the conclusion that evening over the pipes in the green Verdugo hills, that the sect of the iconoclasts should be wiped off the face of the earth?

Gooseberries.

IT WAS on a day of glory, and we had come down from the Santa Lucia hills, where we had been to help celebrate the feast day of St. Anthony of Padua at his own Mission—now silent and lonely and long deserted—that stands among the oaks at the head of the exquisitely beautiful Valley of San Antonio, with the lovely little town of Jolon near by.

And we wound into that great vast stretch of river mesa lands near the lonely mission of Soledad, and they called the section by the very consistent name of Greenfields. And we came across many men, women and boys and girls, doing nothing in the world but picking gooseberries.

The scene fascinated us and made our mouths water, besides. For, immediately the thought of gooseberry pie stands in a class by itself, as any true American can tell you.

And we asked the man who owned the gooseberries if he could sell us a pocketful or so of them to tote home with us with which to have a pie made when we got back to the Verdugo hills. And the man said for us to help ourselves, and welcome, and to keep our money in our pocket or to give it to the Salvation Army or to anyone we happened to meet that needed it. And which he said he did not need it, because he was shipping more than two tons of gooseberries a day to the market and he couldn't keep up with his bank account, it was growing so fast.

Then we asked the gooseberry man if he didn't think he ought to come down to Los Angeles and make some speeches on a soap box to help solve the economic problems of the day and get capital and labor closer together and see that the right men are elected to the Legislature and officers in the various civic clubs.

And he replied that he was too busy getting in his gooseberry crop and sending it to market and roping in the shekels from the proceedings.

My goodness, it must take a lot of gooseberries to make two tons. And yet this man was getting that much every day from his patch of bushes on the bright, sunny river mesas at Greenfields.

His Reason.

SPEAKING of politics and elections, we knew a man once who announced that he would vote for a certain candidate for office. When asked for his reason, he replied that the candidate was his friend. And when they asked him if he had no other reasons he said no; he said he didn't need any other reason.

We have liked this man ever since.

PEACE OR SLUMBER?

He said—"My peace I give unto you. Not as the world gives give I unto you." To be sure we are suposed to be a Christian nation—the Allies are supposed to be Christian, and naturally we ought to know all about this other kind of peace. That we do not is proved by the fact that we talk glibly about marching under Christ's banners to the battlefields. We have confused the situation by our wrong conceptions and our sad misuse of terms. The result now is the same as in ages past. The peace is of the same kind. While fighting to secure the peace which the world gives us we have secured it in irregular patches here and there. In fact our whole civilization at present is a piece of hit or miss patchwork as gorgeously parti-colored and as triumphantly lacking in design as our former crazy quilts. Yet we rub our hands together in childish glee and boast of our victorious peace.

The little square of unrolled film upon which we gaze at present is fairly glistening with the peace of past ages. It gives us a breathing spell while we gather up the debris and take an inventory of our scattered resources. At any rate it gives us an opportunity to do some thinking and slightly modify our philosophy of life or the expression of life itself. If our peace is based upon the false security which lulls into a temporary siesta while the new storm is gathering it is better to know and face the fact. Nothing is gained by ignorance and foolish temporizing. If we are satisfied with this kind of peace we must not complain when the storm bursts.

Chaotic conditions confront us everywhere, not only on the numerous battlefields of the globe, but in every walk of life, in every avenue of the world's progress. The Mars spirit which makes human life a very inferno of misery rules the world. Yet it is one of the weaknesses of human nature that it likes to pretend, to pose, to disguise the truth from itself. While living in the very whirlpool of martial forces it talks about its peace—boasts of its slaughters and victories for the sake of "peace!" The reprobate old god of war meanwhile is enjoying his joke, urging his dupes on and preparing for his next conquest.

We may argue that it is one of the great tragedies of this stupid old world that tears and bloodshed, wreck and ruin must always precede the march of progress. It may be true but it strikes the thoughtful observer that progress is a long time on the march and slow in arriving. Also, the question arises—When and how will the debris be cleared away that the peace of which the Master spoke may shed its beneficent calm over the weary world? Will the old crystallized conditions be broken up by this terrible upheaval so that we shall feel the stirring of finer etheric currents or will the and pandemonium continue to attend progress on its march through the ages?

Sometimes in our cynical moments we fear that this much-advertised and heralded progress is another camouflage—hiding a dummy. That it has no real existence. We have waited so long for it and its companion the finer civilization to arrive with the true peace which is supposed to be in its retinue, it is small wonder that the Cynic in us develops faster than Credulity.

Yet always when the Cynic is about to spring full-fledged from the inner consciousness we catch a fleeting glimpse of a wonderful future civilization which Hope visualizes. So we press on and on. It is then we know that these wars and miseries must continue until the stream of human life is purified at its source. While anything false or evil is covered up or glossed over the utmost of peace that we can know, as individuals or nations is that which the world gives—a temporary lull in the storm, an armistice or truce during which we may bury our dead. The false peace is as harmful as martial forces let loose, for it stupefies the energies and casts a fatal torpor over the soul. The true peace is the perfect flower which crowns life harmonized and purified.

Walking With God.

I read, on page of Holy Writ,
  That Enoch's footsteps trod
The good, green earth so worthily,
  'Twas said "He walked with God."
I marveled much that mortal man
  With faith and vision dim,
Could win Jehovah from His throne,
  To walk the earth with him.

And then I find, in Wordsworth lore,
  A kindred soul that thrills
With deathless music into song
  Of dancing daffodils,
Of primrose by the river's brim,
  Of rainbow in the sky.
And now I know that Wordsworth walked
  And talked with Him Most High.

I sought the woods in violet time,
  When mating blue birds sing,
And Heaven was bluest of them all,
  And Earth was wooing Spring:
And then I felt, the while I pressed
  The verdant, velvet sod,
That all who live near Nature's heart
  May daily walk with God.

Modern Musicians.

Paul Rosenfeld's "Musical Portraits: Interpretations of Twenty Modern Composers," which Harcourt, Brace and Howe will publish this month, treats with real insight and power such moderns as Wagner, Strauss, Mussorgsky, Liszt, Berlioz, Franck, Debussy, Rabel, Borodin, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Rachmaninoff, Scriabine, Strawinsky, Mahler, Reger, Schoenberg, Sibelius, Loeffler, Ornstein and Bloch, many of whom have not been dealt with critically in any other American book.

Psycho-Analysis.

Despite the unusual interest in psychoanalysis today, there is no book on the subject so simple that anyone can understand it and yet written with such grasp and authority that even the expert will be satisfied. This is what Barbara Low has attempted to do in her "Outline of Psycho-Analysis," which will be published this month by Harcourt, Brace and Howe, with an introduction by Dr. Ernest Jones, president of the British Psycho-Analytical Society.

Gen. Wood.

All those interested in the puzzling personality of Leonard Wood will enjoy Herman Hagedorn's book, "That Human Being, Leonard Wood," which Harcourt, Brace and Howe have just published and which throws new light on his character as a man as well as on his work as soldier, statesman and organizer.

A Colored Juvenile.

There is at present no collection of stories and poems by negro writers which colored children can read with pleasure and which represents the delightful literary output of the American negro. Children of all races will therefore welcome "The Upward Path: A Reader for Colored Children," with an introduction by R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskeegee Institute, which Harcourt, Brace and Howe will publish this spring.

The Head Hunters of Darkest Borneo.

BY W. F. ALDER.

Mr. Alder, who is a well-known ethnologist of Los Angeles, made the trip on which the following narrative is based under the auspices of the Southern California Academy of Science. The results of his researches will also be used by the Universal Film Corporation of this city.—[Editor.

Tama Same, an old Dyak chieftain.

DARKEST BORNEO. What does Borneo suggest to you? Of course you know that Borneo is an island Dutch possession and the home of wild men, but do you know that practically all of the central portion of the island is unexplored and unmapped by the Dutch government and that the natural resources of this 290,000 square mile island are still untouched? Perhaps you have toured the Dutch East Indies and have in the course of your wanderings touched at Bandjermassin or Balik Papan, the two principal towns in the Dutch portion of the island. If you have done this you found two towns, interesting to be sure, but a far, far cry from the enthralling interest of the region around Mt. Batu, which lies in approximately the geographical center of the island.

The work of the ethnologist calls him to the out-of-the-way places for the classification and preservation of data regarding races that are fast becoming extinct so, armed with complete photographic and scientific equipment together with all the impedimentia that so hampers the one in the "heavy going" of the unexplored jungle I sailed from Singapore October 21, 1919, accompanied by my most valued friend and assistant, Mr. Edward Laemmle, for Darkest Borneo.

Our route lay first to Bandjermassin, the seat of the island government, and located on its southern coast. Here I expected to enlist the aid of the military forces that are engaged in bringing into submission the hostile tribes that still cause trouble in the interior. The route lay from Bandjermassin 280 miles up the Barito River to a point called Poeroek Tjaoe, the last outpost of the white man's civilization. I was most cordially entertained by the resident officer, who tendered me the use of the little river gunboat, the Voorwaarts, for the upriver trip to the head of navigation. I was also furnished with a letter to the Military Controlleur, Capt. Van Nou Nys, the officer in charge of the fort in Poeroek Tjaoe.

It will not be my purpose in this narrative of my experiences with the head-hunting Dyaks of the interior, to dwell upon the geographical features of the country traversed, but rather to describe the life of the Dyak as I found them. They are a people of strange contradictions. One whom they have received as a friend sees but little of the inherent blood lust that is born in them and only crops out when they are out of the sight of the military. It was only after leaving the sphere of military influence that I was able to study the Dyak as I hoped to find him, in the primitive state.

At Poeroek Tjaoe Capt. Van Nouhys immediately placed at our disposal two of his praus, or native canoes, together with full crews of native paddlers, for the rest of the long journey was destined to be made in water too swift and dangerous for the little armored gunboat.

Into the Darkest Untrodden Jungle Dank With Rotting Vegetation.

WE WERE now at a point some 280 miles by river in the interior and the country surrounding the fort was only mapped within a radius of ten miles. On either side of the stream as we progressed was the untrodden jungle, dark, dank with rotting vegetation, sweating with humidity, the home of countless monkeys which scolded and crashed from limb to limb in their endeavors to keep abreast of our canoes. Here and there we would come upon great crocodiles basking upon the muddy banks of the stream. I had ordered the men to keep a sharp lookout for these (Liat ka mooka booayah) and often as I sat writing my notes, Sam, our Tamil cook, would interrupt me with "See, Master, itu bagoos booayah." Then I would reach for the rifle lying conveniently at my side. With the band the croc would leap into a lashing frenzy, his great tail clearing the space around him of every growing shrub within reach, then he would slide into the water and after violently churning it into a muddy whirlpool he would sink into hiding in the deepest water, there to die quickly if the wound were a mortal one, or to become the prey of others, if only disabled.

I had been informed by the captain that we were to stop at the first native kampong (village) we came to to witness a tuba fishing festival which is held once yearly by the Dyaks.

This kampong, called Behan came in sight as we rounded a bend in the river just as the sky clouded up with the customary rapidity of the tropics (we were at the moment approximately one degree south of the equator) and soon the rain descended in torrents. One must experience a jungle rain to appreciate the deluge that obscures the very banks of the stream with a heavy gray wall of water. Waterproof tarpaulins protected our equipment, but the thin palm leaf sun shades over the central part of the canoes afforded but little shelter, so we were soaked on the instant. This we did not mind, however, for it was a warm rain and washed off some of the perspiration that made our clothes stick to us. The storm passed as quickly as it came and we arrived at the kampong stiff from the long cramping journey in the canoes, but happy to be at last in a real native kampong untainted by close contact with the whites.

Sound of Rifle Shot Sends Natives Scampering for Cover.

HERE, the interpreter furnished us by the captain told the head man of the kampong of our mission and we were shown a place to make our camp. While the unpacking of the tent and cooking paraphernalia was in progress I took the little 22-caliber high-power rifle and went a short distance into the jungle after wild pigeon for the evening meal. I was rewarded with a nice bag, but the reports of the rifle occasioned the utmost consternation among the Dyaks, who feared rifles as a punitive instrument in the hands of the soldiers and upon my return to the camp I was dismayed to find that they had all, with the exception of a few old men and women and the head Dyak, taken incontinently to their heels and were hiding in the jungle. The short incursion into the thick growing brush had drenched me with perspiration, so I went to the river to bathe in the light of the rising moon. The beauty of this hour in Borneo is indescribable. I bathed in some haste, for all the streams of Borneo are infested with crocodiles and bathing is fraught with some little danger. This, however, adds spice to the operation, so the bath is doubly welcome. After dinner (makanan) was over, dusky shapes began to gather in the gloom of the fringes of our little clearing and after repeated efforts I was able to entice them closer by means of a simple sleight-of-hand tricks which occasioned both wonder and great merriment. I immediately became a personage with them which was later to bear welcome fruit, for news of our coming traveled far in advance of us, and I was called upon at each village visited, to give an exhibition of my "wonderful powers." It was at a late hour that we retired to our army cots to snatch forty winks before the coming tuba festival of the morrow. With the rising of the sun we were up and in the river while Sam produced tinned breakfast sausage, toasted soda biscuits and marmalade. It was amusing to see the younger Dyaks scramble for the empty tins. In fact, they coveted every article of our equipment and never hesitated to ask for any article that met their fancy, with the most charming naivete. Breakfast over we were led to the river by the chief, where we embarked in native praus (canoes,) taking with us our cameras, for heretofore the tuba fishing festival of the Dyaks had never been photographed.

As we progressed we picked many other praus that darted out of little tributaries to the main stream and soon there was quite a procession following in our wake. On the way we passed two dams that were made of bamboos driven into the bottom of the river and lashed together with strong rattan lianas or jungle creepers. These were placed in the stream I found out later to trap the fish that eluded the spears of the fishermen. Among the praus that joined the procession were some that were manned by little children armed with spears and parangs, or native swords, and who paddled along as much at ease in the unstable craft as men of 40. Some of these were less than 6 years old.

Near the kampong there was a long rattan stretched across the river. Suspended from it were baskets containing rice and in the middle between the baskets was a roasted jungle fowl trussed up with a leafy decoration, as an offering to the river spirits to placate them for the coming taking of the fish, or, as the Dyaks regard them, the river people.

Natives Prepare for Poisoning Fish With Tuba Root.

WE WERE now at a bend of the river where the tuba root was being prepared. A prodigious pounding and thumping was our first warning that we near the starting point, then, a moment later the place came into sight. Here there were a whole fleet of praus. This was a great surprise to me, for in the trip up the stream I had only seen a very few, as compared with the multitude drawn up here, and I had assumed that the district was very sparsely populated.

I found that the majority of the natives live in the jungle and not on the river banks, though they all have praus which they hide in the undergrowth near the banks of the stream, after filling them with water to keep them from drying out and splitting.

Over 500 Dyaks were present at the feast. The majority of the men were busily engaged at a large square platform built of heavy logs, beating the bunches of tuba roots with heavy clubs. It was a scene of intense activity and the sound of the beating assumed the proportions of a continuous roar when one neared the platform. The roots which reminded me of very thick liquorice root such as we buy in our drug stores, is beaten until the fiber is well separated. It is then taken to the praus and placed in the bottom, where water from the river is splashed over it. When the prau is half filled with water one of the natives tramples out the milky sap of the tuba while several of the other men steady the cranky craft. This milky solution of the tuba juice is the poison that is used to stupefy the fish and cause them to float helplessly on the surface where they are easily speared.

The natives had gathered over a thousand bundles of the root and it took twenty praus to hold the extracted poisonous juice. After the beating of the root was finished the chief of all the Dyaks in the district went through the formality of welcoming us before the assembled Dyaks and I was presented with a gaily-decorated spear with which, I was informed, I was to spear the first fish. This is an honor generally accorded the chief. Our interpreter told me at this time that I must be very sure to hit the first fish cast at, as a miss would augur ill for the success of the festival.

I Succeed in Spearing Big One First Throw.

WITH the presentation of the spear ceremony over, the tuba-filled praus were emptied into the river by the simple expedient of over-turning them and we all entered praus and drifted down the river with the turbid water. The poison slowly spread from bank to bank and here and there fish, too small to bother with, drugged to inactivity, floated to the surface. In a few moments a large one came to the surface within a few feet of my prau and I let drive at him. Luckily I was successful in the cast and a great shout went up when I lifted the flashing silver thing high in the air so that all could see. The fishing now became general and there was much laughter when little fights took place between rival boat crews in endeavoring to beat each other to spots where large fish had been seen. Now and then the occupants of a prau would be dumped unceremoniously into the water by the too eager spearsman losing his balance. Then the river would resound with laughter. For two hours the sport was continued, then with praus heavily laden with the finny spoil, they glided into the hidden waterways that open from the main stream in tortuous channels through the dimly-lighted jungle.

I was interested in the fact that the poisoning of streams is the occasion of the death of many crocodiles, which succumb after a few days to the tuba. This is never done intentionally, however, for the Dyak regards the crocodile as a sacred thing and never harms one unless one of the members of his tribe has been eaten while crossing a stream. The river bank that night was lined with the ruddy glow of fires where little family groups were busily engaged in cooking a portion of the day's catch. There were many groups of bathers in the shallow water near the banks who, instead of taking a swim, dipped the water up in large gourds and poured it over themselves. This was on account of the danger from crocodiles already referred to. When a fatality does occur the natives sharpen a short stick at both ends and fasten a long rattan to its middle. They then tie a carcass of a monkey firmly to the stick which is suspended near the surface of the water where the crocodile is suspected of being. Sooner or later one comes along and swallows the monkey, stick and all, and is trapped, for the stick becomes fastened crossways in his innards much to his undoing. The body is pulled ashore and the contents of his stomach is

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

Warren Denounces the Selfish Indolence of an Extravagant Wife.

"DEAR, don't the Howards live near here?"

"Next block, isn't it?" Warren gazed down the apartment-lined street. "That house with the awnings. Want to drop in?"

"Oh, they wouldn't be home Sunday afternoon," demurred Helen.

"Might. Come on, we'll take a chance. I'd like to see Howard. Looked pretty rocky last time I met him—working too hard."

"I suppose he has to—she's so extravagant."

"Selfish as they make 'em. All she cares about is his coin. And Howard's such a good sort. He's too blamed easy."

Further on, they crossed the street and entered the near-marble entrance of Rentmore Court.

A colored youth, on double duty as elevator and switchboard attendant, announced and took them up.

"We were in the neighborhood—and just dropped in for a moment," apologized Helen, sensing their call was untimely when the door was opened by Mr. Howard himself.

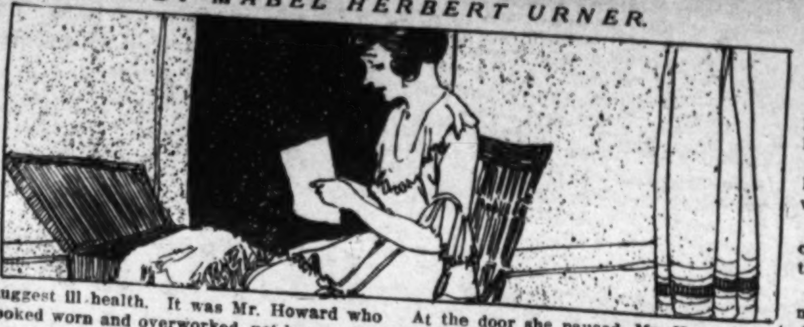
"I'm glad you did—if you don't mind seeing the place upset," plainly embarrassed. "The maid left last week. She said it was too lonely without Mrs. Howard—so things aren't very tidy."

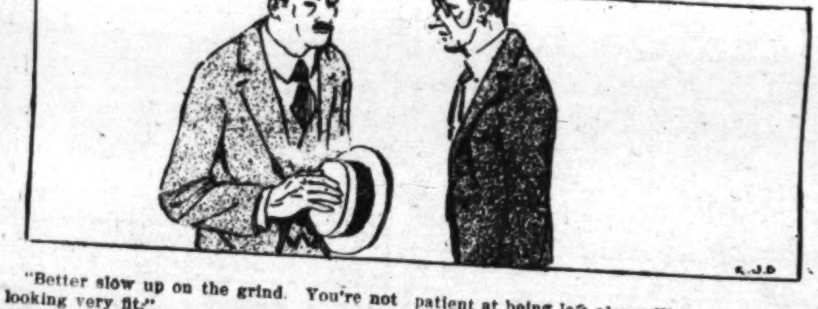
"Oh, is Mrs. Howard away?" Helen glanced about the dusty living-room.

"Yes, she's in California. She thought she needed a change."

"How about you?" demanded Warren.

"It's hard for me to get away. We're pretty busy at the office."





"Better slow up on the grind. You're not looking very fit."

"I'd like to go camping for a week—if I could afford the time."

"Break down if you don't have a let-up."

"It's this apartment that's getting on my nerves. I can't keep a maid. Irene says I should be able to make my own bed and dust around—but I'm not handy about the house. I'm thinking of closing up and going to a hotel.' "

"Why, will Mrs. Howard be gone much longer?"

There was something in the way he rose and walked to the open window that made Helen regret her question. He took several moments to adjust the shade before he answered.

"She wants to stay a year. Her health is better out there."

The plump arms and neck, in the silver-framed photograph on the mantel, did not suggest ill health. It was Mr. Howard who looked worn and overworked, yet he was living alone in this hot, unkept apartment.

"I'm just packing some clothes she sent for. There's several things I couldn't make out," he took an open letter from the cluttered table. " 'Tan cloth suit and plaid sport skirt'—I've found those. 'Batik gown'—that stumped me. 'Batik?' What's that?"

"It's the new method of dyeing. Usually all colors—shaded."

"Would you mind helping me find it? And here's some other things—'camisoles.' I haven't any idea what they are."

"Sounds like something you cook in," was Warren's suggestion.

"Oh, you're thinking of casseroles," laughed Helen. "A camisole is a fancy corset cover you wear under thin waists."

"Here's what I've laid out," Mr. Howard led the way to his wife's room.

Helen took the list and checked off the articles on the couch. Then she located the batik gown in the crowded closet.

"Going to be a long session in here?" Impatient at being left alone, Warren appeared at the door.

"Why, I can get these things together," ventured Helen. "The list tells where everything is."

Gratefully accepting her offer, Mr. Howard, with evident relief, returned to the living-room with Warren.

"All my camisoles from the second drawer in the dresser," was the first item unchecked.

The second drawer of the gray-enameled dresser, which matched the gray-paneled walls, was filled with beribboned lingerie. There were seven camisoles—all hand-embroidered.

A pink satin corset, two crepe de chine nightgowns, a chiffon negligee, a taffeta breakfast coat, and a pair of lavender evening slippers, were also on the list.

Teh two closets in the room were overflowing with clothes—the wardrobe of a self-indulgent, luxury-loving woman.

Helen wondered at Mrs. Howard's extravagance. To have all these clothes in addition to what she had taken with her! Everything in the room, from the lace-spread bed to the rose silk curtains, proclaimed her lavish expenditures—yet Mr. Howard hesitated to go to a hotel because of the extra expense.

Checking off the last item, Helen's glance swept the rest of the page.

"If you see anything else you think I need—put it in. And you'll have to send me more money this month. I must have a riding-habit—everyone rides out here. It's the best exercise for reducing—and I've gained eight pounds. So add two hundred for the outfit.

"Now, Henry, there's no use writing me to come home. This climate agrees with me and I might as well stay. I'm meeting lots of interesting people and am having a glorious time—which is more than I had in that poky New York apartment. And we were certainly getting on each other's nerves. So I think it is just as well—"

Helen longed to turn the page. Instead, with a sense of guiltiness at having read so far, she folded the letter and returned to the sitting-room.

At the door she paused. Mr. Howard was standing by the window—a tall, thin figure with a dejected stoop.

"If you take my advice—you'll cut off that allowance." Warren was vigorously emphatic.

"No, I can't do that," quietly, without turning.

"Why not? What're you getting out of it? You stay here and work like a dog to foot the bills."

"I'm sorry, Curtis, but I can't discuss this—not even with you."

"I don't mean to butt in—but I've seen how things were going for some time. This is no way for you to live. It's up to her to come back and hold down her end of the job. If she won't do that, then—"

"I think I've found everything," interrupted Helen, fearing Warren was saying too much. "They're all laid out on the couch."

"You've been very kind, Mrs. Curtis. I'll send them off tomorrow. I'm sorry you've seen the place like this. I must get a cleaning woman next week. I wonder if you know of one."

"Mrs. O'Grady's our stand-by. She's slow but she's honest."

"Do you suppose I could get her?"

"She's coming to me Tuesday and Wednesday. I could let you have Wednesday."

"I'd certainly appreciate it. You see I'm away all day and it would be a great relief to have some one here I could trust."

"Yes, I know, a man's so helpless," sympathized Helen. "I'll tell her to give the place a thorough cleaning. And she can take those home and wash them," indicating the soot-blackened curtains.

"You're awfully kind," when a little later he followed them to the door. "I was pretty discouraged about getting this place in shape."

"I'll see if Mrs. O'Grady can't give you a day every week," was Helen's comforting assurance. Then impulsively, "Can't you dine with us some evening soon? We'd love to have you."

"How about Friday?" suggested Warren. "That suit you? Fine! Make it 7 o'clock."

Down the elevator, through the light-studded entrance hall, and they were out in the sultry dusk.

"Oh, I'm glad we asked him," enthused Helen. "He seemed so pleased to come. He's so lonely there—you can see that."

"Rotten shame," with a vicious swish of his cane. "Too fine a fellow to be saddled with a wife like that."

"Dear, I'm afraid you said too much—I came in while you were talking. I don't think he liked it."

"Don't care a hoot whether he liked it or not. He'll get an earful from me next Friday. I won't stand by and see him trimmed by that woman without putting him wise."

"Oh, she's so selfish—if you'd seen her things! The most expensive underwear! And that old blue serge he had on—why, it was positively shiny."

"That's Howard. Never spends a cent on himself—let's her blow it all in. He's not well either—looks ten years older."

"He did look badly. I wish he'd go to a hotel—it's too lonely for him there. And she's not coming back—not any time soon. I couldn't help seeing part of her letter. She wrote for more money."

"Out there scattering the coin, eh? Bet she's putting over the rich widow bluff."

"Oh, do you think she'd do that? And while he's here working so hard? Dear, it's not fair! And she wants two hundred for a riding habit. She's going to take up riding—to reduce."

"A riding-habit!" snorted Warren. "What she wants is a calico apron. I'd set her cantering around that place with a mop. That'd shake off some of the fat!"

"Why, last year when they didn't have a maid—she wouldn't even get his breakfast. He had to go out—and she had hers sent in from a tea room."

"She did, eh? A regular she-grafter! Marries a man to support her—and gets fat and flabby loafing on her job!"

Then, jabbing his cane at an inoffensive lamp post,

"Great guns, wouldn't I like to be her husband—just long enough to put her over the jumps? I'd cut off her allowance, double quick. That'd bring her to time. She'd come back and play the game," grimly, "or she'd have to rustle for another meal ticket!"

THE DOORMAT AND THE DOG

BY DOROTHY GOODFELLOW

ELDER seemed one of those men born to the doormat role in life—men upon whom others invariably impose and who seem, by their lack of aggressiveness, to invite the imposition.

He lived on the outskirts of an infinitesimal township in the Santa Clara Valley, his home standing somewhat apart from those of his neighbors, separated from them by a vacant lot, two or three fields, a roadway and a narrow patch of woodland.

His house was somewhat grey and shabby. With its weather-worn timbers and crackling paint set in a very posy of bloom, it peered unexpectedly out like an aged wrinkled face beneath a youthful coronal of blossom. All about it roses rambled and rioted, begonias clambered up trellises and blew a blare of color from their coral horns, and hollyhocks tripped in sprightly groups across the beds and peeped and nodded over the fences.

Here among his trees and flowers Elder worked from singing dawn to humming dusk; here the concerns of a supercilious world went by him like the buzzing wasp wings unnoticed.

Here came the unthrifty among his neighbors demanding and obtaining from him frequent small loans which they had not the least intention of returning in haste, if at all. In some queer way they reasoned that one so easily despoiled deserved the spoliation. On the same principle others among them requisitioned the products of his poultry run and of his flower and fruit gardens.

Here too the small boys of the district paid visits of depredation to his orchard where they looted his fruit and broke the boughs of his trees.

It was during one such juvenile raid that Elder's friend, another ardent horticulturist from the South who was visiting him, suggested the dog.

"Get a big fierce-looking brute that will give the young imps a fright," he advised.

"But," remonstrated Elder with his usual placid kindness of heart, "a big fierce dog might do the children some injury."

"Well, get a Newfoundland then," went on his mentor. "Its size will frighten them. And Newfoundlands are not vicious."

"Maybe, I will," reflected Elder. But as soon as his friend was gone he promptly forgot all about it.

But the small boys did not as easily forget his orchard. They descended upon it in full force one day, not seeing him at his work in the far corner of it. As he stood up and moved towards them, the young raiders stood their ground until he was close upon them, and then bombarded him with his own fruit. An over-ripe peach, a parting shot as the young hoodlums swarmed over the fence, squelched in a pulpy juicy wreck upon the side of his face, the impact of it knocking the glasses violently from his eyes.

With the mildest of expletives, he bent to fumble in the grass and found his lenses shattered against a stone embedded there. Their breakage was a serious matter to him, for without their aid it was impossible for him, so shortsighted was he, to carry on the experiments among his flowers. Years of such experimental work, for he was in his small way an amateur Burbank, had weakened his eyes until, unhelped by glasses, small things became almost invisible, large things became vague and blurrish like the forms on an old tapestry turned wrong side out.

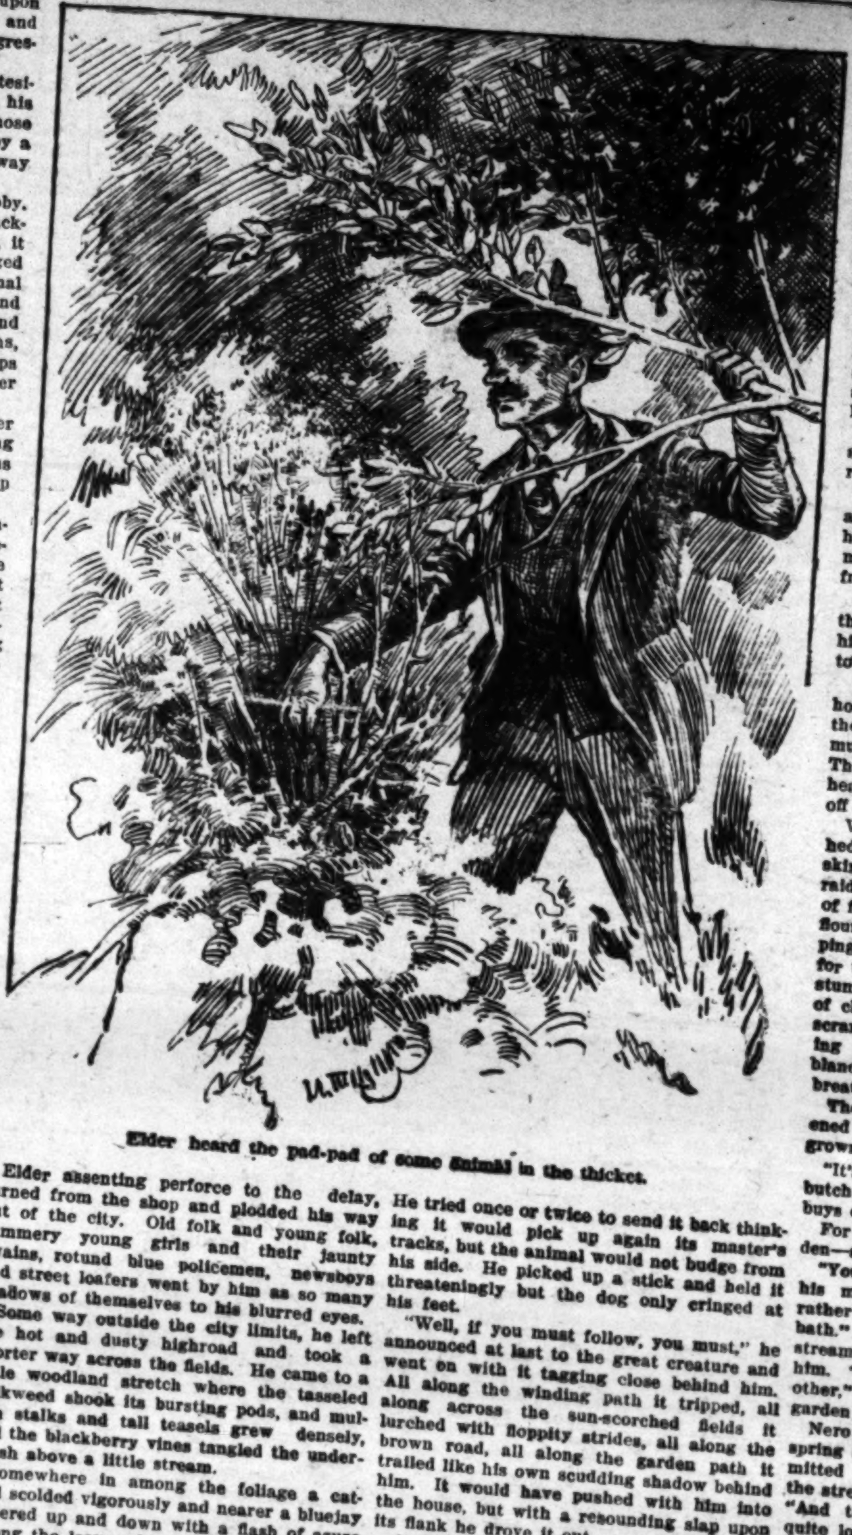
To make matters worse there was no oculist nearer than the city which was a good ten miles off, and the daily stage was long gone.

"I must get a dog," he said as he ruefully gathered up the broken glasses.

In a mood that was, for him, one of unusual discontent he prepared for his long walk into the city and set out upon it. But the clear sparkling Burgundy of the air was a wine to rouse his spirits; the trees rustled a greeting to him, a lover of trees, and the leaves prattled their green secrets in his hearing. And at every step his spirits grew lighter.

A passing motorist gave him a "lift" that took him over three-quarters of his way, and he sought the oculist with his belief in the happy kindliness of the world restored.

"Ready in a week," said the oculist. "No! we cannot get them done sooner," he maintained. "We have such a rush of work just now. And things must be attended to in the order in which they come in."



Elder heard the pad-pad of some animal in the thicket.

Elder assenting perforce to the delay, turned from the shop and plodded his way out of the city. Old folk and young folk, summery young girls and their jaunty swains, rotund blue policemen, newsboys and street loafers went by him as so many shadows of themselves to his blurred eyes.

Some way outside the city limits, he left the hot and dusty highroad and took a shorter way across the fields. He came to a little woodland stretch where the tasseled milkweed shook its bursting pods, and mullien stalks and tall teasels grew densely, and the blackberry vines tangled the underbrush above a little stream.

Somewhere in among the foliage a catbird scolded vigorously and nearer a bluejay teetered up and down with a flash of azure among the leaves, bubbling over with some exciting secret it wished to impart to the world.

In the bushes on the right there was a crackling of twigs and a swinging of sprays as if some strong body pushed through the undergrowth. Standing to listen, Elder heard the pad-pad of some animal questing through the thickets. He stepped in among the bushes, and at his movement a large animal ahead of him stopped and looked back with inquiring eyes.

"Good dog," he called. "Come, pup—pup—pup," he coaxed, snapping his fingers in the manner approved by dog-lovers, and the animal came at an ungainly amble toward him.

"Why, it's a Newfoundland," he said astonishingly at the sight of its huge bulk. "What a beauty! I wonder whose it is? Its master must be somewhere about."

He patted its huge head and the dog rubbed aaginst him and muzzled its nose into his hand. He petted it and waited, expecting every minute to see its owner appear. But no one came in sight. There was no tatton of steps along the path, no whistle from beyond the thickets.

He moved on and the dog followed him. He tried once or twice to send it back thinking it would pick up again its master's tracks, but the animal would not budge from his side. He picked up a stick and held it threateningly but the dog only cringed at his feet.

"Well, if you must follow, you must," he announced at last to the great creature and went on with it tagging close behind him. All along the winding path it tripped, all along across the sun-scorched fields it lurched with floppity strides, all along the brown road, all along the garden path it trailed like his own scudding shadow behind him. It would have pushed with him into the house, but with a resounding slap upon its flank he drove it out.

As he ate his evening meal, the dog went stalking round and round the house, sniffing noisily at the door, breathing heavily at the windows. Once it hoisted its huge body up and, with its forepaws on the ledge of the open window, thrust its massive head into the room where Elder sat.

"Go down," commanded Elder and the animal dejectedly slunk away. "It's hungry, probably," decided the man and went out to it with the leg of lamb he had meant for his own dinner and supper on the morrow. Greedily the animal seized the entire leg from his hand and retired with it, growling and mumbling, into the shade of the bushes.

"Famished," declared Elder. "It must have been lost for some time. A dog like that takes some feeding."

That evening and the succeeding day passed and no claimant for the dog appeared. All day it went sidling along beside the master it had adopted, never leaving him but to lurch down to drink at the stream below the orchard. It was during one of its absences from his side that a great bullying hulk of a man lounged through the gate and accosted Elder.

The intruder, a hobo who had learned from the neighbors something of the ineffectual gentleness of Elder's character, had considered favorably the feasibility of bullying him into a substantial donation of food and money. In pursuance of his design the tramp glared at Elder with red-rimmed malevolent eyes and, in a loud hectoring voice began his demand.

There was a growl from the bushes behind Elder, and the dog came into view. At sight of him the tramp's voice dropped to an idiotic babbling, and then stopped, his mouth remaining grotesquely open as though in amazement, his eyes extraordinarily dilated. Slowly he began to edge backward along the path towards the gate, the dog as slowly stalking him. He wheeled suddenly when he reached the gate, shot through it and, sweating with fear, tore down the road as if all the terrifying visions of his most bibulous hours were winged furies pursuing him.

The dog followed him to the gate and sending a parting growl to hasten his flight, returned contentedly to Elder's side.

"Good dog! Good dog!" patted the latter as it fawned upon him. "Denis was right," he said aloud. "I really need a dog. If his master turns up, I'll try and buy Nero from him."

Nero was the name he had decided to give the dog if no one appeared to claim it. To his delight the animal answered readily to it.

On the very day following the rout of the hobo, a gang of small urchins again invaded the orchard, the school vacation having left much time for mischief on their hands. They worked silently but the ears of Nero heard, if his master's did not, and he ambled off on a journey of investigation.

When his big bulk pushed through the hedge into full view there was a sudden skirling of terror from the mouths of the raiders, and in a wild panic-stricken surge of fear they went dodging and ducking and floundering among scratchy twigs and flapping low branches in a mad helter-skelter for the fence. Over it they went, slipping, stumbling, slithering, leaving many a tatter of cloth rent from nether garments in the scramble, many a tatter of skin on protruding splinters. Away they sped with blanched faces and trembling legs, tearing breathlessly for the shelter of home.

Their tales of the animal that had frightened them made them the butt of the grown-ups.

"It's Elder's new dog," announced the butcher. "It's a big one, I know, for he buys quantities of meat for it."

For a day there was peace in Elder's garden—an uncomfortable peace for Nero.

"You know you're not exactly a violet," his master reasoned with him. "You're rather on the rank side. You surely need a bath." But the animal refused to enter the stream down to which Elder had coaxed him. "Well, you'll get it one way if not another," insisted the man and turned the garden hose on the dog.

Nero snarled and seemed inclined to spring at the holder of the hose, then submitted shaking and slithering away from the stream of water and looking up with an "And thou, Brutus," expression that was quite lost upon the man's dim sight.

A day later one of his lady neighbors calling upon Elder for flowers to be sold at the district fete, minced up the garden path with a blowing of flounces and a flutter of feminine graces. Suddenly she caught sight of Nero slouching behind his master.

"My dog won't hurt you. Don't be afraid," called Elder, but with a little shriek of dismay she went scudding back through the gate and along the road, skittish as a scared rabbit, casting glances of fear over her shoulder as she went. She collapsed into hysteria when the village was reached and there was immediately a hum of inquiry about her. But from the hysterical inconsequence of her words nothing definite could be gathered.

"Seems to have been frightened by that dog," concluded someone, as she was taken into her home. "She always was one of the easily scared sort."

Another woman, a rather grim-jawed spinster who laughed at the idea of being afraid of any dog—or man either for that matter—volunteered to take up the mission of the hysterical one. When she reached Elder's gate, she opened it and went determinedly up the path.

Nero patrolling the side of the house snarled at her and made as if to spring.

CARE OF THE BODY.

enervating influence by the particular toxins generated by an overindulgence in either substance.

"People who eat to excess of starchy foods—which include the so-called 'staff of life,' as well as pastry (pie, cake and the like)—reach the same state, though in a little more roundabout way, through the chemistry of the body.

"Forced prohibition of alcoholic beverages has no doubt enhanced the demand for foods that make of every indulgent a distillery, in whom the high wine and the fusel oil run riot.

"Why carry a bottle on the hip? Why put a premium on crime and make of every man his brother's keeper? Why appoint every second man a salaried deputy, or so-called 'booze hound,' to scent the trail of an alcoholic breath, yet never raise a voice to educate the people into a knowledge of other forms of drunkenness as well?

"It would not be consistent with our principles were we to vent our spleen on alcohol alone and neglect to file a protest against the excessive indulgence of foodstuffs that have the same potential effects.

"I do not call attention to this subject in the hope that prohibition busy-bodies will immediately wage bitter and unrelenting warfare on the candy kitchen, and thus legislate the chocolate drop, the 'all-day sucker' or the 'jaw-breaker,' out of existence; for I believe that the prohibition of candy would be just as ineffective, just as undemocratic, as the prohibition of liquor. We need education first.

"Until people are educated to have an intelligent understanding of the forces for evil and the forces for good, the breaking of nature's laws will go on, in spite of legislation.

"Fanaticism running amuck may put a temporary check on the 'blind tiger' and the open rum shop, but it fails to take into account the reaction that follows every radical change which has the support of only a meager majority.

"If laws were to be enacted prohibiting all indulgences that have a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to break down the physical health or the morals of the people, with the supposition that they would all be strictly enforced and a penalty imposed on each offender, the world would become one vast prison, the grand jury to make the last indictment would have to be in handcuffs, and the devil—alone guiltless—would hold the combined office of chief warden and the only available trusty."

An Irreverent Age.

THE divorce laws of the State are all right. They need not be more stringent. The trouble is in the home, where the principals do not realize the sanctity of the marriage vows," declared District Attorney T. W. Duckworth, of San Bernardino county, at the opening session of the convention of the District Attorneys' Association of California.

The speaker might have added that most of our social troubles are due to the fact that people have ceased to realize or regard the sanctity of any laws or institutions, human or divine.

A Dietetic Cure.

FOLLOWING is from James J. Fitzgerell of the Soldiers' Home, Cal.:

"On entering the Soldiers' Home, over a year ago, I was 'all in,' so to speak, and under the surgeon's care, with enlarged liver, kidneys out of order, passing a handful of green gall-stones once in about every sixty days; the bowels very sore, the tongue heavily coated, every morning, after a night of disturbed sleep, suffering from piles, and constipation, with no movement of the bowels except by use of strong purgatives, or an enema. I had pain in the lungs, with heart action irregular, and no strength.

"It was only a question of a few months' time before the machine would stop running. Something had to be done.

"After a careful study, I worked out a plan of care of the body and dieting, with splendid success. I ate two instead of three meals a day—at 6:30 a.m. and 1 p.m.—eating about one-half of the amount usually eaten at each of the meals, cutting out supper entirely. Even then I found a tendency to eat too much. It seems to be difficult to cut down eating to the amount the stomach requires to supply the body with just the necessary amount of energy. [illegible] the system.

"I found that when that point is reached, the tongue is not coated, nor does gas form in the stomach in the morning. Sleep is restful, appetite becomes normal. The labor of the day is performed without thought of that 'tired feeling.' Decomposed matter passes out of the body freely, and regularly, without clogging the machine."

"Life Extension."

C. W. WATSON writes:

"That self-constituted custodian of the health of the people, the 'Life Extension Institute' of New York—composed of innumerable 'regulars'—prove their utter ignorance of the subject of diet in a book endorsed by them, 'How to Live.' As an advocate of temperance in diet you will probably be interested to hear what they advise for those under weight. It is enough to make Luigi Cornaro turn in his grave.

"After a breakfast of mush, sugar, butter, cream and grape juice and a lunch of creamed chicken, ice cream, etc., the unfortunate slim one—with necessarily weak digestive powers—is urged to partake of the following dinner:

"Cream of corn soup.
"2½ slices of roast beef.
"1 potato.
"3-8 cup buttered lima beans.
"2 slices whole wheat bread.
"2 tablespoons of butter.
"1 large baked apple.
"½ cup thin cream.
"1 tablespoon sugar.

"Messrs. Fisher and Fisk, authors of the book in question, blandly assure us that if this menu is faithfully followed and well digested, an improvement in weight is certain to result. As a mixture it is an equally striking example of the curious fact that those who would teach us how to live know so little about that which is of pre-eminent importance—the quantity and quality of food consumed. The sugar is apt to start the whole mess fermenting; the enormous amount of fat will make the starch indigestible. Fruit acid and starch are another bad combination."

In addition to the repast quoted, they suggest a quart of milk to which has been added several ounces of cream and several more of milk sugar to be taken as a beverage.

Brazil—A Land Beautiful and Benign.

BY HARRY J. KAY.

MY FIRST glimpse of Brazil produced thrills of pleasure as intense as must be the emotion of the blind who are suddenly made to see.

It was the spit of Pernambuco in the wave wrinkled distance, the first land to be sighted after a most pleasurable voyage of twenty-one days, during which time no other objects were visible except our ship, the sea and the sky. Those who have traveled on English ships and sampled the English seagoing cuisine will attest the immeasurable degree of happiness prospective shore-going brings. But the exquisite joy on arrival was more than paid for in the acute displeaure on departure.

We arrived at Bahia bay, our first port, at ten o'clock on a death still, inky black night, our ship going on past the harbor entrance some few miles to get into the outer channel. This wonderful captain on our ship, during nearly forty-five years' service on this run, had never once been tempted to risk his passengers and ship in entering through the deadly inside channel, shorter, but wreck strewn.

As we entered the flat water bay, in intense horizonless blackness, the huge, deep yellow moon, appearing as large as a circus tent, began to rise from the water, making its graceful way seemingly directly over the tops of a long row of lofty royal Palmeiras high up on the upper city's crest, gilding everything with its yellow effulgent flood.

The water appeared exactly like molten gold; all the dense foliage ashore seemed gilded like the gold leaves on wedding cake: the ships at silent anchorages seemed painted with gold paint and rigged with golden wires.

The brilliant incandescent illumination of the palaces and theaters in the upper section of the two-part mountainside city and the rocket salutes of the ship's agents ashore completed a picture to be seen by only a very few but once in a lifetime, the sort that would cause an artist to revel in reverential rhapsodies. We were not allowed ashore that night.

I awoke about six o'clock next morning, my nostrils filled with the heavy tropic air laden with the commingled scent of pineapples, mangoes, goyabas, and that indescribable langourous filled tropical incense.

Savage Equatorial Sun Drives One to Shelter Quickly.

DONNING my ducks and half-sleeve opened-neck sport shirt I stepped out on the deck into the sunshine. But I did not step out of it; I jumped back to the shelter of the shade further and faster than any ring veteran dodging a hurtling glove, seared—nearly—by the savage equatorial sun which at that early morning hour felt like a blast from a mechanic's blow torch. From that moment on I exposed no skin to the South American sun; I scorned not the effeminate parasol.

The shore was a mass of gorgeously colored luxuriant plant life, magnificent in the heavy greens and the dazzling whites and terra cottas of the beach and buildings.

Three days later we landed at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil's capital and largest city of more than a million population, built on the shores of the world's most beautiful bay, which contains just three hundred and sixty-five tropical islands, one of them so small that it provides room for only one large building.

The ship docked at great concrete docks. A private launch landed our party on the water lapped cement steps of a large, well-kept metropolitan park at the water's edge, in a blazing sun that singed and sizzled. Landing in Rio de Janeiro is about like entering a large graveyard on Decoration Day or entering the county fair grounds before the amusements get in swing.

There are lots of people about, but their slow, loafy movements, their summery clothes and soft speech are strongly suggestive of a holiday. But such was not the case, though holidays in that land come in squads and swiftness.

Describing this dream city of the world's doldrum district in written words is a waste of time; it can only be attempted through pictures, and its beauty of grace and grandeur can only be absorbed through actual vision. A newcomer's first tour of daylight Rio is an unforgetable memory of planted and paved driveways and parks, and parks, and more parks, all gloriously large and beautiful and some to the extent of stage scenery in their formal artificial and fantastic artistry.

Recreative Rio is somnolent during the sway of the sun, but blossoms, buds and bursts wide open, seemingly simultaneously, when the lights are lit. From then on the pleasures of paradise are prevalent.

The great, wide, fancy, Mosaic tiled sidewalks of Avenida Rio Branca suddenly become alive with smartly-dressed promenaders, conspicuous for exquisite women and men, delicate deportment, perfume, mustaches and walking canes. Small round tables and chairs line the curb edges and tinkling glasses add to the stage summer garden atmosphere—minus the noise. Everywhere is sparkle and ebullience, but no racket.

Maidens Bestow Smiles on All With Equal Generosity.

CROWDS of bubbling white-clothed, flashing-eyed, tan-tinted people stroll by on their way to social functions and the theaters. The entire atmosphere is one of sweetness and gentleness. The natural light of sweet tenderness from the eyes of the women is bestowed upon acquaintances and unknowns alike.

Even during the Carnival the scene is nearly devoid of noise and objectionable conduct. Confetti and serpentine fill the air, but none is ever thrown forcefully or otherwise into people's faces. There are no hoodlums and hoodlumesses poking dirty dusters in your face; no idiotic horns and whistles. Even the squirting of tiny pin point streams of icy ether is done gently and pleasantly, accompanied with beams of sweetness, even from the men. The Brazilian is sensitive to a hair-trigger degree, but is always gentle except when forced into fighting—then look out, they fear nothing and would not live a loser.

The French influence prevails in almost everything. The language is a compulsory study in the schools and little barefoot negroes speak it fluently. The women take the whole Parisian program, sartorially, from hem to hair, but the men modify it with the English and American lines in evidence.

Considering the inertia of peoples who live in an enervating climate, the Brazilians are quite athletic. Almost all important schools, even the parochial institutions of the padres, have their track and field teams; boat clubs and rowing regattas on the bay are extremely popular, but they are strongest for football, playing a fine, clean association game.

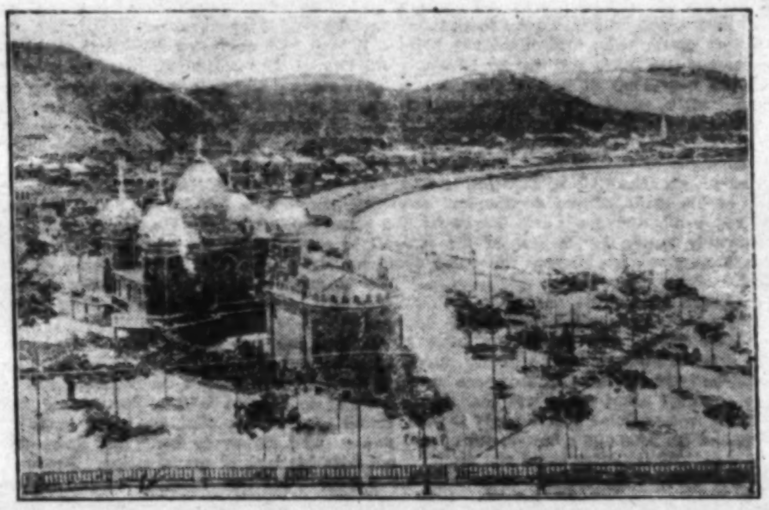
Living in the cities is extraordinarily expensive, food supplies not so much so as the cost of clothing and ill-equipped renting houses. In the country food is very cheap, even chickens and eggs, chickens in some places selling as low as 15 cents, and eggs at 8 cents a dozen. A most pleasurable feature of country barter is the practice of vendors of charging less for smaller quantities. If something sold for 10 cents a dozen, a half dozen would only cost 3 cents instead of 6 or 7, as here.

The most surprising thing to the visitor to Brazil is the city of Sao Paulo, about 120 miles north of Rio, in the State of Sao Paulo, of which it is the capital. It is the second city of the country with a population of more than 350,000, a $1,000,000 operahouse, several railroad terminals, wide, paved and lighted boulevards and automobiles galore. Brazilian cities are the speed fiend's Paradise. There are no speed cops and every street is a race course, but accidents are extremely rare.

The theaters of Rio are memorable for their elegance. The municipal operahouse, costing more than $1,000,000, is a great aesthetic monument to the world's best architects and sculptors. Even the moving-picture theaters excel some of our best playhouses. The larger movie houses all provide a richly-carpeted and decorated waiting salon, filled with comfortable seats and rockers, where an excellent orchestra entertains patrons awaiting seats. No cattle-chute sidewalk lines for these discriminating people.

Quiet Reigns Supreme—Boisterous Bathers Only Break Silence.

IN ALL the city's activities there is little or no racket. The only disconcerting noise, the memory of which remains, occurred on the morning following our arrival. We were awakened about quarter of 5 o'clock by a boisterous crowd hurrying through the street under our hotel windows. Thoughts of a revolution speeded our white-faced presence down at the desk asking an explanation, only to be smilingly informed that it was only hilarious bathers on their way to the ocean for their daily dip. Old Sol's fierce fire in summer makes it necessary to be out of the water by not much later than 6 o'clock, hence the outlandish bathing hour.



The Bay and City of Rio de Janeiro.

However with all the outward appearances of inactivity and leisurely loafiness business goes on just the same and industrial and commercial progress has been at a steady and healthful rate. And they seem to get along just as well as their split-second neighbors to the north. Rio has very many wealthy business men and strong business houses.

Big business has captured and controls all the big things, but very little attention has been given to the less important economic factors. The opportunity here for the small investor-capitalist is incomparable. With labor cheap and plentiful and prices for all commodities being very high, the margin of profit is large. There is no reason in the world why a great many articles of staple consumption, imported from Europe under sky-high tariff rates, could not be produced at home as raw materials for a great many are at hand.

But the prospective investor must have natural politeness, be educated in the language of the country and its customs, and have sufficient capital to carry the venture a year. Accounts receivable are slow, but good, two to three months' collections being cash transactions in a great many instances. Our system of selling by holding a stop watch in one hand and an order pad in the other while a customer hurriedly goes over samples between trains would not work at all there. While business is hardly ever broached during social hours, social indulgences, however, are a component part of business activities.

A pleasant evidence of the social spirit in business is the almost universal custom of serving coffee, except in the larger stores and public places of the big cities. Several times a day the little boy or girl employee passes through the store or office carrying a tray filled with tiny cups, sugar bowl and a pot of the blackest and finest coffee in the world. World travelers have told me that nowhere else in the world is the Brazilian formula for coffee-making equalled. It usually takes the greater part of the day to prepare coffee for the next day's use. Shoppers and employees alike forget there is such a thing as business and all sit down and sip and chat for fifteen or twenty minutes over these tiny black filled cups.

Many visits are made by salesmen before business is injected into the conversation, even casually. A sort of extended social and personal introduction for every transaction must first be accomplished. This process is essential from the trifles to the most important aims.

Los Angeles and San Francisco Well Known in This Section.

WONDERFUL opportunities are open to American business concerns in the export field, especially those located in California, Los Angeles and San Francisco being as well known in Brazil as London and Liverpool are in India. They know of and watch the agricultural and packing development in California and are well posted on its progress. Because of this direct interest, all other things being equal, commodities bearing California labels would have a preference in their markets.

But the business would have to be gone after because of the grip European concerns have there and because of the lack of knowledge of the capacity of American houses for filling their orders. Other than big bridges, railroads, high buildings and moving pictures, our productive versatility is unknown to them. I had great difficulty in convincing an engineer that we made fine surveying and scientific instruments.

In preparing goods for South American markets it must never be forgotten that your purchasers are not strangers to high-grade goods. The old idea that seconds will get by will not bring return orders. Articles must be packed securely and decoratively, and in small units. The stunningness of our smart simplicity in packing which is effective with us, would be regarded by them as crude, amateurish and unrefined. Candy could not be given away to them in the plain lumber unfinished and unwrapped wooden boxes such as are so popular in our finest stores. Everything must be prettied up, but not the tawdry tinsel of the Southern States' negro taste. And don't send order blanks which state "cash must accompany all orders" with your first catalogue, or at any other time. Responsible dealers there are as safe to do business with as those anywhere.

Round Trip Ticket Will Always Come in Handy.

TO THOSE considering tempting fortune in the torrid tropics, unless they are investors in some degree, I would suggest obtaining a round trip ticket. The man who works with his hands in those places is poorly paid, either skilled or unskilled. However, professional men, engineers, lawyers, pharmacists, dentists and the like, where on salary, are fairly well paid. But do not sign up to work for an American concern at any price or conditions. You will be driven at the same speed there as here. In a tropical climate men do not last long at our high-pressure gait. Even the natives could not survive it. Some Americans manage with the aid of drink to stagger through their contract time, but the majority beg, borrow or steal the price of a ticket home as quick as possible.

Another painful moment for me was when I was tenderly and gracefully informed that I was guilty of committing a vulgar breach of the moral law by appearing in the presence of women in a half-sleeve sport shirt—throwing a baseball in front of the house. Appearing before women coatless is a mark of disrespect at all times. The Brazilian women, by the way, seem to have some respect due them, the scarlet section of Rio, vast and vicious at that time, being almost entirely devoid of native women, those there coming from all parts of the globe.

Though the observance in theory generally of the old moral rules predominates, yet mentally, the people are by no means cobwebby. All the ultramodern cults, isms and ologies are firmly planted and have flourishing followings.

CARE OF THE BODY.

tightly as possible. A whipcord, shoestring, necktie, strap or anything that can be made to answer the purpose may be used. It should be sufficiently tight to cut off the circulation. This may be accomplished by placing a small stick beneath the cord and twisting it.

If there is no sore, or ulcer, or abrasion in the mouth, it will be safe to suck the wound, as the poison will not do any harm, if not received into the circulation.

The wound may be treated with baking soda, an alkali. Nearly all poisons are acid, and alkali counteracts the acid.

Until recovery, the patient should be fed nothing but vegetable juice and raw, green stuff, in order to get the blood alkaline.

Material for Vivisection.

Following is by Edmund Vance Cooke:

We called him "Rags." He was just a cur;
But twice on the Western Line,
That little old bunch of faithful fur.
Had offered his life for mine.

And all that he got was bones and bread,
Or the leavings of soldier-grub;
But he'd give his heart for a pat on the head,
Or a friendly tickle and rub.
And Rags got home with the regiment;
And then, in the breaking away—
Well, whether they stole him, or whether he went,
I am not prepared to say.

But we mustered out, some to beer and gruel,
And some to sherry and shad;
And I went back to the Sawbones School,
Where I still was an Undergrad.
One day they took us budding M. D.'s

To one of those institutes
Where they demonstrate every new disease
By means of bisected brutes.

They had one animal tacked and tied
And slit like a full-dressed fish
With his vitals pumping away inside
As pleasant as one might wish.

I stopped to look like the rest, of course,
And the beast's eyes leveled mine,
And his short tail thumped with a feeble force,
And he uttered a tender whine.

It was Rags, yes Rags! who was martyred there,
Who was quartered and crucified;
And he whined that whine which is doggish prayer,
And he licked my hand—and died.

And I was no better in part nor whole
Than the gang I was found among,
And his innocent blood was on the soul
Which he blessed with his dying tongue.

Well! I've seen men go to courageous death
In the air, on sea, on land!
But only a dog would spend his breath
In a kiss for his murderer's hand.

And if there's no heaven for love like that,
For such four-legged fealty—well,
If I have any choice, I tell you flat,
I'll take my chance in hell.

Osteopaths, Chiropractors and Others.

A MEDICAL friend writes:

"The change of sentiment in regard to the old school prestige is almost revolutionary. Only a couple of years ago I heard the persistent remark from patients and acquaintances: 'Harry Brook is a crank—did you read his last Care of the Body?' The tune has changed. Now I hear the same people say: 'Did you read last Sunday's health department? Didn't Dr. Brook hit the bull's eye?'

"Whether one accepts all yours views or not, one thing is certain—you have done more than any one individual in the country to break down the drug superstition, and the authority of its pall bearers.

"The reason that the chiropractors are forging ahead of the osteopaths lies in the fact that the chiropractor comes with a clean bill of sale—no medicine—while the osteopath, to my sorrow, joins hands with the M.D.'s in administering surgery and medicine. The osteopath falls short of the ideal; the chiropractor, so far, is living up to it."

A Rational Physician.

IT is pleasing to note that an increasing number of physicians of the M.D., or allopathic school of medicine, are taking up natural methods of restoring health and preventing disease. This is doubtless due largely to the fact that the public is growing weary of such ineffective and harmful methods as drugging, doping and carving.

Martin Edwards, M.D., of Boston, one of these progressive physicians, is 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 190 pounds and is 100 per cent alive. He had an article in the June American entitled "Good Health Largely a Matter of Will." He says:

"I determine by conversation with the patient whether he really wants to be well. Strangely enough, there are great numbers of people who merely wish to be well, provided someone else will do the getting well for them. This I cannot do, and will not attempt. They must want to be well, and must be able to create a will to be well before I can accomplish much. If the applicant for my service passes this test, we can co-operate, he and I, to get him well. We generally succeed."

Regarding "physical examinations," Dr. Edwards has this to say:

"The first step is a thorough physical examination. And 'thorough' means just that. Many a man today is having to admit himself a failure just because some examiner, after going over only his heart, lungs, blood pressure, and urine, said:

"'Oh, you are all right. All you need is a tonic, or a little vacation.'

"Such examinations are often cruelly worse than useless. Not only must every part of the body be gone over carefully—but posture, diet, care of the bowels, habits of thinking, eating, sleeping, bathing, care of the teeth, hours of work, hours of play, conditions under which one works, the hygiene of the home—all of these, and many more—are of the utmost importance in a 'thorough' health examination."

This physician properly attaches the greatest importance to maintaining a correct posture of the body, and to exercise. He takes his own medicine, exercising in his garden two hours a day.

Dr. Edwards's own diet is far from ideal, but his ideas on the subject are miles ahead of those of the ordinary M.D. who tells his patient, "Eat what you please," or "Eat what seems to agree with you." For instance, he rejects stimulating foods, or advises to eat meat not more than twice a week, to eat freely of fruit, green vegetables from which the water containing the organic salts has not been discarded, and salad plants.

I am always glad to note these accessions to the ranks of rational healers to whatever school they may belong. The more the better, for the sake of humanity.

Sugar Jags.

AS I have heretofore shown, the change from alcohol to sugar is only a change of form, and a more harmful form than when alcohol is diluted, or taken in the shape of light wine or beer, because sugar, by fermentation in the stomach, not only produces alcohol, but also gas, and makes the blood acid.

George S. Weger, M.D., writes in the Philosophy of Health:

"It is an acknowledged and well-established fact that, from the standpoint of the physiologic chemist, sugar is nothing but solid alcohol. The products of the combustion of each of these substances in the human system are practically the same.

"China has had national prohibition, by royal edict, for many centuries. The Chinaman's idea of a rousing good time is to gorge himself with candy until he is just as drunk from its effects as any white man ever was on whisky.

"The effects of alcohol appear more rapidly and vanish more quickly, while those of sugar take longer to make their appearance and linger longer, thus subjecting the tissues of the body to a more profound

Sadie turns the other Cheek

By Donald Duncan.

"WELL, if this ain't the worst hole in the ground I ever saw. There's not a breath of air nor a live person in the place. And to think of Friedman's agency sending a lady of my class, with the best tumblin' act on the Coast to such a hang-out. If it wasn't for gettin' in wrong with the managers all along the Coast, I'd beat it right now."

"Right you are, Sadie, but wait till you see the theater. There ain't a sign of a dressin' room, and they just get one drop! They're just interducin' voodovil to boots the pitchers, and their stage ain't fit for a coyote to dance on, let alone a gent that's had European time like me." Thus delivered Mr. Arcani, billed as the "dancing whirlwind," as he settled back in the one chair the room afforded and fanned his small, dark face with his near-Panama.

"No dressin' rooms! How'm I goin' to put my act on and make my five changes, then?" asked the buxom young woman addressed as Sadie, as she drained the last drop of water from the white china pitcher that stood on the table of the hotel bedroom to which she had been shown a few minutes earlier.

"You'll have to make your changes behind the drop. There's a couple of screens there."

"Me! Make my changes in the wings? Well, I guess not. I'll cancel my time first," exclaimed Sadie in outraged dignity. "I'll go right over and talk to the stage manager this minute—if I don't perish in this awful heat."

"They ain't no use'n your goin' there, for there's no stage manager," retorted Mr. Arcani, in a triumphant voice, which plainly implied that that would hold her for a while.

"No stage manager! My Gawd, who runs the show?" exclaimed Sadie, her voice falling to a tragic whisper.

"The owner, Mrs. Sullivan, and as I said previous, she's never had voodovil before and hasn't made any special preparations for our acts."

At that moment a high keyed voice was heard from the middle distance, calling in acrimonious tones. 'Mr. Arcani, Mr. Arcani, are you or are you not going to stay there all forenoon, while I unpack these trunks alone?"

Although put in the form of a question, this summons was evidently not to be disregarded, for the reluctant Mr. Arcani rose quickly and hurried to his own room. His partner, Mme. Arcani, "carried the act" and when s hesat her petite foot down, Mr. Arcani, whose eye was ever on the main chance, yielded to her whims. He was too wise to forget that he was the third partner the high-strung dancer had had in this act, each of his predecessors having reluctantly given his name and a goodly share in the fat salary the act drew. It was well understood by members of the profession that Mme. Arcani's husband pro tem must toe the mark or be dismissed with no hope of alimony. It was not difficult for her to find a partner even on short notice, as any ordinary stage dancer could play second to her with little coaching.

Half an hour later the perspiring Sadie joined the Arcanis in their stuffy room, and, seemingly oblivious of the frowning greeting accorded her by the irate Mme. Arcani, she sat down on one of the trunks, inquiring as she did so how soon they would be ready to go to the theater.

"As for me," she declared, "I am that done out with this heat that I haven't enough ambition to set out alone."

It did not take Mme. Arcani long to make it clear to Sadie that neither she nor her partner had any immediate intention of going to the theater, so Sadie reluctantly took up her plume-laden pink hat, adjusted it carefully on her elaborate golden coiffure, and set out alone for the theater. Mme. Arcani watched her with vindictive eyes. Her jealousy of this great blonde Amazon, with her milk-white skin, her blonde hair, her voluptuous figure, and her wandering gaze, had been thoroughly aroused in the three weeks in which they had played together on the "small time" circuit north of Sacramento. Mr. Arcani's defection this morning, when he had helped Sadie with her suit cases and then sat and gossiped with her in her room, leaving his partner to smolder in wrath in their hot and dusty room, had been the last straw. Now her black eyes snapped, the color burned high on her swarthy cheeks, and the wiry little woman moved with nervous haste as she unpacked her trunks. Poor Mr. Arcani did his best to assist her, but she choose to ignore him. At last he rose from the lumpy bed on which he had been disconsolately seated, and slid noiselessly out of the room.

In the meanwhile Sadie was making her way through the parched streets to the theater. The heat was almost unbearable. It was one of those days when the desert, driven out by the cunning work of man, stretches out its hand in a vain effort to reclaim its own. Under that baleful touch the parched soil reflected the rays of the sun in shimmering waves, vegetation drooped and withered, and all but the most intrepid native sons of the desert remained under shelter.

Along the street, lined with low frame buildings, each with its wooden porchlike roof extending over the walk to afford some little protection from the blast of the sun's of horses or a saddle pony or two, with now rays, were here and there hitched a team and then a dust-covered automobile by way of variety. The streets were almost empty. Two-thirds of the buildings were saloons, not yet put out of business by the prohibition wave which was to sweep them away in a few years. She arrived at the little theater hot and fairly panting for breath.

In the tiny coop of a box office sat a placid woman, stout, broad-hipped, motherly looking, the embodiment of staid respectability. This was Mrs. Sullivan, the owner and manager of the theater. She greeted Sadie with all friendliness, gave her a cool glass of lemonade, thrust a palm-leaf fan into her hand, and soon had her rocking comfortably beside her in one of the two old-fashioned wooden rockers the office afforded.

To Sadie's complaints about the lack of dressing-rooms, she replied soothingly. "A, now, Miss Sadie, why would you have a stuffy little dressing-room, no bigger nor a closet, when you can have all the space back of the curtain? Just come wid me, child, and I'll show how foine I have made it with screens and curtains and a bureau out of my own house. What better could you ask?"

Sadie surveyed the arrangements with eyes inclined to be critical, but Mrs. Sullivan's evident good intentions and her genuine friendliness disarmed the girl, who was, as she often said of herself, "soft as mush" when she was approached in the right way. She had been on the stage since earliest childhood, first as member of a family troupe, later in her single act made up partly of dancing and partly a series of grilling contortions which she had mastered only after years of hard training. In those years she had encountered all sort of hardships, had received many hard knocks, and had learned two things. First, how to take care of herself, and second, to make the best of a bad situation.

So she settled down to her week with Mrs. Sullivan and put her act on with all her usual energy. And that act "went big." Sadie's buxom beauty, her excellent stage make-up, and her personal magnetism were not lost on the odd assembly of miners, loggers, ranchers and townsmen who made up the evening audiences. Mrs. Sullivan was vainly attempting to draw out a larger number of women, but few came to the evening performances, there being a tradition against such attendance, due to the unsavory reputation the place had built up for itself before Mrs. Sullivan became its proprietor.

On the third day of her engagement, a diversion occurred just as Sadie was responding to her second encore. The city fire bells suddenly began to toll, a signal that all in the audience had become accustomed to as announcing a new outbreak of Mt. Lassen, some forty miles away. So now they all rushed out of the theater. Sadie, in her contortionist costume of pink tights, accordion plaited short skirt, pink silk stocking and pink sandals, followed the crowd, quite unmindful of the sensation she created. She had heard much of Mt. Lassen and its eruptions, but this was the first one that had occurred since her arrival within sight of the great volcano. The day was clear, and Mt. Lassen, stood out sharply defined against the cloudless sky, so that it was hard to realize that it was forty miles away. From its cone-shaped summit there slowly belched a great funnel-shaped cloud black as night. For some moments the smoke held this funnel-like shape. Then it slowly dispersed and the snow-covered peak, blackened at the summit and at one side, where it had burst forth from a new crater, stood clearly defined. When all signs of the eruption were over, the crowd turned and gave its undivided attention to the statuesque Sadie. But Mrs. Sullivan, aware of the sensation thatthe girl was making, had draped her with a gorgeous Japanese kimono, despite Sadie's protests that the Lord knew she was hot enough without a wrap.

In the crowd attracted nearest Sadie, Mrs. Sullivan had noted a spell-bound young Irishman, Dan Sullivan by name, "own cousin to himself." As her late husband's kinsman started to follow Sadie into the theater, Mrs. Sullivan shook her head at him knowingly. He stopped to ask her "who that dhream of a ghirl" was, and if she was to appear on the stage again that afternoon. When he was told that she did not come on again until evening his disappointment was evident.

"Shure, he's a foine up-standing lad and tellin' you all week what a foine bill I have in my house this week, and you that occupied with your awtomobiles that you are fair deaf to all my remarks."

If Dan had neglected Mrs. Sullivan's tip the first of the week, he made up for it later. That evening and every other evening he occupied a front seat at the theater and sat rigidly through both performances, captive of Sadie's beauty and grace. The girl noted his presence from the first and was not slow to ask Mrs. Sullivan about him.

"Shure, he's a foine up-standing lad and a grand mechanic, too. He thinks nothin' at all, at all, of taking the wheels all out of an awtomobile and after picking them all to pieces, putting them together again. Some day he'll own a gar-ige himself, I misdoubt not."

It was the end of the week before the admiring but bashful Dan got up his courage to seek an introduction to Sadie, and then he was so dazzled by her beauty and the grand airs of her that he could scarcely find a word to say to her. But Sadie did not note his lack of conversation. She was occupied with a new trouble that had arisen and so was distraught and unsociable. The booking agency which had sent her out on this trip had just notified ner and the Arcani's that their contracts were cancelled, as the hot weather had caused the other theaters of the Sacramento Valley to close their doors temporarily.

"Then you won't be for goin' back to the city next week?" asked Dan, eagerly.

"I don't know what I'll do," sighed Sadie. "What's to become of me left stranded away up here is more than I know. The nerve of them izzies at the agency to hand a package like that to the best act of its kind on the Coast." Whenever Sadie spoke of herself in her professional capacity it was as an act. Her personality was submerged in it.

Dan was perturbed over his lady's predicament, but he was unable to offer any suggestion. The one thing he could think of offering was himself and this he dared not do. If Sadie had only known it, she could have borrowed enough money from him to put her on her feet, but be it said to her credit that this never entered her golden poll. Of course her salary had been overdrawn, so she was practically without funds when her week's bills were settled. It was kindly Mrs. Sullivan who solved the problem the next day, by offering Sadie a berth as piano-player in the theater until something more to her liking turned up.

"It's myself that knows that playing a mechanical piano in a poor little theater like my own is far beneath the loikes of you, Miss Sadie, with your own original contortion and dancin' act and your illegant costumes, but mayhap you will not mind doin' it for a toime."

And so it was arranged, Sadie volunteering to put on her act Wednesday and Saturday evenings as a special attraction. for even her performer's conceit did not prevent her from realizing that the same act would not go indefinitely in a community as small as the one in which she seemed doomed to remain.

Sunday morning after the close of the week's bill, Sadie encountered Mr. Arcani in the hotel lobby. In some surprise she took his proferred hand—he had kept himself at a safe distance all week—and remarked with ill-concealed curiosity. "Why, I thought you would be in 'Frisco by this time. The clerk said you were leaving early this morning."

Mr. Arcani drooped like a wilted flower and then confided to Sadie that Mme. Arcani had departed alone on the midnight train, having successfully given him the slip while he was partaking of refreshment in the hotel bar.

"Can you beat it?" exclaimed Sadie "I always said Mme. Arcani was too temperamental for any good use. Now what are you goin' to do?"

"Do," replied Mr. Arcani. "A gentleman like me that's been a headliner on Broadway? I'm a-goin' to sue Friedman on that contract."

"But," interrupted the practical Sadie, "what you goin' to do now? It takes kale to start law suits. I never see a lawyer yet that would budge until you flashed a roll. Besides, how you goin' to get back to 'Frisco?"

But Mr. Arcani sidestepping the main issue, continued to tell of the revenge he would take when he got to the city. He painted a picture of the booking agent grovelling at his feet, begging him to accept a compromise, the while he, Mr. Arcani, standing firmly on his rights, would demand the full amount of the contract for the cancelled time. But Sadie refused to deal in futures, and insisted upon pinning him down as to his immediate plans. He finally confided to her that his late partner had drawn the salary and left with the small balance. He was broke, stranded, friendless, unless Sadie could help him out. Then he once more launched into a glowing picture of the future successes he was planning, and succeeded in dazzling Sadie's imagination. The girl's belief in the marvelous was in no way impaired by the hard facts which she had too often been compelled to face. Before leaving Mr. Arcani she promised to loan him enough money for his pressing needs just as soon as she could draw an advance from Mrs. Sullivan, assuring him, however, that it would be totally inadequate to pay his fare to San Francisco.

Dan Sullivan was overjoyed at the arrangement whereby the lady of his dreams became a more or less permanent attraction at his cousin's theater, and he started in to woo her with all his Irish ardor. Sadie enjoyed his company. In her heart she was as unsophisticated as a child so that his simplicity troubled her not at all. But she divided her spare time between Dan and Mr. Arcani, who had thrown himself upon her like a stray puppy.

Mrs. Sullivan, who had become greatly attached to Sadie, sadly disapproved of her intimacy with Mr. Arcani, whom she disliked because of his "Eytalian" ways. She was especially perturbed over the gossip, as she was convinced of the good intent and genuine worth of this noisy, out-spoken child of the vaudeville stage.

But saddest of all was the plight of Dan Sullivan, whose fingers itched for a grip on Mr. Arcani's thin neck, but whose love for Sadie impelled him to forbear. Reluctantly be admitted that the girl seemed to be under the spell of Arcani though the latter was a worthless sponger on gullible womankind. The climax was reached when Dan sauntered into the hotel lobby one evening after the show, hoping to have a chat with his lady love. But when Sadie came in she was accompanied by Mr. Arcani, and with only the briefest of greetings she followed the latter upstairs. After she had gone Dan noted a certain tenseness in the air. Mrs. Walker, the landlady, a round dumpling of a woman with pink cheeks and narrow black eyes, stood talking in a low voice with the clerk and two or three of the regular guests. Then she tsarted upstairs.

her eyes.

Slowly it dawned upon Dan that Mrs. Walker was watching Sadie, that she had gone up to spy upon the girl. He flushed hotly, but was powerless to act. Presently Mrs. Walker came down, excited but triumphant. To the group of watchers she nodded with an "I told you so air" and Dan, who had drawn nearer, heard her say, "He's in her room all right. She didn't come to the door until I had knocked three times, and then she only opened it a crack."

"What did you say to her?"

"I just handed her a clean towel, saying the laundry was late. She was flustered for once, all right. I'll have her out of here by this time next week."

Dan waited to hear no more. Sadie was fore or just after some severe earthquake, comet, volcanic disturbance or other phenomenon.

He wrote:

"Indeed, it is surprising that medical men have not pursued the ideas suggested by these great fathers of their science. Hippocrates led the way, unlocking the great doctrine of a constitution or state of the atmosphere calculated to produce particular epidemic diseases; a doctrine which Sydenham has pursued with wonderful success. Any man who reads the history of diseases must see that certain species of them appear nearly together in time and place.

"The confidence in modern health laws is like the respect which the ancient Egyptians paid to the bird Ibis, which they supposed averted the plague by destroying the flying serpents that the hot Libyan winds brought into the country. The Egyptians were like all modern nations—unwilling to believe the plague generated at home. They ascribed it to infection brought by flying serpents, as the moderns ascribed it to old clothes, bales of goods and infected ships. They mistook the cause, adored Ibis, as the moderns do quarantine, and with the same ill success."

In his discussion of how to prevent "flu" Webster emphasized the importance of keeping in good health. He declared that an optimistic mind, nourishing food, frequent baths, pure water and a vigorous body would make one immune from almost any sort of epidemic.

Webster was right. Epidemics are no more due to "germs" than seasickness is due to germs. Epidemics are due to a disturbance of the atmosphere, seasickness to a disturbance of the water. Epidemic diseases are not "catching;" therefore, all quarantines are foolish and futile.

Remember this, however, epidemic diseases can only affect those who have waste matter in the blood to be burned up—a curative process—any more than you can set fire to a pile of iron filings. If there are wooden shavings among the filings they will burn and the conflagration will be great or small, according to the amount of the shavings.

Atmospheric disturbances on earth are caused by sun spots, which are violent convulsions of the solar envelope. What causes sun spots? That we cannot say, but you may be sure that they are part of the orderly evolution of Nature.

His "Adirondacks."

FOLLOWING is from the San Diego Union:

"Here is an actual happening at a San Diego home this week. A boy came home and said that the pupils were all examined in his room. His mother asked him what the political M.D.s said. He replied: 'They told some of them to wear glasses, some of them to have their teeth fixed and some to have their Adirondacks cut out.'"

Arms and Farms.

IF the billions spent on the destructive forces of army and navy could be diverted to expenditure on constructive work, as the reclamation of arid lands, what a wonderful improvement in conditions we should see.

Why cannot this be done? Because there is too much private money invested in steel and armaments. A big step toward peace would be government control of all war material making.

The Worship of Bigness.

THE census population of Los Angeles is 575,480, an increase of 80 per cent over 1910. Boomers estimated 700,000, but they always exaggerate.

Los Angeles is now the 44th city in the world. Only 30 years ago, in 1890, it was 57th in the United States.

Los Angeles passes San Francisco by 67,000. In 1881, when I came through Los Angeles from San Francisco, on my way to Arizona, the latter city had 300,000 and Los Angeles 12,000. Many then thought that Tucson would in ten years be a bigger place than Los Angeles. Ten years before that the population of California was 560,000, or less than that of Los Angeles today.

I see no reason why, within the lifetime of many of my readers, Los Angeles, with its climatic and geographical advantages, should not become the largest city in the world. Perhaps I should hasten to add "if the moving picture studios don't move away."

What of it? Will it make any of us healthier and happier? Rather will it add greatly to our present discomforts.

Of what advantage is bigness in a city, beyond a reasonable point, except to real estate subdividers? Personally, I found the Los Angeles of 1890 a more livable and lovable place than the Los Angeles of today.

Great cities are cancer spots on the map, breeding places of unrest and revolt. The trend to the cities is one of the most alarming symptoms of our national life.

Why measure a city by its size and smokestacks? Why not rather enlarge upon its beauty, and comfort, and good citizenship?

Americans worship bigness. Cities are estimated by their population, buildings by their height, men by their bank accounts, and babies by their weight. It is a sign of national youth. Children always delight in "great big" toys. In course of time—say in a thousand years or so—we shall overcome this weakness, and value quality rather than quantity.

Health and Happiness.

MANY are always searching for something to make them happy.

Happiness does not lie in outside things, but within yourself.

And you cannot possibly be really happy while your colon is foul, your liver congested, your blood stagnant, and your nerve centers pressed by gas.

Snake Bite.

ABOUT the only venomous snake in California is the rattlesnake. They usually lie around rocky places.

The rattlesnake is a gentleman, and always gives warning. No animal or reptile will attack man, unless it believes it is threatened, or when with its young, whom it defends. Of course, if you step accidentally on a snake, it supposes it is being attacked, and will strike back. Also, in August and September, rattlesnakes are blind, when special care is needed.

Not every person who is bitten is poisoned. If the snake bites through clothing, the poison may be absorbed by the clothing, or the fangs may not penetrate the skin sufficiently far to inject the poison into the circulation.

Death has been known to occur in less than 30 minutes after an individual has been bitten. Life sometimes continues for five or six weeks.

The injection of permanganate of potash is regarded as the most effective remedy. An outfit may be obtained at leading drug stores, with instructions.

Immediately after being bitten a cord should be placed around the limb, a short distance above the wound, tying it as

NERVOUSNESS

AMETROPATHY is the most modern, the least understood, yet the most rational method of dealing with disorders of the nerves and internal organs. It is not suited to conditions due to organic lesion or infection. It cannot, for instance, cure tuberculosis (though it may remove the cause of the depletion that brought on consumption;) but it will produce positive results in cases of Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Heart, Epilepsy, St. Vitus's Dance, Stuttering, and in functional derangements manifested by states of Fear, Despondency, Headaches, Insomnia, Asthma or Indigestion.

Persons who (in spite of sound organs) are suffering physically or mentally, particularly those subject to spells of unnatural fatigue, and to whom the known methods of treatment do not bring lasting relief, will probably find in AMETROPATHY the solution of their difficulties.

SADIE TURNS THE OTHER CHEEK.

the talk of the town. Every one thought ill of her, and yet he could no nothing. If only she would give him the right to protect her name from all this gossip; if only she would drop Arcani.

In the meantime Sadie was saying to Arcani, "That was a close call. I just got the stove into the closet and those dishes covered with a newspaper in time. If she ever finds this stove it will be all up with our little suppers. And there isn't a place in town where one can get a fit lunch after the show. Such a burg it is."

Mr. Arcani artistically cleaned up his plate and drained the last drop of coffee from a cracked cup. Then he said fervently, "I wish to Gawd we had a bite of cheese to finish off with."

"We'll try a rabbit tomorrow," announced Sadie, as she began washing the dishes in her wash bowl. "That is, if she doesn't get wise to the cookin'. It's my opinion that she came here tonight just to snoop and see what we were doin'. Landladies are that suspicious."

The next day Dan left his work early. He was too perturbed to settle down, so wen for a long walk by the river, a sluggish, stagnant looking stream at this point. On his return as he slowly followed a path that skirted a neglected orchard, he suddenly became aware of a girl dressed in white who had turned from a path at his left. It was Sadie. She was carrying a basket of apricots, which she explained she had bought at a near-by house.

"Aren't they beauties," she asked in all friendliness. "Let's go and sit down on that old bench and have a lunch."

Silently Dan followed her, but shook his head gloomily when she offered him an apricot.

"What's wrong, Dan!" asked Sadie, as she deftly halved an apricot and placed one portion in her capacious mouth. Then leaning toward Dan, she attempted to thrust the other half between his set lips. He parried her off with one hand, and then the next thing he knew he had grasped her wrist firmly and was removing the fruit from her hand and was throwing it away, still holding her wrist with his right hand. Sadie laughed and attempted to free herself. But the hot flame that burned through Dan's being made him relentless. He grasped her other hand and so held her tightly, half rising as he did so. He would have it out with her now. Either she would have him or he'd be done with her. But the girl deftly eluded him, and rising quickly walked to the end of the terrace and set down on a fallen tree, figure drooping and head bowed in hands.

"Ah, now, Sadie darlin', don't be vexed with me. Shure you know I love the ground you walk on," pleaded Dan.

"It's not vexed I am," replied Sadie. "But I'm no girl for you, Dan Sullivan, and it grieves me to have you think so?"

"And I'd loike to know why not," declared Dan, vehemently. "Proud I'd be to have you for my wife this many a day."

Sadie looked up with moist blue eyes. At his vigorous affirmative she shook her head sadly. "No, Dan, it can't be. I'm a wicked girl to have encouraged you. The truth is that I'm not made for marriage. I've lead such a roamin' life, here and there, always with people of my own kind, that I'm not fit. I could never settle down to this." She gave her hand a sweep to indicate the little town below.

"Ah, but Sadie, 'tis said every woman longs for a home and childer of her own. Is it not so?"

"Sometimes I do," admitted Sadie, half to herself. "But I've seen so many marriages go wrong that I'm goin' alone. That's why I've never taken a pardner, though I know my act would go grand as a double."

The real significance of this remark was lost on Dan, who did not realize that in Sadie's thoughts a "pardner" was tantamount to a husband. As a matter of fact Sadie had lived rigidly according to her lights, casting in her lot with no man, though temptations there had been a-plenty. She distrusted matrimony on principle and had refused to accept anything less exacting. Now she was adamant to all Dan's pleading.

It was late when they parted at the hotel. Dan left with a dark look clouding his brow, for he had caught a glimpse of Mr. Arcani as he stood at the door. Jealousy surged through him. Sadie could talk as she pleased. It was the crafty Italian that prevented her from returning his love. The girl was daft, or she was worse. Tortured by his black thoughts he avoided Sadie during the next days. He heard her name coupled with that of Arcani more than once. The townsfolk had passed judgment on the girl. She was an outcast.

On Saturday a mild eruption of Mt. Lassen took place. Dan joined the gaping crowd on the crest of a hill near the courthouse and watched the smoke belch up and then disperse. When a youth suggested that they form a party to go to the volcano the next day Dan consented readily enough.

"But if I go, I'll be for climbing up and having a look into the new crater," he declared, with some bravado.

"And suppose an eruption starts just when you're taking your look, what then?"

"I'll be there," replied Dan, succinctly.

"Ye'd be nowhere, ye gossoon," retorted a brother from Erin.

"Maybe so," agreed Dan, but up the mountain I go on the morrow. They that are afeerd to go may stay below."

Half an hour later he was awaiting Sadie at the stage door. Hardly had he taken his stand when the slim, dark figure of Mr. Arcani appeared. But Dan stood his ground. Mr. Arcani eyed him nervously and then entered the door. Dan was furious. The lack of dressing-rooms made the act a particularly monstrous one in Dan's eyes, totally unaccustomed as he was to the freedom of stage life.

Sadie was giving her act this evening and would be dressing in the wings. Dan boiled inwardly as he waited, but still he waited. In a quarter of an hour Sadie, followed by Mr. Arcani, came out. When she saw Dan she hesitated and then spoke to him with elaborate politeness, mindful of his recent neglect of her. "Good evenin,' Mr. Sullivan. I hope you are enjoyin' the air."

"That I am not, Miss," he answered with much dignity. "But I'd loike a word with you in private."

Come along with us then invited Sadie, blythely. "Whatever you got 'o say to me is not too private for my friends to hear."

"If that's the case, I'll be sayin' good evenin'," replied Dan, who had turned deadly pale under his ruddy Irish skin. His eyes were blazing; his boyish mouth drawn in a straight, hard line. Turning on his heel he marched off without losing one jot of his dignity, leaving the astonished Sadie to walk along with Mr. Arcani, who soon negotiated his weekly loan, pocketing half of the girl's pay without a qualm.

Scarcely had the church bells tolled on Sunday morning when another eruption broke forth from Lassen Peak. This was more violent than any of the others, many of the watchers declaring that they could distinguish flames intermingled with the smoke. By noon a telephone message from the forestry officials announced that a party of men who had attempted to ascend the mountain that morning had been caught in the clouds of volcanic bombs and ashes and that it was thought that none of the party had escaped. Rumor ran riot for hours. Wild tales were circulated of the molten lava flowing out of a great gash in the mountainside and of other parties that had met with disaster.

When Sadie entered the theater the next afternoon, she was greeted by a tearful Mrs. Sullivan. "Ah, Sadie, ghirl, he was a good lad and the livin' image of his uncle, too. Now it's kilt he is entoirely."

"Killed," gasped Sadie. "Dan?"

"Shure, and haven't you heard? He set off before daybreak this morning, his mind fixed on one idea—to climb Lassen and take a look into the new crater, and now the forester phones he was killed with his two comrades."

Sadie was silent. She had pertly turned him away the evening before. Now he was dead and would never know that she loved him, for love him she did, and she was ready to admit it now that it was too late.

Early in the evening the news was brought that one of the members of Dan's party had been reached and was being brought home. Sadie hurried out after the evening performance and made her way to the little house where the injured man was. She must find out about Dan. She could not rest until she did. She was admitted by a small fair woman, whose face was white and drawn and whose eyes showed signs of recent tears. But there was at the same time a look of hope, of exaltation about her.

"Mrs. Brant?" asked Sadie, and then continued at the woman's nod. "I came to ask about Dan Sullivan. He was with your husband."

"Yes, Harry is resting quietly now, sort of dosing, but he talked a little an hour or so ago. He said Dan —" She faltered and then stopped altogether.

"It is bad news you have for me," said Sadie, "but please tell me."

"Dan was ahead and when the eruption occurred he was buried under the rocks and ashes. There is no hope for him. I'm sorry. It might have been Harry."

Sadie sat down heavily in the nearest chair! Her face was pasty, her eyes dull and heavy. She could not stir. Mrs. Brant brought her a glass of water, but she could not drink.

"You are Dan's sweetheart?" asked the woman, gently.

"He wanted me to be, but I flouted the poor lad, and now he is gone forever." She began to sob softly.

"Why did you flout him if you cared for him?"

"I didn't want to marry. I have seen so much wretchedneses. Besides, I am a performer—a dancer, and I feared could never settle down here."

"You could if you loved him," replied Mrs. Brant, with quiet conviction. "You wouldn't think so now, but I was on the stage myself before I was married. In the chorus, I loved the life but I wouldn't go back for the queen's diamonds."

"But didn't you hate it at first? The monotony, the drudgery, the sameness of it all?"

"My dear," replied the woman, coming to Sadie's side, "if you love your man you do not mind anything. But if you don't, God help you."

Just then a child's voice was heard. Mrs. Brant turned quickly as a little girl toddled in, hugging a rag doll. "I waked up, mummy, and came to see daddy."

"Mustn't wake up poor daddy. He is sleeping." She gathered the chidl in her arms and crooned over her softly. Sadie looked at her thoughtfully and then slowly rose from her chair.

"I'll be goin' now," she said in a dull voice. "Thank you for what you have said."

"Don't you want to hold my baby a minute?" asked the young mother impulsively. "She is almost asleep."

Sadie took the child, who smiled up at her drowsily, and held her close to her own heart. Then she handed her back to Mrs. Brant and with a hasty goodnight withdrew. As she groped her way along the dark streets she kept visualizing the scene she had just left. Now all her doubts were swept away. If only Dan were back alive how gladly would she give up her tawdry life for him. Late as it was she decided to stop and tell Mrs. Sullivan of Dan's fate. She sobbed out the whole story to this sympathetic soul.

"I didn't think I was the wife for him, Mrs. Sullivan," she explained. "He was such a simple, honest lad, and I am so different."

"But you are a good girl, Sadie," soothed her friend. "I have always known that, even though you have been that unwise about Mr. Arcani."

"Mr. Arcani," sobbed Sadie. "I hope you don't think he's anything to me. He was left broke here by his wife, who had a black record behind her, and I've been helpin' him out as best I could. He helped my mother once when she had a run of bad luck, and I could hardly do less for him. He's known me all my life and doesn't try any of his tricks on me."

"But," flashed Mrs. Sullivan. "Mrs. Walker says there's queer goin's on in your room after the show."

"Oh, she does, does she? The cat. Well, I'll have you know that it's my own business if I choose to do a bit of cookin' now and then of an evenin'. There isn't a place in this town where you can get anything fit to eat at night. And besides, I have use for all my money without wasting it."

"Cookin' is it? Why in the world didn't you say so long ago, and not be settin' the whole counthry to talkin'?"

"Did I want to get put out of the hotel because I carry a little coal oil stove with me and fry a chop on it now and then? Landladies are all that unreasonable they won't allow any freedom. I've always cooked and cook I will, be it in the Waldorf-Astoria. But why do we sit here and talk of such things when poor Dan is dead and gone?"

So saying Sadie rose to go, but was easily persuaded to spend the rest of the night with Mrs. Sullivan. At earliest dawn she was awakened from a fitful sleep by a knocking at the door. Hurrying into a kimono, she went to the door, heart beating wildly. In the dim light she could barely make out the dark outlines of a man's figure.

"Aunt Mary?" questioned a man's voice. Sadie's heart missed a beat. Was it Dan?

"Who is it?" she asked, trembling.

The next moment she was in Dan's arms, weeping and laughing at the same time, and Mrs. Sullivan was saying, "Now, Sadie, dear, let Dannie be. Shure he's covered with dust and grime and looks fit to drop."

"Drop nothin'," answered Dan, as he planted his first kiss on Sadie's upturned face.

"But Dan, we thought you were killed."

"Kilt? Just covered with ashes like a baked potato. But my foot was hurt and I had to crawl down Lassen. I guess I fainted at the last. The next thing I knew I was at a farmhouse miles away from here. But I'm here now and I've got my ghirl, too."

He looked fondly at Sadie and then kissed her again. And Sadie, smiling fatuously, turned the other cheek.

Peace, or Narcotic Slumber—Which?

BY EVA G. TAYLOR.

IN THE year preceding the great war there were held more than one hundred and fifty international Peace Congresses, Conventions and Conferences. These were believed to presage the approach of the long-hoped-for world-wide unity of which humanity had caught a passing vision. It was declared with emphatic emphasis and with serene assurance that war was a thing of the past. The peace delegates convinced that their duty was done in thinking and affirming peace folded their tents quietly and stole back to their respective domiciles. They were fully persuaded that having set the wobbly old world right by their attitude concerning war they could now retire upon their laurels and incidentally pile up the dollars—in peace! Then the storm broke forth! The world that was supposed to be profiting in "uplift" by all the reforming stunts set in motion by various agencies was immediately plunged into the most terrible fratricidal struggle recorded in history. The bloody feats of Nero and Attila were outrivalled in horrid carnage by the Hohenzollern breed of maniacs. They were let loose upon a long-suffering world in mad defiance of the serene thoughts which the "peace-thinkers" were sending forth into the blue. For awhile these societies for human betterment met and protested against the carnage, but their voices were drowned in the riot of the furies and one by one they succumbed to the overpowering forces in league for slaughter. What pressure of forces failed to accomplish ridicule achieved. Suddenly they found themselves upon the losing side—placed in a position at once humiliating and offensive. Being pacifists they had no weapons with which to combat Mars, so they quietly faded away into desuetude.

From a general survey of the situation we are forced to draw several conclusions—one of them being that our former optimism rested upon a very insecure foundation and that our so-called "peace" perched upon a thin crust over seething inner fires. Looking deeply into the matter we are forced to another conclusion, viz, that there are two kinds of peace! The pacifists and others whose philosophy of life is an amiable contentment with existence as it is are working at one pole of the battery taking no cognizance of the other. They were lulled into false security by the calm which precedes the tempest. Had they looked below the surface they might have seen that the world was not ready for peace. Beneath the exterior stillness there were agitated and seething depths. The same conditions exist today and the world is farther from peace than ever. Looking back over the pages of history we find that real peace never has existed. Each interim between national and racial war has been merely a temporary armistice. Always upon looking a little below the surface the same conditions of discord and unrest, of hatred and strife may be found. Sometimes these conditions are glossed over, veneered with fine and convincing phrases to prove that the white dove of peace is perched upon our banners. It may be perched there but its wings are often stained a lurid red while its head droops in abject discomfiture at our camouflage.

What inference then can be drawn from conditions now and in past ages except that the world has never yet known the other kind of peace—that of which Christ spoke when

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

"Out of Fashion."

FOLLOWING Associated Press dispatch from Portland, Or., was recently published in The Times:

"Appendicitis no longer is fashionable. Operations for removal of the vermiform appendix are going out of style. Much that was called appendicitis in recent years was not that at all, but plain bellyache, in varying degrees of intensity. This was the consensus of majority opinion of doctors here today, in attendance at the annual convention of the Oregon State Medical Association, voiced following an address by Dr. James T. Case of Michigan, on 'a roentgenological study of pain in the lower abdomen.'"

"Going out of style." Yes, but this will not restore a necessary organ to hundreds of thousands, or life to thousands who have died, following the operation, an operation urged on everyone who has a bellyache. And should the patient say that his appendix had already been cut out, then: "Perhaps they left a stump." Or if the stump had been removed, perhaps your great-grandfather had syphilis.

It is only a few years since appendicitis was "discovered" by the medical fraternity. It has proved a profitable discovery—a regular Klondike. Previously what is now called appendicitis was known as inflammation of the bowel, which it is.

Often when a man has a pain in the belly—and the price—he is told he must be operated on. If he rcovers, he pays several hundred or several thousand dollars, according to his means, and if he dies it is sometimes collected from his relatives.

The appendix of a human being is quite different from that of a dog. Yet it was from a dog that the medicos got their original idea that seeds and other things could get into the human appendix. Often the appendix is not affected at all.

A few years ago a bill was introduced in South Dakota, regulating operations for appendicitis, and providing that the surgeon must send the extirpated appendix to the State laboratory.

An operation is rarely needed in what is called appendicitis. Even when the appendix is badly swollen it will, if left alone, discharge in a natural way, through the gut. The appendix is a necessary organ. It serves to lubricate the lower bowel. Its removal is followed, to a greater or less degree, by lifelong alternate constipation and diarrhoea.

Appendicitis is due to continued dietetic errors, resulting in inflammation of the bowel, and a foul condition of the colon, followed by auto-intoxication. A prolific cause is living largely on meat, white bread and other concentrated foods.

When you have a pain in the bowel, go to bed. Take absolutely no food, not a teaspoonful of anything but water, to which may be added a little lemon juice. Take an enema of half a gallon of tepid water once a day to clear out the bowel. A hot water bottle to the feet, ice to the abdomen, all the fresh air possible, and absolute quiet.

It would be well if other destructive surgical operations for the removal of necessary organs of the body should "go out of fashion," but will they? Not as long as there are so many conscienceless or ignorant physicians, and so many credulous fools, for patients.

Divorce.

IT is absurd, illogical and harmful that divorce laws should not be uniform in the United States. As it is, some State laws are shamefully lax, while at the other extreme, in one State—South Carolina—divorce is not granted for any cause.

In his autobiography, Dr. W. O. Henry states:

"A curious state of affairs was shown to exist in the various States upon the divorce problem when we came to get our decree. In some States I could get a decree quickly if I would consent to go out and commit adultery, or be caught with some woman in a very suspicious and suggestive position. Or, if I would go out and get drunk repeatedly, it would be easy to get free. Or, if I would go home a few nights and beat my wife up very brutally, the judge would consent to let her go free. Or, if I would consent to commit a great crime, so that I would be sent to prison for a time, my wife could thus get a divorce. Or, if I would throw her out of our home in the middle of the night some stormy winter night, and make her seek shelter elsewhere, then the court could see a good reason for setting her free, and let me marry some other woman to treat in like manner at my pleasure. Sometimes one can gain a residence in a State at the end of six months, and be able to apply for divorce upon one of many grounds, and get a very prompt and final decision, with privilege of remarriage immediately. In other States it requires a year's residence before one can apply for a divorce, and after all the delays necessary to get a hearing and a decision is made, it may still be a year more before the decree is final and marriage is again allowed. And in still other States it will be two years from the final decree before either party is allowed to marry again."

Olive Oil.

J. J. HURLEY of Guanajuato, Mex., writes:

"In the desert country of Sonora, Mex., I fell sick with dysentery. I left my work and went to the United States to get well. I was treated for six weeks by two American doctors and one Mexican doctor at different times. All they gave me was bismuth, opium and mercury, in tablets. I was getting worse and would have died had I not of my own accord bought a quart bottle of olive oil and drank it all in one day. The next day I was on the high road to recovery."

It is not necessary or desirable to take so heroic a dose. Fasting, with a little olive oil, or ripe olives, and fruit juice, would have accomplished the same results. The bowels should be cleansed by tepid enemas.

A cousin of mine who was an army officer in India was given up by the doctors to die of dysentery, when a native servant cured him in a few days by feeding him nothing but guavas.

Party and Country.

I HEAR much nowadays of loyalty to a political party, but little about loyalty to our country.

When shall we be able to say, as Macaulay said of ancient Rome, before it began to degenerate: "Then none was for a party; and all were for the state?"

Not until men begin to think along broader lines and to realize that the dollar is not a satisfying end of existence.

Poison Oak.

IT IS about time that I should again print my preventive for poison oak, or poison ivy. Here it is. File it for reference:

Take one level teaspoonful of concentrated lye to a quart of boiling water. Pour in bottle, cork up and apply when cold to the exposed parts of body just before going where there is poison oak. Do the same on returning. Allow the liquid to dry on the skin. Do not use when more than three or four days old, as it gradually becomes stronger. Make a fresh supply.

Unless you are peculiarly susceptible you can only be affected when these three conditions prevail:

(1.) When the poison ivy is in blossom.
(2.) When the wind is blowing your way.
(3.) When your pores are open through perspiration.

If, through carelessness, you become affected, you can only grin and bear it. The acid of the poison may be somewhat neutralized by an application of baking soda in water.

Smoking.

A WRITER in Harper's Magazine bewails the enormous waste of tobacco in this country. He says: "It is well-known that smokers waste one-eighth of every cigarette and one-tenth of every cigar, when they throw away the stubs or butts."

Yes; and if they did not, there would be a great many more sick people in this country.

I always advise my consultants, who smoke, first: to smoke not more than two mild cigars a day; second: not to smoke within an hour after eating and never on an empty stomach; and third: never to smoke more than two-thirds of the cigar.

Commenting on the above statement by Harper's Weekly, Good Health says:

"The smoker has a good reason for throwing away the stub of his cigar. As he smokes, the nicotine and other poisons are concentrated in the suction end of the cigar by condensation so that the amount of poisons contained in the smoke increases as the cigar is gradually shortened by its combustion and by the time it is three-quarters smoked the concentration of poisons in the stub end has become so great that the poison does in the smoke is three or four times that present at the beginning and not infrequently the smoker experiences unpleasant toxic effects from the inhalation of the surcharged smoke."

War Diet.

THE war had some advantages in teaching the benefit of abstemious eating. There has been little actual starvation from lack of food, but ill health from not getting the right food. And America has been sending starvation white flour and starvation canned milk to anemic European children.

Dr. M. Hindhede, a Danish physician, who has made interesting dietetic experiments, is the author of an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association on "The Effect of Food Restriction During the War on Mortality in Copenhagen." The author presents data to show that during the year of greatest food restriction (October, 1917, to October, 1918,) the death rate for Denmark was 10.4 per thousand as against the lowest previous rate of 12.5 for 1913 and 1914. This lowering of the death rate is attributed to the low protein (mostly vegetarian) diet necessitated by the Danish food regulations, and particularly to the unusual amount of bran consumed during the period of food restriction. This was brought about by milling rye to 100 per cent and adding to it wheat bran and 24 per cent of barley meal milled to 95 per cent. With this mixture it is stated that excellent bread was obtained which produced no digestive troubles.

The author concludes that "as bran can replace meat and eggs, man should eat whole bread and not so much of the more costly foods."

Epidemics.

MORE than 120 years ago Noah Webster made a painstaking study of influenza during an extensive investigation of what he called "epidemic and pestilential diseases," inspired thereto, as he himself says, by "the prevalence of the catarrh, commonly called influenza, in the years 1789 and 1790." Mr. Webster published the result of his investigations in two volumes of over 350 pages each. According to the Literary Digest the most remarkable thing contained in these books, of which but a handful are now in existence, is the theory advanced by the author, that influenza is not due to infection, but is "evidently the effect of some insensible qualities of the atmosphere." He refers to it as an "electrical quality," which he suggests may be due to planetary disturbances. Noah Webster, being a reasonably thorough man, as is evidenced by the sizable dictionary resulting from his effort in later life, left no stone unturned to find out all that was known about influenza in his day. He scrutinized carefully the records of everything looking like "flu" that had come down during the preceding 2000 years. Beginning with the year 1174, he discovered forty-four appearances of the disease in epidemic form.

In support of his theory that the disease is caused by peculiar atmospheric conditions, Mr. Webster submitted a large amount of evidence. He says that in nearly all cases the epidemic appeared either just be-

GET away from laxatives. Laxatives are like appetizers—once used, always needed. While O-M Inflammation Tablets have a laxative effect, they also have corrective qualities that help to overcome the trouble.

A medicine to be curative must be healing. First, a direct healing action, second, it must aid nature to heal. O-M Inflammation Tablets comprise both of these qualities. They are healing in effect and help the system to heal.

It is true that there are certain drugs that will whip up the appetite and digestion and temporarily increase weight. It is well known that a simple milk diet will increase weight in advanced cases of tuberculosis, but it does not cure the trouble. Diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and intestines, if allowed to continue, develop into ulceration and a breaking down in tissue.

The direct healing action as supplied by O-M Inflammation Tablets is what is needed in any trouble, no matter where it is. Many who have tried most every other form of remedy are now taking these healing tablets and getting well. Some wonderful cures are being accredited to them and it is all due to direct healing. Russia—Monarchy or Republic—Which?

BY BARONESS OTTILY DE ROPP.

[Baroness de Ropp is a member of the Russian aristocracy. For over two hundred years her family was the owner of large estates in Kovno, Lithuania, Western Russia. Prior to that time the family lived in the Baltic provinces of Courland and Livonia. For more than seven hundred years her ancestors had held high offices under the Russian government and the Russian church. Baron de Ropp's great-grandfather was at one time Grand Marshal of Lithuania, which comprised the states of Kovno, Grodno, Mohilev, Vilna and Minsk. Baron and Baroness de Ropp are now residents of Los Angeles, have taken their first citizenship papers and will make this their home.—Editor.]

Baroness Ottily de Ropp.

AT THE present time political prophesying is very much "en vogue" but even if I could sit upon the authentic tripod of the Phytia of old, I would not be good at such a game. I can only give my honest and personal opinion, based on my thorough acquaintance with the Russian people and the history of Russia, and on my knowledge of the political, social and economic conditions which prevailed in our poor country before the last revolution.

Some advocates of the republican system of government may think me prejudiced because I belong to the aristocracy, but I really and truly believe with all my heart that a constitutional monarchy would be the best kind of government for the Russia of today. I do not mean to imply that I think we will have it tomorrow, in a month or even a year, but I am fully persuaded that it would work well. Russia needs a constitution because it always has had some kind of self-government in the "Mir" (management of the village community,) and the "Zemstvo" or self-government of the owners of all the small and large estates in every state. And the Russian people need a monarch, because they always have been used to centering their personal feelings on the chief of the empire.

To all uneducated persons, just as to children, the emotional side of a question always appeals more than that of principle; that is also why the great leaders of any movement or enterprise had, and still will have, such a great hold on the minds of the masses. Even when the cause they stood for was wrong or altogether bad, their powerful personality made their followers obey and even adore them. It needs education and ethical understanding to choose between principle and personality.

You will tell me that many of the Russian monarchs have not been strong personalities. Quite true, but they were the Tzars of Russia and this fact more than anything else made them almost halfgods in the eyes of the people. For centuries the Russians had looked on them as divinely appointed, and when an old peasant was told that Tzar Nikolai II had been dethroned he exclaimed in utter amazement and horror: "But then surely there must be no more a just God in the heaven." In almost every "isba" (peasant cottage) in one corner of the room was to be found an "ikon," a picture of the Savior, of the Virgin or of some favorite saint, and in the other corner the oleograph of the reigning Tzar.

Claims Tzar Popular with Common People.

CONCERNING the stories which were circulated so often, that the common people "hated" Tzar Nikolai II, I call that a lie without mincing words, invented only by those who wanted to justify their actions. I think that almost every one hated and despised the rotten bureaucracy, but the Tzar was not hated except by the anarchists, or as they were called then, the Nihilists.

I have seen with my own eyes how the people waited and waited for a long time to have the chance to get one glimpse of the Tzar when he passed from the railway station to the Winter palace, coming to Petrograd from his usual residence in Zarskoje Selo, or when he, in summer time, went to see his mother at her summer residence on Jelagin-Ostrow. We lived for more than two years on the Kamenny-Ostrowski-Prospect where the Tzar had to pass on his way to Jelagin-Ostrow. Many, many times have I seen mothers hold up the little children in their arms as high as possible so they could see "Our little Father-Tzar."

On the last visit of Tzar Nikolai II to Riga, in July, 1910, as I remember the date, the scenes of enthusiastic welcome displayed by all classes of the population stand out like a bright picture in my memory. As it was only such a short time after the revolution of 1905-6, the authorities, in terrible dread that some attempt on the life of the Tzar would be made, had given out orders that nobody should try to pass the lines of the voluntary "Ochrana," collected from the most reliable citizens, on the way the Tzar should take. Nobody was to stand on the balconies or at open windows and it was especially forbidden to throw flowers into the imperial carriage.

Appears in the Open Despite Authorities and Court.

SOMEHOW the Tzar had got wind of these extreme precautions for his security and he simply forbade them. "Better I would not go to Riga at all than to show my people that I do not trust their love." And he went everywhere during his stay of four days in Riga, much to the despair of the city authorities and of his court. But he had not to rue it that he trusted his subjects! Very seldom in my life have I witnessed such enthusiasm. The only question among high and low was: "How many times have you seen him? How did he look? Did he smile? God bless him! I spoke to a girl in a glove-shop. With a radiant face she answered: "I waited five hours, but I saw him."

And the flowers which were thrown on his way and into the imperial carriages! Oh, how he laughed, taking up the roses and piling them into the lap of the Tzarina who bowed and smiled her stereotyped smile, a beautiful picture but not "Our" Tzarina as the Dowager-Empress had always been. And the shouts of delight when the waiting masses beheld the little Grand Duke Heritier Alexei, sitting between his father and mother! The four Grand Duchesses followed in the next carriage, looking like a big bouquet of roses in their pink dresses and hats and they too were greeted with endless cheers.

But I think that the people showed their love of Tzar Nikolai II best when he came out the day of the declaration of the World War on the balcony of the Winter palace to address the waiting masses. The Tzarina stood at his right hand and his left arm he had put around the shoulders of the Grand Duke Heritier. On the big place in front of the winter palace between ninety and a hundred thousand people were gathered. He told them how sorry he was that he had to take this fateful step and to expose "his children" to the horrors of a war which had been forced on him by the Germans. He appealed to the people to stand by him in the great struggle for Russia's integrity against the aggression of a powerful and ruthless enemy.

There was a deep silence when the Tzar had finished his address. Then like one man all the thousands fell down on their knees and raised up their hands to their monarch, tears streamed down the cheeks of many bearded men without regard to what class of people they belonged. For a moment they remained so, then they got up and broke out in such wild cheerings that one could think the walls of the huge governmental buildings, surrounding the Alexander Square, would fall in with a crash, like the walls of Jericho. ran over his cheeks too, then he raised his

The Tzar had become white as a sheet, so strong were his emotions; the tears head and a radiant smile spread over his face. He waved his hands, tried to speak, to thank the people. His words were drowned by the endless cheers. After a long while he finally retired, to stop the enthusiastic ovations.

These incidents were not staged, and they show that the Tzar was by no means hated by the people. Those who did hate him as well as anybody and anything which stood in their way were from the lower strata of the so-called "Intelligenzia," that is the educated people. They were sons of peasants, small officials or the small gentry whose parents, wanting to give their children the advantages of a high-class education, had scratched together their last kopeks to pay for it.

To understand this situation one must keep in mind that in Russia no free education existed. Except for the very low graded village schools, which were open only during the cold season, and the few scholarships in the different gymnasiums, the students had to pay for the teaching as well as for their books and the writing and drawing material.

Imagine now a boy who gets so very little money from home that he is barely kept from starving after he has paid his fees and for his books. Perhaps his parents have even died and left him with a half-finished education and no money to pay for his further study. He begins to look for home work with lazy, less capable but better off fellow-students. He goes to their houses and has a glimpse of a different life from that which he is forced to live. Sometimes such a poor but brilliant student gets a place as tutor for the summer months on the estate of some rich man, but ordinarily he does not live in the family of his pupil. He stands, so to say, always outside the gate not allowed to get inside and still less to share the pleasant life. Only too often the education they have acquired, one could hardly say "received," brings them no contentment or happiness but tends to make them bitterly dissatisfied with life.

Recognizing the dangers of such conditions, the Rector of the University of Moscow made a few years ago, that is soon after the revolution 1905-6, the very earnest appeal to admit only such students who had enough means to allow them to pursue their studies quietly without being obliged to keep up a continual battle for their very life. The motive for this seemingly hard proposition was that his experiences of long standing had shown him that mental food alone without the proper physical care for the body tends to unbalance the mind of the young people. To make them willing to bear cheerfully everything they must have a real hunger for education, and that was not the case usually.

These malcontent young men were an easy prey for the agents of nihilism.

When my husband was on the Russian Commission on the New England Westinghouse rifle contracts he worked together with a young student of the type just described. He had hungered his way through the university and was full of hatred and bitterness. It was terrible to hear the language he used when speaking of the Tzar or the aristocracy. And when we asked him if he knew many of them he said: "No, but I hate them all." He confessed, or better to say, boasted, after the Bolsheviki had got the upper hand, that he and many of his comrades had had bombs and revolvers in the double drawers of their chests, to be ready for the great day when he would destroy all the foundations of the rotten government and society.

Many of Radicals Recruited from Rich and Well Born Families.

BUT among these apostles of hate were also those young men and women whose very souls thirsted for justice and complete freedom, for opportunities for everyone to be prosperous and happy. Many of these were rich and of high rank but they did not understand that it is not enough to overthrow the existing government or any kind of conditions, to make the whole world content and happy. They completely forgot in their overzeal to take into consideration human nature as it is, not as it ought to be. That every one, not only those "in high places," had to learn first of all the Golden Rule. If this rule would govern in the souls of all men and women there would be no need to wrangle over the kind of government the people ought to have. It would really not matter in the least whether a Tzar, King or President be at the head of a nation so that they represent love and justice.

It was criminal madness to start a revolution in Russia during the war, when the minds of everybody, and especially the masses of the lower classes, were already in such a terrible state of distress, discontentment, fear of the future and disappointment that all our colossal sacrifices had not brought us nearer the longed and hoped for victory and peace. Due to the illiteracy of the great masses—about 80 per cent cannot read or write—they did not know what they were fighting for; against the Germans, that was all they knew, but not why. The Germans had distributed literature through their secret agents and from their airplanes telling the soldiers that they were forced to fight "for the English, French and the American capitalists."

Peasants Ignorant of Causes or Objects of the War.

WHAT did they care for these? They had never seen them. Concerning the ideals of humanity at stake in this war they had not even the shadow of an idea. So when the revolutionary leaders told them to go home as quickly as possible, to be on the spot when all the land in Russia would be distributed to the "rightful owners," that is to the peasants, the soldiers went home as they had been told. They had been told by "clever men who could read" that all the land was their own. That was a good thing to hear and also the right thing because they and all their forefathers had worked the land. And when the old landowners resisted, naturally enough to their understanding, the peasants had to use force to "get their land."

There was no hate in this proceeding, or at least only as an exception, as the Russian character is not cruel in itself. The terrible atrocities committed during the revolution are to be laid more at the door of the scum of the population, the liberated criminals, the Lettish, and Chinese "Red Guards," Lenines, favorite bodyguards and the Jews, who retaliated for the persecutions they had suffered, and also to those peasants and workingmen made wild and irresponsible by liquor which they had not had under prohibition.

The peasants, and they are by far the majority, do not care a rap for politics. Their chief interest is to be let alone quietly to work their fields and to sell their products at a good price and no government which chance with them. The peasants have a chance wit hthem. The peasants have a kind of personal feeling for the things they raise with their own hands with so much care and trouble and they have no intention of sharing them with others on the basis of a socialistic government. Again and again the papers brought reports from Russia telling of the uprisings of the peasants against the Bolsheviki because these requisitioned their grain or their livestock-as belonging to the state. That had never been done by the Tzarish government, the government always paid when it had to requisition something, and only during the time of war, never in peace times. It happened that the valuation of the things taken was not quite satisfactory or just, and sometimes the owners had to wait quite a time until they got the payment, but the principle was that the owners had the right to an adequate payment. The peasant class is the most conservative element, except those of the aristocracy and bourgeois of the extreme right wing. The Bolsheviki will find this out if they have not done so already. I think that many of our peasants are remembering with a heavy heart the days when the "Little Father" still ruled Russia! I am fully persuaded that the great masses of our people are sick of the Bolsheviki government and that they are only held down by ruthless and brutal force.

In oen sense the Rusian common people

THE INSPIRED VOTE—A POLITICAL STORY.

franchise a just one—and most reasonable?"

"I cannot say I do, Mr. Davis!" Blake's heart was leaping in a choked soft of way. "Your rates are exorbitant for the first thing, and second, for a twenty-year extension of your franchise you are offering a third under the new company's promise."

"Those are your views, are they, Mr. Blake? You are prejudiced against us—and intend voting as your friends demand?"

"Absolutely!"

"And after that—after you have played the cat's paw for these same friends and stepped out of office—what then? What will they do for you?"

"I expect nothing!"

"Quite so!" Davis calmly dropped his cigar into the ash-tray. After a moment of silence he resumed. "See here, Blake, let's talk man to man! My company is acting fair and square with you and with every citizen in Milltown. We want a renewal of our franchise. It means a great deal to us. It will mean a great deal to you, too!"

Their eyes mirrored and held. Davis, cool, deliberate, frank, facing a crisis he had worked up to and expected; Blake, young, plainly nervous, his face flushed, not quite positive of the other's intentions.

"I say it will mean a great deal to you, Blake!" Davis repeated firmly. "Let's look at it in a fair light. You have two masters; the friends who elected you, and our company! The first one can offer you nothing for carrying out their wishes—nothing except a pitiful salary of $1200 a year! The latter, our company, can offer you a cool—"

Blake was to his feet now, hands clenched, breathing hard. The meaning came like a blow. He felt the hot blood pounding in his ears, sweeping down through his cheeks and neck.

"Stop that!" he choked. "I don't want to listen farther. I'm beyond all your bribes. You get out of here—right now! Understand me? I don't want to listen!"

Davis smiled but ignored the command.

"We want your vote, Blake. We need it! I'm not offering you a bribe! I merely want you to see the wisdom of my remarks. Vote for our renewal, and one hour after that you and your wife can be on the way to Colorado!"

"Why—damn you! What do you mean? My wife—?"

"Just that." Davis arose and faced the trembling young man. "Your wife! I saw your doctor this morning, and he told me how matters stood. Your wife can't live three more months in this low altitude! The West will cure her! You haven't the money—or won't have it within the time. It'll cost at least $5000!"

Blake lifted his fists as if to strike the other.

"Get out! Get out of here—before I forget and hit you!" His voice was high-pitched and unnatural.

"A year in Colorado, with the very best of nursing, the very best of everything, the clean air—and with you beside her—why, man alive, she'll be a new woman!"

Blake tried to speak, but somehow his tongue failed him. His face was absolutely colorless. Davis, smiling, put out both hands to his shoulders.

"Why should you hesitate? It is an easy battle. Is there anything more dear to you in the world than your wife? Will your friends help you save her life? Will they send her away? Are you going to sit idly by and watch her fade away, day after day, like some helpless little flower?"

Blake pushed aside the lawyer's arms.

"Davis—" his dry lips struggled frantically with the words—"I'm going . . . to give you . . . just one minute . . . to leave my house!"

The lawyer reached for his hat and stick. "Very well, Mr. Blake! I realize that my proposition was rather—er—sudden, and so, under these circumstances, I cannot accept this decision is final!"

He fumbled in his pocket, brought out a card and placed it face up on the table. "I shall be in my office until 6 o'clock this evening," he resumed. "Good afternoon!"

For fully five minutes, brain whirling, Blake stood in the center of teh little study, his cold fingers gripped at the table edge. An utter silence fell and deepened about him.

Abruptly bringing him back to the world again, came the sharp twist of the doorbell, followed by a whistle. Mechanically he answered. The postman spoke to him pleasantly and handed him a package, securely wrapped and sealed. With staring eyes Blake read the single name in the upper corner. Then the understanding crushed upon him like some pitiless, leaden weight. It was his novel! They were sending it back! They did not want it!

Without an effort, his mind quite clear, he picked it up. He walked firmly back to the hall, took up his hat and went out the door into the street. Half hour later he was back.

"Marjorie, Marjorie," he cried, falling upon his knees and placing his arms about her slim form. "It's come! It's come! They've taken the novel, dear! You're to go away—to Colorado! You're to be well and strong again, dear—well and strong again!"

IV

It was a very grave and judicious council that sat around the long table that Wednesday afternoon before Christmas. They had been in session since noon.

Blake sat, the last of six on his side of the table. His lips were set in a thin, straight line, his face was colorless, his hands fumbled nervously in his lap. Minute by minute he was steeling himself for the final vote that was to come.

At 4 o'clock the president cleared his throat and arose slowly to his feet.

"The final question before the Council this afternoon," he began quietly, "is the plea of the Milltown Gas and Electric Company, at present operating in this city, for a twenty-year renewal of their franchise. Against them a new company, composed of a number of our citizens, has asked for a franchise. The situation before us, then, is whether the old company's franchise be renewed, or, shall the new company be granted a permit to come into the city, thereby cancelling the former plea."

Lengthy discussion followed, all of which Blake listened to dully and lifted no voice.

The voting began amid a pregnant and impressive silence, the men apparently realizing the significance of the question before them. As each name was called by the president the eyes of the rest were riveted upon him. They began from the opposite side of the table. Each man arose to his feet, answered promptly and sank back again.

Nearer and nearer it drew to Blake. Finally it came.

"Mr. Blake, are you in favor of renewing the present company's franchise?" The president repeated the same question for the last time.

A quick, familiar voice rang to his ears. "There is something greater than your love for me, Greg!" Those were Marjorie's words that day of his election!

Like the snapping of a thread his brain cleared. He looked steadily about him at the circle of strained, expectant faces.

"I am not in favor of renewing the present company's franchise, Mr. President," he answered.

V

An hour later, when he had reached the streets, muffled in his big coat, picking his way through the tangle of holiday shoppers, the newsboys were crying the extras.

ROBBER GAS COMPANY
DEFEATED BY COUNCIL.

The new City Council defeats renewal of Militown Gas and Electric Company's franchise! A body blow to the grafters! End of corporation rule! Gregory Blake the man who swung the decision! Milltown's greatest Christmas present!

Blake crumpled the sheet within his fingers and whirled it into the gutter. Praise, praise, praise! And of what avail now? He had done his duty, snapped the corporation chains which had so long galled his city. He had done all of this—and because of it Marjorie was to . . .

He let himself into the study. It was quite dark. He turned on the lights and sank wearily before his desk, pillowing his head upon his arms. Presently a thought flashed to him. He came erect and jerked out the lower drawer. He took up the wrapped manuscript, broke the seals, opened it. As he did so a letter dropped out. With wide, unbelieving eyes he read:

Mr. Gregory Blake:

We are much impressed with your novel and are returning it for certain changes. If you care to follow the instructions given below we shall be glad to offer you $5000 for all serial and book rights.

As to suggestions, we quote as follows—

Blake read no farther. With choking throat and radiant eyes he burst from the room and dashed up the stairs to where Marjorie was awaiting him.

Russia--Monarchy or Republic--Which?

BY BARONESS OTTILY DE ROPP.

[Baroness de Ropp is a member of the Russian aristocracy. For over two hundred years her family was the owner of large estates in Kovno, Lithuania, Western Russia. Prior to that time the family lived in the Baltic provinces of Courland and Livonia. For more than seven hundred years her ancestors had held high offices under the Russian government and the Russian church. Baron de Ropp's great-grandfather was at one time Grand Marshal of Lithuania, which com-understand that it is not enough to overthrow the existing government or any kind of conditions, to make the whole world content and happy. They completely forgot in their overzeal to take into consideration human nature as it is, not as it ought to be. That every one, not only those "in high places," had to learn first of all the Golden Rule. If this rule would govern in the souls of all men and women there would be no need to wrangle over the kind of govern-

The Inspired Vote--A Political Story.

BY ROLAND ASHFORD PHILLIPS.

THE news that he had been elected a member of the City Council seemed to add to Blake's eight and twenty years. Like a tree stripped of its yellow leaves by the wind, so all his youthful fancies, his immature reasonings scampered away. It was as if, for the first time, he had gained a peep into a higher world—a man's world. He began to realize that life held a great many weighty problems. A body of people, friends and neighbors among them, had made him their mouthpiece, and they were going to trust in him.

When the well-wishers had gone, and those who so eagerly congratulated him had grasped his hand for the last time, Blake turned from the door and held out his arms toward his wife.

"I'm—really—elected, Marjorie," he faltered. "Really elected! Why—why it doesn't seem real!"

"They've so much confidence in you, dear," she answered him, her eyes shining, her lips tremulous. "They know they can trust you. This new Council is going to mean so much, so very much, for our town." town."

"Yes," he went on, "I've never known the people to be so interested before. What responsibility rests upon my shoulders! Why, it almost awes me, Marjorie. I—I do so want to make every man who voted for me proud of his choice! I want to gain their respect—prove to them I am worthy of this trust!"

"And you're going to, Greg!"

He held her close beside him as if to gain strength from her slim, tremulous little body. "Of course I am," he repeated.

"And, Greg," she went on, "think how that twelve hundred a year is going to help us! You can be more independent now, can't you? And if those horrid editors don't offer you enough for a story you can ask to have it sent back!"

He laughed, but caught himself, midway. "If—only you were well and strong," he began softly.

"There, there, Greg," she pouted. "That old doctor has set you worrying, hasn't he? I'm never, never going to allow him in this house again!"

"Yes, dear, but he said you—"

She clapped a quick hand across his lips. "You must not talk about me another solitary instant! Why, the very idea! And on the very day you have been selected Councilman, too!"

They went arm in arm into the little den—he loved to call it his study—and for a long, long time they talked and planned and built glorious castles, as men and women always do and always will, more so when under the enchantment of a yet undimmed honeymoon.

Gregory Blake had, from the very start, won success as a writer. His short stories nearly all sold, and at gradually increasing prices; and during the past six months he had completed his first real serious effort—a novel. Still, a human brain is an elusive thing at the best, and a typewriter an unreliable bread winner—in comparison with a trowel or pickax—so despite his frequent acceptances, editor's checks had a mysterious way of being withheld at critical moments. Blake had yet to learn—as all do who tread this path—that the way of an editor passeth understanding.

Therefore the realization of this hundred dollars a month meant everything to him.

The one blight in their first year of married life had been Marjorie's illness. Pneumonia came, and after the struggle the color slipped slowly away from her rounded cheeks, her eyes grew big and hard, and tiny pools of gray shadow crept beneath them.

Blake watched this gradual change for months before he called the doctor.

"Bad in here," the physician announced, gravely tapping his lungs. "Very bad! She must have the best of care—and a change of altitude would be of lasting benefit."

He said other things, too, but Blake kept them locked in his breast.

Under this strain he labored unceasingly upon his novel, and with thumping heart sent it away to the publishers.

They talked of this work that evening at the table.

"It will mean a great deal to me," he said. "It is my first serious thing, Marjorie. I want the world to know that I can do something worth while."

"And won't they?" she questioned, playfully pinching his cheek. "Of course they will, dear. You were meant for a great, wonderful success!"

"And then, if we can get that naughty color back into your cheeks again," he hurried.

"There is something greater than that, Greg," she answered, her voice half serious, half jesting.

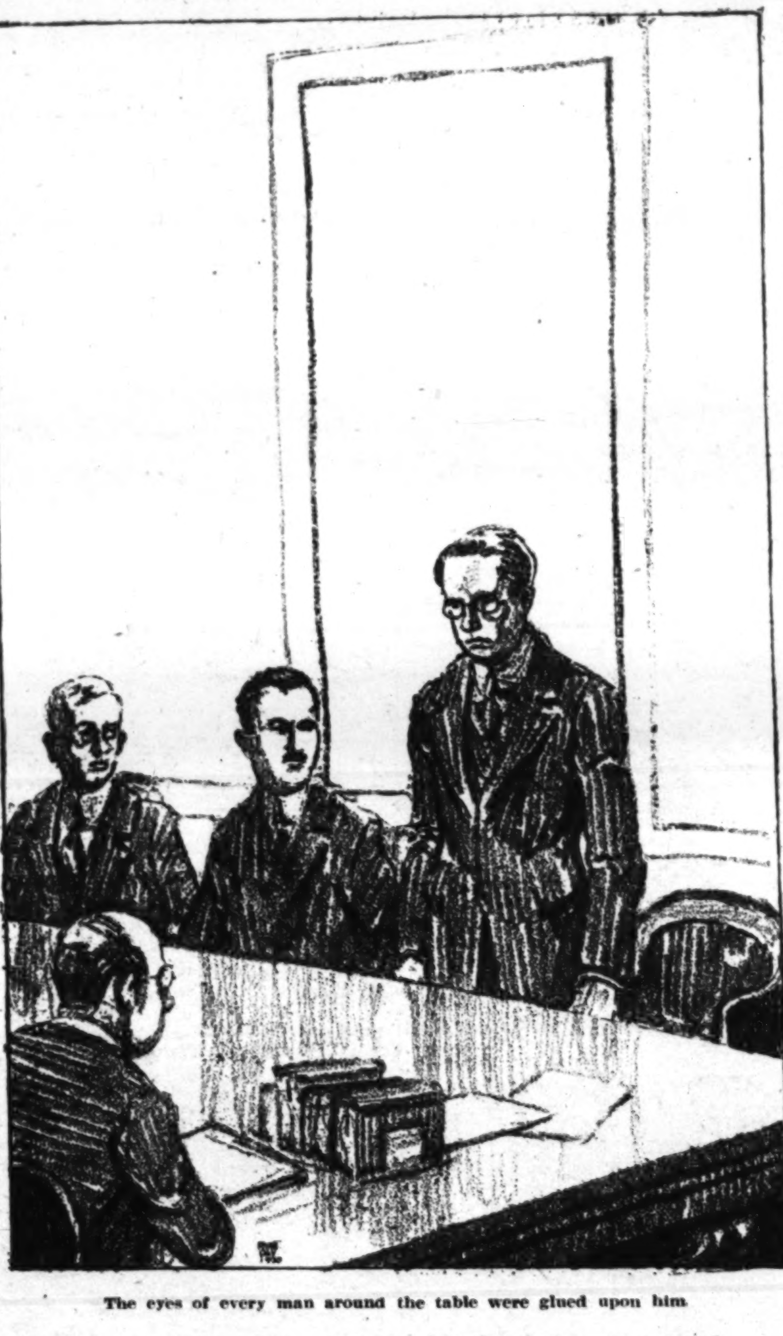
"Greater than my love for you?" he frowned.

She nodded. "You're a public man now, dear. Your duty to your friends should tower above all else!" She took his face between her palms and stared deep, deep into his questioning eyes. "My man could never do any wrong, could he?"

"Never," he laughed, crossing his heart, boy-fashion. "Especially when such a dear little wife believes in him!"

II

In the quiet, sumptuous office of the Milltown Gas and Electric Company two men



The eyes of every man around the table were glued upon him were in deep conversation. One of them, Mr. Hall, president, a short, grayhaired, snapping-eyed old man, held a typewritten list before him. The other, younger, very immaculate in his dress, sat opposite, smoking a cigar.

"This is the complete roster of the new council, eh?" the president was saying. "How've you sized them up, Davis?"

Davis, the company's attorney, took the paper from his superior, placed it before him on the low table and as he mentioned each name checked it off with a white forefinger.

"There's Harvey, Griggs, Dudley, Smith, Conway and Nelson—all our men," he began quietly. "We can rely upon each of them to the last. As you will note, they [illegible] exactly half of the Council. There are six opposed to us. Hamilton, Fisher and Mackey are wealthy men and money is of no consequence to them. Miller is interested heavily in the new light and power company, so he can't be touched, of course. Reese is a personal enemy of yours, so that lets him out!"

Hall, the president, listened narrowly. "Well, that is five. Who is the other one?"

Davis moved his finger down the list. "Gregory Blake! Young man, too, living in my neighborhood. Magazine writer, married, owns his home, and as far as I have been able to fathom out is a straightforward and honest chap!"

The president looked out of the low window into the chill of a December afternoon. "He's our last hope, Davis. There isn't another one we can approach. You say he's young—and just married?"

"Married about a year, I guess."

"A thousand dollars ought to look pretty good to him, don't you think?"

"Possibly." The lawyer's voice was not very enthusiastic. "But this is his first political position and, of course, he is bound to be moved by his friends' advice. Duty and all that sort of stuff, don't you know? Every one of them are dead against us, too!"

"The renewal of our franchise will mean considerably over a million for us, Davis," Hall went on. "We can't afford to allow one man to stand in our way. One man, understand that, Davis? Seems as if everything is going to rest on him. We've six men certain—and we've got to get the seventh! There are no ifs or buts or maybes about it. We have got to have him! . . . Offer him five thousand cash!"

Still Davis remained dubious.

"I might try it, but—"

The president flung out his hands with a gesture of annoyance. "Good heavens, five thousand cash ought to be a gold mine to a Councilman with a $1200 salary," he broke out. "I've found in my career, that a little cash is the open sesame to about every door. What's your opinion?"

"Mine's the same, of course," Davis instantly agreed. "But I've been watching this Blake ever since his nomination and I haven't so far found a likely loophole."

"You've got around greater obstacles than this, Davis," the president came back sharply. "That's why we've been glad to pay you your 10,000 a year! You can't fall back on us at this critical time!"

Davis came to his feet with the cigar clenched tightly between his teeth and paced slowly back and forth across the office floor. The gray winter twilight had already dimmed the room.

As a confidential lawyer at a comfortable salary Davis had been fighting these identical knotty problems for the past ten years. Until today he had never admitted himself defeated. He had been the one port in the storm, and at the present time the greatest kind of a storm threatened the Milltown Gas and Electric Company. A new, independent company, backed by some of the town's oldest citizens, had asked for a franchise; against this the old company was fighting for a twenty-year renewal. Either one or the other must back down.

Suddenly Davis stood still and set his teeth so hard together that the cigar was severed and dropped unheeded to the floor.

"By heavens!" he broke out. "Why haven't I thought of it before? I've got it! I've got it! Blake will come over on our side, Mr. Hall!"

A broad smile lighted up the president's face.

"That's good! Thought you'd rake up something! Let's hear the plan!"

But Davis only put out a hand. "I've never fallen down on a thing yet, have I? Always carried a thing straight through to the end when I said I would, haven't I?"

The president agreed that this was so.

"Then trust me! I'll call on Blake tomorrow afternoon. When I'm through with him I'll see you. So don't worry. Blake's our man, and as he's the seventh, our renewal is as good as won!"

III

Gregory Blake was plainly surprised to have call upon him, the following afternoon, the well-known attorney for the Milltown Gas and Electric Company. After they were seated in the study and Davis had offered cigars the conversation was opened immediately.

"As a member of the new City Council, Mr Blake," Davis began, "I trust that you are looking upon all the matters that are to be decided upon by the board in a fair and unprejudiced light!"

"I am making every effort to, yes, sir!"

"Quite right. A man in public life and holding so much power must not only look upon the surface of things, but must delve deep into the very heart, as it were. Also he must weigh both sides in the balance." He cleared his throat.

"I believe you are in favor of granting this new company their franchise in the place of renewing ours, am I not correct?" he continued bluntly.

Blake nodded. "I am but the mouthpiece of my citizen friends who elected me"—frankly—"and they feel as if the new company will be of greater advantage to the town."

Davis removed his cigar and eyed it reflectively.

"And your reward for these—er—valuable services is what, may ask?"

"Reward?" Blake frowned. "I have yet to hear of rewarding one for doing his duty!"

The lawyer's eyes lifted. "This is your first public position, I believe?"

"Yes, sir, my first."

Again Davis mused, rolling the black cigar between his firm, white fingers.

"The Milltown Gas and Electric Company is a well-known and well-respected corporation, Mr. Blake, and has made every effort to please the citizens of the town. We have, within the past ten years, spent over a million dollars in this district. Don't you think we deserve a small amount of credit? Don't you consider our plea for the renewal of our examined for the bones of the departed relative. If these are found they are taken up and buried; if they are not, they consider it a closed incident, for the death has been avenged. It is the old Mosaic law of an eye for an eye. When undisturbed the reptiles bask in the sun on the sandy or muddy banks of the streams, with their mouths wide open. I am told by the natives that they do this for the purpose of allowing a species of snipe to pick particles of food from their teeth. This they certainly do, for the thing has come under my personal observation. The little birds enter the wide open jaws and peck at the teeth without the slightest fear of the great jaws closing upon them.

THE HEAD HUNTERS OF DARKEST BORNEO.

A Two-weeks' Continuous Journey Bring-Us to Destination.

FROM Behan we started out on what proved to be the most arduous trip I have ever experienced. First there was two weeks' continuous journey in the praus up small streams that every now and then were dammed with fallen trees which barred our progress and necessitated long portages. Finally the travel by stream became so slow that I determined to leave the waterways and to proceed on foot. We stopped at a little kampong named Makakoi, where we secured the aid of the Dyaks in transporting our equipment to the next kampong, and others from there to the next, thus moving in relays into the most inaccessable region of Borneo. It took fifty men to carry the outfit which though bulky, was fairly light, weighing only 1500 pounds. In this locality the country is broken by many ridges and the jungle pathway, scarcely discernable in most places with new growth, seems to wander through the most rugged part of it. There are little paths leading through the jungle in all directions. These are game trails that are soon usurped by the natives. The terrific heat makes the going heart-breaking and a hard day's march results in less than twenty miles progress. Innumerable small streams have to be crossed, some by means of fallen logs and most of them by wading, though they are seldom more than waist deep. It is in these marches that one becomes acquainted with the jungle leech. Unlike the leeches of our previous acquaintance these fasten themselves on twigs and the leaves of the shrubs that grow close to the ground and continually weave to and fro, awaiting the opportunity to attach themselves to anything of flesh and blood that passes within their reach. These leeches become a terrible pest, for they penetrate the slightest crevice in the clothing and unless discovered as soon as they fasten upon one, make nasty sores that bleed for some time afterward. Infections from excessive perspiration are frequent where one fails to properly sterilize the wounds they leave.

On the afternoon of the ninth day from Makakoi I heard a faint thrumming sound in the distance as of a somewhat discordant marimbaphone. The sound seemed to come from everywhere, which is an illusion peculiar to the closed jungle. Previous to this I had noticed small conical holes all along the path as though a party of men armed with sharp-pointed staves had passed that way. My speculation as to the cause was soon to be answered, for soon the thrumming became more distinct and at a slightly open spot on the pathway I came upon a group of seven men each carrying a long bamboo pole, on the lower end of which there was fastened a heavy piece of pointed wood, while at the upper end there was affixed a resonant tube containing a plunger that brought forth the sound when the instrument was raised and dropped forcibly upon the ground. The Dyak musical scale consists of seven notes. Each of the instruments used by this strange orchestra was carefully attuned to harmonize.

Dyaks Have Weird Music to Welcome Stranger.

AS I was somewhat in advance of the rest of the party I sat down upon a fallen trunk and listened to the weird music which they were playing as a sort of "welcome to our city." A further walk of thirty minutes brought us to Hanagan, a typical Dyak long house of ten doors, built on piles about twelve feet in height and housing ninety persons. As this was the place in which I had decided to stay for the ensuing month, we immediately sought out the chief and soon were comfortably quartered in one end of the long veranda, directly in front of the part of the house occupied by the chief and his immediate family.

At least thirty dogs, chickens without number and a couple of tame monkeys had the freedom of the entire house and made the day and night hideous with their sudden brawls which were of momentary occurrence. Every time a dog got within foot reach of one of the inmates he was kicked out of the way, and I have seen on many occasions, a dog kicked the whole length of the gallery in making his escape to a place at one end or the other where there were no natives at the time. Each man would kick the poor beast to the next one and each kick would be punctuated with wild yelps, that first excited sympathy and then annoyance. The natives were at first a little shy, but after a time when they saw that we were thoroughly at home (to all visible appearances) they came to us and we talked as well as we could in Malay.

The home life of the Dyak is a decidedly primitive proceeding. When one stops to consider that here in one house of ten rooms, or doors, as they call the apartments, live ninety people one can realize the lack of privacy with all that it entails. Cooking is done in a room that is also a common sleeping room for the younger generations, and is done over an open fire of sticks, a miniature bonfire built upon a clay rectangle that occupys one corner of the room. Scattered around the place are the various utensils of home construction that are used in the daily life of the family. Here also one finds the Dyak's most prized possession, the game rooster, several of which are tethered at intervals along the walls. The oldest couple in the family enjoy separate quarters, which consists of a thin curtain of bark cloth or in some cases a solid partitioned-off room. In the case of the latter all the family wealth is stored in this room. A Dyak's wealth is measured by the number and quality of old stone jars he possesses. These seem to be of Chinese origin and though they do not import them at present they were imported some hundreds of years ago by the Chinese traders who cover the whole Asiatic Archipelago.

Udai, son of Tama, chief of the Seong Dyaks, and author (W. F. Alder.)

Children Go Naked, But Women Dress Modestly.

BEAUTIFULLY woven grass mats form the only beds used. In doing the daily round of work the Dyaks wear only a breech cloth made of bark fiber, but the women always wear a sarong, a simple garment, made of a single straight piece of cloth, wound about them and covering the body from the bust to the knees. The young women cover the breasts, but the older ones do not bother. The children run around naked, the girls donning sarongs somewhat earlier than the boys their clouts. The girl first wears clothes at about 7 years, though up to this age she may wear a little silver, or even gold, heart-shaped plate hung around the loins by a twisted fiber. This custom is undoubtedly borrowed from the early Chinese traders.

The second day of our stay in Hanagan the chief ordered a feast in our honor and soon the Long House become filled with guests from the neighboring kampongs. They started the festivities with an indescribably weird chant that impressed one with a vague and wistful melancholy. The natives of Hanagan seated themselves in a great circle around a garland-decorated trunk that stood in the clearing before the long house and their guests gathered on the outside of the circle standing erect. There was an air of suppressed excitement in the assembly that found its climax when an old crone, stepping into the circle swung into the measured cadence of the Dyak head dance. She carried in one hand a live fowl and in the other dry unhusked rice. Swinging around the circle she sprinkled the rice over the heads of the onlookers, at the same time touching each with the fluttering body of the fowl.

She broke into a wild eyrie chant, her movements became faster till she was whirling around in a fit of wild hysteria that moved the silent throng to murmurs of excitement. Then slowly twisting the live fowl by the neck, she tore the head from its quivering body and thrust the red spouting fountain to her lips, drinking to the last the warm blood of the luckless creature. As she did this the Dyaks now howling and shrieking, rose and formed in a mad dancing cordon around her. A dried human head, taken in some previous foray, bounced into the circle, thrown there by someone on the outer fringe of the churning mass and the crone seized it, pressing it to her lips, then as if to show her contempt for one killed in battle, she spat upon it and whirled off again in the mad estascy of the dance. Soon she passed it to a Dyak, who also spat upon it, and in turn passed it on until it had gone the round of the whole circle. When the last Dyak received it he tossed it to the ground at the feet of the old woman, who sank exhausted in a dead faint.

Leaving the old woman to recover as best she could, the chief entered the circle and picked up the head. Then forming a procession, he led all to the river, where the women who had children were gathered for the baptismal ceremony. It is customary with the Dyaks to baptize the children with water dripped from the head of a fallen foe who died bravely in battle. This is supposed to make the boys great warriors and the girls mothers of brave men.

After the weird ceremony we returned to the long house to a belated breakfast and to prepare for a trip to a neighboring kampong the next day.

RUSSIA.

are not patriotic in so far as they do not know what patriotism really means, that is the love of the whole country as one single block so to say, nor far less as representing a certain order of national principles or ideals. For the illiterate men Russia means in the first place his own village, county, state and then the Tzar. They always looked on things from a purely personal and if you like to call it so, from a kind of sentimental standpoint. They call their country "Little Mother Russia" (Matushka Rossija;) the river which flows from one end of European Russia to the other, "Matushka Volga," the Tzar the "Little Father."

How can these big children be supposed to love a President of whom they have never heard anything before and who will be changed in three or four years or perhaps in a few weeks or months. Hardly will they have heard of him in their remote villages through some "clever man who can read the papers" and somebody else sits perhaps already in his place! A peasant can understand that the affairs of his village, county and perhaps even his state are managed by men whom he knows or has heard of, chosen by him and his acquaintances, but he can see no reason why a certain Kerensky, Lenine or Trotzky should have the power to rule Russia and take away from the peasants things which "belong to us."

And Democracy! Why, I doubt very much if even the half of our people have heard this word, not to speak of understanding what it really means. And until that blessed time, and not until then it is our innermost belief that Russia ought to have a Constitution and a "Decorative Tzar" an emblem of a united and powerful Russia, something like the King in England or Belgium, a government responsible to the people but on the throne of Russia a man whom we still could call in our hearts the "Little Father."

Very Welcome.

Charlie and his three sisters had been to visit a relative in the country. Though the invitation had only been for a week, their stay was gradually lengthened to a month. In fact, the uncle was beginning to fear it was going to be a permanent infliction. But eventually they went.

"Well," asked the father, upon the return of his offspring, "was your uncle glad to see you?"

Charlie's face lit up with delight at the question.

"Glad!" he echoed. "Uncle glad! Why, dad, he wanted to know why we didn't bring you, mother, the maid, cat, the canary and the goldfish!"—[Tit-Bits.

SAID THE LADY TO LARRY O'GORMAN.

affairs—even the young ones—these days. Hope you're standing in well enough to get a boost!" The clerk was then called back to his duties by a guest.

Larry set his elbows on his knees and propped his chin in his hands, never moving his eyes from the closed door.

Being a man after an impulsive girl's own heart in the poetry of romance was all right enough—maybe! Even in the case of a Virabell! But business was business when it came to the hard and fast system of the Great Telos! He had been swaggering before a stockholder, laying off men, guaranteeing wages, and had boasted to her, not five minutes before, that a crew that ought to be toting supplies was serving as escort for a captured bride and an involuntary Lochinvar!

"It's all right whilst the whir of it all is in the noddle of her! But later the colleen will cool and her folks will mind themselves o' the money part. It's the way of 'em from the city! A boost, said he! A bump, says I."

When she came hurrying out to O'Gorman her face was alight with the ecstacy of success; but she stopped in the little frisk of a dance she did before him and was plainly daunted by the lugubrious sag of his countenance as he struggled up and made his obesiance.

"Are you ill, Mr. O'Gorman?"

"I am hearty, Miss Virabell, sir—esquire—no—no, I know naught what I say. It's only that ye're me boss and—"

"Oh pshaw! That has nothing to do with the wonderful thing you and I have managed! Listen and smile, or else I'll be tempted to box your ears. Come along here, Gov.. Nicolin! I want you to tell Mr. O'Gorman the news. 'Twill sound so good coming from you."

The sachem's face was impassive. But in his eyes glowed unmistakable satisfaction. "My girl will have Tomah Danah for a husband very soon."

"That's no news!" growled Larry, his gloom unpierced.

"Tomah Danah will have a new and very fine set of camps, where he and Zarlona will live and have city boarders who pay well."

"I'll fill his camps with so many rich folks that his place will be paid for in no time," promised Esther, and she gave O'Gorman the benefit of a moue. "These Tarratines!" she murmured. "They are so notional about obligations!"

"The news is not so bad," admitted Larry. "But a good white water man is lost from the Great Telos drive."

Nicolin drew a deep breath. "And Docite Carriveau, with his broken nose—"

O'Gorman leaped forward and smashed down on Nicolin's shoulder the flat of a big palm with a force that knocked both breath and speech out of the astonished Governor. Then the boss seized both of the sachem's hands and danced the offended and crestfallen dignitary around the hotel office in a dizzy rigadoon, to the astonishment of the guests and the shame of the stoical Indian.

"I hape all congratulations on ye!" Larry shouted. When he was at a safe distance away from Esther he rasped in Susep's ear: "Another lisp o' that or aught else what happened and I'll lape astraddle the tongue o' ye and spur ye with spike soled boots from here to Pattagamon."

"But Mr. O'Gorman! One moment," called Esther when the boss had completed an understanding and had moderated his transports. He went to her.

"I want you to have something of your very own to rejoice over. As soon as I can see Uncle Andrew in New York—"

"Your pardon, miss!" he entreated, his eyes glistening. "But there's only one thing I'm looking for'rard to right now!"

"And what is that?"

"I showed Tomah Danah that I was the best man when I downed him and lashed his one foot to t'other. And now that he runs to his wedding, upstanding, as becomes a rale lad of a Lochinvar, who'll be the best man onst again?" He slapped his hand on his breast. "'Tis Larry O'Gorman. I'm looking for-rard to it!"

THE DOORMAT AND THE DOG.

She gave one screech and Elder, hurrying out at the strident crescendo of it, beheld her flying along the road with a wild display of white cotton stockings and old-maidish black boots. Her mouth sagged open with fright and breathlessness, and her bonnet, loosened from its fastenings, flopped upon her heaving shoulders.

Her story caused a commotion in the tiny township. When Elder, his dog left safely locked in the toolshed so that it could not follow him, came down the street that night all sprucely dressed to call, as was his wont, upon the only woman he had ever found courage in all his forty years of life to court, there was an entire absence of the usual joking and barracking at his expense.

Grace Applewood, the woman of his belated affections, was quiet, brown-haired, hazel-eyed and shy as a wood-dryad. It was that shy elusive wood creature quality of hers that had attracted Elder. He loved her deeply, tenderly, bringing into his feeling all the tender fantasies and dreams of his flower-filled days. But in love, his lifelong habit of self-effacement defeated him. His very kindliness and consideration for her was looked upon by this little brown mouse of a woman as proof of the ineffectual weakness of character with which his neighbors credited him.

As is often the case with women of her type, there was something of an atavistic trend to her desires; she dreamed of a hero who would master, not defer to her. Therefore Elder's courtship progressed but slowly. But that did not swerve him from it. He waited with untiring faith for some miracle of miracles to happen.

Nevertheless he was astonished that night when it happened. He listened to her footsteps coming towards him along the passage—the same loved footsteps with their soft lightness of tread. But the woman who came into the room was somehow changed. He could not see the totally new expression upon her face—the half-fearful wholly-fascinated way in which she looked at him; but his ears caught the new accent in her voice.

Like a bird fascinated by a serpent she fluttered about him, leaning closer and closer to his wooing, until lured by her yielding like any greedy snatchy hulky cave-man he caught her into his arms.

"I didn't know you were so strong," she confided blissfully, as half afraid of his own temerity he held her close. And then her arms stole shyly up about his hither-to unembraced neck.

Had a comet suddenly frisked its tail across his eyes he could not have been more astonished. But he liked it—he liked it.

"You are going to marry me," he asserted, boldly turning her blushing face to his.

"Yes," she agreed in tremulous yielding.

In the late moonlight of that night Elder went home, his heart surcharged with happiness. All night he lay awake brooding over his joy. All next day he sang and whistled about his work. His happiness seemed somehow to communicate itself to Nero, for the animal galloped and frisked like a young rollicking puppy about him, dashing off in sudden little quests here and there and prancing back again to muzzle its nose against his hand.

No neighbors or marauding tramps, no bad small boys disturbed their rapsodies. But towards sunset there was a little commotion at the gate. Elder going forward to investigate stood staring blinkishly at a group of strangers armed with rifles, with a background of excited neighbors in their rear.

"We are looking for the escaped lion," grandiloquently announced a member of the local police. "It was last seen in your garden. Can you tell us in what direction it went?"

"No," answered the astounded Elder. "It cannot have been in my garden. My dog would have growled had there been a strange beast about."

"It was seen here," persisted the police officer. "It escaped from the circus train last week when its cage was broken open in the collision with the goods trucks. It's been at large ever since, and search parties have been out for it all over the country. These gentlemen are looking for it now," he explained, indicating the armed men. "We'd better search that undergrowth beyond your orchard. There is plenty of cover for it there. And if you value your dog, you had [illegible] much chance with a lion."

At that moment Nero, himself, strolled round in search of his master. At sight of the crowd he crouched snarling savagely.

"Look out, man! It's going to spring," yapped a voice and a brawny arm sent Elder spinning aside. At the same moment something whizzed through the air, and settled down over the body of the crouching animal. Nero leaped into the air and then fell clutching and clawing at the net that entangled him.

Elder yanked his arm from the hand that still held it and, before any one could prevent him, was beside the struggling animal striving to free it from the toils of the net.

"What are you doing," he demanded of the intruders, with real anger for once upon his face. "Let my dog go!"

"Dog! Man, are you crazy? It's a lion."

"A lion!" said Elder in utter bewilderment, gazing down short-sightedly at the great struggling body at his feet.

Thereafter Elder no longer filled the position of doormat. He was elevated to heroic rank.

His neighbors, one and all, concluded that a man strong enough and fearless enough to keep a vicious lion as pet could be by no means the ineffectual personality they had deemed him. Public opinion veering to the other extreme, he was deferred to and mentally kowtowed to, much to his own amazement. For the same reason that his neighbors deferred to him, his little wood-dryad of a wife adored him. Even the small boys [illegible] guardian such a man might adopt next. Clearly prudence was the better part of valor even when peaches were ripe.

Of course no one believed that Elder had not known the animal was a lion.

"All bosh," scoffed the young men of the neighborhood. "That tale was a blind; he thought he was going to get into trouble with the law for keeping a wild beast at large—one that wasn't his own either. He's a cute one, he is!"

Within a Convent Garden.

Within a convent garden
The sweetest roses blow,
Blooming for the sunshine
In a silence pure as snow.

When the Angelus is ringing
Dawn has kissed each flower,
Filled it with the sweetest honey
And gay butterflies for dower.

Somber corners filled with cypress
Where the lightest footsteps glide
Through the vineyards on the hill slopes,
Where the purple clusters hide.

This rose bower is enchanted,
Air is filled with saddened dreams,
Dreams that perished 'ere the waking
In this world where joy but seems.

Sway, oh censors of bloom,
Filled with divine fragrance!
Embrace the gray of cloistered walls
Where rings the requiem of romance.

REPRESENTATIVE TINKHAM, at a dinner in Washington, held up his hand when a prohibition argument broke out at the end of the table. The combatants, silenced, looked at him interrogatively. He said:

"A prohibition argument always reminds me of the Smythes.

"John," said Mrs. Smythe, "if we were both young and single again would you ask me to be your wife, the same as you did in the moonlight on the ocean pier that summer night?"

"Now, my love," said Smythe, squirming uneasily in his chair, "now, my love, just when we've settled down for a pleasant evening, what's the good of your trying to start something?"

The Realist's Vision.

J. JEFFERSON JONES, the New York publisher, said to a realistic novelist the other day:

"No, my boy, I can't bring out your novel. Your novel is realism, and realism is what the American public won't accept. Why? Because realism tells unpleasant truths.

"Realism is like an infant terrible I know. A gentleman was calling on this urchin's pretty mother. The gentleman had an odd swastika ring on his finger, and he held out his hand, palm downward to show the ring to the infant.

"What do you see there?" he said.

The infant terrible looked coldly at the back of the gentleman's hand, then answered.

"Freckles and brown hair."

Couldn't Lose.

SENATOR BORAH, discussing the Senate's rejection of the Peace Treaty, said at a luncheon:

"The President flouted the Senate. Why on earth did he do so when he knew that the Senate had, after all, the last word?

"The Senate in fact, flouted or not flouted, was in the position of little Jimmy Brown.

"Little Jimmy Brown, a paper parcel under his arm, stood watching a game of ball in a vacant lot.

"'Hurry home, Jimmy!' said a kind old gentleman. 'Hurry home, or you'll be late for dinner.'

"'No, I won't,' said Jimmy, tapping his paper parcel. 'I got the meat for dinner right here.'"

And Stiff Prices.

"THE French are very ignorant of America."

The speaker was Gen. Horace Townsend. He went on:

"I had in Tours a French servant girl who was preparing to migrate to our shores. In buying her outfit she wanted to go in heavily for furs and fur linings but I said to her:

"'Why so many furs? It isn't as cold as that in the United States.'

"'Indeed it is, then,' said the girl, and she tossed her head. 'You can't fool me, monsieur le general. Isn't it the United States that all our frozen meat comes from?'"

Very Capable.

SECRETARY DANIELS holding a glass of lime juice approvingly up to the light, said at a dinner in Washington:

"Navies are different today from what they used to be. A man was talking to an old sailor. The sailor said:

"'Yes, sir, my boss was in the navy, too.'

"'In the navy was he?' said the man. 'What was his official capacity, may I ask?'

"'Four or five quarts, sir,' said the old sailor."

The Bachelor Tax.

GEORGE ADE, apropos of the French bachelor tax of 10 per cent, said at the Chicago Athletic Club:

"This tax will no more cause bachelors to link up than the remark of old Lush did.

"'Young man,' said old Lush, 'you ought to marry. A cosy home, a loving wife, beautiful children—there's nothing like it on earth. And then, above all, you have the sweet recollection of your jolly bachelor days.'"

Work Poor..

CHARLES M. SCHWAB at one of his Loretto dinner parties was talking about a man who was vainly beseeching the banks for a loan.

"He's a rich man too," said Mr. Schwab; "but he's work poor."

"Work poor?" said a guest.

"Yes, work poor," Mr. Schwab repeated "You see, he's always got so many operations in hand that he's always short of money to finance them. Work poor I call it." Then he smiled and added:

"He's one of those fellows who dig so much that they're always in a hole."

What's the Use?

CORTLANDT BLEECKER, the New York clubman, said at the Ritz:

"I have just come from a spring display of new gowns. The gowns were superb—daring, you know, but superb. The mankins who wore them were also superb—lovely girls of 18 or 19 summers. But the women who bought those superb, those daring gowns—"

Mr. Bleecker made a gesture of hopelessness and disgust.

"Pshaw, what's the use," he said, "of old hens wearing chick clothes?"

Birth Controlled.

MRS. CORNELIUS VAN TASSEL of Cleveland said the other day, apropos of a woman who had been sent to jail for preaching birth control.

"Preaching birth control in this part of the world is carrying coals to Newcastle with a vengeance.

"I was engaging a maid the other day, and, remembering my six little ones, I said to the applicant:

"'Do you understand children?'

"'Oh, no, madam,' said she. 'I've only worked in the best families.'"

Paradise at Last.

THE gob was on shore leave and happy because he had found a girl as affectionate as he. His joy was dimmed, however, for a bluecoat had forbidden spooning in the park and his girl had tabooed it in the streets.

But life took on a new turn when he saw a man kiss his wife farewell in front of the Pennsylvania station, New York. He rushed his girl toward a crowd hurrying toward the Philadelphia express and bade her a fond farewell. When the crowd thinned they joined a throng for Washington and repeated the act. They repeated it again before the Chicago train.

This was too much for a colored porter who had been watching. He stepped up to the gob. "Boss," he said, "why don't you go downstairs and try the Long Island station? Dem trains am a-leavin' mos' all de time?"

Touring Europe.

AS THE powerful motor car dashed along the French country road in a smother of dust and fumes, the owner leaned toward the chauffeur and yelled out:

"Where are we now?"

"Just running into Paris, sir!" roared the man at the wheel.

The owner of the car shook his head irritably.

"Oh, don't bother about little details!" he shrieked back. "I mean what country?"

Human Pretzel.

PAT was employed as a hodcarrier during the new building operations. One morning he happened to be late. Putting on his clothes in haste he hurried away without noticing that he had put on his overalls hind side to. Arriving at the works just in time, he was soon climbing the ladder with his first hod of brick, but half way up he fell to the ground.

His mates rushed to the rescue. "Are you hurt?" they asked.

Pat opened his eyes and for a moment gazed wonderingly at his own legs. "No, bedad," he said, "but I've had a terrible twist."

Her Opportunity.

"MY GOOD WOMAN," said the learned judge, "you must give an answer in the fewest possible words of which you are capable to the plain and simple question whether, when you were crossing the street with the baby on your arm and the jitney was coming down on the right side and the taxicab on the left, and the carriage was trying to pass the jitney, you saw the plaintiff between the carriage and the taxicab or whether and when you saw him at all, and whether or not near the carriage, taxicab or jitney, or either, or any two, and which of them respectively, or how it was."

Lifting the Lid.

"MARIA!" roared Mr. Gayboy, "Where on earth is my hat?"

"I am sure I do not know," retorted his wife, coldly, still showing signs of the family scene which had marked hubby's return home in the wee small hours.

"You ought to," snorted the man. "I can't keep a thing about this house. It's a shame the way things disappear without any apparent reason! I would just like to know where that hat is!"

"So would I," replied the lady meaningly. "You didn't have it on when you came home last night."

Had a Bath, Anyway.

WHILE expounding to his wife the alleged fact that men are able to control their tempers better than women, Mr. Hinks fell over the cat and nearly broke his neck.

"That settles it," he hissed. "I've often threatened but now I'll drown that brute!"

His wife begged him to be merciful and calm, but his mind was made up.

Accordingly he placed the offending feline, along with two large stones, in an old flour sack, and hastened upon his murderous errand. On reaching the canal, he threw in the bag with such vigor that he overbalanced and fell into the muddy water. After struggling for half an hour and incidentally drinking considerable dirty water, he returned home wet and weary.

At the door sat the cat to welcome him.

"Well, of all—!" exclaimed Hinks. "Why I drowned the brute!"

"I don't think so," said his wife, as she let him in. "You were in such a temper you didn't give me time to tell you that there was a hole in that bag."

Beating the Tax.

A SLIGHT, but entirely satisfying method of repaying the government in a tiny degree for the birth of the income tax, the thousand and one other taxes and prohibition, has been discovered by those who have been actively on the watch for just such an opportunity.

In the automat restaurants in New York, at the ice cream sections, are placed glass globes bearing the signs:

"If you have ice cream without a meal, drop one cent war tax in here. Heavy penalty for neglecting."

And there is where the revenge, so to speak, comes in. Those persons who feel that they have not been used properly, have their ice cream, but nary a cent goes into the little glass globe. Flushed with happiness and with a triumphant light in their eyes, you may see them daily. With them the world is right. The power that soaked them last March 15 is being soaked in turn. Their happiness, however, is not entirely unalloyed. One was heard to say yesterday, as he was explaining his triumph to a friend:

"But I don't know whether I'll be able to stand up under it; I've eaten so much ice cream lately that my digestion is going back on me."

Even at Last.

MOTHER was very fond of teasing Ethel, her 3-year-old daughter. It amused her to see those eyes flash with rage.

But it wasn't having a good effect on Ethel. It was making her very sharp and bitter tongued.

One day mother picked up the new puppy, cuddling it in her arms like an infant, and asked: "Look, Ethel, how do you like my new baby?"

But she didn't smile at the small girl's retort: "It's 'zactly like its muvver!"

Rather Jocular.

THE judge made jokes, the witnesses looked weary, the counsel declaimed and cross-examined, the twelve good men and true twiddled their thumbs, and the usher ushered whenever necessary. Altogether it was a model court of law.

"Now, ma'am," cried the cross-examining K. C., "was the defendant's air when, as you allege, he promised to marry you, perfectly serious, or was it, on the contrary, jocular and full of levity?"

"It was all ruffled," replied the plaintiff, "with 'im running' 'is ands through it."

SAID THE LADY TO LARRY O'GORMAN.

a plaintive word, O'Gorman sent the matron and the maiden on their way, showering them with good-bys and good wishes.

"Ut's aye a headstrong mon he is, wi' high conceit of his ainsel,'" Angus ventured to comment. "I'd not trust his judgment—" He broke off in order to adjust the canoe which had been tossed upon his shoulders by the boss with scant care for the guide's comfort.

Esther gasped and slowed her pace with the air of one about to abandon an enterprise.

"His judgment" continued the guide, "on matters connected wi the gr-rand meenstreelsy o' Scotland. But on the ways o' men—and on his opeenion o 'mesel' as a braw man wi' a canoe—and in doing the deed he says he'll do, he's toler-r-rably richt!"

The dea ex machina went on with a better display of confidence.

The beauties of the ten miles of placid river below the Devilbrew, on the way to Pattagamon, interested Mrs. Jocelyn: she and Angus did all the talking: Esther was allowed to busy herself with her thoughts. She was comforted and encouraged in spite of her doubts! Mr. O'Gorman seemed to be sure of himself and of the right way to manage Tomah Danah!

Rounding a great bend in the river, they saw Pattagamon. The thrust of the chapel's steeple from among the willows and from the huddle of the little houses did not suggest to Esther the consolations of religious peace: that spire was a warning finger, like the finger that the Governor had raised the day before. "Here, this night, is to be wedded the daughter of Gov. Nicolin of the Tarratines," the steeple seemd to signal. "Let no meddlesome pale face interfere," it warned.

"I'm glad I came," confided Mrs. Jocelyn amiably. "You were lucky to have an invitation that would include me, Esther, dear. It's going to be so picturesque, and such a lovely experience, I'm sure!"

Miss Virabell was not at all sure. But she informed herself that, in spite of his title, Susep Nicholin was only a squatty man who wore ready-made clothes and a hard hat. Of course, there was his Indian pride, and all that, but he had distinctly stated his reason—his sole and especial reason—why he would not have Tomah Danah as son-in-law. Her plan, so Esther induced herself to believe, would take care of his objection. Talk of ten people? Surety there could not be much more talk than had been stirred by a girl's flight on the day set for the wedding! Another postponement, and even another bridegroom, would not make much more opportunity for gossip.

Angus displaying his ability as a canoeman, made a gallant spurt of the last stage of the journey, for there was a considerable crowd of observers on the shore, near the landing place.

The ranks of the people opened when the canoe surged up to the float with froth at the prow. Gov. Susep Nicolin walked through the press and stood at the edge of the shore, his hands outstretched to assist Esther from the canoe.

But this was Gov. Nicolin in the sachem garb of the Tarratines— the festival dress of his forefathers. The eagle feathers towered from the fillet that bound his hair. Esther stared up at him from the canoe and wondered how it was that he had grown so tall; her eyes were dazzled by the dash of the rays of the setting sun reflected from the cuirass of his beaded jacket.

"You are welcome to the wedding, mamselle."

He helped her to step from the canoe; he assisted Mrs. Jocelyn and bowed when Esther stammered an introduction. "All are welcome to Pattagamon today."

The girl instantly realized that if she hesitated, if she waited to weigh the pro against the con, if she paused to take full account of stock of this new personage, her cause was lost. She lashed her flagging courage with the limp things of her natural impulsiveness. "Gov. Nicolin, may I have a few words with you in private?"

He led the way to a knoll and the two of them stood on the crest of it. The people gazed up at them from below.

"It doesn't seem so very private," complained Esther.

"They will not hear."

"Of course, you know, it's about Zariona. That's why I am here. I have a plan."

"That plan—it means she marries Tomah Danah?"

"Yes! But listen!"

"I have no ears for such a plan, mam'selle. No!" He put up his hand.

"But this is business."

"Business at Pattagamon waits till after the wedding! I have given orders. I set the example." He waved his hand, directing her attention to the throng of idlers.

"May I talk with Zariona?"

"After the wedding."

"Will you then listen to—"

"After the wedding, mam'selle! Now I go. Have much to do." He turned his back on her and started down the mound. The eagle feathers, horrent in his crest and trailing to his heels in a double row, his manner, all his dress, made him something almost unreal in Esther's new estimate of him. Arguing with that personage seemed to be like trying to beat sense into a picture in a book!

Esther, with all those upturned eyes circling her, was stricken with stage fright. The Indians continued to survey her as if they expected her to make a speech! That embarrassing situation in itself was enough to put a girl to flight! But the thought of the mental torture she would suffer by remaining to behold the poor victim sacrificed to Decite Carriveau was a stronger compelling motive for retreat.

Esther ran down to Angus, who was carefully upturning the canoe on the pull-out rack. "Put it in the water! Come, Mrs. Jocelyn!"

"Come?" echoed the incredulous lady.

"Yes! We're going to start back—at once—back to the hotel!"

Mr. Bain entertained no doubts as to who were his bosses on that day and date—one was present and the other was up the river—and O'Gorman was never a reasonable man when orders had not been obeyed.

"But it's coming night," sputtered the matron.

Bain set the canoe upon the water and Esther stepped in.

Angus turned to Mrs. Jocelyn. "'Tis the full o' the moon and moonlight aye makes the gr-rand path o' the reever. Gie me your hand, madam, and step careful."

Mrs. Jocelyn obeyed orders.

"Esther Virabell, tell me what all this means!" demanded Mrs. Jocelyn as soon as they were on their way.

"I have not one word to say."

"You're getting to be quite an Indian in this new freak of keeping your mouth shut!"

The lurch that Miss Virabell gave the canoe when she swirled around from her seat in the bow to face Mrs. Jocelyn nearly upset the craft. "Don't you dare to intimate to me that I'm like an Indian or want to be like one! I hate the whole tribe! I don't care to spoil the peace of a calm evening by silly gabble, that's all!"

After that robust retort there were no sounds except Angus Bain's rhythmic grunts of effort and the lisp of his paddle blade in the water. Even when the moon rolled its disk of glory into the eastern sky—a spectacle to provoke the usual paean of feminine praise—Mrs. Jocelyn maintained her reproachful silence.

Therefore, in that stillness, those in the canoe could hear sounds from afar. Esther listened for some time to a chorus of men's voices, increasing in volume, coming nearer from up the river.

"If I may make so free as to ventur-re my thoowt, uts the Busters of O'Gorman's crew, and they're singing one of his come-all-ye's. On to the wedding, most like!" said Angus.

"I don't care to be seen by any rabble of that sort! Turn the canoe to the shore and wait under the shadows!" commanded the girl irritably.

To meet Boss O'Gorman—to venture into the tumult of that oncoming hilarity—to confess that she had not been able to wedge in edgewise one word of her grand plan when she had been face to face with Gov. Nicolin! Her cheeks burned while the canoe floated in the blessed shadows. Thinking on Gov. Susep Nicolin as she had seen him last, pondering on her puny efforts at meddling, Esther quite convinced herself that she had been going through an attack of midsummer madness; that she was sane once more was proved by her ability to perceive now what a fool she had been making of herself and by her determination to mind her own business from then on, she decided.

Bateaux went surging down the middle of the moonlit river. Men were crowded into boats and the blades of the sweeping oars tossed up the flashing water. A voice, which was unmistakably that of Larry O'Gorman, bawled the singers into silence.

"I'll give ye the lilt o' the new varse, meself, and ye're to come in on the chorus.

"'Ow, the ways a' her were all ginteel, tho' roguish were her eyes.
Says she to me. 'The lad for me, 'tis e'er
the lad who tries!'
Says I to her, ''Twill sure be done! Fair maid, I bow my knee.
And I do whate'ev a ladee says when she says a thing to me.'"

Then came the call for 'chorus!'

"'Whoop, all good men, and mind your step whene'er the ladees say!
So shall ye win the hearts a' them, sing
larry down ay day!'"

"Paddle on!" commanded Esther when the river was clear again.

"Ut's a gang thot kens better what to do at a log jam than at a wedding," averred Angus. "I wonder what's prompting 'em to mak' so free wi' the merrymakings for Nicolin's dochter!"

Esther was obliged to stir Mrs. Jocelyn into resentful wakefulness at the Big Carry. The same services were required when Angus put the canoe alongside the float at the Wild River House. He put up a protesting palm when Esther drew her purse. "It's all in the day's work, miss! And a moonlicht sail I hae e'er relished from my young days till now."

But she persisted and jammed money into his fist. "I will call the watchman and he will provide a bed for you."

"Losh! Naething o' the sort! I relish the first prickings o' daylight as well as I relish the moon. And it's not long as I paddle down, ere the sun will be in my een. Good morning to you!"

In the dimly lighted rotunda Esther halted and surveyed Mrs. Jocelyn as if wondering just what to say to the blinking and furious chaperon.

"Esther Virabel, if you think you're going to talk to me now—I warn you—"

"I have no notion of talking—I'll even save my apologies till after breakfast, Mrs. Jocelyn"

Esther was considerably surprised when she woke and glanced at her watch and discovered that it was near noon. The purring of the house telephone had awakened her. A voice from the office informd her that a man was waiting. "It's Boss O'Gorman of the Great Telos, Miss Virabell, and he says that the business is important."

Stricken, ashamed, apprehensive, Esther faltered a promise to come down as soon as possible.

In the first tumult of her emotions she hurried to attire herself—and then she dallied over the final touches, dreading to face what was awaiting her below.

Once more her telephone summoned her. "Beg pardon, Miss Virabell, but an Indian who says he is Gov. Susep Nicolin of the Tarratines is waiting."

The young lady would have felt fully justified in pleading indisposition at that moment, but she gasped some sort of a reply and hung up the receiver. She descended by way of the broad stairway, slowly and shrinkingly.

Larry O'Gorman was posted at the foot of the stairs. But instead of the ominous scowl and reproaching words that she expected she was greeted with an ecstatic grin.

"The top o' the morning to ye, after a night o' glory," he cried, sweeping her a bow.

In her uncertainty as to how to meet his expansive joviality she looked past him; saw Gov. Nicolin standing in the broad door of the hotel rotunda, a black splotch against the streaming sunlight, in the mufti of his store clothes; but his matter of fact garb no longer helped the courage of Miss Virabell. That saturnine visage was distinctly alarming.

"Whisht! Old Big Warwhoop has trailed me here, but don't ye mind him."

"Trailed you?" Visions of the enormities of the warpath flared in the girl's mind.

"Aye! But not by sniff and squint as they did in the old days when an Injun was a rale Injun. He followed close at me back after I started for here when Angus had reported to me. And now, when will ye have it, and where will ye have it?"

"Have what?" choked Esther.

"Ah! Your play is the right one!" indorsed Larry, cocking a knowing eyebrow. "A lady must aye save her face in a ginteel way." He laid his forefinger beside his nose and winked. "Lochinvar!" he whispered.

Esther stared anxiously at that threatening blur in the sunlight.

"Ye need not mind him, miss! He daren't come closer, after my word to him. We had our understanding, him and me, at the depot camp when he came running in there this morning. He may be chief on Pattagamon, but I'm boss on the lands of the Great Telos!" He opened his hand and then slowly closed his big fist. His face dismissed the grin. "Now he knows I'm boss."

But Mr. O'Gorman was not finding in this young lady's countenance that triumphant joy for which he had been looking—not even after he had reassured her in regard to Gov. Susep Nicolin's new tractability.

"Sorry the day! You must have guessed, for I don't see how you could have heard. But mayhap, you'll give me pardon after confession," he went on contritely. "I was taking it all on meself! 'Twas your head for the plans but the hands of meself for the job—and 'twas open and above beca'se all could see the face of me and the mugs o' my boys who were with me. But in tussling with all the Injuns on Pattagamon—in the stir and the whir of it—you know how a hint may slip o'er the teeth—and the Busters were bound to cheer for 'the colleen o' the city' after 'twas over—and—"

"Mr. O'Gorman, what is it—what has been done?"

"Ah! Bless ye, that's it—that's the play to make whilst he's peering and harking! Now I'll go and lie to him and say ye know naught. It'll be all on meself—and that for his law!" Larry snapped a contemptuous finger in his palm.

"But what has been done?" wailed Esther.

"Lochinvar!" insisted O'Gorman. "According to the pome—and I'm strong on the hint in a pome. But we had to tie Tomah Danah's feet to get him down there. He's sure a stubborn jack, and his brain is obchuse to the jog in a good pome. However, we got him to the castle hall—and then we made a bee of the Lochinvar job—and we broke the jam with a clean sweep and took the lad and the lass to a place so snug that all the racing and chasing amounts to naught—and Injuns ain't Injuns to spy the trail no more. And the men who keep company with Tomah and the lass—till we have the word from you, will ne'er give 'em up if all the Tarratines this side a' tophet dig up the tomahawk? Now, where will it be, and when will it be? The word is for you to say."

Esther slumped down on the stairs. She stared up at the amiable blunderhead who was making no account of covenances or licenses or authority.

"I'll go over to him and tell the lie for your sake," volunteered Larry. "I sure owe ye the payment of a few lies for my letting mintion o' you slip into th' tumblehop o' the mix-up!"

The strength came back to Esther's limbs and the color to her cheeks. She leaped up from the stairs and grasped O'Gorman's hand. Craven enough to desert her champion in that crisis? She stamped upon the mere suggestion of such cowardice when she clicked her heel hard on the polished wood.

'Mr. O'Gorman, I have already told you that you are a man after my own heart!"

"Ah! Ye did so, miss!"

"And you are! I accept all the responsibility for this affair. I'll take charge of it from now on. Will you wait here for me? I'm going to talk to Gov. Susep Nicolin, now that I can talk to a man instead of to a bunch of feathers."

She returned past O'Gorman, the somber chief trudging at her heels; she had obtained from the hotel clerk the loan of the private office for a conference.

Larry O'Gorman grabbed Nicolin's arm and detained the Indian with a clutch that sank into the flesh. He spoke low. "Whisht Susep! You do as the colleen asks you to do. You know the way o' Larry O'Gorman now. And I'm telling ye that if ye don't come out of your nonsense it'll be as the pome says: 'The lost bride o' Netherby ne'er shall ye see.' This is one time that a pote speaks truth as well as portry! On with ye! Mind your ways, man!" He shoved the father along at Esther's heels.

Larry sat down on the stairs and waited, his eyes on the door that barred him out.

The clerk came from behind the desk and strolled to the big boss. "You seem to know Miss Virabell pretty well, O'Gorman!"

"Oh, aye!" returned Larry.

"Special business on today with her?"

"Yes!"

—By Larry O'Gorman, the Woods' Poet.

AMONG the attentions humbly paid to Miss Esther Virabell by Boss Larry O'Gorman of the depot camp of the Great Telos Company, he introduced what he considered an especial compliment by obliging the red headed cookee to render a ballad—fifteen verses in addition to the sample which opens this tale. The song is very popular all up and down Wild River.

Young Miss Esther, though she was plainly not at all set up in her own estimation, was entitled to elaborate deference, in Mr. O'Gorman's opinion; she was of the Virabell family, who owned much stock in the Great Telos.

For three days, now, she had been coming down the river from the big hotel as if possessed by a lively interest in the work of Boss O'Gorman's crew of fifty "busters" who were toting supplies around the Big Carry. Such attention to affairs was understandable and excusable in one of the Virabell family. But if Mr. O'Gorman was any kind of an observer—and he thought he was—the pretty young colleen from the city had something on her mind, outside of supply toting.

As for Miss Esther's guide—there certainly was something on that guide's mind! It was no ordinary guide, the one who paddled the canoe daily to the pullout near the camp. That guide was a handsome young girl from the Tarratine tribe—and Boss O'Gorman had never seen her on the river before.

Miss Virabell was showing uncommon interest in her guide and in young Tomah Danah as well, a Tarratine who was a member of O'Gorman's crew. But it was a question in the puzzled Mr. O'Gorman's mind which was exhibiting the more woeful countenance, the Indian maid or the stalwart Tarratine.

The boss had discovered early that Esther was an impetuous and impulsive young lady, and he possessed a sentimental nature and it suggested that she was fostering a romance in thus adopting "a couple of Injuns for summer pets," as his thoughts put the case. He pried a bit, and Esther frankly confessed that she considered "Zarlona a dear whom anybody must love."

But Miss Esther's impulsiveness did not lead her to inform Boss O'Gorman of certain facts which she had gleaned by keeping vigorously at a problem in which her sympathy had been enlisted. On the third day at the depot camp Esther resolutely decided to act on the knowledge she had been able to gather—knowledge that explained the heartbroken demeanor of the girl.

She knew that Zarlona was the daughter of Gov. Eusep Nicolin of the Tarratines—that she was a fugitive from her home on a queerly named island and had come out into the world to earn a way for herself and to escape hook nosed Docite Carriveau, the habitant farmer, chosen for a husband by paternal will, and had come to the big hotel who might be willing to hire an Indian girl. Taking advantage of the exile's upheaved emotions, Miss Esther had "jumped" that much of confession out of Zarlona. But the reticent maid of the Tarratines would not confess that she had come into the territory of the Great Telos Company to find Tomah Danah. Miss Esther had borne down hard on that point, avidly seeking an opportunity to bring to flower the bud of a romance. "No, man'selle!" Zarlona had insisted over and over.

"Oh, have it your own way, but I know better, my dear! I saw the look he gave you—that was enough, really! But the look you gave him—that settled it with me. I'm going to call him right over here—and if I have to tell him what to do, I'll tell him."

But after Miss Virabell had expressed with herself great intrepidity, the Indian boy stood like a stick.

"To look at the two of you, one would think I'm your Gov. Nicolin, glowering here with a war club behind my back," she declared. "But I'll turn right around and you'll see there's no club. And now that I'm turned around I'll walk off, leaving you to yourselves, showing you that I'm not an old, foolish father, thinking only of money, money, money!"

She marched away. "I hope," she said to herself, "that Indians know how to talk to each other when there's no paleface nigh to hear 'em."

Esther had seized an opportunity when the crew had gone up the carry trail with burdens; she had dropped a hint to the boss, and Tomah had been left behind to sort supplies.

She went and sat behind some alders that bordered the sullen pool at the foot of the Big Carry. When the canoe came into view from down river, rounding a wooded curve, she was annoyed; the tete-a-tete that her complacent guardianship was protecting would be disturbed. It was a big canoe, of birchbark, and there were paddlers at bow and stern. Two passengers were seated amidship. She noted curious markings on the bow, thinking that they were mere ornaments, lacking the knowledge that would inform her that this was the sachem canoe of the Tarratines, bearing the totem of the tribal chief.

But though Esther was not up on tribal totems, she had a keen sense for identities, and a few words had been dropped by Zarlona in the way of description. As soon as the canoe came closer to her—the paddlers taking advantage of the eddy drift by keeping close to the shore—she perceived that one of the passengers had a hooked nose, and her dislike for that person was immediate and instinctive. His companion was an elderly Indian but he wore a hard hat and a butterfly bow and store clothes and, therefore, distinctly affronted Esther's conception of the fitness of things in that north country, where Indians ought to match the scenery in picturesqueness, she told herself. Her mental assertion was that an Indian who called himself a governor instead of a chief would be just the sort to wear into the woods the air of dignity expressed by a bowler hat.

"What's the world coming to? And I'm not the least bit afraid of him in that rig!" she declared, her sole auditor a kingfisher who had just swallowed a minnow and who agreed with her by a cheerful rattle of "whir-r-r chir-rr!"

But her heart was beating fast. "If he had feathers on his head, like you, fish bird, instead of his ridiculous hat, I'd never dare even to squeak at him, romance or no romance! But now—"

When the canoe was abreast where she sat she raised her voice. There was a bit of a quaver in her tone, but her eyes were on the reassuring hat. "Pardon me! Are you Gov. Eusep Nicolin?"

He did not as much as touch a finger to that hat when he said "Yes!" She was searching for something with which to prop her courage; quick resentment helped her a lot. The paddlers halted, finning the ash blades to keep the canoe steady.

"I suppose you are up here looking for your daughter?" Miss Virabell lifted her chin and strove to present the most approved air of aristocratic hauteur, as she conceived it.

"Yes!" This governor was a blunt person!

Esther decided to be blunt along with him. "I have to inform you, sir, that I have engaged your daughter as my guide for—well, for all the time I expect to remain at the Wild River House. Some weeks, probably."

The hook nosed man addressed the father with a rapid sputter of patois.

Miss Esther interrupted. "I understand even that kind of French perfectly, sir. And I am not a cheeky, silly fou! I am talking to Gov. Nicolin. Sir, do you refuse to allow your daughter to remain with me?"

"Yes."

"Won't you please let her stay?"

"No!"

"But she is my guide—I must get back up river—"

"My daughter is not a guide!"

"I tell you that I have hired her!"

The governor's black eyes glittered. Miss Viradell found that even a Tarratine could talk when his anger drove him into speech. "You listen to me! You talk foolishness. My girl has run away from her good home. She has shamed me and herself. Do you hide her? Where?"

"But I'm not hiding her," said Esther, intimidated. This Indian certainly had plenty of fury, though he lacked feathers.

"It will be bad for anybody who hides her. She is to be married. This is Docite Carriveau, the man for her."

Esther's resentment touched a goad to her courage once more. "You ought to know better than to marry off a dear young girl to an old man."

Gov. Nicolin opened his mouth, but he shut it. He swapped a long stare with the hook nose man. Then he growled away in a language that was not French.

"I suppose that is Tarratine talk," commented Esther with all the serenity she was able to muster. "I don't understand that language. I hope what you're saying isn't too impolite!"

It was evident that the talk had something to do with the probable whereabouts of the fugitive daughter. The governor ordered the canoemen to run the craft ashore.

Esther scrambled to her feet and fled around the screen of alders. Tomah was seated with his back against a big tree and he had taken the girl in his arms and she was looking up into his face while he talked to her.

"Thank heaven for that, anyway—though I don't know how much time he has been wasting!" muttered Esther, hurrying toward them. "And now it's all ending just when it's beginning!"

The lovers rose when they saw her. Homah kept his arm about Zarlona's waist. He did not remove the arm when the courier warned, "Your father!"

Esther turned from them and ran toward the governor when he marched into view from behind the alders. Her arms were outstretched as if to bar his way. One of the canoemen at the governor's heels grinned; probably, as a woodsman, he saw in this frantic damsel a comical imitation of a hen partridge venturing all in order to protect her young.

"You must listen to me, Gov. Nicolin! I know that he is a fine and noble young man."

"You know, eh? How long you know him?" inquired the governor, trying to avoid this defendant, who danced to and fro in front of him.

"His looks show what he is—his looks are enough!" insisted Esther. "You don't dare to say that he is not good."

The governor stopped and held up his forefinger. "All I say about Tomah Danah is this: He is not the one I have picked to be the husband for my girl. And my business is no business of yours, mam'selle, whoever you may be."

He was calm again and stoically true to race; that calmness and a certain menacing reserve had more effect on Esther's mercurial nature than any wordy blustering that would have matched her own methods of attack. He looked past her and addressed Tomah.

"I have told you that you could not have my girl, eh?"

"Yes."

"Take your hand from her."

The lover obeyed.

"Zarlona, here! Come here!"

She went slowly, her arms across her eyes, stumbling along the rough ground.

"We understand, Tomah Danah. We are men. We must not let a girl be foolish and shame her home and make a father break his word. I am your governor. If I don't command my home, I cannot set example for the people. You understand. You obey. You are man like me!"

Miss Esther listened closely and surveyed all the details of this exposition of tribal authority, this surrender by supreme command, this "understanding" between men. There was grief in her eyes, there was a wrinkle of disgust across her pretty nose, there was a curl of indignation at the corners of her red lips.

"Men!" she scoffed. "You are breaking a poor girl's heart, and you're all swelling up as if you were proud."

Zarlona was passing; Esther reached out and snatched the maiden into a close embrace.

After a little while the protectress lifted wet eyes and regarded the somber father over the daughter's shoulder. "Won't you listen to any reasons why you shouldn't do this awful thing?"

"It is not an awful thing for a girl to have a good home and a kind husband, mam'selle. Tomah Danah, who stands there, knows that he has not a roof over his head, nor a foot of land and no money in the bank. Some day, if he stays a good boy, he will have land and house and can choose a fine girl."

"If it's only money—listen to me—I have money!"

"Yes? Use it for yourself and among your own kind, mam'selle," retorted the Governor, his pride touched.

He shoved his arm between Esther and Zarlona and took his daughter along with him when he strode away.

This contemptuous rudeness shuttled Esther's impulsive nature back to anger again. "One moment!"

Nicolin halted.

"When does this wonderful wedding take place?"

"This foolish girl ran away on the day set for the wedding. So it will be for tomorrow night, before the priest in the chapel at Pattagamon."

The Governor met her flaming gaze with the dignity of one who had triumphed.

"Where is Pattagamon?"

He pointed his finger. "Ten miles down the river."

Esther caught the sullen eye of Docite Carriveau and bobbed a curtsy that was a mere flash of deference. "I was wrong when I disputed your opinion of me, monsieur! I am cheeky! For I'm inviting myself to your wedding. Gov. Nicolin, may I come?"

"It is for all, mam'selle? Our village is open. The word has gone out!"

"You're not wonderfully cordial, but I thank you for the invitation just the same." She put away her air that was half mockery, half defiance. "I don't really mean to be disrespectful or flippant, sir." She hastened to the girl and folded Zarlona's trembling hands between consoling palms. "I'll come to your wedding, dear!" she faltered.

After the sachem canoe had departed Esther sat down under the big tree and surveyed Tomah Danah. He stood for a time and gazed straight away at a distant loom of the mountain range, as if his simple nature found a steadying influence in the contemplation of the serene heights.

Larry O'Gorman came whistling down the trail, followed by his men on their way back for other loads. Esther rose and advanced to the boss.

"Mr. O'Gorman, may I hire Tomah for the rest of the day? I must get back to the hotel."

Mr. O'Gorman searched all the surrounding landscape with his eyes and then looked up into the heavens as if in search of a maiden who might have acquired wings during his absence.

"Something wicked has happened. Her father is the Governor of the Tarratines and he has come and taken her away with him."

"You may have Tomah, miss! And so the old man took the colleen?"

"Yes, sir. She is to be married tomorrow evening to a man named Docite Carriveau."

Larry had pulled off his hat when he had seen Miss Esther coming toward him. He slapped it back on his head. Then he took it off and bit into the brim.

"Marry-mar-mar-mar!" he growled, worrying the hat, pulling his head from side to side. "Marry Canuck Carriveau—that horn-snouted old parrakeet of a Quedaw? Two wives a-ready has he had—and one of 'em was the colleen he stole when he told her I'd been sluiced on the snubbing-slope at Misery Gore. Why he—"

He put on his hat. "Excuse me, miss! I'm going down and express meself to yon kingfisher sitting on the popple stub. He'll understand! He has a way of language of his own when he dives and misses his minnow."

Boss O'Gorman hurried away.

Esther went to the Indian. "Tomah, Mr. O'Gorman says you may go as my guide."

"Yes!"

"You may walk on, Tomah, and get the canoe ready. I'll follow you in a moment."

She walked to meet the returning boss.

"I feel better, miss, but only a bit. What I have said to the bird has been raw and rough and only in my own poor way on the spur o' the moment."

"I feel exactly as you do, Mr. O'Gorman! I indorse all that you said to the fish-bird!"

"Thank you, miss!" But Mr. O'Gorman's memory of what he had been saying caused him to shift his eyes from hers in considerable confusion.

"But of what use is talk?" Indignation surged up in the girl. "Men only talk these days! They take it out in talk! They allow talk to kill all the spirit that's in them. That old Governor talked to Tomah —and Tomah wilted. Oh, for the spirit of young Lochinvar."

"Yes'm," meekly agreed Boss O'Gorman, though he had not the least glimmer of knoweldge about this Lochinvar person. But he had a standing of this own to preserve in the estimation of this sophisticated young lady from the city. "I make so bold as to say that the lad would know what to do."

"In his case talk would be of some use, Mr. O'Gorman! One word to him and such a dreadful sacrifice of a sweet girl would not happen."

Esther ran away. "Isn't it a pity that Lochinvar hasn't a hand in this affair, Mr. O'Gorman? I'd say a word to him and he'd be the man for me," she called over her shoulder.

Larry wrinkled his forehead and narrowed his eyes and watched her out of sight, rubbing his ear. Nils Uppling came trudging down to dip a drink of water from the stream.

"It sounds like a Squarehead name," pondered Larry. "Hi, Nils, who's Lochinvar?"

"Ay ban tank I don't know dat feller, sir!"

A few tailenders of the crew were loading themselves at the pile. The boss noted that they represented a fair assortment of nationalities and he went to them and asked whether anybody in the gang knew Lochinvar. All shook their heads.

But the matter of the identity of this Mr. Lochinvar, spoken of so highly by a young city lady who undoubtedly knew what she was talking about and who needed such an agent in her business, had become an obsession in the case of Larry O'Gorman by the time he had finished his supper and was settled on the deacon seat with his pipe going full blast.

"Who knows a laddybuck, name o' Lochinvar?" he shouted.

"The braw laddie, Lochinvar!" scoffed old Angus Bain. "Next I'll hear, will be somebody speerin' who is Jock o' Hazeldean?"

"If you know aught, Old Oatmeal Cake, out with it!"

"Why, there's a fine bit of portry about the young Lochinvar," the red-headed cookee shouted, with the haste of youth to display superior knowledge.

"Ay, by Sir Walter's ain hand 'tis writ," said old Angus.

"I've been too busy with me own poems to bother me head about the scribblings of others," stated Larry, defending his lack of general information. "Cookee, you have a memory for my songs—your head and your mouth are full of 'em. So be, do ye know the jingle by the other pote?"

"Sure! I used to speak it for a piece in school."

"Set your feet on the dancing block and sluice," commanded the boss.

The cookee took his place and pitched his voice in a shrill monotone, staring up at the camp rafters.

"'Ow, young Lochinvar is come out of the west.
Through all the wide border his steed was the best,
He rode all alone—and he—'"

The cookee gulped and paused and rolled his hands in his apron.

"'He rode all alone—and he rode all alone—'"

"Try a new needle!" a helpful friend advised.

"There's a gouge in your record," suggested another satirist from a dark corner.

Angus Bain rose and beat his fist down on his palm. His face was ridged by the furrows of indignation. "Ut's sacrileege!" he shouted. "Nowt else!"

"Well, then, kiss it with your mouth—and let's have it!"

"I hae too much vener-ration for the bard to keep his noble lines in my noodle—along wi' the tillywally sculch thot's aye yammered in my ears."

"Ye're not now making riference to aught that the lad has sung of my songs past-back, eh?" was Larry's baleful query.

"Ut was not in my thoct, sir!" But old Angus blinked hard and looked away.

"I'm glad it was not. I'd be losing me respict for the caution of a Scot, that's always the boast o' the tribe o' ye! Dye know this Lochinvar, that's the point?"

"Eh! The braw laddie? Who does not know? Though I canna tirl the varse—"

"Never mind the varse! It's not so much! As it was running it's not half a pome, without a chorus. The story, man! The story! I have need of it. Waste no words!"

O'Gorman was on his feet, wagging his forefinger with the threatening violence that always drove his men to quick action.

"Then ye shall hae it! The laird o' Netherby was making sair fash for young Lochinvar—for the laird was giving his dochter to a cogging knave o' nae good. Into the wedding at the laird's hall came young Lochinvar, and he saw the tears in the lassie's een, and he spied the carle of a limmer who was waiting for th lily white hand o' her, and then the lad gave her a touch on the ar-rm and a word in her ear—"

"Now I remember," piped the cookee—but O'Gorman made a vicious palm swoop that sent the boy ducking.

"On with the yarn, Angus!"

"And awa he flew wi' her on his lightsome naggie, and all the swankie chasers couldna fall foul o' them, and so they lived happy aye after!"

"There! There ye have it!" proclaimed O'Gorman. "The way it should be, and a happy end."

"Won't you let me speak off what I remember, now that I have had the jog?" implored the cookee, taking advantage of the boss' enthusiasm.

"Ye may!"

"'There was racing and chasing on Cannobie
lee,
But the lost bride of Netherby ne'er did they see.
So daring in love and—tum-tum—in war,
Have ye e'er heard of gallant like young Lochinvar?'"

The boss crawled into his bunk and lulled himself to sleep by muttering the last lines.

"And so that's what she had in her mind when she said the word to me, eh?"

The cookee's morning song while he rattled the pans in the dingle fayed with O'Gorman's waking dreams.

"—and sure I bent me knee,
'Caues I do whate'vr a ladee says when she says a thing to me.'"

His men found much abstraction in the manner of Larry O'Gorman all the forenoon. But when Esther marched down the carry path just before noon O'Gorman came out of his preoccupation. Tomah walked behind her, carrying a canoe on his shoulders like a tortoise bearing its shell. And he was exhibiting a tortoiselike sluggishness in his gait.

"Of that young Lochinvar ye were speaking!" exploded Larry. "So daring in love and a divil in war—ye were right about him, miss."

But the maiden showed no interest in the hero she had vaunted the day before. Her forehead was puckered with a frown. She broke in on O'Gorman impatiently. "I want to go to the wedding of Zariona Nicolin. I have been invited. I'm taking along Mrs. Jocelyn." She directed Larry's attention to a matron, whom he had not noticed in his absorption in Miss Virabell. "But Tomah says he cannot guide us beyond here."

The young Indian had set down the canoe.

"Why do you tell her that, Tomah Danah?" demanded the boss.

"I must work for the Great Telos."

"I give ye the day off!"

"I cannot go to Pattagamon," declared the Indian.

Larry turned to Esther. "You'll have a guide to take you to the wedding, never ye fear. I order ye to go, Tomah Danah!"

"Who is bossing this crew, me man?"

The Indian shifted his gaze from the scowling overlord to the ground, after a lingering and piteous appeal with his eyes.

"Please, will you walk aside with me for a moment, Mr. O'Gorman?" Esther invited.

"Of course you understand why he doesn't want to go, sir," said Esther when the two were out of earshot.

Larry expressed himself promptly as to Tomah's quality as a Lochinvar.

"Oh, that's not it!" declared the girl disconsolately. "There's no more of that spirit left in this cut and dried world. I'm not dragging him down there to make him reckless or miserable. But I have something to say to Gov. Susep Nicolin. I'm hoping that I'll find him in a more reasonable state of mind. I need Tomah with me when I talk."

"I'm always strong meself to play a hunch, miss."

"I don't dare to explain my plan to Tomah just yet, Mr. O'Gorman. I'm finding Indians such obstinate creatures!" she complained.

Mr. O'Gorman fondled his ear. He had discovered, according to his own appraisal of the situation, a great deal of significance in the earnest stare she was giving him.

"But I must have your help, Mr. O'Gorman. You understand!"

"I have a wit of me own that has never gone back on me in a pinch," admitted Larry complacently. "I'm on! Bless ye, I'm in, too! L'ave it to me!"

Esther was bewildered by this headlong spirit of co-operation.

"We have come to an understanding, and I take the main burden on meself. When a lady has used her head, it's for a man to use his hands. Niver ye fear! And I have reasons of me own."

In spite of her efforts to receive O'Gorman's proffer of aid with thankfulness, Esther's manner showed doubt instead of relief.

"Mum's the word, miss. I'm no hand to peer and pry. A lady must needs save her face—and anny word that it was connived shall ne'er bring a blush to ye!"

"Just what do you mean, Mr. O'Gorman?" stammered the girl.

The boss pointed to Tomah. "I mane I'll handle him."

Then Miss Virabell did show distinct relief. Of such was her quest; it was the service that she required from this master of men.

"Oh, now we understand each other, Mr. O'Gorman!"

"I'll handle him according to your own taste! You have hinted on the thing in only a genteel, lady way, but I know what is wanted. I'll manage him."

"You're one after my own heart, Mr. O'Gorman!"

"But whisht! It must be after my own way.'

He stepped a few paces away from her and called, "Here, Angus Bain!"

The Scotchman, who was toiling up the trail, laid down his burden and advanced. "I lay ye off the job my man, till ye guide the ladies to Pattagamon and the return."

"But—" Esther raised protesting hands.

"No better tyke than Angus on the river, miss, with the ash breeze! And ye can swap with him all the talk ye will about Lochinvar, because Angus knew the lad well."

"But I need Tomah."

"Ye'll sure have him, miss, all in good time! But the whisht must be held! Ye must step lightly. I have known the trick ever since I kicked the froth of the Racing Horse into a bubble and rode ashore on the bulge of it."

He hurried away from her and lifted the canoe upon Angus Bain's shoulders. "'On your way, man, for the wedding won't wait."

His tongue running full tilt, to the exclusion of all of Esther's efforts to put in
